Q. Now, yesterday you told us under oath that definitely the addresses were not required. Today you tell us under oath [1731] that many people——

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I object——

Q. (Continuing) ——gave the wrong address, is that right?

The Court: Objection sustained; argumentative, not proper cross-examination.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, which is the truth?

Mr. Paisley: Now, your Honor, that is an obvious attempt to circumvent your Honor's ruling.

The Court: Sustained. [1732]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do I understand you correctly, Mr. Schrimpf, that you tell us today that there was a request that the registering longshoremen provide their addresses, but you tell us now that some of them may not have given the right addresses? Is that what you tell us today?

A. I said yesterday that the policy of the union, then as of today, that it is strictly confidential, the name, the address and any information concerning a member of its union. That, then as it is now. It has always been that policy. That is what I said.

Q. I will tell you what you said yesterday, referring to page 1697. Your answer: "Well, there was absolutely no addresses." Is that the answer that you gave yesterday in part?

The Court: What was the question addressed to the witness?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I suggested reading from the transcript would disclose a different answer. I then read one sentence out of his answer.

The Court: I think the witness is entitled to the context and the sequence of the testimony rather than a segmented excerpt from the transcript. I think he is entitled to the question asked him and his answer given, to the end that any disparity be shown if it does exist.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be very glad to do that, your Honor.

The Court: All right. Thank you. [1733]

Mr. MacInnis: The question beginning with line 9, page 1697:

> "Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Schrimpf, you know that after the month of October of 1934, after the strike was settled, it was required that all longshoremen be registered and that a printed list of every registering longshoreman with his book number was published, printed, hung up on the hiring halls, hung up in the Ferry Building and available to the employers and to every member of the company; you know that, don't you?

A. Well, no harm in that if it was so, just a book number and a name. There was absolutely no addresses, though, or affiliations."

Is that the answer that you gave under oath?

A. I don't recall if that was the language. Very likely it was.

Q. Was that a true answer?

A. To the best of my recollection, yes. I can't recall now of there being any addresses posted on the wall, as you say.

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, when the strike was won, as you have termed it, many important gains went to the benefit of the longshoremen; that is true, isn't it? A. That is absolutely true.

Q. And one of the most important features was the setting up of a joint labor relations committee so that representatives [1734] the employers on one hand would sit at the table with representatives of the employees on the other, isn't that true?

A. We were establishing that time a committee. I don't know if that was the name given to us—some committee to work out working policy to go back to work.

Q. That was the committee of which we spoke yesterday?

A. That is the name you referred to. I don't know if that is what it was called. There was a committee set up.

Q. You remember the testimony of yesterday

that you gave on that subject. You said that there may have been some temporary committee set up to try to work out that relationship, not a permanent committee, and then his Honor clarified the situation for both of us by suggesting that there was a distinction between a labor relations committee functioning in the union and a real labor relations committee which sat down with the employers as a bargaining unit. Do you remember that?

A. That was in the discussion, I believe.

Q. Do you remember his Honor saying that? Now, was it your distinction that you might have been a member of some temporary committee but you were never a member of the real labor relations committee which sat down with the employers?

A. No, I was never elected by ballot on the labor relations committee to sit down with the employers. That is what we [1735] call a permanent committee.

Q. And you never did attend any meeting and sit down with the employers, naturally?

A. I don't recall attending any meeting, no.

Q. Let me ask you if this is true, reading from the official minutes of the Joint Labor Relations Committee of the employers and the employees——

Mr. Paisley: Just a minute. Let us be polite.

Mr. MacInnis: You are starting rather late.

Mr. Paisley: It seems to me if you cross-examine a witness on an irrelevant point, you are bound by his answer; and you cannot impeach him on an irrelevant point—I mean on a collateral point—and that is exactly what he is trying to do here, I take it, reading from some minutes.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this, your Honor? This is a question preliminary to establishing something very important, the start of a hostility between this man and one of the defendants in this case, and I cannot reveal the purpose in every solitary question, your Honor, and I ask for a little latitude to ask this question.

The Court: What is the document from which you are reading?

Mr. MacInnis: The official minutes of the Joint Labor Relations Committee of the employers and the employees, following your Honor's suggestion of yesterday. [1736]

The Court: In strict accuracy, I made no suggestion yesterday. I merely tried to distinguish between the types of committees.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes; your Honor made a good distinction in that respect.

The Court: I think the witness is mindful of that, and you also. It did not come as news to either of you.

Mr. MacInnis: It did not come as news to me.

The Court: And it did not to the witness, who is not versed in the mechanics of our procedure.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sure, too, because I am mindful of the answers he had given before.

Q. Let me ask you this: If at the first meeting of the joint labor relations committee you attended as one of the representatives of the longshore group.

A. I can't recall these meetings. If there is a record there where I attended these meetings, I have no recollection. This word "labor relations," our labor relations committee has always been elected by a referendum ballot, and I never ran for the labor relations, to the best of my knowledge, on a ballot. I was never elected. A temporary committee to take up working out these working rules to go back under and straighten things out—that would have been a temporary committee.

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask that the witness look at the [1737] page I have opened with his own name underlined, and ask him if it refreshes his memory to look at the contents.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, this certainly is a collateral matter. Now, if he is seeking to prove that Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt or Mr. Robertson were at this meeting, and that they had some collision or disagreement, that would be one thing. We have no objection to that. If he wants to show specific instances where they had violent disagreements——

Mr. MacInnis: I am coming to that, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: I am unable to see any relevancy whether or not this witness attended some meeting. Certainly if it is meant for impeachment, it is impeachment on a collateral issue, and we will be here, I take it, to next summer trying collateral issues. I just think there ought to be some limit to this exploratory search into collateral matters.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I am content to accept the prosecutor's suggestion. He says if we are going to bring out by this some collision, that is all right. That is exactly what I have in mind.

Mr. Paisley: I question, as a matter of fact, whether details as to any disagreements that they may have had in their union activities are really relevant in this case.

Mr. MacInnis: A moment ago you said you had no objection, if that was my purpose.

The Court: If it is the avowed purpose of this particular [1738] examination to develop any grievances that this witness may have had with any representative of the employers, bargaining groups, of course, it would be entirely immaterial and irrelevant. I, of course, cannot anticipate at this juncture what the context shows, nor, I assume, can you, counsel.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I have been waiting patiently for two days now for him to get down to some real relevant evidence in these questions. He never gets there.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think that these characterizations should be offered. We have been rather patient for a long time.

The Court: Yes. The jury is entitled to disregard the statement made by Mr. Paisley.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Have you read the paragraph in which your name is mentioned?

A. Yes, I read the whole page.

The Court: May I see this, please?

(The Court examined the document referred to.) [1739]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, do you know who F. C. Gregory is?

A. Yes, he was representing the employers' side or he was up until a short time back. I don't know if he is still there now.

Q. Do you know who J. B. Bryan is?

A. Yes, I know Bryan. He was also serving on the committee for their side.

Q. Do you know Captain William J. Peterson?

A. Yes, I know of him. I see his name there.

Q. Who is he?

A. He was serving representing the employers.

Q. Do you know Captain Fred Knopff, spelled K-n-o-p-f-f?

A. Yes, he was a member of our local.

Q. Do you know George Wolfe?

A. That's right. He was a member of our local.

Q. Do you know Charles Connor?

A. He was a member of our local.

Q. So that any meeting in which the men whose names I have mentioned along with yours sat down together would be a meeting between the employers and employees, isn't that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Is your memory now refreshed from looking at these minutes that you were present at such a meeting?

A. No, the question was asked, was concerning the labor relations committee yesterday, and at that time I made the statement [1740] I had never run for a labor relations committee. Now, this meeting here, it is in there where it is called a labor relations. But at that time it was a committee set up, a temporary committee, to try and work out working rules to go back to work under. And that is the committee I served on. If it is called a labor relations, and I said yesterday that it wasn't, then I was in error. But that was the intent of the committee, to work out working rules, as that document there.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, if I may interrupt you, in the light of the man's testimony yesterday on the purposes of this particular document, if you read the last paragraph on the first page, it will explain the intent and purpose of the particular meeting with respect to the 30 hour week.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I am perfectly familiar with that.

The Court: That is consistent, I take it, with his testimony yesterday.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor?

The Court: That may well be consistent with the testimony he gave yesterday with respect to the distinction between these two groups.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I suggest it may well not be.

The Court: Well, it may not be, but I am merely pointing that out.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it is not the office of either of us to make comment upon the weight of the evidence at this time [1741], your Honor, and I respectfully make that suggestion to you.

The Court: What my province is, Mr. MacInnis, I shall preserve intact throughout the progress of this trial. I stated to you that in the light of his testimony, it may well be consistent. That statement stands in the record. I think the man is entitled to be confronted with that last paragraph.

Mr. MacInnis: He says that he has read it, your Honor.

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, you say that there was just a temporary committee working out arrangements for going back to work, is that it?

A. That's right. In setting up rules and regular routines to get started back to work under.

Q. When did the men go back to work after this strike? A. I don't recall the exact date.

Q. The strike ended the last day of July, didn't it? A. I believe it did.

Q. And the meeting whose minutes you have been shown took place on the 16th day of October, correct? A. That's right.

Q. And how long did this committee function, if it was just a temporary committee, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. This committee had its functionings, only functioned for a short period. ~~Now,~~ I wouldn't—I can't give the time. But the difference between the committee which functioned at that time and the labor relations committee as is in operation [1742] today, they are two entirely and distinct committees. The labor relations committee today is not to sit down with the employers to try and formulate working conditions, loads or any such thing; they are to take up grievances and just plain beefs. If you get your shoes damaged and figure you have a claim on them, they go ahead and do it. If you figure that you are working some cargo and it should be worth more money, and there is a doubt in it, you go and get it. There is a distinction between the committees; those minutes, if they are read, would bring out that distinction. As I said before, it was a committee set up to help straighten out the conditions and rules and routine under which we would go back to work and go along until we could get something written up in the way of an agreement.

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, you know that this same committee functioned through the entire year of 1934, following the strike, and has continued to function ever since, under the same title and under the same continuing authority?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Your Honor, I object. It is now apparent that counsel is trying to impeach the witness on an entirely collateral matter, to show some inconsistencies in his testimony about collateral matter.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Paisley: Furthermore, the defendant has not denied, your Honor, that he had disputes with the defendants in their union relations. [1743]

Mr. MacInnis: I don't understand what you mean, Mr. Paisley, the defendant has not denied that he had disputes with the defendant.

Mr. Paisley: He has not denied, your Honor, that he has had disputes with the defendants in their labor relations. Now, having denied it, is he to be permitted to come along and show him, confront him with specific instances when he has said, had disputes with them? If he had denied it, then he might come forward with specific instances. But he hasn't denied it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, isn't this true, that you attended a meeting of the labor relations committee, whose minutes have been shown you, on October 16th, and again on October 17th, but thereafter for four consecutive meetings you were absent?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, isn't this true, Mr. Schrimpf, that after you were absent for four consecutive occasions you had a conversation with Harry Bridges about the fact of your absence?

A. I can't recall that conversation.

Q. Well, Mr. Schrimpf, this is true, isn't it, that the members who sat on the labor relations committee received compensation for sitting there?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection.

Mr. MacInnis: This is preliminary, Your Honor, to the facts of the conversation.

A. I don't even recall that either, if they did receive compensation serving on this committee. I don't know.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Just as persons would who attend a directors' meeting of a corporation or any other function of the same kind. Well, isn't this what happened, Mr. Schrimpf, and wasn't this the first quarrel that you ever had with Harry Bridges, that in October of 1935, after you had been absent for four consecutive meetings of the labor relations committee, you came to Harry Bridges and you asked for your check for the services that you would have rendered as a member of the committee, and he refused to give you the check. Be asked you where you were, and said that you had been drinking and hadn't been able to attend. You asked for your check; he refused to give you the check. You gave as your reason that you couldn't stand sitting at the same table with Mr. Peterson.

Mr. Paisley: I object on the ground he has got about fifteen questions in one question.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was that the conversation you had with Harry Bridges?

Mr. Paisley: He must have understood the Court's ruling.

The Court: Sustained. [1745]

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest this, Your Honor: I am asking a question now to lay the foundation for impeachment, and there is no other way to lay such a foundation to ask the witness certain questions and answers did not take place.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: I don't see how he can impeach him, Your Honor; he has admitted he had disputes with Bridges over their union activities.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, to return to the inquiry of yesterday, you told us that the Communist Party and its discipline directed and motivated everything having to do with the waterfront strike. You told us that when the strike committee was first formed, one man was selected from each dock as a representative, is that true?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, patience is leaving me. Counsel just doesn't seem to be able to ask a question. He just testifies here, then he characterizes what the witness has said yesterday. Time and time and time again. Just narrates what the witness has testified. He is testifying, the last two questions are testimony instead of questions.

Mr. MacInnis: May the last question be read, Your Honor?

The Court: All right, you may read it, Mr. Reporter.

(Record read.)

The Court: The objection is sustained; an assumption of facts not in evidence, argumentative, improper type of [1746] questioning.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask Your Honor what facts are not in evidence contained in there?

The Court: Reframe your question, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, did you tell us that the Communist Party directed all stages of the strike?

A. Are you asking me to put the same words verbatim what I said before on these questions? Is that the intent of the question?

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest, Your Honor, that that is a nonresponsive answer. (To the Reporter) Will you read the question to the witness, please?

Mr. Paisley: And I suggest that the question has been asked and answered at least a half dozen times.

The Court: You may read it, Mr. Reporter.

(Record read.)

The Court: You might answer that and qualify your answer if you wish.

A. All right. I did make an answer to that effect. I believe that I qualified it by saying that, at some time in the record, where all important issues concerning the strike were definitely passed on from Communist policy.

Q. Was one member selected from each dock as a representative on the strike committee?

A. That's right. [1747]

Q. Now, was that a policy of the Communist Party?

A. I don't recall just how or whose suggestion it was to elect this committee.

Q. Well, each dock elected its own representative, isn't that true?

A. That's right, but as I said, I don't recall whose thought it was that this should be the way the strike committee would be elected.

Q. You were selected as a representative from Dock 39, were you not? A. That's right.

Q. And that was in March of 1934, was it?

A. No, in answer to this question again, I will ask the question, ask to have it qualified.

Q. Pardon me. The question was only—was that in March of 1934.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I answer that and qualify it?

The Court: Certainly.

A. To the best of my belief, I believe I pointed out in the testimony that these spokesmen on the docks were functioning way prior to 1934. We couldn't function in a strike, as there was no strike. Until March or at least May 1934. Now, if the intent of the question is to make me give verbatim answers, then I can't say that I have that kind of a memory. I am not—I have got no crystal ball to look into and tell you exactly [1748] verbatim just what I said. But I think it is in the record, in different places, that these men on the docks were functioning as spokesmen on the docks way before the '34 strike, and when the strike came along, as I said, I don't know whose thought it was, but that was the way that the strike committee was built up from these spokesmen.

Q. And you, like the other men, were on that committee long before the strike?

A. There's another question—what committee?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Way before the strike? What committee was way before the strike?

Q. May I have an answer to that?

Mr. MacInnis: May I have an answer to the question, Your Honor?

The Court: Well, the witness has asked for a specification on the particular committees.

Mr. MacInnis: All these questions, Your Honor, have been stated as being questions about the strike committee.

A. (Continuing) Are you speaking of the strike committee way before the strike?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Yes.

A. What would you call way before the strike? Will you qualify that?

Q. March of 1934.

A. Well, the amount of time—you say "way before the strike"; is it 20 years, 10 days, 10 hours or what? "Way before the [1749] strike." Will you qualify that?

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest, Your Honor, that the question contains its own date, March of 1934.

The Court: Well, supplying that date, then, Mr. Schrimpf, accepting that date as the date,——

The Witness: Was I serving on the committee in March? Is that the question?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Yes.

A. I should have been serving on that committee. I can't recall any specific happenings. The strike committee was meeting, I believe, and I assume that I had or was serving on it.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. And you were selected from your dock, Dock 39?

A. Yes, I was spokesman on the dock.

Q. And all of the men on that committee were selected by the men on their own docks, isn't that correct?

Mr. Paisley: That, Your Honor, has been testified to another half a dozen times.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I find it difficult to get an affirmative answer as to whether anything has been testified to, and I think I shouldn't be hampered by an objection of that kind.

The Court: I could not hear the objection. There was a little flurry of noise at that time. Would you read that last to me, please?

(Record read.)

The Court: Objection overruled. [1750]

A. Yes, that is the best of my knowledge, the best of my recollection. I think it was the choice of the docks.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): It was done in an ordinary democratic way, wasn't it?

A. As far as I remember, there was no meeting called or anything of the kind. It was just among the men themselves at the dock. They said, "Well, Joe Blow, you act as spokesman for this dock." And that is what there was to it. If you want to say that was democratic, I will go along with you; I will say that it was.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. And you of course were not a Communist Party member in March of 1934, were you?

A. No.

Q. And you say there was no meeting called, but the men on each dock just selected their members, including you, from Dock 39?

A. Yes, that is the way it was done.

Q. Let me ask you if this does not refresh your memory, that there was a special meeting had upon March 21 of 1934 at the Eagle Hall at 275 Golden Gate Avenue, and that the person who made the motion for each dock to select its own representative was Harry Bridges?

A. That could have been. I said I didn't recall whose idea it was.

Q. That was a meeting in which your name was proposed and [1751] accepted as the representative of Dock 39?

A. That I don't recall either. I don't know where they read the names out.

Q. Was there some other committee during the strike—before the strike, I should say, called the Committee of Five Hundred, sometimes known as the Albion Hall Committee?

A. Well, in answer to your question, I am not going to say there was any committee known as the Five Hundred or the Albion Hall Committee, under that name. Various groups of longshoremen were getting together and trying to prepare themselves for the impending strike.

Q. Do you recall anything about the Albion Hall

group running a list of candidates for office in the early fall of 1933, and I mean by "office" offices in the ILA?

A. I attended the Albion Hall, and such a procedure or arrangement could have been discussed or talked about at the Albion Hall. I have no clear recollections of the discussion or who was nominated or anything else.

Q. And that being in 1933, of course, was also before you were a member of the Communist Party?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now, as to the strike demands, Mr. Schrimpf, as to whether they were dominated by the Communist Party, let me ask you this——

Mr. Paisley: I do not think, your Honor, that this is [1752] material.

Mr. MacInnis: Why, your Honor, this man has said that everything——

The Court: Overruled. Overruled, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): The strike demands—and tell me whether or not this is so; I am not making the statement; I am just trying to embrace these demands in one question—the strike demands were a dollar an hour, a 30-hour week, a 6-hour day, recognition of the union as a bargaining agent, one coastwise agreement, and the union hiring halls; is that correct?

A. Yes, that could have been the basic demands of the strike.

Q. And a further qualification of those demands was that the longshoremen had agreed that there was to be no arbitration of any of those demands?

A. I believe that was the policy at that time.

Q. And after the strike was about six weeks old there was a modification of those demands and the longshoremen then took the position that they would arbitrate all of those demands except the union hiring halls issue, is that correct?

A. I do not recall the exact position which we took at that time, but if that is a matter of record, that could be so. I can't recall the exact position.

Q. Did that strategy come from the Communist Party?

A. No, the demands were things—all in line with things [1753] that the members wanted.

Q. In fact, the change in the form of the demands and the form of the arbitration was proposed by Mr. Ralph Malin, who is now secretary of his local? A. I don't recall that.

Q. You do not recall that?

A. I don't recall if he said it or who said it.

Q. Do you remember in February or March of 1934 that President Roosevelt urged a postponement of the impending strike?

A. It happened sometime in the early part of 1934.

Q. Was the strike at that time scheduled for some day in March? A. I believe it was, yes.

Q. President Roosevelt at that time urged the setting up of a mediation board to see if the strike could be averted, isn't that true?

A. Yes, we had a board up there.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. There was a Dr. Reynolds on the mediation board and one member of the faculty of UCLA; do you remember that?

A. I won't say for sure the name of the men. That could be the men. It is a long time ago.

Q. In that period of time the President of the ILA was Mr. W. J. Lewis, is that correct?

A. I believe—I believe Holman was out at that time.

Q. And Lewis was the coastwise president? Pardon me? [1754]

A. Yes, I believe Holman was out and Lewis was the next president, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Mr. Lewis was a conservative, wasn't he?

A. I don't know if you could call him a conservative. In many ways he was progressive.

Q. He was not a Communist, was he?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And when the postponement of the strike was urged by President Roosevelt, did you talk against the postponement?

A. I can't recall what stand I had taken at that time.

Q. It is quite possible, though, is it?

A. Are you putting words in my mouth?

Q. Yes. If the record shows that, it would be true, wouldn't it? I can produce the record with a little research.

A. I say I have no recollection. Produce the record.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I will come back to the question.

The Court: He is entitled to the production of the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. He says he does not know one way or the other.

Q. Let me ask you if this is not true, that Harry Bridges and the man you have called Dutch Dietrich went along with the President's suggestion, along with President Lewis of the ILA?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. I object to that, your [1755] Honor, on these grounds: The witness having admitted on cross examination that he had frequent disputes with the defendant, I do not think he can question him as to specific disputes.

Mr. MacInnis: This hasn't anything to do with disputes, your Honor. This has to do with his flat assertion that the Communist Party dominated everything having to do with the strike. Had he denied the disputes, I should think he would be able to confront him with specific instances. I would like to get the Court's ruling on it.

The Court: You have my ruling, but I dare say, Mr. Paisley, this particular instance is not an appropriate time for me to make a specific ruling, because this question is not addressed to a dispute.

Mr. Paisley: He was asking if Bridges did not take a contrary position.

The Court: May I have the question read? I think when you get the full import of the question you will see it may be different.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Question read.)

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I do not recall the stands of these three men which were taken at that time, and I am not to commit myself that I do.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was there a legal defense committee set up by the strike committee itself? [1756] A. I don't recall.

Q. Does this refresh your memory: that the members of the legal defense committee were Dutch Dietrich, Fred Hiner, and Mike Michelson?

A. Yes, now that you mention the names, I believe they were authorized by the union to go up and determine bail, and so forth, now that you mention the names.

Q. None of those men were known as Communists, were they? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Do you remember an incident in 1934 having to do with the waterfront strike when Harry Bridges proposed the obtaining of an injunction in the State Superior Court against the usage of police power against the strikers upon the ground that the waterfront was State property and that the San Francisco police had no authority on those premises? Do you remember that?

A. There was some action taken. I can't—I can't recall just the legal proceedings which was taken.

Q. Don't you remember that you were one of the ones who opposed that suggestion on Mr. Bridges' part upon the ground that that would be throwing the cause of the strike in the hands of the capitalist courts? A. I don't recall that either.

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. I renew the objection on the ground that he can't go into specific instances. [1757]

The Court: Sustained, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: I might suggest, your Honor, not in arguing over your Honor's ruling, but the purport of that question again was not to elicit conversation on a dispute but to show other factors in which there was no such thing as a Communist motivation in the leaders of the strike.

Q. Who was Joseph P. Ryan, do you know?

A. Yes, Ryan was president of the International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. He was president in June of 1934?

A. Yes, he was president.

Q. Do you remember that he came to San Francisco around June 16 of 1934?

A. As to the exact date I won't be sure, but he was out here.

Q. And he had a conference with Angelo Rossi, who was Mayor of San Francisco, along with Thomas G. Plant, representative of the Waterfront Employers, did he not?

A. I do not recall the persons he met with. He was the International president, and no doubt he did make contact with some of the bigwigs here.

Q. And out of that conference there was a proposed agreement to settle the strike offered to the longshoremen, is that true?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. He did bring a proposal up there to the meeting one night. [1758]

Q. And the longshoremen ultimately did not accept that proposal, is that true?

A. No, they voted it down.

Q. Do you know a man named George Larson, a member of the ISU, a former union of sailors which is now the SUP?

A. I know of him. I know very little of the man. I know of him, now that you mention his affiliation.

Q. Do you remember that he was a conservative who urged the membership not to accept the proposed settlement of the strike which was on because the sailors got no recognition out of that proposal? Do you remember that?

A. Well, it could have been. I do not recall the actual happenings.

Q. Do you remember the other leaders on the floor against the acceptance of that settlement were the Machinists led by Harry Hook and Ed Dillon?

A. I can't recall.

Q. Well, would it have been the policy of the Communist Party to prolong the strike or to settle it?

A. Would it have been the policy of the Communist Party to prolong the strike?

Q. Yes.

A. The Communist Party was very disappointed when the general strike terminated, after its brief period.

Q. And the persons who urged the refusal of this proposal [1759] of June 16 were all non-Communists, weren't they: Harry Hook, Ed Dillon, George Larson, and a delegation from the Masters, Mates and Pilots?

A. Yes. Well, those representatives that you have reference to there, they were looking after the interests of their own rank and file members. Yes, they had, I believe, a good cause to reject it.

Q. And it was after that particular incident, that meeting of around June 16, that the joint strike committee, the joint maritime strike committee was set up?

A. I don't recall what date it was set up. It was set up—I can't say when it was set up.

Q. Does it refresh your memory if I tell you that the joint maritime strike committee was set up on June 17?

A. No. As I said, I don't know the date.

Q. Was that the committee which had representatives from eleven different unions upon it?

A. The joint strike committee had representations from all its component organizations.

Q. Now, at the time that the joint strike committee was created, the joint maritime strike committee, was it the policy of the Communist Party to infiltrate into offices within unions and get on committees of that kind?

A. It was the policy of the Party to try and have representation on committees which were friendly to their policy. [1760]

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. And you had become a Communist in June of 1934?

A. I can't recall the exact date, but I believe it is on the record where it was in May, I believe, 1934, the latter end of May, I believe.

Q. I think you said that. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, let me ask you this: Having in mind your answer about the policy of the Communist Party and officers when the joint marine strike committee was set up, your name was proposed and you declined, isn't that correct? A. That I don't recall.

Q. That was on June 17. A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you have any memory one way or the other on that subject? A. I don't recall.

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask your Honor's permission that the witness be shown the minutes of a special meeting called June 17, 1934, for the composing of the United Marine Strike Committee.

Q. Do you now remember that you were nominated and declined?

A. No, I don't remember. If they are the minutes, there is record there. I must have been nominated, but I don't recollect.

Q. In reading the page which you were just shown did you notice the names of two men, Charles Cutright and Jack McClellan? [1761] Did you see those names? A. I did.

Q. They were both elected to the joint marine strike committee on June 17, 1934, correct?

A. Are you asking me that question?

Q. Yes, according to these minutes.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. If they are in the minutes, did you ask me?

Q. These men were definitely anti-Communist, were they not?

A. I never heard them expressing themselves in terms of being anti-Communists or anti-anything.

Q. But you, who tell us that you were a Communist at that time, declined the nomination to serve on that committee?

A. According to the minutes, I did, and if I did evidently I had a reason.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess now?

The Court: Yes. We will take the morning recess, ladies and gentlemen. The same admonition not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express any opinion until the matter is submitted to you. You may now retire for a recess.

Mr. Donohue: May I ask, your Honor, in order that we may in some measure be guided with respect to witnesses who are under subpoena, if we might inquire of counsel about how long he expects he may have this witness under cross examination? [1762]

Mr. MacInnis: Does your Honor think that that is a matter which we should discuss in this fashion in the presence of the jury? I would be glad to——

The Court: The jury may retire.

(Thereupon the jury was excused, and the following proceedings were had:)

The Court: Is it stipulated that the jury is absent?

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to answer that question, your Honor. I feel fairly sure that I have enough suggested material to go beyond the noon recess, and I would expect to finish with this man this afternoon.

Mr. Donohue: Fine. Thank you, your Honor.

The Court: You had better have a witness available, then, let us say, at three o'clock, I would suggest, just as a matter of precaution.

Mr. MacInnis: I will do my best.

Mr. Donohue: We will have a witness available, your Honor.

(Recess.)

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I move that you require Mr. MacInnis to have these documents which he submitted to the witness marked for identification, because now they are back in his briefcase, I take it, and neither the Court nor counsel knows where they are, the Clerk doesn't have them, the Court doesn't have them under its jurisdiction. I have particular reference to the document concerning which there was a colloquy between Court and Mr. MacInnis, because Your Honor can see the importance of that.

Mr. MacInnis: What document is that?

Mr. Paisley: Well, that is just the point, Your Honor, that illustrates my point.

Mr. MacInnis: Here is what I have in mind, Your Honor: We have no objection to introducing these matters into evidence. The only difficulty I would have now is that we are using them to work with.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Well, I think that they might—when I say "they" it is somewhat loosely, but the particular documents to which reference was made before the noon period,—they might be marked for identification so that thereafter, in the event of any ruling on the part of this Court, in any review thereon, that specific reference may be had to the document upon which I predicated a rule.

Mr. MacInnis: That is perfectly all right. May I suggest this, Your Honor,—— [1764]

The Court: You may do it at the noon recess.

Mr. MacInnis: Solely for our own convenience, Your Honor, we have the official minutes of various labor organizations. Might we have copies made?

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. MacInnis: Of the documents that we intend to use. Then we can allow a comparison between the original and the copy and introduce the copies.

The Court: I think counsel can work that out between yourselves.

Mr. MacInnis: I would be glad to do that.

Mr. Paisley: We have no objection to that.

Mr. MacInnis: I think he is quite right, that the record ought to show those things.

The Court: Very well.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, do you remember that on May 29, of 1934, there was a proposal submitted to the longshoremen to settle the strike by a joint hiring hall and that the longshoremen should then go back to work and continue negotiating? Do you remember that?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. It might have happened, but I do not recall.

Q. Do you remember that that proposal was voted down by the longshoremen?

A. I can not recall it.

Mr. MacInnis: I have a document, Your Honor, the general [1765] membership minutes of May 29, 1934, and I will adopt Your Honor's suggestion in respect of a copy of the page later. I will ask if the Clerk will please show this to the witness.

Mr. Paisley: I would like to have the Clerk stamp it, marked for identification, defendants' exhibit so and so.

The Court: Counsel, Mr. MacInnis has referred to the fact that these minutes apparently are from the files of his client or clients, or the union itself. I do not know. And under the circumstances, I think it will suffice in this record if a copy is marked after comparison made by prosecution counsel as to the authenticity of the copy by reference to the original.

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

The Witness: What part do you want me to read, the whole sheet, Mr. MacInnis?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Would you read the first half of the page? I think the first half covers this matter.

(Document examined by the witness.)

The Court: While the witness is reading that text, Mr. Mitchell, you have the next two numbers, have you, for identification?

The Clerk: Yes, I have, Your Honor; it is N and O.

The Court: N and O?

The Clerk: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I will undertake to do this. We will go through the transcript and by the references made [1766] to the particular minutes or other documents, we will prepare copies and bring them here.

The Court: And have Mr. Mitchell approve the lettering so we may have a sequence.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, sir.

(Documents returned to Mr. MacInnis by the Clerk.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, is your memory refreshed by a reading of the document that I have shown you?

A. No. If it is the official minutes, though, it must have taken place, must have been such a meeting.

Q. Was the secretary Ivan Cox at that time, according to your memory?

A. Yes, I believe Cox was secretary at that time.

Q. And the district president was William J. Lewis?

A. Yes, Lewis was president, to the best of my recollection.

Q. And the proposal was submitted, the proposal to set up the joint hiring hall, and have the men go back to work while continuing to negotiate; do you now remember that?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. No, I can't recall the issue, but it is in the minutes?

Q. Yes.

A. I imagine that was a part of the discussion.

Q. And in the minutes did you read that there were 2500 members present and when it was moved to reject this proposal, not one single sound was heard in favor of the proposal—the entire assemblage unanimously voted it down? [1767]

A. That is in the minutes?

Q. Yes. In other words, that was not an incident in which there was some Communist Party leadership that dominated a vote, was there?

A. No, that was the membership.

Q. Well, on April the 3rd of 1934, do you remember that the Federal Board of Mediation recommended a settlement?

A. It is vaguely in my mind that there was some kind of a recommendation.

Q. Do you remember that a proposal was offered in which the union in San Francisco, in the port of San Francisco, was to be recognized along with the recommendation that the shipowners attempt to apply the same agreement to all West Coast ports? Do you remember that particular proposal?

A. No, I can't recall, but to save time, if it is in the minutes there, anywhere, why, I——.

Q. I don't have that particular minute in my hand. I will have to get that later.

A. Well, if it is in the minutes, I will take it for granted it happened. I can't recall if it happened.

Q. Let me ask you if you remember this, Mr. Schrimpf; do you remember that when such a proposal was made, the local union accepted it and then set up a committee of five to negotiate with the shipowners?

A. There was some kind of a functioning committee set up. I [1768] don't know the members or who was on it. I remember such committee was set up.

Q. And of course you have stated that the policy of the Communist Party was to continue the strike so that an acceptance of that kind, an agreement, certainly would not have been Communist-dominated, would it?

A. Well, I believe you asked two or three questions in one there, counsel.

Q. Very well. Do you remember a meeting of May the 9th of 1934 concerning the strike?

A. Well, that was the day we went on strike, I believe, was it not?

Q. May the 9th? It may be. I am not certain of the date so far as the starting of the strike. Do you remember a meeting in which full authority was conferred upon W. J. Lewis, either to call the strike or postpone it?

A. No, I can't recall of a committee—it could have been done. And if it is in the minutes, it is not necessary to——.

Mr. MacInnis: If Your Honor will pardon me a moment?

I will proceed, Your Honor, to another matter,

rather than delay in the finding of that particular document.

Q. Was the calling of the general strike Communist-inspired?

A. Their policy was definitely in favor of it.

Q. But did they dominate the calling of the general strike and bring it about? [1769]

A. I will repeat: their policy was definitely in favor of a general strike.

Q. Well, now, what union led the movement into the general strike?

A. What—Will you repeat that?

Q. What union? Now, the longshore unions were out on strike for some little while before the general strike took place, isn't that true?

A. Yes, there was a period in between.

Q. And after that the strike became general at some point, didn't it?

A. Do you mean a general strike, or it was a general basis?

Q. A general strike was ultimately called, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And what union, do you remember, was the first union to recommend the general strike?

A. I can't recall what union it was which recommended the general strike.

Q. Would it refresh your memory if I told you that it was the Machinists Union, a conservative union in San Francisco, led by Harry Hook and Ed Dillon?

Mr. Paisley: Well, now, counsel is testifying; object.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Yes, sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you have any memory on what union led the move into the general strike? [1770]

A. No, I can't recall one or any particular union which, as you say, first gave the call or wanted a general strike.

Q. All through the strike it was the policy of the Communist Party to prolong the strike, wasn't it?

A. I will repeat; it was the policy of the Communist Party to work it up to a general strike.

Q. In July of 1934 Harry Bridges at one time urged the men to return to work, didn't he?

A. He may have; I don't recall.

Q. And isn't this true, that that action on Harry Bridges' part in July of 1934, of urging the men to return to work, has been the ground upon which he has been criticized by Harry Lundeberg ever since?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that calls for a conclusion from this witness.

Mr. MacInnis: If he knows, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes, sustained; and calling for the mental processes of Mr. Lundeberg.

Mr. Paisley: That's right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, let me ask you this: Upon your knowledge of the Communist Party from the period of time when you say you were a member, was it the policy of the Communist Party to attempt to elect Communist candidates to offices not only in unions, but to public offices on occasion?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Yes. It depended on their strength within the union or in [1771] the political field.

Q. In other words, officially a man would openly run for public office on the so-called Communist ticket? A. They have.

Q. And he would be an official candidate of the Communist Party, wouldn't he?

A. Yes, he would, in a political election, if he was running on a Communist ticket; he would be naturally a Communist, I would assume.

Q. And would the Communists attempt to see that he was elected or to campaign for him in some way? A. I believe they would, yes.

Q. Yes. In 1934 Sam Darcy ran for governor as the official candidate of the Communist Party, is that not true?

A. He run for governor. I don't recall in what year, if that was the year. It could have been.

Q. The union at that time was in the A. F. of L., wasn't it? A. That's right.

Q. And Harry Bridges and George Kidwell, also of the A.F. of L. recommended and led a movement on behalf of Upton Sinclair and against Sam Darcy, isn't that correct? A. I can't recall it.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me, Mr. MacInnis. Could I have a moment? If the Court please, a gentleman connected with the Immigration Department has just taken a seat directly behind [1772] the counsel's seat. Now, I went over and asked him if he would kindly move. It smacks of espionage. It mightn't be, but I asked if he would take another seat and he has refused to do so. I don't think that is proper, to have somebody sitting directly behind us within earshot of any conversation that we might have. Now, it may be perfectly innocent, but it doesn't look right, and it makes one uncomfortable. I think the gentleman——

The Court: Well, Mr. Hallinan, I of course, do not know——

Mr. Hallinan: I say, I asked him before privately, before addressing the Court, and I told him if he would not move his seat, that I would ask the Court to have him move his seat. I think he should take some other seat and not be so within earshot of counsel table. We are entitled to have some privileges. I will ask Your Honor to ask the gentleman to kindly take another seat under the circumstances.

The Court: First, I do not know the gentleman's identity.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I say, he says he is a member——

The Court: Let me have some information from Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: I know that the gentleman sitting over there is in the Immigration Service, if Your Honor pleases, but I assume he is simply sitting in court. Mr. Hallinan has had a representative of his office sitting directly behind our table since this trial began.

Mr. Hallinan: We have not. [1773]

Mr. Donohue: The young lady,—I don't seem to see her there at the moment, but she has been sitting since the trial began in the chair now occupied by Mr. Karesh.

Mr. Hallinan: If there had been any objection, the lady would have been removed.

Mr. Donohue: We have no objection, if Your Honor please. But I simply call it to Your Honor's attention since I think Mr. Hallinan is making a silly and stupid point.

Mr. Hallinan: There is no reason why the Judge should refuse to ask the man to move.

Mr. Donohue: The gentleman should not refuse to be moved if he had been asked by an attache of the Court, but I can quite understand why he should not move under the direction of Mr. Hallinan, who is not an attache of the Court.

Mr. Hallinan: I simply requested him. I didn't try to quarrel with the man or anything. I told him I didn't think it was proper and asked him if he would kindly find another seat.

The Court: Well, we start, that this is a public trial; and I again say, I do not know the gentleman's identity. If you have any feeling about the matter, Mr. Hallinan, or if you are at all sensitive about the man sitting there, or if you feel uncomfortable about it, I might, through the baliff, the marshal's office, ask the gentleman to have another seat if a seat be available. That is, now, without any reflection upon the gentleman as to his motive or purpose or alleged design in [1774] sitting there. I accordingly instruct the jury to disregard the statement made by Mr. Hallinan with respect to espionage or any activities that might be regarded as design to intrude the individual upon the operations of defense counsel. I think I made myself clear. There is no reflection. And I ask the gentleman to leave, and the purpose on my part is merely to have Mr. Hallinan feel perfectly at ease in this courtroom.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all that I ask.

The Court: All right. Thank you.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I would like to have the record show that the man sitting in one of the four chairs which are along the wall, which have been occupied by spectators, members of the bar and others throughout the trial, and that the position is opposite defense counsel table, separated by at least three or four feet.

The Court: That is true. The separation between the counsel table and the wall wherein the chairs are situated is, I would say, roughly ten feet.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the last question, please?

(Record read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you remember that the union officially went on record as opposing Darcy and as proposing Upton Sinclair for governor?

A. I can't recall, but they could have.

Q. Have you been a member of the Maritime Federation of the [1775] Pacific?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. All members in all the maritime unions affiliated to the Maritime Federation of the Pacific could be called members of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. Was the Maritime Federation of the Pacific set up by the Communist Party?

A. Using the words "set up;" is wasn't set up, it was set up by the maritime unions. But it was also discussed as a part of policy by the Communist Party.

Q. Was there any forerunner to the Maritime Federation of the Pacific?

A. That is a general statement, a forerunner.

Q. Was there any organization that preceded it in existence that you can now remember?

A. There's all kinds of organizations, all down through history. I just don't quite follow.

Q. Well, let me ask you this: During the 1934 strike the maritime unions in the State of Oregon and in the State of Washington set up what they called the Northwest Joint Strike Committee, isn't that true?

A. They did have some kind of district council functioning up there, yes.

Q. And the purpose of that committee was to raise funds so that a federation could be formed and so that there could be [1776] some union and some strength in their activities.

A. It could have been.

Q. And after the strike was won by the longshoremen and the other parties to the San Francisco strike, then a movement was had to join forces with the unions of the Northwest in another federation, which became the Maritime Federation of the Pacific; is that true?

A. We had a Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. And that was formed in early 1935, wasn't it?

A. To the best of my recollection, we had what we called an emergency conference to form it, and I believe it was in April, 1935. [1777]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Can you remember who called that emergency conference?

A. No, I can't recall the individual who called the conference.

Q. The Communist Party did not call the conference, did it?

A. No. As I already have it on the record, the organization was made up of members of all the maritime unions, and they were having an emergency convention to draw up rules, constitution, and so forth.

Q. And you would not say that the Maritime Federation of the Pacific was set up under the orders of Sam Darcy, would you?

A. The Communist Party was very much interested in establishing the Maritime Confederation.

Q. But they did not give any orders for this emergency meeting or anything else, did they?

A. Well, "orders" is a big word.

Q. Well, is this true: that before the Northwest joint strike committee was set up there had been organized in Seattle, in the year 1933, an organization called the Council of Marine Crafts?

A. There could have been.

Q. Do you remember the name of a man named Clyde Deal? Do you remember the ferryboat man?

A. I know of a Deal who was down here with the ferryboatmen, yes. [1778]

Q. Do you remember a man named Ed Morton, who was president of the ILA local in Seattle?

A. Yes, I have met Ed. I don't know him very well.

Q. They were the ones who set up, at least they were the leaders in setting up the Council of Marine Crafts, isn't that true?

A. I don't know. That is information to me.

Q. You say you remember the name of the Council of Marine Crafts?

A. No, I didn't say I remembered the Council. I said it could have been.

Q. Now, there was a strike in December of 1948 coming up almost to the present year, was there not, about a year ago?

A. There was many strikes.

Q. Was there a strike involving the ILWU in the month of December 1948?

A. Yes, the longshoremen were on strike.

Q. Was there a settlement proposed in the month of December 1948 in that strike?

A. There was a settlement proposed. I do not know the dates or the time it took place. To the best of my recollection, there was some kind of settlement proposed.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. When that settlement was proposed, is this true, that all of the demands of the working longshoremen were satisfactorily met by the settlement, but that you, as the leader of the [1779] walking bosses, opposed the settlement of the strike?

Mr. Paisley: I do not see the materiality of that, your Honor.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The point that I wish to make was that there was a further controversy between this witness and the group within the union represented by the defendants in this case, and I wish to propose, if I may state this as the offer and the purpose of mine, that in December——

The Court: You can make your offer out of the presence of the jury, counsel, either in writing or orally, at a convenient hour. The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, referring once more to the meeting you attended in the City of Portland in 1937 at the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, you had some further conversation with Mr. Bonham, the head of the Immigration Department, concerning the bringing of yourself to the Immigration Department offices, did you not?

A. I will answer that question, and for the record: After getting through with the convention——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. I am speaking now of things taking place on the convention floor. We will come to the other conversations later.

A. You asked me a question with reference to a conversation, [1780] and I was going to answer it. Do you wish me to answer that?

Q. No, I wish this answer to be applied to matters taking place on the convention floor.

A. I don't recall what took place of special interest or of a special nature on the convention floor.

Q. Tell me if this took place: "Mr. Bonham"—quoting him——

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Your Honor, there is a statute in California which requires counsel to submit to the opposite attorney any writing about which he is going to interrogate a witness. That is certainly the rule in this court, too. I think he ought to submit the documents to us before they are read to a witness or marked for identification.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not submitting a document, your Honor. I am asking him if a certain conversation took place.

Mr. Paisley: He is attempting to read.

The Court: I think Mr. Paisley is correct in his observations. You might submit the record to counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: I will in a moment, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: Then I object to his asking any question or reading.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not referring to any document at this time, your Honor.

Q. Let me ask you if you had basically this conversation on [1781] the floor of the convention with Mr. Bonham, that Mr. Bonham said that apparently some erroneous information reached the convention, that Mr. Schrimpf had some information that he was willing to divulge, and that that information turned out to be erroneous, and that you replied, "Mr. Schrimpf is no stool pigeon."

The Court: One moment.

Mr. Paisley: I can't see the harm of the question, but it is immaterial and irrelevant, seeking to circumvent the Court's ruling.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: To show that the conversation really took place, I will show the record to opposing counsel.

Mr. Paisley: I move that that remark be stricken.

The Court: That remark may be stricken and the jury admonished to disregard it.

(A document was handed to Mr. Paisley.)

Mr. Paisley: I just do not see the materiality of what he has submitted.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, at the Maritime Federation of the Pacific convention held in Portland in 1937, do you remember an incident involving a man named Evans?

Mr. Paisley: Objected to as irrelevant unless he can show it has something to do with the defendants in this case. [1782]

Mr. MacInnis: That is precisely what I am going to do, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: The name of Evans? No. I just can't at the present time refresh my memory. Maybe with some more information I can recall something.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you remember that Evans was accused of spreading anti-Bridges propaganda and that you and Harry Lundeberg spoke in favor of Evans? A. Spoke in favor of Evans?

Q. Yes. A. No, I don't recall the incident.

Q. And do you remember that Harry Lundeberg later caused Evans to be brought East to a national convention to give the same testimony against Bridges?

Mr. Paisley: I object to counsel testifying.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you remember having a conversation on the floor of the convention involving Evans and Lundeberg?

A. I had the floor of the convention on more than one occasion, but I do not recall this particular event of Evans. Even after you refresh my memory I can't recall it.

Q. I will ask you if you will read pages 316 to 319 in the minutes of the convention, which I will hand you.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. aPisley: Now, the statute which I have had to call [1783] to the attention of counsel, the California statute, specifically provides that before such a document is submitted to the witness it shall be submitted to opposing counsel.

The Court: I thought counsel had handed to you some document.

Mr. Paisley: He submitted one portion of the page.

The Court: Read it, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: That is perfectly all right.

Mr. Paisley: What page?

The Court: 316 to 319. Read it at the noon recess. We will take the recess now, ladies and gentlemen, since it is the noon hour. May I admonish you not to discuss the case under any circumstances or suffer any person to discuss it with you, nor are you to converse on any subject connected with the trial, and you are not to form or express an opinion until it is submitted to you.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.) [1784]

Afternoon Session

Tuesday, December 6, 1949, 2:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The witness on the stand is Henry Joseph Schrimpf, heretofore sworn.

Cross-Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, on or about the 10th of May of 1934, did the strike committee itself issue a statement to the public declaring it was an anti-Communist group?

A. There may have been; I don't recall.

Q. And to refresh your memory, I have a document which I will show you in a moment (handing document to counsel).

Mr. Paisley: He hands me a newspaper clipping. I am unable to see how the witness could refresh his recollection from something over which he had no control, that he did not write.

Mr. MacInnis: So that we need not argue the point, I will show you the point.

Mr. Paisley: I am not interested in the point.

Mr. MacInnis: All right.

Mr. Paisley: I am just making the point with the Court that he can not refresh his recollection from some newspaper article.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: If it is a public statement, your Honor, emanating from someone else, he can say whether it does or does not refresh his memory. He hasn't prepared these minutes either, [1785] and he is certainly entitled to look at anything that may refresh his memory.

Mr. Paisley: Furthermore, it seems to me it is on an immaterial point, a collateral matter, and the witness has said he doesn't remember. That ought to end the matter.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: We ask that the document in question, which is apparently a clipping from the San Francisco News of May 10, 1934, be marked for identification.

The Clerk: If your Honor please, may the record reflect that I am holding the letter N so that hereafter when counsel submits the minutes, they may be included under that one letter, Defendant's N for identification.

May this be marked Defendant's O for identification?

> (Clipping from San Francisco News of May 10, 1934, was thereupon marked Defendant's Exhibit O for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, what was the district executive committee of the ILA—International Longshoremen's Association?

A. Do you have reference to the district executive board?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Or committee. Could you tell us what that might be.

A. No, not until I really know just what your question is. As to a district committee, I will say no, I do not.

Q. Mr. W. J. Lewis as coast president of the ILA was on the district executive committee, was he not? [1786]

A. That I don't know. I don't know how he was connected with that committee; I don't recall that committee's name.

Q. Well, do you know, Mr. Schrimpf, whether in the end of March of 1934 a resolution was prepared and signed by both Harry Bridges and Henry Schmidt turning over entirely to the District Executive Committee headed by Mr. W. J. Lewis the decision upon whether or not a strike was actually to be called? A. You are asking me——

Q. If you know that. A. If I remember?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't definitely say what action it was, but there was some action taken along those lines.

Q. Do you recall if such a motion was adopted by the strike committee itself after being made and signed by Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt?

A. It could have been.

Mr. MacInnis: To refresh your memory, I will show the prosecutor the document I have in mind (handing document to counsel). I will show them a copy that I have prepared for use in the record, your Honor.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: I have read it, your Honor, but I am unable to see that counsel can seek to refresh the recollection of the witness by this document which the witness did not prepare and on a collateral issue here. He is bound by the answers of the [1787] witness on collateral issues. Furthermore, I object to it on the ground that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case.

Mr. MacInnis: As I understand your Honor, the answer of the witness has been that this may have taken place but he has no perfect memory in the matter, hence we are attempting to refresh his memory.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, coming back to the matters taking place in July and August of 1937, when you signed your name to a letter opposing the entry of the longshoremen into the CIO after that move had already been voted, let me ask you these questions: Did you testify yesterday that you and those who were of the same persuasion as yourself were vilified by Harry Bridges for having taken that position?

A. I believe it is on the record that we were vilified for taking this action at one of our meetings.

Q. And did you say that Bridges called you every name that he could think of, or words to that effect?

A. I did no such a thing.

Q. I will ask you whether or not the following question and the following answer, to your best memory, was submitted to you and answered by you—referring to page 1686, your Honor——

> "Q. (By me): Let me ask you this further question: You stated that the headlines in the paper which you saw were [1788] factual statements, perfectly proper statements, regardless of what persons they might hurt.
> "A. I said to my opinion they were, for this reason, that it was true, there was an attack made on the rank and file members, and I do, and I did at that time, consider myself a good rank and file member. We sent out an open letter up and down this Coast. We were called up at the meeting. We were vilified, attacked and called every name that you may—well, you may find mentionable, and that has also been the tactics which have been in operation to destroy any opposition and, as the headlines will tell you, that Bridges attacked rank-and-filers and, as I said before, it is my opinion it is right."

You remember giving that answer, do you not?

Mr. Paisley: Well, that doesn't tend to impeach him, your Honor. He asked him originally if he hadn't testified that Mr. Bridges vilified him and if he hadn't said that Mr. Bridges called him every name he could think of, or words to that effect. Now, in an attempted impeachment by his prior statement, there is nothing in there about Mr. Bridges having—he said, "We were called."

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: I think we can inquire as to whether he referred to Mr. Bridges as the context would have it appear, your Honor.

The Court: Well, I would allow the witness to answer.

A. Yes, yesterday I was asked the question. And I did say we had been vilified by Brother Bridges. In this general statement I did say that we were called names and everything else, and I have been called many names along the waterfront at different times. And in this case I was also attacked and called every name concerning it.

Q. Did you ever say, following the letter that you wrote about which we talked yesterday, that Harry Bridges had attacked the writers of the letter for trying to spread false information?

A. That expression may have been used.

Q. Did you ever say that men who have fought for this union and the labor movement for years have been crucified by this clique who have no scruples, no ethics—they go to the gutter for their scurrilous accusations? Did you say that, in [1790] substance?

A. I don't know if that is the language that was ever used.

The Court: You might refer, Mr. MacInnis, if there be some specification of time and place, parties present and circumstances under which it is asserted to have been made.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Q. After the end of the month of July of 1937,

in conversations with fellow members of the longshoremen's union which had already voted to go CIO.

A. Was that outside the meeting or at a meeting or where did this take place?

Q. Both in and out of the meetings.

The Court: Will you fix the time and place, specifically, counsel? Otherwise I will sustain an objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, let me put the question to you this way, Mr. Schrimpf: You say that you have seen and read the paper entitled The Longshoreman, which was shown you yesterday, is that correct?

A. I saw a copy of The Longshoreman. You presented it yesterday.

Q. Were the views stated in this paper the views that you possessed at that time concerning Harry Bridges?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, your Honor, he has got about five or six pages here.

The Court: Objection sustained. [1791]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you authorize the printing in that particular paper of a column pointing out that there were more people than the three of you, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Malin and yourself, interested in the attack upon the entry into the CIO?

A. I have no recollection of such an authorization.

Mr. MacInnis: I would like the exhibit to be shown the witness on this point. I will ask him if he will read the column entitled "On the Wrong Track," and ask him if that refreshes his memory.

(Handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Mr. Paisley: As to whether he authorized it? I take it that is the question now? Your Honor, I don't know what this is, but if it were some letter that this witness has written to the paper which was published, that would be one thing. I should think he should be able to ask him about that. But there is no showing that this witness had any control over the editorial policy of the paper, over the news items, the advertising or whatever else might be in it. So I don't see how he can——

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I think there is a question before the Court.

Mr. Paisley: Furthermore, it is immaterial and irrelevant.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, would you repeat the question to the witness, please?

The Reporter: "Were the views stated in this paper the [1792] views that you possessed at that time concerning Harry Bridges?"

The Witness: Would you read that again, please?

(Question quoted above reread by the Reporter.)

The Court: Are you asking now for the refreshing of his recollection or are you laying a foundation for specific asserted impeachment? If you are laying a foundation for impeachment, there must be specific foundational evidence of testimony.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, that is not the last question. That is not the matter.

Mr. Paisley: Suppose, your Honor, that some local paper had written an editorial at this time; an editorial excoriating Harry Bridges or some other defendant in this case. Would it be proper to ask some witness who appears in this trial now whether he subscribed to that doctrine? I think not.

Mr. MacInnis: If there were a letter by this man right next to it, it would be highly important. (To the Reporter) Would you read the last question?

The Reporter: "Did you authorize the printing in that particular paper of a column pointing out that there were more people than the three of you, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Malin and yourself, interested in the attack upon the entry into the CIO?" The answer was, "I have no recollection of such an authorization."

The Court: The specific question is, "Did you authorize . . ." [1793]

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, that is it.

The Witness: Well, it has been answered there. I have no recollection of authorizing it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And your memory is not refreshed by reading the particular portion that was addressed to your attention?

A. Well, that is only a small part of the paper there, just one half a column of the sheet there.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Well, actually, Mr. Schrimpf, after this paper was printed, you discussed the matter of your letter and the accompanying sentiments with Harry Bridges, did you not?

A. I have no recollections.

Q. And you went over with the matters with Harry Bridges that he considered objectionable, things that were mentioned by way of criticism of him in this paper, isn't that true?

A. I do not recall.

Q. In other words, you neither affirm nor deny it, is that correct?

A. I do not recall such a conversation.

Q. Didn't you have a conversation with Harry Bridges upon the assertion in this paper, "Bridges attacked the writers for trying to spread false information"? A. I don't recall.

Q. Didn't Harry Bridges ask you what you meant by that? A. I don't recall it. [1794]

Q. Did you discuss with Harry Bridges the matter as printed in this paper of the accusation that Bridges told the membership that the Seattle local had gone on record last Thursday night condemning the letter and that their secretary had been instructed to notify this local to that effect?

A. I don't recall such a discussion.

Q. Did you discuss with him the matter of "Maybe Bridges can get his Seattle stooges to write him one before the next meeting night"?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Your Honor——

The Court: Objection is sustained.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: May I recall to your Honor that this document was once admitted into evidence and later stricken from evidence upon motion of the prosecution? Your Honor at that time felt that we had not established a connection between this witness and the document. Now, it seems to me that the answers to these questions would certainly link this witness with the publication——

The Court: There are two segments to your thinking, counsel: Number one, the letter disassociated from the text of the paper; secondly, the text of the paper to be considered in disassociation from the letter. There is nothing in the text of the paper that would seem to justify a casual relationship between the subject matter of the paper and the letter itself; therefore the objection was sustained and there is nothing that [1795] has appeared in evidence to change my ruling, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: The questions now are directed, your Honor, not toward trying to circumvent your rule——

The Court: No, I didn't say that.

Mr. MacInnis: ——but to determine whether or not a conversation took place between Harry Bridges and this man.

The Court: Well, that couldn't have been proved by the context of the newspaper, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: No, but I could not later offer impeaching evidence as to this witness unless the impeaching questions as to the conversations were asked while he is on the witness stand.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, all the witness says is that he doesn't remember any conversation with Bridges about the contents of the paper. Then counsel seeks to get the paper before the jury by reading it and asking him if "you don't remember this" and if "you don't remember that," which I think is improper.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you have any discussion with Harry Bridges in which he asked you what was the meaning of the remark, "That is what we are determined to do, and if Mr. Bridges thinks anything is going to deter us, he is going to be very disagreeably surprised before it is over."?

Mr. Paisley: I object to counsel continually reading from the document not in evidence. [1796]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, were you really ever a member of the Communist Party?

A. The answer to that statement is already on the record.

Q. May we have it, yes or no?

Mr. Paisley: Well, your Honor——

A. Yes.

Q. And in December of 1937 when you were picked up by agents and taken to the office of the Immigration Service, did you say this to Mr. Bonham and other agents there, "I am an alien; I have also been a member of the Communist Party. You could deport me if you chose, but I refuse to answer your questions unless I have legal advice." Did you say that to them?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I have no recollection of making a statement along those lines or those exact words.

Q. And did Mr. Bonham or the representatives of the Immigration Service who were present at this conversation then say, "If the man chooses not to talk, we must let him go, we are sorry to have intruded upon your rights, Mr. Schrimpf." Did that take place?

A. I don't know if that was the exact wording. If I may qualify my answer, why, as to what took place at the meeting?

The Court: Yes, sir.

A. (Continuing) Dealing directly with this meeting, and I don't wish to be misquoted on it because I am quoting it for [1797] the record, after coming home from the convention there was three men, as far as I can recall, they were exceptionally large men, walked into the room. I had rooms adjoining a fellow delegate named Bill Marlowe. They say, "Get your coat on." The bathroom door of the connecting rooms was open, and I said, "Who are you?" They said, "Get your coat on." So Bill Marlowe walked into the bathroom, I believe he was shaving. He said "What's the matter, Henry?" I said, "I don't know. Here's someone just going to take me out of the room. What should I do?" And with that they showed their identification. He said, "Well, you had better go along." I don't know the building I went up to. They took me up to a building. The first thing they said, "Will you make a statement?" I said, "A statement? What kind of a statement?" They said, "Well, a statement on Harry Bridges. Was he a Communist?" And as far as I recall, I says, "I don't know nothing about Bridges." He said, "Well, will you make a statement?" I said, "No, I am not making no statement." They said, "Well, listen. We will call a girl in and you can make a statement." Now, he said, "Don't you want to be a good American? Don't you want to help us in America?" And I said, "Well, you can at least allow me to get some legal advice." And after keeping me there and questioning me for quite a while, which was, I guess, I just then said, "I have nothing to say," or "I don't know." They turned me loose. Now the language I have used here naturally—that is 13 years [1798] ago, and I can't vouch that it was every word was there or verbatim or near it, but that was around the trend of the conversation and that is what happened. And I would say I was up there approximately, maybe, a half hour and they turned me loose. That is for the record, under oath, what actually happened in Portland. [1799]

Q. Do you now remember any of the questions which you say that they asked you?

A. I have already made that clear. I said what was the trend of the questions. I can't—I can't remember. I refused to give a statement. I gave them that to be understood; I refused to take an oath and told them that I wanted some legal advice.

Q. Let's see if we understand each other on this,

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Schrimpf. You were an alien at the time of this statement in 1937?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, we have gone over this now in great detail. I think he should go on and not go back over it now by asking the witness, "Let us see if I understand you," and then going over the whole field again.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it is rather important to test this man's memory on a rather vital matter.

The Court: I think the witness has given you on two occasions the upshot or sum and substance of the conversation or the colloquy or discussion that occurred during that period of time. Manifestly he has replied to you. Now do you propose to question him as to the question-and-answer context of that conversation?

Mr. MacInnis: No, your Honor; I will ask him a new question.

The Court: All right. I think maybe you may ask him [1800] another question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You tell us today that when brought into the office of the Immigration Service, as you now describe, you told the officers of the United States Government in 1937 that you had no knowledge one way or the other as to whether Harry Bridges was a Communist or had been?

Mr. Paisley: I will object to that.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Paisley: Repetition.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: On what ground, your Honor?

The Court: He has already answered the question on three or four occasions.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And no one forced you to remain and make any further statement, is that true?

Mr. Paisley: Same objection. We have heard this three or four times now.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And after that no member of the Immigration Department called upon you or asked you to give any statement in 1939 or in 1941?

A. I believe there is also on the record an answer to these same questions, and to the best of my recollection, I was contacted, I presume by Government men, and I did keep out of their way, and I believe it is on the record, I mentioned fourteen days. I don't know whether it was a day or two more, or a day or two less. I did stay away at one time, I believe [1801] '39, out of the way. I was not co-operative with the Government.

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, in 1937 your memory was probably better as to the events of 1934 and 1935 than it is now, isn't that true?

A. Not necessarily.

Mr. Paisley: That is argumentative, your Honor. Let him argue that to the jury. I don't think that is the proper question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, do you wish to tell us now that in 1937 when you were brought before the officers of the United States Government that you lied to them?

A. I have already made it clear in the record I was not under oath, and I merely said, "I know nothing of it." That is a matter of record. I refused them. The real thought behind it, the real purpose was to have me take an oath and draw in, and bring in a stenographer ~~and~~ make a statement, and this I did not do.

Q. That was the truth, wasn't it, that you didn't know anything about it either way?

A. Will you qualify that question, "Didn't know anything about it either way."

Q. That is all right. I will proceed to another question. We understand it.

The Court: I think the witness has answered the question [1802] substantially.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, in 1943, when this country was at war, your activities were transferred from those of an ordinary working longshoreman to those of a so-called walking boss, is that correct?

A. I began walking, I believe, in 1943.

Q. And during part of that year you worked on the Army docks here in San Francisco, did you not?

A. I worked mostly across the Bay. I was here for a short time after I started with the Army, but mostly over in Oakland, I believe.

Q. You were at the Army docks in Oakland as well? A. That is right.

Q. Did you tell your superior on that job that you had been a member of the Communist Party?

A. They didn't ask me if I had been a member of the Communist Party.

Q. No one asked you that question?

A. They asked me if I was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. They didn't ask you if you ever had been?

A. Not that I can recollect about that part.

Q. Now, your superior on that particular job knew that you were an alien, did they not?

A. I was not an alien.

Q. You mean you worked for the Army after you were naturalized [1803] in April 1943, is that true?

A. You are placing a lot of words in there and asking me if this is true. I never said anything about it. You asked me when I became a walking boss, and when I started. I naturally couldn't get that job until I was naturalized.

Q. Did you have any loyalty check-up when you went to work for the Army?

A. We had loyalty check-ups quite often.

Q. Weren't you asked then if you had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

A. We were asked if we were members of the Communist Party, yes.

Q. Were you asked if you ever had been a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Paisley: I think he has answered it, your Honor, two or three times.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: No, your Honor, he says in response to the question, "We were asked if we were members of the Communist Party," speaking in the present tense as of the time of the asking of the question.

Q. You were asked, were you not, if you had ever at any time been a member of the Communist Party, weren't you? A. I don't recall it.

Q. What answer did you give to that question, Mr. Schrimpf, in your loyalty test? [1804]

Mr. Paisley: Objected to——

The Court: One moment.

Mr. Paisley: He just said he didn't remember.

The Court: One moment, counsel. I think the witness has answered the questions addressed to him.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You became a citizen, Mr. Schrimpf, in what month of 1943?

A. I believe it was May.

Mr. Paisley: I think that is immaterial. That isn't in cross of anything brought out on direct.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary.

Mr. Paisley: I didn't examine him when he became a citizen. It doesn't seem to me that it tends to impeach him or discredit him in any way. It isn't within the scope of the direct examination.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, in the year of 1943 you made application with the Immigration Service of the United States to be granted citizenship, did you not?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I presume counsel certainly must have heard the Court's rulings on this proposition heretofore.

Mr. MacInnis: This is an entirely different question.

Mr. Paisley: Object to the question.

Mr. MacInnis: It calls for certain questions and answers [1805] that would have taken place.

The Court: What is the basis of your objection, Mr. Paisley? Will you assert the basis of your objections?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor. It isn't in cross of anything brought out on direct, therefore not within the scope of the direct examination. It has no tendency to impeach him or discredit him.

The Court: This matter was addressed to my attention on page 1620 of the transcript, page 1620, line 13—line 16, rather.

> "Q. And you attained your citizenship during the war, when citizenship was rather difficult to obtain?
> "Mr. Paisley: Just a moment, your Honor; that is not within the scope of the direct examination.
>
> "The Court: Sustained.
> "Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, he mentioned on direct examination that he was naturalized in the year 1943.
> "Mr. Paisley: I recall no such testimony as that.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

"Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to find it, your Honor.

"Mr. Paisley: I didn't ask him about his naturalization."

Is that the basis, Mr. Paisley?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor, Now he is attempting to [1806] do the same thing after the Court ruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it would hardly be the position of the Government that by avoiding a particular question of this witness that they now frustrate the defense from examining him on statements that he must have made under oath at that time, for these reasons: The prosecution brought out from this witness that he was born in Australia; that he came to this country. It follows, of course, that he was an alien. They have also brought out from this witness the claim that he was once a member of the Communist Party. We have very eloquently in the evidence in this case out of Mr. Lloyd H. Garner of the Immigration Service the questions which he says the law requires him to ask, and we have your Honor's observation that Mr. Garner and hearing officers in his position would be derelict in their duty if they failed to ask those questions. This matter goes to the verity of the testimony of this witness. It will lead also to whether or not he has sworn falsely under oath to matters which he offered this jury upon what I think we must assume was just as solemn an oath.

Mr. Paisley: Well, your Honor,——

The Court: Do you have any transcript, or what are you reading from, counsel?

Mr. MacInnis: I think your Honor understands I wasn't reading any material; I was speaking to your Honor on the [1807] matter of the objection.

The Court: I was confused, perhaps, by your reference to Mr. Garner. You may respond to that, if you wish. I know what you have in mind.

Mr. MacInnis: I can refer to what you said.

Mr. Paisley: It now appears that what counsel is seeking to get at is to ask the witness if he did not say to some Immigration inspector under oath at some time that he had never been a member of the Communist Party. What that boils down to, your Honor, is this: He is contending that he can ask a witness, "Did you not testify falsely in some other proceeding on some other occasion?" I submit he can't do that. If that were so, then the Court would be constantly in every trial trying other collateral issues as to whether or not a witness had not lied on some other occasion.

Mr. MacInnis: Judge, if he lied before on the same question put to him here, it would be highly relevant to the Court and jury to determine whether [illegible] not he did so, if he has under oath stated that he was not a member of the Communist Party ever.

The Court: Of course, if you desire to lay a foundation for impeachment, you may proceed to lay it. Counsel has asserted a definite objection in the record the other day and now reasserts it. He asserts that this line of examination is not proper cross-examination. [1808]

Departing from that rule for the moment and taking up the matter of the attempted impeachment, the witness is entitled to know the time, place and circumstances, and be confronted with that record. And if you have any record, you may confront the witness with the record of such a character and might thereafter ask some questions about it.

Mr. MacInnis: I asked, your Honor, the Immigration Service to produce for us these records. I have tried to obtain them and the material has been barred from my scrutiny.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, moreover, it is on a collateral issue, and there is nothing more fundamental than that a cross-examiner is bound by the answer of a witness on a collateral matter.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, there are more cases, I suppose, than on any other subject on cross-examination upon the subject that the credibility of a witness is never a collateral matter; the credibility of a witness is always a direct matter. If he has sworn falsely under oath as to the question, was he ever a member of the Communist Party, in view of what we know from the reference of Mr. Garner to the procedure of the Immigration Service and the questions which the law compels him to ask, why, it would reflect—I can't think of words strong enough to say the importance that would attach to that kind of a finding in this case.

The Court: Do you purport to ask the man questions [1809] which you have prepared in written form, counsel, before you?

Mr. MacInnis: I didn't understand what you mean.

The Court: What type of questions do you propose to address to the witness? Are they taken from a transcript?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I have not been in the habit of preparing written questions to witnesses.

The Court: No; I wondered whether or not you were trying to impeach him——

Mr. MacInnis: And I haven't now.

The Court: What I had in mind is this: I am trying to determine the basis for your impeachment. Is it upon the basis of a written record heretofore taken with respect to this man's testimony, or what is it? What is the basis for your impeachment or asserted impeachment?

Mr. MacInnis: From what we know of the statute, and the records of the Immigration Service, which we, of course, do not have in our hands.

The Court: That is based purely on a suppositious statement, then, is it?

Mr. MacInnis: It is based upon the supposition that Mr. Garner was telling the truth under oath about the questions that he puts to the people who apply for citizenship. It is based also upon my own knowledge of a petition filed in this court.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: Of course, counsel, there is no set pattern [1810] in those cases. Immigration matters are sometimes heard by the individual examiner, sometimes reviewed by the courts, and sometimes the Immigration examiners in court. As Mr. Paisley points out with some degree of force, it would require this Court in each instance to retry all of these matters of a collateral character to determine the verity of a particular proceeding. There is not other proceeding before me. Is that your position?

Mr. Paisley: Exactly, your Honor. Yes, sir, exactly. Suppose you were trying a damage suit, some witness had taken the stand, and counsel cross-examined him and he said, "Didn't you testify falsely in the case of John Doe v. Richard Roe"—an entirely different proceeding. Why, your Honor, he would not be permitted to do that. He could ask him, "Haven't you been convicted of perjury?"

Mr. MacInnis: We certainly could your Honor, if it was on the same subject.

Mr. Paisley: You can't try collateral issues of that kind. You can't impeach a witness by asking him if he did not testify falsely in some other collateral proceeding, That is fundamental.

Mr. MacInnis: In effect the prosecutor says this: He says it doesn't matter if this man lied under oath to the officers of the United States Government in obtaining his citizenship upon the precise question, upon the very question [1811] involved in a proceeding directed against a man who obtained his citizenship. That is what he says.

Mr. Paisley: I made no such statement as that, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this in answer to your Honor's comments?

The Court: I do not regard the statement made by Mr. Paisley to approximate that meaning which you placed upon it, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: A moment ago your Honor made this observation: That naturalization matters take different courses.

The Court: They take varied courses, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: In this proceeding, however, your Honor stated that Mr. Garner would have been derelict in his duty if he had not asked the questions that he stated he asked.

The Court: Counsel, there is no particular pattern that may be set up in immigration matters, as far as I can observe.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor said——

The Court: There is no purpose in saying to the Court that Mr. Garner or any other naturalization examiner has a pattern in these matters of question and answer. These matters sometimes rest largely within the discretion of the particular examiner. I don't know of any particular pattern in the course of my presiding over this court, and to suppose [1812] or to adopt the suppositious statement that there was a pattern with respect to a witness over a particular incident is to engage in hypothesis having no basis in fact or in law, as I gather it.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Garner said Section 705 of the Nationality Act, which is certainly a basis in law, impels him to ask these questions.

Mr. Paisley: He keeps going back to the colloquy between your Honor and counsel about these statements of Garner in this matter. Mr. Garner was testifying to his interrogation of Harry Bridges in 1945, which was two years after this witness was naturalized, and furthermore, as I am informed, Mr. Garner wasn't the man who interrogated this man.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Garner said he was a hearing officer since 1941 here in San Francisco.

The Court: There are many deputies, many hearing officers; I don't know the number. Probably the Government will disclose the number, I don't know; but I know Mr. Garner is only one of very many who appears before me on occasions.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, there is really no question before you now.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: I will proceed, and I think, whatever your Honor's state of mind may be, it can be exercised by ruling on particular objections as they arise., [1813]

The Court: Very well. I have been trying to determine in the light of your statement the present state of the record and the basis for Mr. Paisley's objection. I think I have it in mind.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You signed a written application for citizenship, did you not?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Same objection, your Honor.

The Court: State the basis, Mr. Paisley.

Mr. Paisley: It is immaterial, irrelevant, it isn't in cross of anything brought out on direct; it has no tendency, whether he signed an application for citizenship, to impeach or discredit him.

The Court: The objection is sustained. [1814]

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, you signed a document prepared in printed form by the United States Government, in which you were asked the question as to whether or not you had belonged within the past ten years to any subversive organization or to any organization having for its purpose the overthrow of the government, and to that question under oath you answered, "No"; isn't that correct?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Your Honor, I am amazed at the audacity of counsel. I object on the same ground.

The Court: State the basis for the objection, Mr. Paisley, please.

Mr. Paisley: It is irrelevant; it is not within the scope of the direct examination; it has no tendency to impeach or discredit the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: Why, Your Honor, it is exactly the matter to which he has testified under oath.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, on this matter I do have a document available. I do have a record to present to the Court, and I will ask if an inquiry be made for it that Mr. Mitchell be be asked in the recess to obtain for us record number 72468 from the office of the Clerk of this Court in the Naturalization Division and to bring that, so that the witness may be confronted with it. It is a document on file in the third floor in this building, and it contains questions put to this witness [1815] under oath and answers given by him.

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, I renew my objection. I just don't see the materiality of it. If there were any such document, it would have no materiality, it would not be in cross of anything brought out on direct. It could not in any sense tend to impeach him or to discredit him.

Mr. MacInnis: Why, it would show merely, as it will show, that he is a liar. Your Honor, he said that this man, Harry Bridges, one of the defendants in this case, is charged with swearing falsely in a naturalization proceeding. He has charged that the particular question that he answered falsely was, "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" The Government puts a witness on the stand who was an alien, who admits he was a member of the Communist Party, who tells us here under oath that he was a member of the Communist Party, and then they tell Your Honor now, "It is immaterial if he said under oath in 1943 before the officers of the United States Government, 'I am not a member of the Communist Party, I never have been a member of the Communist Party'." Why, Your Honor, what could more completely destroy the testimony of a man of this caliber, coming here under those circumstances——

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, don't you see the fallacy of his argument? In any trial, civil or criminal, if witnesses could be discredited under the rules of evidence by asking them, "Did [1816] you not testify falsely in some other case?", a court could never get through trying cases, because it would be trying collateral issues. There would be half a dozen witnesses one way, a half dozen another, on the collateral issue, as to whether some witness testified falsely in another proceeding. That is why the Courts have wisely laid down the rules that you can impeach a witness ordinarily only by asking him, "Have you been convicted of a crime?" That has a finality about it, a conviction. You may impeach him also by prior inconsistent statements. Now, with those two exceptions, I think the inquiry on collateral matters is foreclosed by the witness' answer.

Mr. MacInnis: The rule changes, however, Your Honor, where the statement made in the prior proceeding under oath is the identical question or substantially the same question as one of the questions and answers given by the witness in the very proceeding in which we now engage. Now, the Government puts this man, Henry Schrimpf, on the stand and vouches for him as a witness. The Government says, "We vouch for him." This is the Government's case. "He is telling the truth." "We place our credit in this man." And then with the same breath they say, "He may have lied under oath to us, the United States Government, when he was granted his citizenship. He may have lied under oath as to the fact of whether or not he was a Communist. But that is collateral; you may not look into that matter here to determine whether or not he is telling the truth." Now, wouldn't that [1817] that be a fine rule of law if it was the case?

The Court: Mr. Paisley?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: In making an argument on the matter of this offer, much of what has been said concerning the witness by Mr. MacInnis is characterization, that he lied, and, of course, it may be ignored by the ladies and gentlemen of the jury. I say no more than that. I admonish the jury to disregard the statements made by both counsel in connection with this particular matter, and I sustain the objection upon the reasons heretofore assigned in sustaining objections heretofore made.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, how many times have you denied under oath that you had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, the same objection.

The Court: Sutained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, can you tell us the name of the hearing officer who conducted any questions which were put to you in your preliminary examination before you came into court on your petition for citizenship?

Mr. Paisley: I object, Your Honor, on the same ground.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): During that preliminary examination an oath was administered to you and you were at that time asked whether or not you had ever been a member of the Communist Party, [1818] and you answered, "No"; isn't that correct?

Mr. Paisley: I object, Your Honor, and I say that I do not think counsel can continually ignore the rulings of a court in evidence by asking the same question or questions which amount to the same thing over and over again.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, passing beyond any preliminary examination which you may have had before the Immigration Service in the petition that you filed, and whose questions you answered under oath, you stated in the file and petition bearing in this court number 72468, you stated under oath the answer, "No," to the question, "Have you within the past ten years been a member of any subversive organization or any organization having for its purpose the overthrow of our government?", and that was upon April 11, 1943, that you made that oath, isn't that true?

Mr. Paisley: I object, Your Honor, on the same ground.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess now?

The Court: Yes. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the afternoon recess. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [1819]

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, with reference to this last question, so many of the questions asked by counsel were in reality two or three or more questions or were part testimony and part questions. I want to make it clear that the Government has no objection to his attempting to lay the foundation for impeachment of the witness by asking him with reference to alleged prior inconsistent statements. So if he wishes to ask a simple question, "Have you at a certain time and place made a statement that you never were a member of the Communist Party?", or words to that effect, we don't object to that because we think that is proper, to lay a foundation for an attempted impeachment of the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: In other words, the Government having now obtained from Your Honor the sustaining of objections, now invites me to disregard Your Honor's ruling because the Government will now offer me the indulgence of not objecting. Well, I don't need that kind of indulgence, Your Honor. I will proceed with the questions.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, your citizenship was granted you, was it? A. That's right.

Q. The Government did not object to citizenship being granted to you, did it?

A. I was given citizenship papers.

Q. And no member of the Immigration Service or no lawyer representing the Government appeared to make an objection? [1820]

A. Not that I recall.

Q. There was no protest of any kind?

A. Not that I recall.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, Your Honor, we ask that the record from the file of the Clerk in the Naturalization Department of this Court in the matter of the application and petition for naturalization of Henry Schrimpf be brought here and introduced in evidence. We ask Your Honor's order in that respect.

Mr. Paisley: We have no objection to that, Your Honor, if it is limited to the one purpose of attempting to lay the foundation for impeachment by producing, if he can produce, a statement that is contrary to the statement the witness has made on the stand.

The Court: The record may be produced, with the qualification adverting to your statement, Mr. MacInnis, where you said it may be produced and introduced in evidence—it may be produced. With respect to introduction in evidence, that, of course, remains to be seen.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, we might ask for the convenience of the Court——

The Court: The record may be produced as identified by number and in accordance with your request.

Mr. MacInnis: And may I ask that a certified copy be prepared for the use of the Court and the jury if——

The Court: Counsel, I do not have in mind the nature of [1821] the record, the contents or the bulk of it, or what it is about. But I am sure that if you take it up with Mr. Paisley and his associates at the recess period, convenience may be had on it.

Mr. MacInnis: What makes Your Honor feel that they will be so obliging?

The Court: Counsel, I do not desire to be interrogated by you, either at this stage of the proceeding or at any other.

Mr. MacInnis: I appreciate that.

The Court: I think I told you that this morning.

Mr. MacInnis: I heard, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, thank you. Your province is to interrogate these witnesses.

Mr. MacInnis: I am doing my best to interrogate the witnesses, Your Honor, but——

The Court: Counsel, let us proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. I would like to request formally of the Court that a certified copy of the record just now referred to be made, for this reason, that having attempted to obtain a certified copy, the Clerk has informed me that only upon an order of the Court can such a record be prepared.

The Court: The record will be produced in court.

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to ask now for a formal order of Your Honor requiring the Immigration Service to produce here all of the records, documents and transcripts pertaining to preliminary examination of Henry Schrimpf in the matter of his application for citizenship. [1822]

The Court: I assumed I had encompassed that in my original order.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, for the record, may we have a ruling?

The Court: With respect to the file number, you identified the file number; I made an order that the record be produced. That will suffice.

Mr. MacInnis: There is only one document on file in this building, Your Honor; only the petition.

The Court: I have no knowledge of the record, counsel. I made an order that the record be produced in court. Accordingly, it will be produced here.

Mr. MacInnis: The question now is as to documents which are not on file with the Clerk.

The Court: And it will be lodged with the Clerk of this Court. Mr. Mitchell, will you see that the document is produced and is lodged with you?

The Clerk: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: The further request, Your Honor, is for documents which are not in the possession of the Naturalization Clerk in this building, but which are said to repose with the Immigration Service at its office here.

The Court: I do not know the nature of any such document. Are there any such documents, gentlemen?

Mr. Paisley: There are certain forms, Your Honor, that the [1823] applicant is required to file with the Immigration Service before the petition is filed in court. So I am informed.

Mr. Mac Innis: I think we know that from the testimony of Mr. Garner, Your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: We will be glad to produce them. There is no real reason why we shouldn't. And we think, if counsel wants to lay a foundation now for impeachment by showing that statements made by this witness on those forms are contrary to what he has testified here under oath, we have no objection to his laying a foundation. We will produce the documents. If they tend to impeach him, they would be admissible when he comes to put on his case or, in Your Honor's discretion, now.

Mr. MacInnis: Why, I am a little puzzled, Your Honor. A few minutes ago we heard a very emphatic statement that these matters were all collateral. Now we have a surprising offer of cooperation. However,——

Mr. Paisley: It is all collateral, Your Honor,

except on that one point of prior inconsistent statements.

Mr. MacInnis: What do you think we have been asking about, Mr. Paisley?

Mr. Paisley: I don't know. I have been here about three days listening to you cross-examine, and I don't know now what the purpose of your questions is.

Mr. MacInnis: Then you never will Mr. Paisley.

The Court: Proceed. [1824]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, did you know that in the year 1938 before a hearing of the Dies Committee, the so-called Un-American Activities Committee of our Congress, that the Government produced as a witness Mr. Harper Knowles, who testified under oath that you were a citizen of the United States?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, Your Honor.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Upon the floor of the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast, on July 3rd of 1937, did you make this statement:

> "It is my opinion that the chairman and other individuals here are deliberately trying to sabotage the convention by all these phoney motions and everything else."

Did you say that?

Mr. Paisley: I just don't see the materiality of it.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: What is the basis for this line of examination?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Your Honor, it is more criticism by this man of matters engaged in by Harry Bridges, and his associates.

Q. (By the Court): Do you recall any such conversation.

A. Well, that is a long time ago. I can't recall the wording of any such statement. There was much controversy on the floor. There was pros and cons for many issues. I can't recall the nature of statements on the floor at the convention. [1825]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Upon July 29th of the same year, 1937, in the same convention, the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast, did you make this statement at a time when Mr. Bridges was absent from the floor:

> "As a delegate to this convention and at all times expecting and showing some consideration for the rank and file whom I represent, I believe it is high time that the delegates of this convention and past Maritime Federation conventions take issue against the lousy, slimy politics that are being exercised at the expense of 4,000 members. Again I will repeat, with all due regard and the greatest respect for the true rank and file, and also at all times regarding the autonomy of all locals, that I believe it is high time that a policy was laid down and definite action taken against the slimy, lousy politicians who fly up and down this Coast, > vilifying and crucifying brother members, without allowing them the right to defend themselves, for no other crime than that they refuse to go along with a certain political program, and who in a ruthless, lousy, relentless drive to put over a program which is far apart from the true trade union movement, and is dividing the unity of the maritime workers on this Coast."

Did you make that statement on the floor?

A. That is quite a piece of literature.

Q. Yes. [1826] A. I don't——

Q. Yes, it is.

A. That is a long time ago. I don't know if I wrote that or made that statement on the floor.

Q. Do you remember a man named George Arms?

A. We had a George Arms as a member of our local.

Q. You knew him, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. In fact, he was one of the witnesses at your naturalization, wasn't he? A. That's right.

Q. George Arms was charged with misconduct upon the floor of the union, the ILWU, and you spoke on his behalf in the presence of Mr. Henry Schmidt?

The Court: One moment. Objection sustained.

Mr. Paisley: I can't see any materiality to that.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, George Arms, the man whose part you took, was charged with dealing with Harper Knowles, Stanley M.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Doyle, the Associated Farmers, all of the labor spying groups of the Pacific Coast. He was charged with dealing with Ivan Cox, who filed a complaint against Harry Bridges, and other persons in the State of California, and he was charged with dealing with the Stewart Street gang, a group of persons working to spread scandal about Harry Bridges——

Mr. Paisley: Oh, I object, Your Honor; it is obviously not [1827] proper here, even though he hasn't gotten to the end of it.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I have his statement.

The Court: The objection to the statement is sustained; it is a rhetorical statement, argumentative.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the purpose of these questions is to show something deeper than ordinary hostility on the part of this man.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In the statements which were read to you by me a moment ago, concerning matters that you spoke of openly upon the floor of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, did you mean Harry Bridges and his associates when you said "lousy, slimy politicians"?

A. I never made any comment on that piece of literature, other than it was quite a piece of literature. I said I don't—I don't know if that is the statement I made.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. In that event, I will refresh your memory.

Mr. Paisley: I think the Court has already ruled that he can't refresh his recollection by something he didn't get up himself.

(Document exhibited to Mr. Paisley by Mr. MacInnis.)

Mr. Paisley: Oh, go ahead, ask him anything. I don't want to see it.

Mr. MacInnis: I understood, Your Honor, that the [1828] prosecution objection to these matters going into evidence.

Mr. Paisley: Go ahead. We will get through quicker.

Mr. MacInnis: All right, if you will offer that for the rest of the case, we will get along fine.

For identification, we will offer to the Clerk a copy of the excerpt from the minutes of the convention of which we spoke, and I will ask the Clerk, please, to take the original folder of the minutes and display them to the witness and ask him to read the part marked with a red line about his own statement.

The Clerk: May the exhibit be marked Defendant's P for identification, Your Honor?

The Court: So ordered.

(Typewritten excerpt from convention minutes, referred to above, was then marked Defendant's Exhibit P for identification.)

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk, examined by the witness and thereupon returned to Mr. MacInnis by the Clerk.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Is your memory now refreshed as to whether you made the statement which was read to you?

A. It is possibly I did.

Q. Well, did you say you did or you didn't?

A. Well, if they are official minutes, I would say I did. The only thing I have to go by, you say they are official minutes.

Q. Now, I will ask you the question, when you say "lousy, [1829] slimy politicians," did you mean Harry Bridges? A. Not necessarily.

Q. Whom did you mean?

A. We have many officials.

Q. You have no idea whom you may have meant? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who? A. Well, some of our officials.

Q. Could you name them?

Mr. Paisley: Well, I don't think he can do that now. He has already said it was not Bridges.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: He ~~didn't~~ say it was not Bridges.

Mr. Paisley: I thought he did.

A. Well, at the time of this convention in Portland there was many heated discussions on the floor, and on more than one occasion there were attacks against the rank and file, including myself. And I made this statement, if that is the way it was written up, and I presume it was in the minutes, against our officials who were running up and down the Coast and making statements without giving the membership, or at least the rank and file or the individuals involved, the right to defend themselves.

Q. And could you tell whom you may have meant by "the officials"?

A. Well, in many ways, I was attacked by Bridges, and I will [1830] make this for the record, that at one of our regular meetings in San Francisco, he told the membership that I was getting $10,000 a year from the shipowners. [1830-A]

Q. How much were you getting?

A. Me? I wish I was getting that or just a part of it; I would take a half of one per cent of it.

Q. You had resentment against Harry Bridges when he made that charge against you?

A. On policy.

Q. That was on policy only?

A. That is right; strictly policy.

The Court: One moment, Mr. Witness. So that there may be no question of mistake in the record hereafter, either by inference or expression, were you receiving any sum at all of any kind, character or description from the Employers' Association or any group of shipowners?

The Witness: I will be glad to answer that. I am surprised at the intelligence of the attorney to ask that question. I definitely never received a cent in my life from any employing group except what I worked darned hard for with muscle and brawn and then when I went walking boss, and that goes for any group, up to this time. I have never received one brown cent.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): When Harry Bridges accused you of receiving $10,000 from the shipowners you weren't offended and you told us now that that was just a matter of policy?

A. Well, I certainly was offended to this extent: I am emotional, after all, and I did take the floor in my own defense [1831] when I had the opportunity.

Q. Well, now, may we have your answer to the question: When you used the phrase "lousy, slimy politicians," did you mean Harry Bridges among that group?

A. It applied to the politicians who went up and down the coast or flying over the country, and it could have applied to Harry Bridges. I mean, it could have applied to Harry Bridges on some of those occasions.

Q. You know that you meant to imply Harry Bridges' name in that assertion, do you not?

A. Yes, it could have applied to Harry Bridges.

Q. Now, when was it that Harry Bridges took the floor of the union and accused you of receiving $10,000 from the employers?

A. I believe it was at a meeting following this convention in Portland.

Q. Following the 1937 convention?

A. That is right, and the only recollections that I can—that I have, or to the best of my recollec-

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

tions, I was being criticized severely by some of the other delegates for not going along on policy at the convention, not going along with sometimes the majority of delegates at the convention; and someone, I don't know who, on the floor, asked the question, "Well, why are you always jumping on Schrimpf?" or something of that nature, and that is when this——

Q. Someone asked whom that question? [1832]

A. Asked the president—I guess it was the president. It was the chairman of the meeting. And that was when this statement was made that I was not so hot; that I was getting my $10,000 a year from the shipowners.

Q. Was that a meeting whose minutes were recorded in the ordinary way?

A. In our meetings the minutes are not always recorded verbatim. In fact, we have had meetings where we have not taken it down in shorthand. Now, I don't know at this particular meeting if the whole meeting was recorded verbatim. I doubt it.

Q. You made a reply when Bridges accused you of receiving $10,000?

A. Well, I just got up and defended myself and pointed out it was so ridiculous, and it ended up by a regular laugh-fest of the membership because they all knew it was so silly.

Q. Did you apply any names to Bridges when you got up and made the reply?

A. Not that I remember.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. You just got up and said in effect it was a silly, ridiculous charge?

A. I don't know the language I used or how long I spoke, but that was the trend of thought.

Q. And you tell us now that you weren't personally offended, you took it only to be a matter of policy within the union? [1833]

A. That is a very general question, if I was personally offended. It was still policy. And I still say it was a pretty lousy policy to continually be getting up and making accusations or assertions and attacking, and that certainly was an attack.

Q. And you tell us now that Bridges on that occasion engaged in attacking and vilifying the rank and file, including yourself?

A. You asked if he was one of these, or the name—he could be one of the men being referred to in this statement, and I said it could be.

Q. Let me see if I follow your reasoning exactly, Mr. Schrimpf. Now you say that when on July 29 of 1937, you used the phrase "lousy, slimy politicians," you could well have been referring to Harry Bridges because he had risen on the floor and accused you of taking $10,000 from the employers?

Mr. Paisley: That is only repetition, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: No, there is a point to be evolved here, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Well, I will say again—it is already in the record—he could have—he could have been one referred to. He could have been one of those referred to in the statement.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): But a moment ago, Mr. Schrimpf, you told us that Harry Bridges accused you of taking $10,000 from [1834] the employers at some meeting after the 1937 convention, so what matter did you have in mind on July 29, 1937, when you referred to him as a lousy, slimy politician?

A. Well, there were other happenings——

Q. Such as what?

A. Well, there was many instances which happened on the floor.

Q: Can you tell us one or two?

A. Yes, I can state another instance. At one time, and this was before the convention, it had reference to a man named Deal, whose name was brought in here, the Deal incident.

Q. He was a ferryboatman, was he not?

A. That is right. Deal—incidentally, he carried on strike-breaking after we went back to work, even to the extent of hiring gunmen to break the bargemen's strike in '34. The bargemen still stayed on strike, and he was considered by our union not very popular, and a long ways from being the kind of a man to be taken in or made a vice president. He was made a vice president by our international officers, and I criticized this policy, and the rebuke was, by Bridges, "Well, he isn't as bad as the rats," or "no worse than the rats"—I just don't know the exact language — "that Schrimpf runs around with," and such stuff as that.

Q. I see. In other words, before July 29th of 1937, I suppose on a matter involving only policy as well, Bridges had said that a man named Clyde Deal was not as bad as the rats that [1835] Schrimpf was running around with?

A. No, I did not say that at all. I said it was on a discussion of Deal, and he was being criticized by some members of our local for making him a vice president, and to this criticism Bridges answered, "Well, he is no worse than some of the rats Schrimpf runs around with."

Q. Whom did he mean by the rats that you ran around with?

A. I don't know. I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, let me see if I can refresh your recollection on that. In 1936 you had been nominated to the board of trustees of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific by Harry Lundeberg; that is correct, isn't it?

A. I don't know who nominated me. I was nominated.

Q. I think you told us yesterday that it could well have been Mr. Lundeberg?

A. Well, it may have been.

Q. And you have followed the policies of Harry Lundeberg ever since, have you not?

A. I have not followed the policies of Harry Lundeberg, because I haven't—I haven't been with

Lundeberg, and I don't know what his policies are today.

Q. In the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in the years 1936, 1937 and 1938 you aligned yourself with Harry Lundeberg, did you not, against Harry Bridges?

A. That is not so, as to aligning myself with anybody against [1836] Harry Bridges.

Q. Did you follow policies advocated by Harry Lundeberg?

A. Lundeberg was not very active in the way of making or advocating policies.

Q. Lundeberg became president of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific as early as 1935, did he not?

A. He was our first president, that is right.

Q. But he wasn't very active in formulating policies? A. No, that is right.

Q. What was he in 1936? Was he an officer then?

A. I believe he was reelected back to his office as secretary of the Sailors' Union after he resigned from the Federation in 1935, and I believe he still held that office in '36.

Q. But you say he was not active?

A. I never said that word; I said he was not good at making policies.

Q. What other persons did Bridges say he meant when he used the phrase "Schrimpf and the rats he runs around with"?

A. I don't know. I am waiting for you to tell me that. I don't know—or maybe Bridges can tell you.

Q. When he said that, did you feel aggrieved, or was that just a matter of policy also?

A. When he had reference to the rats I ran around with?

Q. Yes. A. Did I agree? [1837]

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Were you aggrieved? A. Agreed?

Q. Were you hostile toward him then, or was that just a matter of policy?

A. I thought it a pretty lousy policy to be attacking and vilifying character in trying to get over a point.

Q. So as early as 1937, twelve years ago, you had already reached the conclusion that Bridges represented a pretty lousy policy?

A. I didn't say that.

Q. Tell us what you meant, then, Mr. Schrimpf.

A. Concerning what?

Q. You know what we are talking about.

A. So do I, yes.

Q. We are discussing first the remark that you made July 29 on the floor of the convention in which you referred to Bridges as one of the lousy, slimy politicians who was flying up and down the coast vilifying the rank and file, including yourself. You first told us that that remark of yours was actuated by the fact that Bridges had accused you of taking $10,000 from the employers, but when it was pointed out to you that that happened later, you said an instance you could cite was when Bridges had said, "Schrimpf and the rats he runs [1838] around with."

Mr. Paisley: I object to the question on the ground that it is an argument, not a question.

The Court: It is an argument. Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): We spoke yesterday for a while about the strike in the early fall of 1933 upon the Matson docks when four men were put out of their work, when a walkout ensued, and when the President appointed George Creel to act as an arbitrator. Do you remember that?

A. There was some discussion yesterday; it is on the record.

Q. And that small strike resulted in a victory to a certain extent for the men, because the union was then recognized as a bargaining agent for the first time, is that true?

A. Have you—are you referring to the Matson strike?

Q. Yes.

A. The union was not officially recognized as the sole bargaining agent, to the best of my recollections, until after we had the new strike in '34.

Q. That is quite correct. The union was recognized after the Matson strike as not being a cause for expulsion of men from their jobs, that is, membership in the union, isn't that true?

A. Well, you are saying so many questions.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Why, first, you asked if that was recognizing the union, and I answered that question.

Q. No. Let me ask you this question: After the settlement of [1839] the Matson strike it was established by George Creel, arbitrator appointed by the President, that men could no longer be fired from their jobs because of their membership in the ILA; that is correct, isn't it?

A. That is on the record; I just don't know what the procedure was at that time.

Q. And it was after that time that union buttons began to be worn openly?

A. It could have been.

Q. And that was around September of 1933, wasn't it? A. It could have been.

Q. The persons who were militant and active in that strike, small though it may have have been, and who brought it to a successful conclusion, were the men connected with the so-called Albion Hall group, isn't that true? A. It may have been.

Q. And just at about the time of the settlement of the Matson strike the so-called Albion Hall group had run a slate of officers for election within the ILA, is that not true?

A. It could have been true.

Q. And those officers had been elected and helped to create a united front which resulted in the settlement of that small strike, is that true?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, there are three questions in one, it seems to me. [1840]

A. It may have been.

Mr. McInnis: As I understand it now, your Honor, the record already discussed is to be brought here.

The Court: That is the order.

Mr. MacInnis: And pending the production of that record may we take the recess? It is now——

Mr. Paisley: We will give him the petition from the Immigration and Naturalization Service file now.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean you have had the official record right here in your hands all this time?

Mr. Paisley: Why, certainly we have.

Mr. MacInnis: You didn't even have to go to the official repository, but it is in the file of the prosecuting counsel?

Mr. Paisley: Where do you expect them to be?

Mr. MacInnis: I won't be surprised about anything about any record.

Mr. Paisley: Neither will we, counsel, after what has gone on here.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, although late in the day, I feel that I have sufficient energy at this time for one additional admonition, and that admonition I repeat, as I said before, that the statements of counsel will not be regarded by you as evidence; that in the give-and-take of a trial things are said by counsel that sometimes should not be said. We cannot retrace our steps nor erase [1841] the record, as I said at the very threshold of the case when you were empaneled.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

I asked you then if the Court at certain junctures were to admonish you to erase from your minds the statements made by counsel, you would do so, and you said you would. I instruct you to erase from your minds the characterizations made by Mr. MacInnis in advance of the production of these records that the witness has been or was a liar. I ask you to erase that from your minds. I ask you to erase the recent discussion or colloquy by Mr. MacInnis, to wit: that he might expect anything in the trial of the case. I regard the several statements on that subject as misconduct on his part. You are entirely to disregard them in your determination of this matter.

Mr. MacInnis: I request the Court to make some more instructions in respect of the remarks made by the Government prosecutor.

The Court: Do you have in mind any specific remark made by Mr. Paisley in connection with the last colloquy?

Mr. MacInnis: The entire colloquy. If what I said was improper, it would seem to me that what the other gentleman said was just as improper.

The Court: If you can point, Mr. MacInnis, to any statement made by Mr. Paisley that would border upon the characterization of a witness as a liar or the like, I should be glad to admonish the jury. I do not presently recall any statement [1842] of that character or any statement that would border or even approach misconduct at this juncture. If you can point to any such remark——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: If your Honor's memory is as you have stated, it wouldn't be necessary for me to attempt to point out anything to you, so I will let the record stay as it is.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Now I have been handed one document which apparently is the counterpart of the application. Is this the original?

Mr. Paisley: It is a duplicate original.

Mr. MacInnis: All right. We ask, first, that it be marked for identification.

The Court: It may be marked.

The Clerk: May it be marked Defendants' Q for identification only?

(The application was marked Defendants' Exhibit Q for identification.)

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to ask if the Government prosecutors will furnish us also with a transcript of the oral questions put to this man when he was an applicant for citizenship as well as to the two witnesses whom he brought.

Mr. Paisley: I am advised, your Honor, that these are the only records in existence.

The Court: Do you so certify to this Court? [1843]

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I have no knowledge, personal knowledge.

The Court: Do you so certify to the Court, sir?

Mr. MacInnis: He says he has no personal knowledge, your Honor. How can he certify to something that he says he doesn't know anything about?

The Court: May I conduct this, Mr. MacInnis?

Mr. Paisley: I do so certify, your Honor, on information and belief which I have obtained from immigration officials.

The Court: Thank you, sir. [1844]

Q. I will ask you this, Mr. Schrimpf, referring to the document called Defendant's Exhibit No. Q for identification, if under oath in a form application submitted to you by the Immigration Service of the United States as a part of the process of applying for citizenship, you were asked, among other things, this question under oath, to which you replied as I will read:

"I am not and have not been for the period of at least ten years immediately preceding the date of this statement an anarchist, nor a believer in the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property or sabotage, nor a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government, nor a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in opposition to organized government." Did you make that statement under oath?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, that wasn't the question. The question was whether or not he ever testified under oath that he had never been a member of the Communist Party. Now he has got another question that he is asking.

Mr. MacInnis: We are given one sheet of paper by the prosecutor. In answer to Your Honor's question, he tells you that he doesn't, of course,—which is undoubtedly the fact,—have any personal knowledge of what papers, what proceedings, what memoranda were transcribed. I can only do one thing at a time. I am asking this one question. [1845]

The Court: All right; you may answer.

The Witness: Will you read it out again? What is on there?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. So that the entire matter will be in your mind, I will ask you if, under oath, on the 8th day of May of 1943,—no, pardon me, the 8th day of April, 1943, under oath, before the Immigration Service of the United States, you made this answer:

"I am not and have not been for the period of at least 10 years immediately preceding the date of this statement an anarchist, nor a believer in the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or sabotage, nor a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government, nor a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in opposition to organized government."

Did you make that statement under oath?

A. I can't recall the exact language. If it was a part—if it was a part of the requirements to, regarding my naturalization, I presume I made it.

Q. And you understood when you made that statement under oath that a period of ten years back from April the 8th of 1943 would take you back to a period of April 8, 1933, didn't you?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That's right.

Q. Now, I will ask you if, in your petition filed with the Clerk of this Court, petition No. 72468, you made the following statement under oath in the month of April of 1943, upon April [1846] the 8th, again:

"I am not and have not been for the period of at least ten years immediately preceding the date of this petition, an anarchist, nor a believer in the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property or sabotage, nor a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government, nor a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in or opposition to organized government." Did you make that statement under oath?

A. I will say for the record, as I said before, if this was one of the requirements in obtaining my naturalization I must have made it.

Q. And when you made that statement under oath, you realized that a period of ten years back would again take you to April 8th of 1933, did you not?

A. Yes, the dates there—that is the dates, the way they jibe.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess at this time?

The Witness: May I qualify that answer?

The Court: Yes, sir.

A. (Continuing): There is one answer that has not been cleared up, at least there is one question that was not asked. I was asked, "To the best of my recollection, do you belong to any Fascist, Nazi, Communist or any group which advocates the overthrow of our democratic government?," or it was in language along that. I said, "I do not." That was "Do I belong to [1847] them?," and I said, "I do not." I believe that question was asked me.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. We will come to further questions if we may, Your Honor, when we reconvene. I would like to read these documents.

The Court: The indication to the Court was that we would complete this examination, let us say, by today.

Mr. MacInnis: I had thought so, Your Honor.

The Court: Is there any prospect of completing it within the next 15 or 20 minutes?

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I would think so if I may have a moment to read these papers over—whatever Your Honor thinks best. I can finish with this man either in the morning or tonight, whatever Your Honor prefers.

The Court: I have in mind that he has been here now for some period of time. However,——

Mr. Paisley: It wouldn't take him long to read them, Your Honor. It didn't take me but about two or three minutes.

Mr. MacInnis: I may not be able to digest these things as rapidly as you, Mr. Paisley.

Mr. Paisley: I think you could.

The Court: I might say that I would like to complete with this witness if at all convenient. I am not going to foreclose you, however.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, the only position I have, if it is [1848] important to Your Honor, I will go ahead. If Your Honor is indifferent about it, I would just as soon that we go over until tomorrow morning. There may be some further questions. And in view of certain rulings on certain objections, I might wish to phrase them in a different way to preserve a record. I don't know. That matter I would like to think over a little bit.

The Court: We will adjourn, then, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. I have in mind that at a later stage of this week, by reason of the Christmas period, that we might recess the Court, let us say, Friday at noon to allow for an interval of time so that you ladies and gentlemen may do your shopping and attend to the details that enter into the Christmastide spirit. I realize that at this particular time, particularly launching into the Christmas season, to the holiday season, that there is an additional burden upon you. I want to make it as light as possible. That is the reason I did not want to run too late today.

Mr. MacInnis: We would be glad to accede to any such suggestion, Your Honor.

The Court: We will resume, then, tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock have in mind that at a later date this week, let us say Friday, we might well adjourn at 12:00 o'clock. So you will have that afternoon, Friday afternoon, to do your shopping. As it results now, it is late when you reach the downtown area, [1849] 5:00 o'clock at least, and the day is gone. Again may I admonish you not to discuss the case under any circumstances, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

We will now adjourn until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Wednesday, December 7, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [1849-A]

Wednesday, December 7, 1949—10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The witness on the stand is Henry Joseph Schrimpf, heretofore sworn.

HENRY JOSEPH SCHRIMPF

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Your Honor, with reference to the documents of which mention was made in attempting to refresh this witness' recollection, I have the copies that you suggested. I think I have most of them here. There are two or three more which are still being prepared. And I will present them to the Government prosecutors, and if those are satisfactory they may be marked for identification on the one exhibit number that has been designated by the Clerk.

The Court: So that we may know and the jurors may know, the documents you handed to Mr. Paisley are copies of official records, are they?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor, the same ones——

The Court: Would you state now for the record the copies. They are copies of official records. Will you identify them for the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor: I have handed the Government [1850] prosecutors the following, which are now identified, respectively:

The full minutes of the International Longshoremen's Association, Local 3897, general membership meeting of November 13, 1934.

The Clerk: May I temporarily mark it as N?

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. MacInnis: I hand them also full minutes of International Longshoremen's Association, Local 3879, regular minutes of October 15, 1934.

The Clerk: May those be marked, your Honor, N-1 for identification?

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. MacInnis: And a copy of the full minutes of the Longshoremen's Labor Relations Committee meeting of October 23, 1934.

The Clerk: May those be marked N-2 for identification, your Honor?

The Court: So ordered.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: A copy of the full minutes of a special meeting of the International Longshoremen's Association of June 17, 1934, all of these being documents whose originals were displayed to the witness.

The Clerk: N-3.

The Court: They may be marked. [1851]

Mr. Paisley: I take it, your Honor, that they have been accurately copied, but I think it would be our duty to check them against the originals.

Mr. MacInnis: That is perfectly satisfactory. Some of the originals we may have here. The others we will bring back, and we will be glad to allow that opportunity.

I might say that the documents I have in my hand now which were handed me by the prosecutor are not documents upon which we have had a chance to check with any originals from the official repository, but we will go ahead.

Mr. Paisley: The original copies, I imagine, would be with the Court, the Clerk of the Court. They are not copies; they are duplicate originals signed by the witness.

> (The documents referred to were marked Defendants' Exhibits N, N-1, -2, and -3 for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Schrimpf, it appears that the two men who appeared as witnesses for you when you applied for citizenship were Mr. George Arms and Mr. Jensen, is that correct?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. It's Jensen—Mr. Arms and Mr. Jensen.

Q. What was Mr. Jensen's first name? On this paper only his last name is given. A. Les.

Q. Just Les?

A. Les was all I ever knew him by. [1852]

Q. Did those men accompany you to the office of the Immigration Service when you made your original application?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment, your Honor. I object to any questions about this man's naturalization on the same grounds that we urged yesterday, the only exception being that he may ask him for the purpose of laying a foundation for attempted impeachment, as to whether or not he had ever testified or stated under oath or otherwise that he had never been a member of the Communist Party. Now, we are certainly not concerned with the details about his naturalization.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard briefly, your Honor?

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I am not on the point precisely——

The Court: This may be preliminary, at any rate. Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

A. You asked me the question if my two witnesses accompanied me to the court?

Q. No, to the office of the Immigration Service before you came to court.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That I do not recall.

Q. You do not recall any occasion in which you and your two witnesses went to the office of the Immigration Service and submitted yourselves for questioning?

A. I can't recall if we three went together to the office. [1853]

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to request of the Government prosecutors that we be given now a copy of the transcript of such preliminary questions as were put to this witness and to the two men who were his witnesses.

Mr. Paisley: There is no such document in existence, according to my information and belief.

The Court: I will make an order that it be produced. If it is in existence, produce it.

Mr. MacInnis: May that order, your Honor, run to the existence of any memorandum of such——

The Court: You specify the documents. I will rule as you specify.

Mr. MacInnis: We ask, then, that the Government prosecutors, if the record cannot be produced or if it now is not in existence, produce the notes or memoranda of the hearing officer who questioned Mr. Schrimpf, Mr. Arms and Mr. Jensen.

Mr. Paisley: I am informed by Mr. Boyd, who certainly ought to know, your Honor, that this is the complete record of the Immigration Service.

Mr. MacInnis: Do you state that the Immigration Service kept no records at all on this matter other than those bare printed forms?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Donohue: I think, if your Honor please, that is an unfair question.

The Court; Yes, it is. [1854]

Mr. Donohue: I may say to Your Honor, as long as counsel has raised the point, that the hearing examiner, from our records, who conducted this hearing, is no longer in the Immigration Service, and we have made every possible human effort since this matter came to our attention a day or two ago to locate him, that we may bring him here, and we can't find him.

The Court: Are you prepared to disclose his name?

Mr. Donohue: His name is Hauser.

The Court: Hauser?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: How long was he in the government service?

Mr. Donohue: I will have to ask Mr. Boyd if he knows.

Mr. Boyd: I am not prepared to answer, sir.

Mr. Donohue: I can find that information for you.

The Court: All right. At least his name is Hauser.

Mr. Donohue: We understood he was an attorney practicing law in Los Angeles. I called the Los Angeles office of the Immigration Service the day before yesterday and asked them to make every human effort to locate him, that I wanted to talk with him.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask the government prosecutor another question, advisedly, Your Honor: Would one be able to find the name of Mr. Hauser, the hearing officer, upon either of these documents that you have handed me? (Handing to Mr. Paisley) [1855]

Mr. Paisley: What is this?

Mr. MacInnis: I am merely trying to eliminate going over it line by line.

Mr. Paisley: Well, of course, Your Honor, the document speaks for itself. There is the name, in answer to your question. I don't think I should be questioned this way. There is the name of Bonsall there, designated "Examiner." But I am told by Mr. Boyd that he was just in a preliminary capacity there.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the reason I asked that question is this: If the name of Mr. Hauser, which is now offered us by one of these government prosecutors as being the hearing officer at the time Mr. Schrimpf was admitted to citizenship, is not on these documents, and if it is within the knowledge of the prosecutor, it must appear on some record. Now, they say that this is the full record. If the name of Mr. Hauser appears on some records, so that it could then be transmitted into the mind of Mr. Donohue, we would like to see that record.

Mr. Paisley: Now, Your Honor, what we are saying is that these are the documents and the only documents signed, executed by the witness; that there is no question and answer transcript available in the file of Schrimpf in the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Certainly counsel knows that he is not——

The Court: Well, Mr. Schrimpf at no time testified before [1856] the Superior Court in and for the City and County of San Francisco, did he?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, no, no.

The Court: As Mr. Bridges did?

Mr. Paisley: That's right.

The Court: Where were the proceedings conducted as to this man?

Mr. Paisley: In this District Court.

The Court: In this court?

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

The Court: Did it ever go on to a court hearing?

Mr. Paisley: I am advised that there were no questions asked in open court. Sometimes that is done; they are subject to cross-examination by a government representative.

The Court: Do you represent to the Court, then, —I asked this question late yesterday—that the document handed to Mr. MacInnis represents the full file on this matter?

Mr. Paisley: They represent anything signed by the witness. They—There is no transcript of questions and answers made by the witness, other than this. Of course, the Immigration has other files, but they are naturally confidential matters. He is not entitled to them. For instance, suppose there was a report of an investigator of their findings on this man. They would not be entitled to that. That is confidential government records. We voluntarily have given them anything that this [1857] witness signed or anything that he might have said.

The Court: All right, you may proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, that if there is such a file, it would be within Your Honor's discretion to look at the file and to see what matters we should be allowed to scrutinize. I don't think we should be bound by what the prosecutor says is confidential.

Mr. Paisley: I subscribe to that doctrine. We can stop right there. We are quite willing for the Court to have it, but we don't think that the Court will or should order the Government's confidential files disclosed to the defendant, unless they contain some statement from which, by the witness, from which he might possibly be impeached.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, if I understood your ruling correctly, you have indicated that if there is any memorandum taken as to the preliminary examination of Mr. Schrimpf and his two witnesses, that that should be brought here. Those, of course, would not be documents assigned by Mr. Schrimpf. He wouldn't be signing an oral interrogatory.

The Court: Well, as I understand your immediate purpose, as indicated yesterday as well as this morning, you now seek to contradict by prior testimony or by laying a foundation for the impeachment of the testimony of this witness. Now, that may be done if the record so reflects. And you may examine this witness with respect to the subject matter of answers to [1858] questions propounded to him. This matter did not go to court hearing?

Mr. Paisley: That's right, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in reference to these matters and in reference to the contents of the questions and answers which I have already read to this witness out of the two documents which have been given us,——

The Court: I haven't seen the document, counsel, —thus far. I haven't seen them.

Mr. MacInnis: I see. I appreciate they haven't yet been handed to Your Honor.

(Documents handed to the Court by the Clerk.)

The Clerk: One has been marked, one has not.

Mr. Paisley: Now we have the entire file in the building and will be glad to submit it to Your Honor if Your Honor cares to see it. But Your Honor can certainly allow access to anything in there to the defendants. If Your Honor feels that the files should not be turned over to the defendants, it may be sealed for future use in an appellate court if counsel wishes to make any contention that Your Honor is in error in not giving him any part of the file.

The Court: Well, proceed at this juncture with the witness Mr. Schrimpf.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, what I was about to propose to Your [1859] Honor is this. This will take about two minutes to read to Your Honor. Section 705 of the Nationality Act, which is part of our United States Code Annotated, passed in October of 1940 and applicable at the time of this man's naturalization, reads as follows:

> "No person shall hereafter be naturalized as a citizen of the United States, A, who advises, advocates or teaches, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization, association, society or group that advises, advocates or teaches opposition to all organized government, or, B, who believes in, advises, advocates or teaches, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization, association, society or group that believes in, advises, advocates or teaches, 1, the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all forms of law, or, 2, the duty, necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting, killing of any officer or officers of the Government of the United States, et cetera, or, 3, the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property, or, 4, sabotage."

Section C applies the same principles to anyone who writes or publishes the material dealing with the same matter, and Section D makes the section applicable to any person who is a member of or affiliated with any organization, association, society or group that writes, circulates, distributes, [1860] prints, publishes or displays or causes to be written, et cetera, any written or printed matter of the character described above.

Now, the section concludes:

> "The provisions of this Section shall be applicable to any applicant for naturalization who at any time within a period of ten years immediately preceding the filing of the petition for naturalization is or has been found to be within any of the classes enumerated in this Section, notwithstanding that at the time the petition is filed he may not be included in such classes."

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, are you able to furnish us the approximate date on which you became a walking boss?

A. No, not the exact date. It may have been along in June of 1943. I am merely saying it may have been along in there. I don't know the exact date. June or July.

Q. When did you go to court? And by going to court, I mean an appearance in one of the courtrooms of this building, United States District Court, in reference to your naturalization?

A. When?

Q. Did you go the same time that you filed the petition that has already been offered us here in evidence?

A. I can't recollect if it was the same time.

Q. Well, as I read the dates on these documents, you signed your application on April 8, 1943, a copy of the petition contains no—yes, it does, it contains also the date of April 8th. [1861] Now, were you naturalized on April 11th, just three days later?

A. I believe that was the date. Now I am not positive.

Q. In other words, there was an intervening period of only three weeks between the time you filed your application, signed your petition and were then taken to court?

The Court: One moment, please. "Taken to court"?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, brought to court, or that you went to court. I mean by "court," this court, the United States District Court, where we are informed he received his citizenship papers.

A. I repeat, I am not sure of the time element, between these actions.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, now, may I ask the government prosecutor if he has the record of the day upon which this man was readmitted to citizenship? Do you want to show me where that is, please?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, the court record, I take it, is available to counsel if he wants to get it.

The Court: Well, it may be readily available here. The dates he wants may be readily available.

Mr. Paisley: It shows right on here, Your Honor, "Admitted date May 11, 1943." [1862]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): So it was May 11, 1943, that you were admitted?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. Well, that is what I said, I believe, I thought it was correct.

Q. Do you remember before what judge you appeared?

A. No; that is also not in my memory right now.

Q. Did you come to court with your two witnesses on that day?

A. The day I was sworn in?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know if the witnesses were with me or not.

Q. Were there any other people being naturalized on the same day?

A. Yes, to my recollections, there were many.

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to request of the Government prosecutors that we be allowed to see any transcript of the hearing, if one is in the possession of the prosecutor.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I think that counsel has shown an aptitude in procuring transcripts. He asked yesterday that your Honor ask the Clerk to make him available the file of this Court. If there is any transcript, I assume it is part of that file. We have no such transcript.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I think all of us know what the contents of it are. The contents of the file is one sheet of paper written on both sides. [1863]

The Court: I might say to you that there perhaps is a little confusion engendered in my mind and perhaps in the jurors' minds. I feel that we sit here hearing this evidence for the first time, and the routine in these courts, as far as I can recall, is that on naturalization day many of these persons come before the court; we have as many as 100 or 125 at one time.

Mr. MacInnis: That is perfectly true.

The Court: They have been passed by Immigration, and the matter of routine of admitting them to citizenship, although part of the internal processes, is pro forma to the extent that the Court administers the oath through the Clerk and the matter is a ceremony rather than an investigation. For that reason I say, unless you can advise me otherwise, there would seem to be no immediate reason why this man would have put witnesses on on that day. I am trying to delineate these phases in my mind so there will be no confusion in the record.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to answer your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Without endeavoring, of course, to argue with the Court.

The Court: No argument. I am merely trying to find my way through.

Mr. MacInnis: I appreciate that. No argument at all, [1864] your Honor, but the reason I asked that question is this: We are presented with a transcript of what happened in court in respect of Harry Bridges, and we see that his two witnesses were brought to court with him and that they were questioned, and we have Mr. Garner saying that the law required him to ask these questions.

The Court: Counsel, there is a distinction between admission to citizenship under the State procedure as distinguished from the Federal procedure, and I think that is where the confusion results in my mind.

Mr. MacInnis: I think the law is the same, your Honor, precisely.

The Court: In the case of Harry Bridges he attended a hearing, apparently set before His Honor Judge Foley. That hearing was specially set, no doubt, at the instance of Mr. Bridges; I don't know. There were only a few others there, apparently.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor,——

The Court: At that time witnesses were present. Now, ordinarily when a man is admitted here, the Immigration passes him for citizenship, and the matter is an official one wherein the court administers the oath through the clerk.

Mr. Paisley: I am informed that is exactly right, your Honor; that in the Federal Court the Court designates an examiner to do the work, and in the State court it is done in [1865] open court, that is, any questions.

The Court: I am not familiar with the State court procedure, but I know in these instances the power is delegated to a hearing examiner.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, to recall——.

The Court: So there might be no confusion in my mind or your mind——

Mr. MacInnis: There isn't a bit of confusion in my mind, your Honor, for this reason: I have in my hand now Government's Exhibit No. 4, which is the granting of the petition, the certificate of citizenship itself.

The Court: For this witness?

Mr. MacInnis: No, of Harry Bridges, and rather than being a State court form, although the procedure was had in the State court, it is on the stationery of the United States Department of Justice.

The Court: It may well be as an eventuating document, as a final document.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. And rather than having been a hearing specially set merely for Harry Bridges because he was a well known person, or for any other reason, 19 other persons were questioned and admitted to citizenship at the same time; and Mr. Garner told us that he asked all of those substantially the same questions.

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor, I don't know just what counsel [1866] is reaching at, but counsel knows that if there was a transcript of any testimony taken of this witness and/or his attesting witnesses in the naturalization proceeding before this court, it would be available not only to us, it would be available to him. And I think he is confusing the issue by reason of the fact that your Honor very carefully instructed the jury with respect to the nature of this indictment and the perjurious statement upon which we are, I hope, proceeding here was a perjurious statement made at a hearing on the naturalization of Harry Bridges before His Honor Judge Foley, at which there was a transcript, and that transcript has been filed here, and that perjurious statement, question and answer, is contained in the indictment. Mr. Bridges and his co-defendants were not indicted for any statement they made on any of these forms which we have here. The indictment is predicated upon the alleged perjurious statement made in that open proceeding before Judge Foley.

Now, if there was a like proceeding before any judge in this court and it was reported, we would have that transcript here, and it would be equally available to Mr. MacInnis; but apparently it was not and there isn't any.

Mr. MacInnis: I am trying to find out, your Honor. I haven't yet been unable to determine before what judge the matter was heard.

Mr. Donohue: As I say, he has been given the benefit [1867] of the file, and he could certainly find out——

The Court: Mr. Donohue, in the official record when this gentleman was admitted to citizenship, the gentleman before whom this gentleman came, along with perhaps others, ordinarily sighs a document wherein the complete roster of names is set forth, and then the judge at the bottom of the page certifies that on a certain day Mr. Schrimpf, Mr. John Doe, Mr. Richard Roe, and so forth, were duly admitted to citizenship. He signs that, and that is the official record. That must be someplace in the court records.

Mr. Donohue: I understood that Mr. MacInnis yesterday asked that the record of this Court be brought here.

The Court: Mr. Mitchell has handed me now the form that we use, at least so far as I know.

The Clerk: Similar to that, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor. In other words, this Court uses an identical form to the one that was used in the Harry Bridges case.

The Court: That is the final document, and this is filed. I notice this in Mr. Bridges' case was signed by Judge Foley, but the procedure, apparently—I am not passing on the procedure—in the Superior Court is entirely different than the procedure in vogue in the Federal Court, as to the facts of which I am sure that some of these experts of the Immigration Service might be able to edify us. I don't assume to be familiar with all the ramifications. [1868]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I am not at all confused about these proceedings. We ask that the same document be produced.

The Court: Counsel, I am not charging you with confusion.

Mr. MacInnis: Because I am not, Judge.

The Court: I am not charging you with confusion; I am merely trying to ferret out in my own mind to the end that there may be no confusion in my mind.

Mr. Paisley: Mr. MacInnis, your Honor, knows that he can have the Clerk produce the court order which granted this witness citizenship.

The Court: Let it be produced.

Mr. MacInnis: I thought I heard myself ask that yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Paisley: It will doubtless be an order including this man with a number of other persons, just like this order here.

The Court: Let it be produced. Mr. Mitchell, could you find that for me, please?

The Clerk: I will attempt to. Do you wish it now or at the recess?

The Court: At the recess.

Mr. Paisley: This form, by the way, clearly shows that the petitioner himself designates what court he wishes to [1869] appear before, whether State or Federal.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, before the year 1943 had you made any other attempt to become a citizen of the United States?

A. I filed papers, I believe it was in the twenties, my first papers, and I let them elapse.

Q. In other words, some time after you came here originally you filed your first citizenship papers, but you never followed them through?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I believe that was the reason, yes.

Q. After you let those first papers lapse, did you file any first papers again before your naturalization in 1943?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, your Honor. We have gone away back now several years on a purely collateral, immaterial matter.

The Court: Overruled.

A. If my recollections serve me right, it was not necessary to file first papers under certain provisions, if you were married to a citizen over a period of a year, or something to that effect.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): So you didn't file any first papers except the ones you have mentioned back in the twenties?

A. That is to the best of my recollections.

Q. And you were enabled to make your application in 1943, as is represented here, without any previous signing of a [1870] questionnaire or any previous examination?

A. I can't answer that question, if that was the only questions that I answered at this one hearing. There may have been other hearings. I can't recall that far back.

Q. You told us yesterday, Mr. Schrimpf, that you had submitted to various loyalty check-ups while working during the war on the Army docks as a walking boss? A. That is right.

Q. And you were asked questions at that time, were you not?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I don't recall the procedure, but to the best of my recollections, I believe they had some kind of forms you filled out similar to the form for naturalization, something patterned after the same form.

Q. And in those forms you were asked if you ever had been a member of the Communist Party, isn't that true?

A. I can't recall such language on the form.

Q. You can't recall one way or the other, is that true?

A. I can't recall such language on the form.

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, do you remember a meeting upon the 6th day of November of 1938 at No. 77 Clay Street at which you were present with Mr. George Arms, who was later your witness in the naturalization proceeding, Mr. Henry Schmidt, Mr. Germain Bulcke, and other members of the longshore union? Do you remember such a meeting?

A. Was that a meeting or could that have been the trial of [1871] George Arms?

Q. You are correct. It was the trial of George Arms. And you were present with George Arms and participated in the discussion, did you not?

A. I defended George Arms at that hearing.

Q. And the person appointed by the union to press the charges of misconduct against George Arms was Mr. Henry Schmidt?

A. Yes, he acted in the same sense as a prosecutor in the case here.

Q. And you appeared to defend George Arms, is that right? A. That is right.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. What was he charged with?

A. I don't recall all the charges; there were various charges; I don't recall them.

Q. He was charged specifically with doing business with Harper Knowles, Larry or Stanley M. Doyle, known as Larry Doyle, A. L. Crawford, the attorney for Larry Doyle, and other persons including Mr. Bonham of the Immigration Department, in an endeavor to destroy Harry Bridges? Weren't those the bulk of the charges?

A. I still say I don't recall what the charges were. There were numerous charges in that document.

Q. Were the charges I have suggested enumerated in among the things which Arms was charged with?

Mr. Paisley: I object to going into the details of that [1872] trial. If he wants to ask him if some enmity arose between him and Mr. Schmidt over the prosecution and to the extent the enmity, if any, might have existed, I have no objection.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Would you repeat that last question?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the question, please.

(Question read.)

A. As I said before, I have no recollections. They could have been.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you if this refreshes your recollection, that the charges were as follows:

"First, that he associated and collaborated with known enemies of labor, and especially with known enemies of the CIO and ILWU.

"With Stanley Doyle, labor spy who attempted to bribe persons to give false testimony against Bridges to have Bridges deported, and who attempted to bribe persons to testify falsely and incriminate ILWU official in the Hogan case.

"That he collaborated with A. L. Crawford, the attorney who brought the action of Ivan Cox against Bridges, Schmidt, Schomaker and others; the secretary of the Union of California Citizens, an anti-union, anti-labor organization with definite Fascist connections. [1873]

"That he collaborated with Harper Knowles, secretary of the Associated Farmers; and

"With the Steuart Street gang and specifically with Kuhlberg; and

"With having knowledge of an having participated in the bringing of the action of Cox's $5,000,000 suit against the officials of this union and many other persons;

"Acting as agent provocateur for Stanley Doyle and the Associated Farmers;

"Acting as the agent of Doyle and Crawford > and spreading unfounded and untrue stories directed against union officials, such as the charges that Bridges got away with about $9000."

were those the charges that were brought against George Arms, whom you then defended?

A. As I have already stated in the record, there was numerous charges, and if that is the official record of the charges, well they are.

Mr. MacInnis: I might say, your Honor, that the official record to which the witness refers was prepared by men who were at that time official reporters of this court, Messrs. Gagan & Lehner, 273 Post Office Building, San Francisco.

The Court: The charges were not prepared; they were transcribed by them? [1874]

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me?

The Court: The transcript was prepared by those men?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor. They acted as the shorthand reporters and later made the transcription.

Q. Did you say this, Mr. Schrimpf, in the course of the hearing that ensued, as part of the hearing between yourself, Mr. Arms, Mr. Schmidt, and the other persons present;

> "Mr. Schrimpf"—quoting you: "Before we recess, and while this is fresh in our minds. We have a very willing witness here. It might > be well to note that throughout this Brother Schmidt dealt on stuff which is absolutely irrelevant to this particular case. He has brought up all of this and he has cluttered up the record to make it more or less difficult and tiresome to read. I think you have to admire any man who tells you what he thinks. That is everybody's privilege. He told you at the meeting that he said he believed in arbitration. That is his business. I don't think he is alone. It is an individual opinion. He has told you he thinks we should be back in the AFL."

That was George Arms, was it not, the person who said that?

> "Many of us believe that. That is his own thought, and Brother Schmidt did not lose the opportunity once more to attempt to place the blame on Brother Arms. It is nice to say something which is popular to the membership."

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Is counsel reading something that the witness is alleged to have said?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I am, and after I read it, if he says he doesn't remember it, I will be glad to hand it to him to show that what he said is exactly as I have quoted it. [1875-A]

Mr. Paisley: Well, of course, the proper procedure, even under the statutes of the State of California, with which counsel should be familiar, he should submit the document first to the witness before he asks any questions, and to counsel, for that matter. And certainly we have had this out before the Court here yesterday and the day before. But he persists, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he is confusing a different rule. Your Honor, if the witness says that he didn't say it, or that he doesn't remember, then both the Court, the other counsel and the witness have the right——

The Court: I assume, Mr. MacInnis was launching into a question to be advanced to this witness as to when, or whether or not he made a certain statement.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, that is correct.

The Court: Well, had you finished the statement?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I was interrupted in the middle of the statement.

The Court: Finish the statement.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, now I will have to be informed where I was at the time the prosecutor stood up to interrupt me. Would you read what I was saying?

Mr. Paisley: He also interpolated a question in the middle of the reading and didn't even wait for an answer. I don't know what he is going to [1876] prove.

Mr. MacInnis: It will be apparent.

(Record read.)

The Court: What is this, an argument, a question or what?

Mr. MacInnis: I am reading what this man says, your Honor, in this transcript.

The Court: All right; continue.

> Mr. MacInnis: "It is nice to say something which is popular to the membership. Brother Schmidt likes to be a big fellow and say he advocated a cut. Did you hear him get on the floor and say, 'Let us take a vote'? All this stuff has practically been admitted by Brother Arms. We have gone over that thoroughly. Your whole report will be cluttered up. He repeats and repeats that he was interested in certain issues on the 'front as a brother,' and he certainly did feel he was talking to somebody who really knew something. He thought so, and thought he was doing right, and there is no use to hash this all over again. They jump all over the place. They try to link him up with the banana issue, the $9,000. There is no proof. He denies that.
> "We will get to the last paragraph:——"

quoting, still yourself:

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

"'After these charges by Arms had been made, the union appointed an investigating committee to look into the truth of the charges. Arms and I repeatedly asked A. L. Crawford to give us the actual proof of these charges, but Crawford [1877] absolutely failed to do so, and the reason, of course, is that he did not have any such proof, and I consider this conduct of A. L. Crawford and Harper Knowles to be an absolute betrayal of myself and George Arms.'

"After they began to get leery of him, they say, 'What about some of this stuff? On the Hogan case he did not have any proof.' They said, 'To hell with you.' Why not put the emphasis in the other places? I am going to call on the chair for a point of order if this is going on, criticizing one's personal ideas and elaborating on them and making big speeches, and going into things not relevant to this trial."

Did you say that, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. Well, that is quite a statement you have made there. If that is the true report on the record at this trial, I could have said that.

Q. Did Mr. Schrimpf, after another colloquy, make this reply to your lengthy statement——

A. Is that Schrimpf or Schmidt?

Q. I am speaking of Mr. Schrimpf. You are Mr. Schrimpf, are you not? A. That's right.

Q. Yes. A. Well, let's get the record clear.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Were you spoken of in the record as "Mr. Schrimpf"? Those [1878] are the parts I am reading and attributing to you. Now, Henry Schmidt was the prosecutor, wasn't he?

A. He acted as a prosecutor.

Q. Did he make this reply to you, "Don't you think when a man has an association with a man like Ivan Cox, and we all know by this time he was being used by certain people who were not interested in the welfare of the union or the working class, that when another brother member who claims to be a friend of Cox and Arms, also claims he is interested in the welfare of the union, that he should have reported to the union in detail just what he knew? The evidence shows he was in constant communication with Cox and Crawford and Knowles and the other fellow. Still he was silent all of these months. And I recall shortly after Ivan Cox came along with that $5,000,000 suit, on numerous occasions I asked the fellow officials in the office, including Brother Arms, if they knew anything of the whereabouts of Cox. And invariably the answer was 'No.' Now, we find out Brother Arms knew where Cox was, that he kept silent all of these months, and that he let that $5,000,000 lawsuit come out, and then the refutations and then as a result of all of this, the union has had unfavorable publicity. No less a committee than the Dies Committee, a Congressional committee, has used the material that Cox signed in his original complaint. You have all read the headlines where they simply capitalize on the entire situation. All this in spite of the fact that Cox [1879] repudiated it all. Here we have Arms keeping absolutely silent. I ask, in all fairness, is that in the interest of the union? It seems to me he was working much more closely with Crawford, Knowles and Doyle, than Cox. Cox, after all, is not nearly as intelligent as Brother Arms. He swallowed it hook, line and sinker. Arms knew what they were trying to do. His own remarks convict him. Time after time he has made remarks to brothers here and there, simply by stating, 'So-and-So is a Communist.' He and others try to discredit people. The employers have been doing it ever since we started. You old-timers know how, 45 years ago, the organized employers in the entire world, how they attempted to discredit the workers."

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I have heard the matter to this point for the reason that I, of course, can not anticipate the nature of your questions, but must accept your assurance that there is a question before the Court as well as the witness. Now, I say "apparently thus far." The situation was one wherein I may well entertain a motion at this time. Do you have any motion, Mr. Paisley, with respect to this?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor——

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I am almost finished with the reading of what was—This is in the presence of this man, part of a conversation.

Mr. Paisley: I have heretofore objected to going into the details of this trial, and I presume your Honor overruled me on [1880] the theory that there might come out of this future examination some evidence as to enmity between the witness and Schmidt or Bridges. Now, it hasn't come out yet. I think your Honor is quite proper——

The Court: I awaited a fuller hearing of the matter in order that I might not preclude counsel from a proper interrogation. I sustain the objection at this time.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I respectfully suggest I would come to that point. The colloquy between these men will show the significance of this whole situation. The enmity that grew up at that time will be displayed.

Mr. Paisley: Well, this is cross-examination and is within the discretion of the Court. Now, it is quite obvious, your Honor, that this question is almost silly. Here he is asking a witness if Schmidt didn't make a speech in this trial eleven years ago, and it isn't a sentence he is asking about, but he has read two or three pages. Now, how could any witness answer here, eleven years afterward. "Yes, he said that." That is just how silly the interrogation is.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Schrimpf, in the course of the meeting that has been described now, and I mean the meeting of November 6, 1938, which was the trial of your friend George Arms, whom you testified, Mr. Arms stated in your presence that it was true that Harper Knowles and Stanley M. Doyle had come to his house? [1881]

A. I believe that is correct. And if I may, your Honor, may I qualify that answer?

The Court: Certainly.

A. (Continuing): The reasons is all borne out in the script there; there was a man who had disappeared off the waterfront. His name was Hogan, very popular young man. Incidentally, he was a graduate from Notre Dame. And his disappearance has aroused quite a controversy on the waterfront. Arms was one of many, right to this day, who believed that Hogan met with foul play. And these men visited Arms' house, as the testimony shows in that script. And one of the first things, to the best of my recollection, Arms was approached with, "Did you know a man named Hogan?" and Arms, all ears, which he always was, because he believed —he is an honest man, and he believed that Hogan disappeared. He said, "I certainly do." Of course, I can't give you verbatim wording but it—it was along this trend, it was given in the testimony. "Do you know that he met with foul play?" "That was my idea." And one or two other things concerning Hogan, and that was the purpose of this visit to George Arms, and he did let them in, because, as I said today, Arms is a—well, he is a real patriotic American. He is so honest that his best friend, if you were to go down and tell Arms his best friend was going to do him bodily harm, to do him bodily harm—he is so honest that he just would take it for granted it was so. Anything he was told he believed. And he [1882] believed these men when they said they knew what happened to Hogan and they knew he had met with foul play and that is all brought out in the script of the trial.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. And that was the point to which I was proceeding, your Honor, the matter of Hogan.

Q. When did Mr. Hogan disappear?

A. I don't recall that date either.

Mr. Paisley: I must object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Paisley: I don't see the materiality of the disappearance of Mr. Hogan. How has that got anything to do with the issues in this case? I object on the ground that it is irrelevant.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary, your Honor.

The Court: Counsel says it is preliminary. Let us see.

Mr. Paisley: All right, we can see what it is.

The Witness: I answered it. I didn't know.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was it in 1937 or 1938?

A. I can't commit myself to the answer to the date. As I said, I am not sure. He disappeared not long after—to the best of my recollection, he was released or he terminated his term in office as an official.

Q. And you say that Harper Knowles and Stanley M. Doyle were making some investigation into the manner of Mr. Hogan's disappearance, is that true? [1883]

A. I quoted, and it is in the record, that in this testimony brought out at Arms' trial, that that was one of the reasons of these men visiting Arms.

Q. And Arms was interested in finding out what had happened to Hogan, as you say?

A. He believed that he had met with foul play and he believes to this day that he did.

Q. And Harper Knowles and Stanley M. Doyle were also interested in raising the thought that Hogan may have met with foul play, weren't they?

A. I don't know what their thoughts were, other than what has been, the testimony given in that script.

Q. Didn't you take some part in asking questions and investigating what was supposed to have happened to this man Hogan, who disappeared?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. You mean at the trial of Arms?

Q. No, before the trial of Arms.

A. With who?

Q. Both by yourself and in conjunction with other people. A. With what other people?

Q. With Mr. Arms, for one person.

A. It could have been a casual discussion. As I said, it was quite an issue on the waterfront as to Hogan's disappearance. He was a very popular man, and it is like any other, why, issue which is creating a great public interest. His name [1884] was brought up several times, and I don't know if I discussed it at length or went into detail about it.

Q. Do you know a woman named Lillian Walker?

A. The name sounds vaguely familiar.

Q. Didn't you visit a woman named Lillian Walker and have a conversation about Hogan's disappearance in the month of March of 1947 and possibly——

Mr. Paisley: I object to the question unless he gets down to something relevant, your Honor. He promised us he would. We have indulged him as to that respect. We haven't reached that point yet.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary, your Honor.

Q. Let me ask you this: Didn't you have a conversation with a woman named Lillian Walker at No. 1600 Eddy Street, a bar called The Dutch Lunch, in the month of March, 1947?

Mr. Hallinan: '37.

Mr. MacInnis: '37.

A. Now that you mention the name, I believe I did make a call at said bar to run down a rumor concerning his departure.

The Court: Hogan's departure?

The Witness: Hogan's departure, that's right, your Honor.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): When you talked to Lillian Walker, you mentioned Harry Bridges, did you not?

A. I have no recollection of mentioning Bridges.

Q. And 1937 was the year in which you ran for presidency of the [1885] union against Henry Schmidt, isn't that true?

A. I don't know. If that is the year, it is in the record, whatever year it was.

Q. And when you talked to Lillian Walker you said to her in March of 1937 that the elections in the union were coming up and that if you were elected you would see to it that Bridges was slammed against the wall, did you not?

A. I don't recall any such conversation.

Q. Do you remember a man named Gus, who was standing with you at the bar at that time?

A. I don't recall any such.

Mr. Paisley: Do I understand that we have departed from the subject of the disappearance of Mr. Hogan?

Mr. MacInnis: No, we haven't; we are going to return to that in a minute.

Mr. Paisley: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you remember anybody else being present when you were talking to Lillian Walker?

A. Well, it was a public house, and I can't recall who was there, but I am sure there was more present in this place than just we two.

Q. Now, you say that you left the Communist Party in 1935 or thereabouts, is that true?

A. That is a matter of record.

Q. In March of 1937, didn't you tell Lillian Walker that you [1886] were going to start a real Communist school if you got into power that would teach real Communist stuff, not the stuff that was being taught at that time?

A. I have no recollections.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Schrimpf: The purpose of your visit out to Lillian Walker was to discuss the Hogan case, wasn't it?

A. After you refreshed my memory, I think I confirmed that, that I did go out to run down a rumor as to him being there or leaving there or something of the kind. That is in the record.

Q. What was Lillian Walker's job?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I have no idea.

Q. Was she an entertainer at this bar?

A. I don't know.

Q. How had you been directed to seek her out in order to have this conversation on Hogan?

A. By way of rumor around the waterfront. As I said before, I want to make that very clear. He was one of the most popular men ever on the waterfront. And his disappearance did arouse a great sense of concern. And when I heard that he was out at a certain place, last seen at a certain place, I went out there.

Q. And you went out to see Lillian Walker, Mr. Schrimpf, because you were at that time planning to accuse Henry Schmidt of the murder of Hogan, isn't that right?

A. That is a dirty lie. [1887]

Q. That isn't true? Why, isn't it true that you, Harper Knowles, Stanley Doyle and George Arms were all interested in that same accusation at that time? A. That is also a dirty lie.

Q. That is not true, is that right?

A. Accusing Schmidt or ever leaving the inference that he killed Hogan?

Q. That is what you were trying to do at that time, isn't that so?

A. I have already said on the record, it is a dirty lie. It is too bad that you were not put under oath and make such a statement. That is all I would say.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Q. Why would you want me to be put under oath?

A. Why, you would be behind bars for a while, where you belong.

Q. I think that is where you may belong.

Mr. Paisley: That is argumentative, your Honor.

The Court: Yes, I suppose there is a dispute about that.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, that the question is perfectly proper. If he accused Mr. Schmidt of a matter like that, it certainly would have some reflection on what he has done here.

Mr. Donohue: There is no proof he ever made such an accusation.

The Witness: That is what I want to see some proof.

Mr. MacInnis: We will prove it. [1888]

Mr. Donohue: Well, that is also a statement which I think ought to be excluded from this record if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: I have heard counsel speak with some degree of familiarity as to accusations, but be that as it may, the question was propounded to the witness, he has made his response.

Mr. MacInnis: I have no further questions. Pardon me, Your Honor:

May we take the morning recess? We may have one more question. It is five minutes after 11:00.

The Court: I think you had better ask the question now. I have been completely indulgent with you, Mr. MacInnis. Last evening——

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, Your Honor was quite kind.

The Court: Each indulgence leads me into strange fields. Now, I think I have reached the end of my indulgence. Or perhaps it would be well to take a recess and clarify the atmosphere.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the morning recess, and again my admonition to you not to discuss the case under any circumstances, nor to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, not to form or express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you. You may now retire. We will take a recess.

(Recess.) [1889]

The Court: Are the jurors all present?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, our purpose in asking that this witness be held through the recess was this: I think Mr. Mitchell was to obtain, and I see he has obtained, certain records on the naturalization proceeding. May I see them, please?

The Clerk: If your Honor please, I have received from our office, the Clerk's office, the petition for naturalization of one Henry Joseph Schrimpf which is contained in this volume. I have not been able to have it separated. It may be taken out, and if your Honor wishes a certified copy or a photostatic copy will be made. And the final hearing for the petitioner Schrimpf together with some sixty others.

The Court: How many others?

The Clerk: Some fifty-nine others. Sixty in all, I think, your Honor, as they appeared before Judge Michael J. Roche of this Court.

The Court: What was the date of the appearance?

The Clerk: The date of the appearance, your Honor, was May 11, 1943.

The Court: Does it reflect that they were admitted in open court?

The Clerk: Admitted in open court, some fifty petitioners on that day. [1890]

The Court: You might show that document to counsel Mr. MacInnis, as well as counsel for the prosecution.

Mr. MacInnis: I think we might adopt Mr. Mitchell's suggestion that a photostatic copy of the petition itself be offered in evidence.

The Court: In the meantime do you have any additional questions in the light of the document?

Mr. MacInnis: I have seen these documents before.

The Clerk: I am slightly in error as to the number, your Honor. It appears that there are three sheets, the first sheet containing 35 names of petitioners, the second sheet containing 45, and the third sheet containing 10, all appearing in open court before Judge Roche.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: What is the total of the number that you have enumerated, all of the applicants or petitioners before the Court on that day?

The Clerk: Ninety, your Honor.

The Court: How many?

The Clerk: Ninety.

The Court: Including the petitioner?

The Clerk: Yes, your Honor, including the petitioner Schrimpf.

Mr. MacInnis: May the record show, your Honor, such as Mr. Mitchell has pointed out, ninety persons, including the name of Henry Joseph Schrimpf, No. 72468, were admitted to [1891] citizenship in the United States of America in the United States District Court, apparently before His Honor Judge Roche; is that correct?

The Clerk: Yes, that is on the last page, I think.

Mr. MacInnis: And that the document including all of the names bears the following language at the top:

> "To the Honorable the District Court of the United States sitting in San Francisco, California; E. R. Bonsall, W. C. Frame, C. A. Antonioli, duly designated under the Nationality Act of 1940 to conduct preliminary hearings upon petitioners for naturalization to the above-named Court and to make findings and recommendations thereon has personally examined under oath at a preliminary hearing each of the > following 90 petitioners for naturalization and their required witnesses, has found each of said petitioners entitled under the law to be naturalized and therefore recommends that each such petition upon the appearance of petitioner in open court be granted, including prayer for change of name where noted below."

Then the names follow.

Q. Now, Mr. Schrimpf, having heard the naturalization order of the Court read in part to you, do you now remember that you were examined under oath at a preliminary hearing, you and your two witnesses? [1892]

A. If the records say that we were examined under oath, I would believe the record.

Q. And do you believe the record where it is set forth that the proceedings were taken under the Nationality Act of 1940?

A. I believe the record.

Q. You heard me read the Nationality Act of 1940 this morning carrying all of these matters back ten years regardless of what the status of an applicant is at the time of his admission. Let me ask you this: Isn't it true that when you were questioned under oath at the preliminary hearing before the Immigration Service you were asked the question as to whether you had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. I do not recall ever being asked that question, if I had ever been a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: That is all.

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, if these two documents which we voluntarily gave Mr. MacInnis and which were marked as defendants' exhibits may be considered in evidence, I would like to call the attention of the jury to certain dates thereon.

The Court: Do you offer them in evidence, sir?

Mr. Paisley; We will offer them in evidence, yes.

The Court: They may be marked.

Mr. Paisley: In view of the fact that he intimated that this witness had gotten his naturalization within three [1893] days.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I confess that the three-day approximation was not a correct one. That was pointed to me immediately when I asked for the date upon which this man came to court, which was said to be May 11.

The Court: Mr. Mitchell, will you indicate the markings on these exhibits.

The Clerk: The one on the exhibit that is now marked Defendants' Exhibit Q for identification only, and I suggest, your Honor, that that be marked Government's 6 in evidence, your Honor.

The Court: So ordered.

(Defendants' Exhibit Q for identification was marked Government's Exhibit 6 in evidence.)

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

The Court: What is the next exhibit?

The Clerk: The other has not been offered, your Honor, and is without a marking.

Mr. Paisley: We offer it on behalf of the Government.

The Court: It may be marked in evidence.

The Clerk: Marked Government's 7 in evidence.

(The document was marked Government's Exhibit 7 in evidence.)

The Court: Would you identify now, Mr. Paisley, for the record, the captions of the several documents so we may understand them in their natural sequence. [1894]

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor. I am reading from Government's Exhibit 6, if the Court please, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury. It is called "Application for a Certificate of Arrival and Preliminary Form for Petition for Naturalization." I call the Court's and jury's attention to the date of the application, August 12, 1942.

Now reading from Government's Exhibit No. 7, which is denominated "Petition for Naturalization." It purports to be signed by the witness, Henry Joseph Schrimpf, bearing a signature. I call attention to the date: "Sworn and subscribed to before me by the above named petitioner and witnesses in the respective forms of oath shown in said petition and affidavit in the office of the Clerk of the said Court at San Francisco, California, this 8th day of April, 1943."

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Still reading from the same exhibit, I call the Court's and jury's attention to the notation of final hearing and admitted date, May 11, 1943.

There is no redirect examination.

The Court: You are excused, Mr. Schrimpf.

The Witness: I thank you, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: May I look at this document a moment, your Honor?

The Court: Yes. Do you wish the witness to remain momentarily?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. [1895]

The Court: You might remain a moment, Mr. Schrimpf.

Mr. MacInnis: I merely wanted to see what the differentiation in dates was, and I see on the application the date April 8, 1943 does appear, although Mr. Paisley——

The Court: Counsel, you asked me a question. I haven't examined it minutely or with any care at all. I think counsel for the Government might be able to simplify it.

Mr. MacInnis: Where is the place where the application is shown to be made in August of 1942?

Mr. Paisley: The first thing under the title of the paper, August 19, 1942.

Mr. MacInnis: It says here it was apparently filed on that date, but in red pencil under his signature, "4/8/43." The writing may have been put on before, but this does not show the filing date.

Mr. Paisley: I take it the exhibit can go to the jury room if there is any question about it.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: What is that? I couldn't understand you, Mr. Paisley.

Mr. Paisley: I say, I take it the exhibits, if and when the case goes to the jury, can go to the jury room, and they can resolve any conflict between counsel as to what the paper contains.

The Court: Counsel, if it be a date, I don't see any room for any disparity with reference to a date. [1896]

Mr. Paisley: There shouldn't be, your Honor.

The Court: Those are matters of automatic computation, and it would seem to me that the jury might be relieved of that particular burden as well as the Court.

Mr. Paisley: Here it is, your Honor. May I read it to the Court?

The Court: Let us have it.

Mr. Paisley: Here is a form printed down at the bottom: "Do not fill in blanks below. Corrections numbered"—then there is in red pencil, "1"; the word "to" is printed; then in red pencil is the figure "3"—"Corrections numbered 1 to 3 in this preliminary petition for naturalization, N-400, were made by me or at my request." A place for the applicant's signature, with a red "X" there, and it is signed, "Henry Joseph Schrimpf" in ink. "Date April 8."

Mr. MacInnis: '43.

Mr. Paisley: '43. Now he is trying to indicate to the Court and jury that that was the date that this document was filed.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: I don't know, your Honor. I am not trying to indicate anything. I have no knowledge about it.

Mr. Paisley: Let me read this to counsel. You look at it while I read it, please. Stamped on here is the regular office stamp that all offices use.

Mr. MacInnis: A very good demonstration, "Filed under [1897] Sec. 310(a) (b) Nationality Act of 1940." And in there there is a date, August 19, 1942.

Mr. MacInnis: Scratched out, however. What is that? There is a line drawn through it, is there not, a penciled line?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, let me read this, and the jury can see this if your Honor wants them to.

Mr. MacInnis: Why don't you let the document speak for itself?

Mr. Paisley: It says, "I declared my intention to become a citizen of the United States on" and it is written in here "August 19, 1942." [1898]

Mr. MacInnis: Then with a pencil scratching right through "August 19, 1942," scratching it out. Correct?

Mr. Paisley: And the "Black Court, at San Francisco, California."

Mr. MacInnis: And "San Francisco, California," is scratched out there, too.

Here is an August 19th that isn't scratched out. I will help you out to that extent, Mr. Paisley.

The Court: The camaraderie between counsel is indeed pleasing in court.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it should be, your Honor. That should always be something we should strive for.

The Court: One helping the other out.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Mr. Paisley: I have already read to the Court the date of this document, which is right up at the top of the first page, August 19, 1942. Following that is, "Henry Joseph Schrimpf, residing at such and such an address, desires to file a petition for naturalization in the U.S. Court at San Francisco," and so on. Now, I wish to point to some dates. You wanted to help me out, let's go ahead and help me out.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. The only point I made, your Honor, was to request which was the date. It says in one place April 8, 1943, it says in another place August 19, 1942, scratched out, and in another place, apparently in ink, August 19, 1942, and [1899] it is not scratched out. I raised the question; I don't know what importance it may have, as to whether the papers may have been filed, or rather, filled out and not filed, at the date originally put in. I don't know it, and the document doesn't show it. Now, it may be, Mr. Paisley can tell me.

Mr. Paisley: Well, we are not in agreement, your Honor, as to just what the entries on the paper are, or the significance of them. I think that is for the jury.

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

Mr. MacInnis: Do you deny that is scratched out?

Mr. Paisley: I see a pencil line drawn.

Mr. MacInnis: Through August 19, 1942.

Mr. Paisley: Apparently through August 19, 1942, apparently through San Francisco, California, under the words "Filed under Section 31AB, Nationality Act of 1940." I think the document and its weight is for the jury, your Honor. We could stand up here and give our interpretations of what a pencil line might mean or other things all day. The jury is to weigh and determine what the document means. I would like to have it passed on to the jury now.

The Court: I can't see at this juncture how it could serve any particular purpose. We have Mr. Schrimpf on the stand. He has been here some few days now. Have we finished with Mr. Schrimpf?

Mr. Paisley: I have no redirect examination of the witness.

The Court: I say to the Government, because it is not my [1900] disposition to read in the record a document that might be clarified by reference to an official document or documents, either minutes or otherwise, of the Immigration Department, and if there be any deletion or omission on the face of the document, it may well be that the minutes of the Immigration Service may satisfy or supplement the document as such. But to leave it to the Court or the jury to interpret the dates by reason of deletions or otherwise, I think, is a burden that should not be cast either upon the Court or the jury. I say that quite respectfully to the Government.

Mr. Paisley: Well, we can produce witnesses who can testify as to when it was filed.

The Court: All right, you may produce them.

Mr. Paisley: Would your Honor want to do that now?

The Court: First, our business at the moment is with Mr. Schrimpf.

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

The Court: Are you finished with Mr. Schrimpf?

Mr. Paisley: I will ask Mr. Schrimpf.

The Court: You might do that.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Paisley:

Q. Mr. Schrimpf, when did you file this petition——

Mr. Paisley: Wait a moment: Let me have it and I will give him the exact words. [1901]

Q. When did you file this——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. He has already answered he doesn't know, on cross-examination; so I don't know how he would now know.

The Court: In the interest of clarification of the record, counsel, the objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): When did you file this application for certificate of arrival and preliminary form for petition of naturalization?

(Testimony of Henry Joseph Schrimpf.)

A. That particular petition I can't recall.

Q. Well, to refresh your recollection——

Mr. Paisley: May I have it passed to him?

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Is the writing in ink in the blank spaces your writing, Mr. Schrimpf?

A. Yes, that is mine.

Q. And it is your signature on the document, is it? A. That is my signature.

Q. Now, did you—do you see the date up at the top of the page there? A. I do.

Q. What date is that?

A. This is August 19, 1942.

Q. Now, having seen that, is your recollection refreshed as to the date you made out and filed that paper with the [1902] Naturalization Service?

A. Well, if the date wasn't correct, I can't see why that error would not have been corrected when it was filed

Q. Did you return the paper after you filled it out or did you file it promptly?

A. That I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall where you were when you filled out the form?

A. No, I don't know where I filled this form out.

Mr. Paisley: That is all the questions I have, Your Honor.

The Court: The witness is excused, then, there being no further examination.

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, we will call witnesses from the Immigration Service on that point so that we will not be left up in the air.

The Court: To the end that the record be clarified as to the sequence of the dates.

Mr. Paisley: That's right, Your Honor.

The Court: I do not believe that the Court, as I may repeat myself, or the jury should be obliged to clarify documents when the clarification can be had from official records.

Mr. Paisley: Well, that undoubtedly can be established. There is no question about it. We would rather not interrupt our plan of presenting the case at this time.

The Court: It is a matter of your own dictates. I have no [1903] suggestion to make on that score.

We have now reached the 12:00 o'clock period. I assume, Mr. Donohue, you have a witness in readiness.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Accordingly, it is an agreeable time, if counsel are agreeable, to take the noon adjournment. And I have one note. Last evening I discussed with the jurors the matter of the holiday season, the forthcoming holidays. And I suggested that Friday afternoon next—Friday is the 9th—that we adjourn at 12:00 o'clock. That is, if agreeable to counsel on both sides. So that the jury might have the afternoon free and to themselves, to take care of such details as they may desire to accomplish concerning the Christmas period. And we will continue on with the trial of the case the following week, up to and including the 21st of December, and then it is the Court's plan, again if agreeable to counsel, that we stand in adjournment until the 3rd of January of the succeeding year. ~~The 3rd~~ of January. Allowing an interval of approximately ten or twelve days in which to enjoy the holiday season.

Apparently this case is going to take a little longer than anticipated. And under the circumstances, the Court feels that the jurors should have the period of time to the end that they have full and complete enjoyment and a respite from these rather arduous duties. [1904]

In addition, I daresay the period of relaxation will be enjoyed by counsel and likewise by the members of the press. I understand that many of the press representatives come from outside the State, and that their return to their home places would be something to be welcomed. Accordingly, unless I hear some opposition, that will be the order.

Mr. Donohue: May I say that the Government concurs in Your Honor's suggestion?

Mr. MacInnis: The defense feels precisely the same, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, sir, that will be the order, and at a later date we may renew these given dates, so you will have them in mind. In any event, you can plan on next Friday afternoon. We will now recess until 2:00 o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [1905]

Wednesday, December 7, 1949, 2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, Mr. Mitchell has reminded me that the documents borrowed from the naturalization clerk were not marked in evidence. I thought it was our suggestion that certified copies should be marked and put into evidence in place of the originals so that the clerk's files would not be disturbed. May that be the order?

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. MacInnis: I have two more of the documents to which reference was made yesterday for the Clerk's file.

The Court: Proceed, Mr. Donohue.

The Clerk: May the two exhibits referred to in the document, your Honor, be marked Defendants' R and S?

(Photostatic copies of naturalization records relating to naturalization the witness Schrimpf were marked Defendants' Exhibits R and S in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: Call Mrs. Harris, please.

IRENE PATTI HARRIS

called for the Government; sworn.

The Clerk: Will you state your full name to the Court and jury, please. [1906]

The Witness: Irene Patti Harris.

The Clerk: I didn't get the middle name.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

The Witness: Patti.

The Clerk: Irene Patti Harris?

The Witness: That is right.

The Clerk: How do you spell the middle name?

The Witness: P-a-t-t-i.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. What is your address, Mrs. Harris?

A. 2241 Cayuga Avenue.

Q. Cayuga? A. That's right.

Q. Where were you born?

A. I was born in—do you mean the State or the county? I was born in California at Ukiah, Mendocino County.

Q. Are you married? A. Yes, I am.

The Court: I am satisfied that the lady cannot be heard.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you move up closer?

The Clerk: Might I suggest, if your Honor please, that perhaps it might be more comfortable if it were——

The Court: I notice the jurors straining to hear the lady. Speak as distinctly as you can.

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: And bear in mind that all the counsel are [1907] entitled to hear you and all the jurors are entitled, as well as the people in the body of the courtroom. May I ask you to raise your voice just a little bit above ordinary speech, and to try to speak into that microphone.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

The Witness: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Gallagher): Did you say you were presently married, Mrs. Harris? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a housewife by occupation, are you?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Speak slowly so we may get the full import, because the acoustics are very bad.

Q. (By Mr. Gallagher): What is your husband's full name? A. Ernest Albert Harris.

Q. What is his occupation?

A. A longshoreman.

Q. How long has he been a longshoreman?

A. Well, over thirty years, I think, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Is he a union member? A. He is.

Q. Of what union?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Object to that as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, if the Court please, not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Gallagher): Of what union?

A. ILWU 110.

Q. About how long has he been a union member?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, your Honor, calling for an opinion and conclusion, not the best evidence.

The ~~Court:~~ Overruled.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you read that last question.

(Question read.)

A. Well, I don't know, but over thirty years.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. (By Mr. Gallagher): Are you a member of the Communist Party or have you been?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Have you ever been a member?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Is your husband a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute now. Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, your Honor, calling for an opinion and conclusion, not the best evidence.

The Court: May I ask the basis, counsel, upon which you predicate this?

Mr. Gallagher: No particular basis; more a background question, I would say, your Honor. I would think, though, that she would be qualified to answer that, inasmuch as she [1909] would be able [illegible] say her husband was or was not a member of the YMCA or some fraternal organization; but we make no great point of it.

The Court: If you establish a foundation I will let the lady testify, but to ask a question blandly without any predicate or basis or foundation, I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. Gallagher): Do you know Harry Renton Bridges? A. I do.

Q. Do you see him in this courtroom?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Will you point him out, please.

A. Well, he is right by the side of Mr. Schmidt. I don't——

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Thank you. Do you know John Shaw?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever attended a meeting at the home of John Shaw? A. Yes.

Q. At which—excuse me—at which Harry Renton Bridges made a speech? A. I have, yes.

The Court: Will you fix the time, place and parties present, counsel.

Mr. Gallagher: I was just about to do that.

Q. To the best of your recollection, when was such a meeting had?

A. Well, it was—the best that—my recollection is between, [1910] oh, the last of—sometime between August and the 16th—between sometime in August and the 16th of December.

Q. Of what year? A. 1938.

Q. How do you fix that period?

A. We was down to the convention, the CIO convention in Los Angeles, and that was held in—well, I think in August or September of 1938, and Mr. Harris was injured on 19—I mean, he was injured on the 16th of December, and it was during that time, between those two dates I was up to Mr. Shaw's, and how I remember that was that I was ill down at the convention and I was still not well when we went up to Mr. Shaw's residence for this meeting.

Q. Where, to the best of your recollection, did Mr. Shaw live at that time?

A. Well, it was nighttime and I hadn't been up

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

there before; it was either on O'Farrell or Pine, and I don't just remember, but I remember we came up around through the Fillmore district and then turned going towards the Ferry, and it was on the left-hand side going down. [1911]

Q. How did you happen to attend this meeting?

A. Mr. Harris was invited by a man by the name of——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a moment. Object to this as hearsay, Your Honor, about any statement like that. Not the best evidence.

The Court: Overruled. You might answer.

A. We were invited by a longshoreman by the name of Peter Brown.

Q. How did you reach Mr. Shaw's house?

A. We drove in our Chevrolet.

Q. You say "we"; who is that?

A. Mr. Harris and I.

Q. About how many people attended this meeting?

A. Oh, I should judge maybe 30 or 35. I didn't count them.

Q. About how many people did you recognize?

A. I think around 10.

Q. Who did you see at this meeting that you recognized?

A. I saw Mr. Johnny Shaw, that was the host, and Mr. Peter Brown, who invited us there. And Mr. and Mrs. Wogemann, and Harry Bridges and I think Mr. and Mrs. Archie Brown, Mr. and Mrs.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Malin, Johnny Shaw—I mean Johnny Schomaker, and I think his wife. And I did say Mr. Bridges? And Mr. Schneidermann.

Q. Did you know Mr. Schneidermann prior to that time? A. No.

Q. How do you recognize, or how did you recognize him as being [1912] there?

A. Introduced himself and said that he was Mr. Schneidermann.

Q. Would you describe the room or rooms in which this meeting took place? A. Well——

Q. Just roughly.

A. As I say, I wasn't very well, but it seemed to me as if it was a double parlor or it was an old home, if I remember correctly, and it had sort of a partition in it, like it might have been an old dining room and parlor, or else a double parlor.

Q. Now, will you please tell us in your own words what took place at this meeting, to the best of your recollection?

A. Well, Mr.—we were there, as I say, we were invited to attend, and Mr. Schneidermann gave an address and then after he finished, why, Mr. Bridges gave a talk.

Q. What did he say, to the best of your recollection? A. Well, he gave a talk on——

The Court: What did "he" say—Mr. Schneiderman nor Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Gallagher: She said Mr. Bridges gave a talk.

A. He made a report upon the waterfront and also spoke about what the Communists had done and how they had helped us out, and about the People's World——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. I didn't get that last sentence. [1913] About what?

The Witness: About the People's World, how it was helping.

Mr. Hallinan: The preceding sentence I missed. The lady doesn't speak loud enough.

The Court: Did you hear, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: I barely can hear at all.

The Court: Would you wish——

The Witness: I think if it was on this side, probably I could.

The Court: We had better adjust the microphone. If you wish to move your seat up here——

Mr. Hallinan: Or if the Reporter would read it to me.

(Microphone was readjusted, and the previous answer read by the Reporter.)

The Court: You may proceed now. You were discussing what you said Mr. Bridges talked about.

A. (Continuing): He got up and talked about the conditions on the waterfront and how they were progressing and how the Communist people, Communist Party was helping, and that, and also about the editorials and writings in the People's World, and he made a plea for us that were there to become members of the Communist Party, and he also stated that he was a member of the Party, of the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. (By Mr. Gallagher): Is that as much as you recall of Mr. Bridges' speech? [1914]

A. Yes. That made a very impression. I was flabbergasted when I heard him say that, because he had been accused, and I had heard it denied. And when he made that statement, why, it made a very much impression on me.

Q. About how long did the complete meeting take?

A. Well, if I remember real right, probably around, we arrived around 8:00 o'clock and I think, oh, we left around before 10:00. I wasn't feeling very well, and Mr. Harris and I was excused and left.

Mr. Gallagher: You may examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Now, Mrs. Harris, according to your statement, there were people present at that party who were not members of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know who they were. I just mentioned all those that I knew.

Q. Well, you were not a member, were you?

A. No, I was not.

Q. And your husband was not a member?

A. That's correct.

Q. He was not a member of the Communist Party?

A. That's right, he was not.

Q. Had he ever been? A. No.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. He had never been a member of the Communist Party? [1915]

A. That's right, he never had been a member.

Q. Did he ever state in your presence that he had been? A. No.

Q. Did he ever state to Harry Bridges in your presence that he had been a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. He wasn't a member at all. All right. Now, you know the Schomakers quite well, don't you?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Roza Schomaker is a very good friend of yours, isn't she? A. Yes, she is.

Q. You visit back and forth with the Schomakers?

A. Yes, but not too often. I think I have only seen them about three times this year.

Q. About three times this year?

A. I think so.

Q. When was the last time?

A. Well, I saw them around Easter, and then I think around, oh, some time in June, maybe before July. We went down to see about them, if they would go up to Yosemite with us.

Q. You went to Yosemite with them, you say?

A. No, we went down to see if they could go up with us.

Q. When was that?

A. That was in June.

Q. Now, who went down? [1916]

A. Mr. Harris and I drove down.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. And you invited Mr. and Mrs. Schomaker to go to Yosemite with you?

A. That's right.

Q. But they didn't go? A. That's right.

Q. Was that the last time that you have seen them?

A. That is the last time I saw Mr. Schomaker. I saw Roza one day last week.

Q. One time when?

A. One day last week.

Q. Oh, I see. Where did you see her?

A. At her home.

Q. And who was with you then?

A. Mr. Harris.

Q. Anybody else present?

A. Oh, just her little girl. Oh, yes, and I think the boy was there before we left.

Q. Anybody else at all?

A. No, that was all.

Q. How did you happen to go there, Mrs. Harris?

A. Well, we were out for a drive and we had been up to Yosemite before, and I have got a lot of these red Christmas berries, and I gave them around to my friends, and I thought, well, I would take a ride down. It was a nice afternoon, and I [1917] will give Mrs. Schomaker some.

Q. Now, that was last week?

A. One day last week, yes, sir.

Q. What day of last week?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Oh, it might have been Wednesday. I am not certain. I am not sure.

Q. All right. Now, how did you happen to be a witness here, Mrs. Harris? Who spoke to you about being a witness here?

A. I was subpoenaed to be here.

Q. And when were you given a subpoena?

A. Oh, I don't know; the best of my recollection, maybe a couple of weeks ago.

Q. Now, has anybody told you what to say here, Mrs. Harris? A. No, sir.

Q. Neither the Schomakers nor any other person? A. No.

Q. Has anybody asked you what your testimony would be if you were called here?

A. What was that question?

Q. Has anybody asked you what your testimony would be if you were called here or gone over your testimony with you?

A. I came down one evening and went down to, oh, I think Sansome Street. I am not sure of the street. And went down there and gave a—I don't know what you would call it—gave my statement.

Q. When was this?

A. Oh, one day last week, probably.

Q. One day last week probably. Now, can't you tell us more specifically? Was it before or after you visited the Schomakers, visited Roza Schomaker?

A. Well, I just don't remember.

Q. Well, now,——

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Just about the same time, I guess.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. It might have been around the same time, a day or two difference. I don't remember.

Q. Well, which way? Did you go to the Immigration Department a day or two after you saw the Schomakers, or a day or two before you saw the Schomakers? A. Well, I wouldn't know.

Q. All right. Now, today is Wednesday of this week. Now, do you tell us what day you went down to see the Schomakers? You say you thought it was Wednesday of last week?

A. No, I think it was two weeks ago.

Q. It was two weeks ago?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. Now, are you sure? Beg your pardon?

A. I am not sure, but to the best of my recollection, it was.

Q. And that is the last time you have seen either of the Schomakers? [1919]

A. Oh, I haven't seen Mr. Schomaker since in June.

Q. And you haven't seen Mr. Schomaker since you visited her and at her home?

A. That's right.

Q. And you can't tell us now whether it was one week ago or two weeks ago?

A. I said it was around two weeks ago that I saw Mrs. Schomaker.

Q. About two weeks ago.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. I think it was two weeks Wednesday.

Q. That would be two weeks ago today?

A. I think so.

Q. All right. Now, when did you go down to the place on Sansome Street?

A. It was since then, I think.

Q. How long?

A. Well, I just don't know what day it was.

Q. Well, was it as much as a week later or a day later or what? A. I just don't know.

Q. Well, can you—Was it as close as, say, yesterday or the day before yesterday?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Are you sure it wasn't yesterday that you went down there?

A. No, I know it was some time last week. [1920]

Q. It was some time last week?

A. I think so.

Q. Can you tell us what day of last week?

A. No, I can't remember what day it was.

Q. Can you tell us it was the first of the week or the end of the week?

A. Well, I tell you I am just a little bit nervous, and I just can't remember at that time.

Q. All right. Can you tell us whom you talked to down there?

A. Oh, I talked to Mr. Chandler, I think.

Q. Who? A. Mr. Chandler.

Q. Chandler?

A. I think that was the name.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Do you know how you spell that?

A. No, I do not.

Q. And what was the place on Sansome Street that you went to?

A. It was a large building. It was in the evening, and I don't know what it was.

Q. How did you get down there?

A. I drove down with him in his car.

Q. Drove down with Mr. Chandler in his car, is that right? A. That's correct.

Q. And where did he pick you up at, at your own home? A. At my home. [1921]

Q. About what time?

A. Around 7:00, I think it was.

Q. I see. And did anybody accompany you down to this building besides Mr. Chandler?

A. Yes, some other gentleman.

Q. What was his name?

A. I don't know, I don't remember.

Q. Beg your pardon?

A. I don't remember his name.

Q. Were you introduced to him?

A. I was, yes.

Q. Did any other person go?

A. No, that was all.

Q. Have you seen that other gentleman since?

A. Yes, a couple of times.

Q. Where?

A. He drove me from home down here.

Q. Today? A. No, not today.

Q. When?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Oh, I think Thursday or Friday. I am not even sure of that.

Q. All right. Now you tell us that one of the men's name was Chandler. You heard the other man's name, did you, were you introduced to him? [1922] A. I was.

Q. What do you call him? What did you call him when you talked to him? [1922-A]

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I object. She has already said she can't remember. I don't think she should be harassed. She is an elderly lady, obviously.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): How old are you, Mrs. Harris? A. I am sixty-three.

Q. We don't call that elderly yet. Now, Mrs. Harris, you can't remember the other man's name at all, is that right?

A. No, I don't remember his name.

Q. What did you call him when you addressed him? A. I called him "sir" or "mister."

Q. "Sir" or mister"?

A. I didn't talk very much to him.

Q. Now, on Thursday and Friday he drove you down to the Post Office Building here, is that right?

A. Not to the Post Office Building.

Q. Where?

A. Oh, yes, yes, yes, I think it was Thursday and Friday.

Q. Both days or only one of them?

A. Both days.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Take Friday, what time did he get you at your home, if that is where he got you?

A. Oh, I think around ten o'clock.

Q. Around ten o'clock in the morning?

A. Yes. [1923]

Q. Then he drove you down to this building that we are in now, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. Then where did you go in this building?

A. I went into some rooms; I don't know what rooms they were.

Q. What floor were they on?

A. I think the fourth floor.

Q. And whom did you meet there?

A. Oh, I met a lady in the office. I don't know who she was. I was introduced to her, but I don't remember her name.

Q. Who else did you meet?

A. I think that was all.

Q. Well, how long did you stay in the building on that occasion?

A. Oh, I waited around, I don't know, probably until the noon recess.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. I was driven home again.

Q. By whom?

A. By this gentleman and by Mr. Chandler.

Q. This gentleman and Mr. Chandler?

A. That's right.

Q. And what time did you arrive home?

A. Oh, I think around noon.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Did those gentlemen go in the house with you, or did they [1924] leave immediately?

A. No, they came back downtown, or left me at my door; that's all I know.

Q. While you were down here on the fourth floor did you have any conversation with either Mr. Chandler or the other gentleman? A. No.

Q. Did you have any conversation with anybody besides the lady whom you mentioned?

A. I think that was all.

Q. Well, were you talking with the lady about anything, or was she just a person who——

A. I think she was a stenographer or she was——

Q. A receptionist?

A. At some desk. Probably that was it.

Q. Then you waited. What were you doing during that two hours you were on the fourth floor?

A. Oh, I was looking at a magazine.

Q. You didn't talk to anybody? A. No.

Q. Did you read over any testimony given by Mr. Schomaker on the trial at that time?

A. No, I was looking at, oh, probably a Beautiful Home or or Better Homes and Gardens; I don't remember just what it was. [1925]

Q. Now, on Thursday you were down at this building also, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And who brought you on that occasion?

A. The same two gentlemen.

Q. And what time did they pick you up?

A. Oh, at different times; maybe around ten o'clock; I don't just remember.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Did they bring you in the morning or in the afternoon on Thursday?

A. Well, I think they brought me in the morning.

Q. Are you sure?

A. No. There was one day that I didn't come down; they phoned to me and said that they didn't think they could use me that day.

Q. But they did bring you down on Thursday. Did they bring you down in the morning also?

A. I just don't remember.

Q. They brought you down two days last week, Thursday and Friday?

A. That's right, Thursday and Friday.

Q. On Friday they brought you down in the morning at ten o'clock and you stayed until noontime? A. Yes.

Q. But you don't remember what time they brought you down on [1926] Thursday, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. It might have been the morning or it might have been the afternoon?

A. It might have been the afternoon.

Q. Did Mr. Chandler and the other gentleman bring you on that occasion also?

A. That's right.

Q. Where did you go that day?

A. I came down to this building.

Q. And did you remain on hand for a couple of hours also that day? A. That's right, yes, sir.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. And then were driven home by those gentlemen again? A. That's right.

Q. On that day did either of them talk to you about what testimony you would give or the facts that you have testified to here, or anything of that nature? A. Nothing was said about it.

Q. When prior to that had you last seen anybody connected with the prosecution?

A. What was that question, please?

Q. When prior or before Thursday or Friday of last week—Thursday of last week—did you last see anybody connected with the prosecution? [1927]

A. Oh, it might have been—I couldn't say, but —I am nervous. If I remember correctly, it was when he served me with the subpoena.

Q. That was two weeks before, is that right?

A. I think so; just about that time.

Q. Now, do you remember what day you were served with the subpoena? You say it was a couple of weeks ago. Do you know what day it was?

A. No, I do not.

Q. That was the last time that you saw anybody connected with the Government until you were brought down here on Thursday, is that right?

A. That's right, yes, sir.

Q. And you don't remember——

A. To the best of my recollection, it is.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. To the best of my memory, it is, yes, sir.

Q. And you don't remember whether you were served with a subpoena before or after you went down to visit Rosa Schomaker, is that correct?

A. That is right, yes. I didn't think the dates were very important, and I just didn't pay any attention to the dates.

Q. And you think that some day last week probably you were taken down to Sansome Street?

A. That's right, yes, sir. [1928]

Q. Are you sure that that was before or after you talked to Mrs. Schomaker?

A. Oh, that was—it was before.

Q. It was before you talked to her. How long before? A. Oh, I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, was it as much as a month before?

A. No; just a few days.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. Just a few days; maybe three or four, or two or three; I don't know.

Q. So then when you got the subpoena, then you went down to see Mr. Schomaker, is that right?

A. No; let's see. I got the subpoena—no, that was some time—I got the subpoena. No. We just was out for a ride, and I thought, well, I will take down some flowers. When we left home we didn't have any intention of going there.

Q. Here is the thing: What I am trying to get at, you say a few days after you got the subpoena you went down to see Mrs. Schomaker, is that right?

A. That's right, yes, sir.

Q. How many days after you got the subpoena?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. I don't know.

Q. Now, did anybody—nobody was in the automobile that went down with you to Mrs. Schomaker's, is that right?

A. Just Mr. Harris and I. [1929]

Q. Just Mr. Harris and you. All right. Now, when you were driven down to the Sansome Street place, you say you were driven down by this Mr. Chandler and another man, and you talked to Mr. Chandler in that building, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. Anybody else there at the time?

A. Yes, this other gentleman, and he took my statements down on the typewriter.

Q. I see. How long were you there all together?

A. Oh, maybe from 7 to 9:30; I am not sure.

Q. How many pages did your statement cover?

A. I don't know. I didn't count them.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I didn't count them.

Q. Did you sign the papers?

A. I just—I signed the last one, and the others, I put my initial on them.

Q. How many pages did you put your initial on? A. I don't know.

Q. About how many?

A. Oh, maybe two or three.

Q. Now, prior to the time that you went down to that building whom had you last talked to about anything you have testified to here?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Mr. Chandler.

Q. When?

A. When he served the subpoena on me.

Q. And did you talk to him at that time about your testimony?

A. I talked to him before that about it.

Q. Did you talk to him at the time he served you with the subpoena?

A. Not at that time. He just rung the doorbell and he came in and handed me the subpoena.

Q. Have you the subpoena?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you it with you?

A. I think I have.

Q. I would like to see it.

A. Yes, sir, I have it (producing paper).

Q. How long do you say it was prior to the time you came down here to court that you were served with a subpoena? How long before Mr. Chandler and the other man drove you down to this building were you served with the subpoena, approximately?

A. Around a couple of weeks, I think.

Q. A couple of weeks before?

A. I am not certain, but I think a couple of weeks.

Q. Now, you say that Mr. Chandler talked to you at the time he gave you the subpoena?

A. No, he didn't talk to me; he just came in and served me with it. [1931]

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Didn't talk to you about any of the facts you have testified to on this hearing?

A. Not at that time, no, sir.

Q. And when did he talk to you prior to that time?

A. Oh, two or three days before then.

Q. When was the first time before he served the subpoena? A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, approximately?

A. I wouldn't know. Maybe——

Q. Well—I beg your pardon?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, can't you tell us within a month or two months?

A. No, I wouldn't know. Maybe within a month; I wouldn't say.

Q. Then how long prior to this conversation had he spoken to you before?

A. I wouldn't know either. I think he was out either two or three times; I just don't recall.

Q. Well, now take the conversation that he had with you at the time he served the subpoena on you. You can't tell us how long prior to that he had last spoken to you; that is right, is it?

A. That's right.

Q. You can't tell us within a month?

A. Well, within the month, I think.

Q. Within a month, you think? [1932]

A. That's right.

Q. Now, how long prior to that had he last spoken to you? A. I just wouldn't know.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Well, could you tell us within six months?

A. Oh, I saw him—I think it was within this last couple of months was all that I ever saw him.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I think it was in the last two months; I don't think I have seen him longer than that.

Q. You don't think you saw him before that time? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did he tell you how he happened to come to talk to you? A. No, he didn't.

Q. Didn't give any reason why he had selected you to interview, is that right?

A. I think that is right.

Q. On any occasion? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did he do? Just come and ask you about this particular party, or did he ask you generally——

Mr. Gallagher: Object, your Honor, "What did he do, just come and ask you?" She didn't know what he was doing before he came and asked her.

Mr. Hallinan: I am asking for the conversation.

The Court: Overruled. [1933]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did Mr. Chandler when he first spoke to you merely ask you about this party?

A. He came out—no, he was talking about—looking for information, I guess; I don't know.

Q. Did he talk to you first or to your husband?

A. Talking to the both of us.

Q. Was he——

A. He had talked to Mr. Harris first.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Was he alone or accompanied by anybody else at that time when he first came?

A. No, he was with some other gentleman.

Q. Who was the other gentleman?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Was he the same one that was with him on these trips that he took to the hall with you, down to this building with you?

A. I think it was, yes, one time, and another time it might have been another gentleman.

Q. Did you get that other gentleman's name?

A. No, sir.

Q. And aside from Mr. Chandler and these two gentlemen whose names you don't know, has anybody talked to you about your testimony here or the facts that you have discussed?

A. While I was down to this—making this statement, some gentleman came in and I was introduced to him, but I don't even know his name. I don't remember his name. [1934]

Q. Have you seen him since? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. Here in this building.

Q. When?

A. Oh, I saw him a couple of different times when I have been waiting to be called as a witness.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom now?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Now, when Mr. Chandler first called on you the first time he talked to you, he told you he was looking for information on what? On what subject?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Well, he was wanting to know what we knew about the—oh, I don't know what his words were—in regards to—I think he was looking for information in regards—if we knew anything about Mr. Bridges and the Communist Party. I think that was his——

Q. And what did you tell him?

A. Well, Mr. Harris, you mean, or what I told him?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, oh, I told him what I told here, the statement that I had made.

Q. Now, just as soon as he asked it, you told him this story that you have told on the witness stand, is that right?

A. No, I didn't tell him that for some time.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I didn't tell him that for some time.

Q. Well, now, did he tell you that that had happened and ask you if it were true, or did you volunteer it to him? Which?

A. I told him, because I had told so many people when I heard this that I was—oh, I was so surprised. I was flabbergasted in '38, and I told many people about it, my friends and around, and I realized that I had talked out of turn and that he had probably heard of it.

Q. Then had you ever discussed that matter with Rosa Schomaker? A. No.

Q. That party at Shaw's? A. No.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Had you ever discussed it with John Schomaker?

A. I think in—around Easter time, I think it was; yes, around Easter time.

Q. That is Easter time of this year?

A. Around Easter time of this year, yes, sir.

Q. What month would that be?

A. Oh, either April or May. I don't recall.

Q. And where did that conversation take place?

A. Mr. Schomaker's dining room.

Q. Who else was present?

A. Oh, Mr. Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Schomaker. [1936]

Q. Anyone else?

A. Yes, if I can just think of the name. Mr. and Mrs.—oh, I can't remember the name.

Q. Were they friends of yours, these other people? A. I had—they were acquaintances.

Q. How long had you known them?

A. Mr. and Mrs. Mallen.

Q. Mallen? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how to spell it?

A. Hazel Mallen.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. She was—it was Mr. and Mrs. Mallen. Hazel Mallen was, at one time, was president of our auxiliary.

Q. What is Mr. Mallen's name?

A. I think Lawrence; I am not sure.

Q. How long have you known them?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Oh, probably since the '34 strike.

Q. Have you visited their home?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have they ever visited yours?

A. No, I think not.

Q. Have you met them on many occasions?

A. No, we never was very friendly.

Q. Was anybody else present in that conversation? [1937] A. That was all.

Q. At Easter? A. That was all.

Q. The conversation, then, at Easter related to this party at the Shaws, is that right?

A. No, it just came up about—oh, we were just discussing the condition of the waterfront, and Mr. Schomaker had been writing a book or something—writing a story on the waterfront, and we were referring to the different characters.

Q. Mr. Schomaker was writing a book about the waterfront?

A. Writing a story on the characters of the waterfront.

Q. Did you read the book?

A. It wasn't a book; it was a story.

Q. Did he read it to you, or did you read the story? A. He read parts of it.

Q. Did he say what he proposed to do with the story? A. No.

Q. Was it some kind of a reformed Communist confession matter? Is that what it was about?

A. No, it was just a story around about the waterfront.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. And was this incident at Shaw's house mentioned in that story?

A. No, not that I know of. I didn't hear the whole story read, just parts of it.

Q. Was this party at Shaw's house mentioned at all on that [1938] occasion?

A. Yes. I asked—we were talking; then from this story we got to talking about the Harry Bridges perjury investigation, and I asked John if he remembered that incident, and he said he did.

Q. I see.

A. I was the one that brought it to his attention.

Q. Just what was said about the Harry Bridges investigation?

A. Well, I just don't remember, only just that I asked John if he remembered that time that we were up there and that Harry made the talk and made the appeal for membership, and he recalled it.

Q. And did he say that he was already being interviewed by people connected with the Immigration Department concerning this Bridges matter?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did you know an investigation was on at that time relating to Harry Bridges? A. No.

Q. Well, you said——

A. I think that he probably knew there was.

Q. Did he say he knew there was?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Well, did he tell you that he had been speaking with immigration officers at that time? [1939]

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. No, he did not.

Q. It wasn't he that suggested this party; it was you that suggested it, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. It wasn't Roza Schomaker?

A. No, it was I that told him to remember it.

Q. Now, since that time—oh, then the next thing you knew was Mr. Chandler appeared at your home; is that right?

A. I think that is just about right.

Q. Did you ever talk to the Schomakers after that conversation about the subject of your testimony here?

A. I only saw them—I think I only saw John just the one time in June, and then Roza since then.

Q. Now, during any of your conversations with Mr. Chandler or this other gentleman who drove you down here, were you shown a transcript of what Mr. Schomaker had testified to here?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now you name the people who were present at that meeting whom you remember, Mr. John Shaw, Mr. Peter Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Wogemann—— A. Wogemann.

Q. How long is it since you have seen those people?

A. Oh, since probably '38—well, maybe not after '40.

Q. In 1940, you say? [1940]

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. I am not saying for sure, because I just don't remember.

Q. But it is probably nine or ten years ago since you saw either Peter Brown or Mr. and Mrs. Wogemann, is that right?

A. That is right, yes, sir. [1940-A]

The Court: Who is that, Peter Brown or Archie Brown?

The Witness: No, Peter Brown.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Peter Brown. And then how long is it since you have seen Mr. and Mrs. Archer Brown?

A. I don't think after that, much after that, either.

Q. That is the last time you saw them?

A. Well, I don't say it is the last time, but after that my health was very poor and I didn't go out very much, and I didn't come in contact with them at all, with any of them.

Q. All right. Now, nobody told you that Mr. Schomaker had named these people as being present at the Shaw's house, is that right?

A. I didn't know that Mr. Schomaker did name them.

Q. And you didn't compare any notes on that subject with anybody? A. None whatever.

Q. Is that right?

A. None whatsoever, no, sir.

Q. Now, you say that Mr. Bridges reported on the waterfront and said what the Communist Party had done for "us." Who were the "us" that the Communist Party——

A. Well, I thought that he meant the longshoremen.

Q. That included your husband and himself and the other longshoremen, isn't that right?

A. That is what I thought that he—yes, I imagine he did have [1941] reference to them.

Q. And you said he said how they had helped "us" out?

A. Well, yes, what they had done and how they had helped us out in the strike.

Q. And the editorials in the paper, in the World, in the People's World?

A. Yes, they had given great support. I don't remember just his words, it was such a long time ago.

Q. And you say you arrived at that party about 8:00 o'clock and you left before 10:00?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Q. And the house you described as having a large room, it was like an old house that part of it had been built over, is that what you said?

A. I didn't say built over, no, sir. It had an old-fashioned double room; it might have been a double parlor or it might have been a parlor and a dining room.

Q. And how many people were present at that meeting?

A. Well, I—maybe from 25 to 30 or 35. I didn't count them.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. 25, 30 or 35?

A. Something—yes. One room was entirely filled and some sitting in the other room.

Q. Now, when Mr. Chandler appeared at your house for the first time, he charged your husband with having concealed his membership in the Communist Party at the time he was naturalized, [1942] didn't he? A. No, sir, he did not.

Q. Now, what did he say on that subject, if anything?

A. I don't think it was even discussed. I don't remember if it was.

Q. Well, what discussion have you heard on that subject from anyone within the last year or so?

A. What was that question again, please?

Q. About any charge that—when your husband was naturalized, he had concealed his membership in the Communist Party. A. Mr. Harris?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, no, he never belonged to the party. He never concealed anything.

Q. When was he naturalized?

A. I think in 1940.

Q. Were you present at the time of his naturalization? A. Yes, sir, I was.

Q. Did you go down as a witness or anything like that? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And was he questioned about membership in the Communist Party?

A. I just don't remember.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Now, Mrs. Harris, try to remember. Was your husband questioned about membership in the Communist Party at the time he was [1943] naturalized?

A. I don't remember, but if he was, he would certainly have said, "No," because he never belonged to the Communist Party. I don't remember what his questions were then.

Q. Was he questioned about any affiliation with the Communist Party? A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember that? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember where the examination took place?

A. It took place in the Federal Building, here, but just where, I don't know.

Q. Who was the other witness?

A. Mrs. Alda Johnson.

Q. And she and you came down with him, is that right? A. That's right, yes, sir.

Q. Were you questioned about membership in the Communist Party?

A. Oh, I don't know. I had my citizenship restored.

Q. When?

A. In, oh, I think probably six months before Mr. Harris had his citizenship granted to him. I lost mine when I married him.

Q. Yes. And when you had your citizenship restored, you were questioned about membership in the Communist Party, weren't you?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. I don't remember. I may have and I may not have. I don't remember. [1944]

Q. Now, Mrs. Harris, who were the witnesses that you took down for yourself?

A. I didn't have any witnesses.

Q. You didn't have any witnesses?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Now, please give this your attention. See if you can't tell us from memory. You were questioned at the time your citizenship was restored as to whether or not you had ever been a member of the Communist Party, isn't that right?

A. I do not remember. I may have.

Q. Now, coming forward six months, when your husband was examined in your presence, he was asked if he had ever been a member of the Communist Party, wasn't he? A. I do not know.

Q. You don't remember that? A. No, sir.

Q. Mrs. Johnson, who was a witness also, she was asked if she had ever been a member of the Communist Party, wasn't she?

A. Really, I don't know. I don't remember if she was. She may have, but she is not a member of the party.

Q. And you stated that you were not a member of the party? A. That's right.

Q. And you stated that your husband was not a member of the party?

A. That's right. [1945]

Q. Is that right? A. That's right.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Now, at this meeting at Mr. Shaw's, then of course that was not a Communist Party meeting, was it?

A. Well, I don't know whether it was or not.

Q. Well, you are not a Communist?

A. I was not a Communist, no. I didn't belong to the party.

Q. And your husband wasn't a Communist?

A. No, we were there, though, by invitation.

Q. He was there by invitation?

A. Yes. you had to be invited to attend.

Q. By whom—Now, by whose invitation was he there? A. We were there by Peter Brown's.

Q. All right. Now, at the time that you got your citizenship back, were you questioned by the Immigration officials about that party at the Shaw's?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you asked any questions about Harry Bridges at the time you got your naturalization?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you at the time that your husband was naturalized? A. I don't think so.

Q. Was your husband?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Well, what was said about Harry Bridges at all on that [1946] occasion, if anything?

A. If I remember correctly, I don't remember, but I don't think his name was mentioned. I do remember when Mr. Harris, the Judge asked him some questions about the Magna Carta in England, and compared them to our—some of our laws here.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Was he naturalized in the Superior Court or in the Federal Court?

A. I wouldn't know. I don't even remember——

Q. Were you in court with him?

A. That's right, I was.

Q. Do you know what the Judge's name was?

A. I think it was Judge Lauderbach or something to that effect. I am not certain.

Q. Was it out in the City Hall or was it here in this building?

A. This is the Federal—this is the Post Office. It was in the Post Office.

Q. It was in the Post Office? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we have the afternoon recess?

The Court: Yes. We will take the afternoon recess. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case among yourselves under any conditions, nor to suffer any person to discuss it with you, nor to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you for [1947] your decision.

Mr. Hallinan: I want the subpoena marked for identification in the meantime, if we may, Your Honor.

The Court: All right. You may now retire.

(Recess.) [1947-A]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, when you spoke to the Schomakers about the meeting in Jack

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Shaw's home, did you and the Schomakers agree as to the type of house or type of room that the meeting was held in? A. No, it was——

Q. Was that discussed?

A. It wasn't mentioned, no, sir.

Q. Nothing was said about it being a parlor and another room cut into one room? A. No.

Q. Nothing was said? A. No.

Q. At Easter of this year at the Schomakers' were the names of the people who were present gone over between you and the Schomakers?

A. No.

Q. For instance, Mr. and Mrs. Wagemann were not mentioned in the conversation with the Schomakers on Easter, or were they?

A. We didn't mention any names; we just talked about the meeting that Harry made that statement.

Q. Now, you tell us you didn't mention any names? A. That is right.

Q. And you didn't mention what the room was like? A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't mention the date that the meeting was held? [1948] A. No, sir.

Q. Nor the year in which it was held?

A. Well, I may have said something about the year; I don't know.

Q. You may have said something about the year. Did you say something about the time?

A. I am not saying that we did; I just don't recall whether we did or not.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Did you say anything about the time of the year in which it was held?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Did you say anything about the number of people who were present at this meeting?

A. No.

Q. Have you been at a great many meetings within the last fifteen years—you, personally?

A. Let's see.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. Well, not since 1940.

Q. But prior to that time did you attend a great many meetings?

A. No, that was the only one that I was ever invited to.

Q. I see. Now, had you known Mr. Bridges prior to this party at the Shaws' house or this meeting? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. How long had you known him? [1949]

A. Well, I think since probably 1934.

Q. Were you friendly to him?

A. Very, yes, sir.

Q. Spoke to him?

A. Oh, yes. He has been at our house, and I gave a party for him, and I have called at his home a couple of times, but he wasn't there, but I called on his wife Agnes.

Q. Were you friendly with Agnes?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you friendly with her now?

A. I haven't seen her for several years. I think the last time I saw her is when she had the accident on Pine Street. We went up to see her at that time.

Q. Did you call him Harry when you spoke to him? A. Always.

Q. At the time this party took place at the Shaws you, under the law as it then stood, were an alien; that is right, isn't it? You had given up your American citizenship?

A. Well, I tell you, I didn't know that I had lost it. I voted and I even did jury duty during that time. I went down to vouch for Mr. Harris, and I thought all the time that I was still an American citizen.

Q. You knew your husband was an alien, though, didn't you? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And you knew that Harry Bridges was an alien, isn't that [1950] right?

A. That's right.

Q. And the reason you were shocked at his making this statement was you knew that an alien who was a member of the Communist Party would be deported, isn't that right?

A. I never gave it a thought.

Q. You didn't give it a thought?

A. No, sir.

Q. So at that time when he made this statement that you have ascribed to him, you didn't give it a thought that he was putting himself in a posiiton where he could be immediately deported for having made that statement?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. No, sir, I never thought of it that way at all.

Q. Now, you place the time at which this party took place pretty definitely because it followed the CIO convention in Los Angeles in 1938, is that right?

A. Yes, sir, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Did you attend the CIO convention in Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you knew from reading the papers and from discussion which your husband, or however it may be, that in March of 1938 a warrant for Harry Bridges' deportation had been issued by the Department of Labor upon the ground that he should be deported as a member of the Communist Party? You know that, didn't you? [1951]

A. If I did, I didn't recall it.

Q. Well, at this party—withdraw that. Did you take enough notice of the events that involved the union officers to know that in March of 1938 such a warrant had been issued?

A. What was that question again, please?

Q. Withdraw it. Withdraw it. When you went to the CIO convention in 1938 was your husband a delegate? A. That's right.

Q. From what union?

A. From the Longshoremen's Local 110.

Q. From the ILWU?

A. That's right, yes, sir.

Q. At that time Harry Bridges was president of that union, wasn't he?

A. I couldn't say for sure.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Well, he has been president for many years. Don't you remember that he was president?

A. I don't remember, but I imagine he was. I couldn't say for sure.

Q. Don't you know this also: That at the time of the CIO convention Harry Bridges was the Pacific Coast director of the CIO?

A. No, I don't know that.

Q. Did you attend any of the convention sessions of the CIO in Los Angeles? [1952]

A. Oh, I think one of them, but I wasn't very well and went sightseeing, and then a day I think I was ill in the hotel.

Q. Don't you remember that in the CIO convention in Los Angeles in 1938 there was a great deal of discussion in the convention and a great deal of indignation expressed against the action of the Department of Labor in having gotten out a warrant to try to have Harry Bridges deported?

A. No, I don't recall that at all. I probably wasn't there at that time.

Q. Well, didn't you discuss that subject with your husband? A. I think not, no, sir.

Q. Well, do you remember whether in the year 1938 there wasn't any discussion at all in your family, that is, between your husband and yourself, as to the pending deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges?

A. There was, but I don't know whether it was in '38 or not.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. What discussion did you have at any time?

A. We were always in sympathy with him.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. We were always in sympathy with him.

Q. With whom? A. With Harry Bridges.

Q. You were always in sympathy with him?

A. That's right. [1953]

Q. Thought that he shouldn't be deported, is that right?

A. Well, no, I didn't think that. I just was wishing that he wouldn't be.

Q. You say hoping that he wouldn't be?

A. That's right.

Q. And you always believed up until the time that you heard him talk at this Shaw house that he was not a member of the Communist Party; isn't that right? A. I didn't know.

Q. You didn't know one way or the other?

A. One way or the other.

Q. But you knew—withdraw that. When you first heard that a warrant had been issued for Bridges' deportation you had some talk about that with your husband, is that right?

A. Oh, I just don't recall.

Q. Well, you said that you were in sympathy with him; that you expressed some sympathy with him, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then wasn't that subject discussed with other members of the Longshore Workers' Union—you and your husband and other workers in the Longshore Workers' Union?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. I tell you, I haven't very many friends in the Longshoremen's Union.

Q. Now, didn't your husband inform you and didn't you see in the paper when the first warrant for Harry Bridges' [1954] deportation was issued? Didn't you notice that or remark that at all?

A. No, I did not remember—I don't know when it was.

Q. Well, can you tell us this: What was it that called your attention to the fact that proceedings had been instituted to deport Mr. Bridges?

A. Oh, I just don't recall.

Q. But you knew at the time of the CIO convention in Los Angeles that at that time——

A. No, I didn't know that. No, I am not sure of it. I don't recall it at that time.

Q. You don't recall it at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. You knew at the time that you attended Mr. Shaw's party that a deportation proceeding was pending against him, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You knew when you were at Mr. Shaw's party, though, that a person, an alien, would be deported if he joined the Communist Party, didn't you?

A. I didn't give it a thought. I never thought about it.

Q. Well, you said you were shocked.

A. I was shocked, because it had been denied

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

that he was a Party member, and to think that he would get up and make that statement, I was sort of flabbergasted. [1955]

Q. Who had denied he was a Party member?

A. Oh, we in our auxiliary had little discussions, that would come up, Harry was accused of being a member and other people was. I had even myself been accused, but I wasn't, and the other ladies denied it, too. That was all there was.

Q. I didn't get what you said where this discussion took place.

A. Oh, in our auxiliary meetings and different meetings.

Q. What auxiliary? A. In the ILWU.

Q. Were you a member of the ILWU auxiliary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many other ladies were members?

A. Oh, I wouldn't know.

Q. You say there had been discussions in this ILWU auxiliary?

A. Not on the floor, I don't think; not on the floor, but probably at our gatherings—we had little sewing bees that we sewed and different things. We had socials, and of course we more or less gossiped.

Q. And at those meetings there had been discussion of the charges that Mr. Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, is that right?

A. What was that question, please?

Q. At those meetings that you speak about in the auxiliary there had been discussions about the charges that Mr. Bridges [1956] was a member of the Communist Party, is that right?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. And that had been denied, is that correct?

A. That is right, yes.

Q. And nobody belonging to the auxiliary claimed that he was a member, did she?

A. That's right; they all denied it.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. The ladies always denied it.

Q. Mr. Bridges always denied it.

A. I said the ladies denied it.

Q. The ladies always denied it? A. Yes.

Q. Were there several hundred members in that ladies' auxiliary?

A. Oh, no; maybe from eight to ten to a hundred; maybe a hundred at the most. I don't even know whether we had that membership or not.

Q. Then you say that other people were also accused of having been members of the Communist Party, and the denial of that was made in such meetings of the auxiliary, is that right?

A. That's right, yes.

Q. And that included yourself, is that right?

A. I may have been, I don't know.

Q. Did it include your husband? [1957]

A. No, I don't think—no.

Q. Now, was this a subject—this was, I take it, a subject of pretty frequent discussion, is that right? A. Not necessarily so.

Q. And then wasn't it also stated among the ladies present that people who afterwards took the witness stand and testified that Mr. Bridges was a Communist were committing perjury?

A. No, no.

Q. Now, this subject being debated and discussed, had you ever asked Harry Bridges himself that question? A. No, sir.

Q. After the Shaw meeting had broken up its formal part, the ladies there served refreshments, isn't that correct? A. Well, I think they did.

Q. And did you——

A. I didn't stay, because I was ill. They went into the kitchen, went into the back, and Mr. Harris and I was excused and I went home. I wasn't very well.

Q. Did you go up to Mr. Bridges and say, "Why, Harry, what is the matter with you? Are you insane, making a statement like that in public?" Did you say that to him?

A. I didn't say anything.

Q. Did you see anybody else go up to him and protest what a foolish and insane thing it was to make such a statement?

A. No, I didn't. [1958]

Q. Did you ask anybody else who was there what had happened to him, whether he was drunk or insane or anything like that? A. No.

Q. At that meeting—now, if you will give a little thought to it, Mrs. Harris—wasn't there some discussion about the pending deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges?

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. I don't recall that at all.

Q. Nobody mentioned those at all?

A. I don't recall it, no, sir; I don't recall it.

Q. Well, wasn't it considered of great importance in the ILWU that proceedings to deport their president were pending?

A. It may have been, but it wasn't discussed there to my recollection at all.

Q. And you don't recollect that at the CIO convention it wasn't a matter of great consternation and great sorrow that the CIO Pacific Coast Director was to be deported?

A. No, sir, I do not remember.

Mr. Gallagher: Objection, your Honor. I think we are retracing. We have been over that maybe twice even before.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you have cited some of the language that Mr. Bridges you say used in the discussion at that meeting. You said he spoke about what the Communist Party had done for us, is that right? A. Yes. [1959]

Q. In other words, did Mr. Bridges say something like this, "We longshoremen, we members of the ILWU, should be and we are grateful for what the Comumnist Party has done for us"? Did he say that?

A. I don't know his exact words. The only thing that made the impression upon me was when he invited us, urged the members there, those that were not Party members, to come into the Party—I remember that very clearly—and when he said that he belonged to the Communist Party; but what his other talk was, I just know it was in general about the waterfront and what the Party had done.

Q. Now, after he made that statement that he was a member of the Communist Party and invited other people to go in, did he continue talking for some time thereafter?

A. No, I think that was—he walked back and forth and he put his hands in his pocket, and he walked down the aisle—the seats were on each side—and he came down maybe, oh, five or six feet, and he just—that was the end of it.

Q. Then did anybody else get up and speak after that?

A. Not that I know of. I wasn't well, and Mr. Harris and I left there.

Q. Didn't anybody get up and say, "This gentleman is just joking, because there is a warrant out for his arrest and he is subject to deportation, and he is just kidding you; he isn't actually a member of the Communist Party"? Did any one [1960] say that?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I think that is a statement rather than a question.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did anyone say that?

A. I told you that I left right after he finished his talk. I don't know what was said or done after that.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. Now let me ask you this: You say Mr. and Mrs. Archer Brown were there?

A. I think they were there.

Q. What? A. I think they were there.

Q. Did anybody talk to you at the recess and tell you that Mr. Brown could not have been there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, don't you know that at the time of the CIO convention, prior to the time of the CIO convention, before it was held, Archer Brown had gone back to Spain and was fighting in the Loyalist army in Spain?

A. I didn't say that they were there. I said I think they were there. But the other people that I mentioned, I am sure were there.

Mr. Hallinan: I think that is all.

Mr. Gallagher: No redirect, your Honor.

The Court: You may step down, Mrs. Harris. Be very [1961] careful of the steps. The witness is excused.

Mr. Donohue, will you call the next witness, please.

Mr. Donohue: It will take a moment. He will be here in just a minute, your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, excuse me. I am sorry. With that last witness——

The Court: Did you have an additional question to ask the witness?

Mr. Hallinan: I don't care. I will introduce the subpoena which shows that it was served upon her two days instead of two weeks before she came down to court.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, would you examine that? It may be the subject of stipulation rather than recalling the witness if you are so disposed. If you wish, Mr. Hallinan, I will send the bailiff to recall her.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, if it is necessary.

Mr. Gallagher: I think that statement is wrong. I think she said about two weeks ago. This is the 29th.

The Court: Do you wish the lady recalled?

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor, I was thinking we can stipulate and save the witness being recalled.

The Court: Let us have the stipulation in the record.

Mr. Hallinan: It shows the subpoena was issued on the 29th day of November calling the witness to court for the first day of December. [1962]

The Court: The lady is here.

Mr. Hallinan: I want to ask her a couple of questions.

(The witness Irene Patti Harris resumed the stand.)

The Court: Mr. Hallinan has another question to address to you.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You were brought down to court for the first time last Thursday, isn't that right? A. I think so.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

Q. That is the 1st of December. And you gave us the subpoena that was served upon you?

A. That's right.

Q. The subpoena is dated the 29th day of November, so it was served upon you two days before you came down here, isn't that right?

A. If that is what it says there, it was, yes; I don't know.

Q. Instead of two weeks. Now, as a matter of fact, are you sure that it was you that suggested the Shaw party to John Schomaker, or didn't he suggest it to you? Which?

A. It was I that recalled John's—recalled it to John's memory.

Q. And up to that time he said he hadn't remembered it, is that correct?

A. He didn't say anything. We didn't even discuss it until the time when I asked him if he remembered that incident, and he said, "Oh, yes." [1963]

Q. And what does this Mallen do who was present at the meeting at the Schomaker house?

A. Oh, I don't know. I think he is affiliated with something in the building trades.

Q. Your husband and Mr. Bridges have had some rather bad disagreements on policy matters of the union, haven't they?

Mr. Gallagher: Objection; that has nothing to do with this witness.

The Court: Overruled.

(Testimony of Irene Patti Harris.)

A. Not that I know of. [1964]

Mr. Hallinan: We will offer the subpoena, if the Court please, as Defendant's exhibit.

The Court: It may be received as defendant's exhibit next in order.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all.

(Thereupon subpoena referred to was received in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit T.)

The Court: Mrs. Harris, you are now excused.

STANLEY BENJAMIN HANCOCK

called on behalf of the United States; sworn.

The Clerk: Will you state your name to the Court and jury, please?

A. Stanley Benjamin Hancock.

Q. And where?

A. In San Diego, California.

Q. Tell us when you joined and where.

A. I joined in San Diego.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I take it, your Honor, that the same objections are preserved to this line of questioning as we made in the instance of the preceding witness, that the question is calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness; they are not binding on the defendants; that they call further for res inter alia acta.

The Court: When you speak of the preceding witness, I might correct you; I think you mean the witness preceding the last witness?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I meant the witness Mr. Schrimpf.

The Court: Is that agreeable, counsel?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, yes, your Honor, that is agreeable.

The Court: So stipulated?

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

The Court: That may be the order.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, when and where did you join the Communist Party?

A. In 1932, to the best of my recollection, in San Diego. It was San Diego. I believe it was the year 1932.

Q. And how soon after that did you become organizer?

A. Why, in 1933 I became organizer. [1968]

Q. For what territory were you organizer.

A. At a later period, Imperial Valley or Imperial County was included in our territory.

Q. And was that the largest geographical body?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Where were you working when you became organizer, first in San Diego?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. I left the San Diego Sun in January of 1933 and became a full time functionary in the Communist Party.

Q. And have you held any other positions in the Communist Party?

A. Well, I have held various positions, of trade union director in the county, unit organizer, that sort of thing.

The Court: Speak up just a little louder.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): What did you mean by "full time functionary" of the Communist Party?

A. I mean that I had no employment for wages, that I received living expenses from the party in return for full time, full application of my time to the party.

Q. And what were your duties, your full time duties? Just what were you doing for the party?

A. Why, at the beginning, at that time, we were mainly concerned with activity among the unemployed. My work was largely in [1969] an organization known as the Unemployed Council, where [redacted] endeavored to represent these people in their efforts to secure more relief.

Q. When you joined the party—you say that was in 1932? A. I joined in 1932.

Q. Now, did you do any outside work during the time you were a member of the Communist Party? In other words, how did you make your living?

A. For a great deal of the time I was on relief, and my membership extended over a number of years, and I, for approximately two years, was on the Federal Writers Project. This was a later period of time than the time we were discussing.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. How old were you in 1933?

A. About 25.

Q. Now, did there come a time when you worked for the newspaper or periodical known as the People's World?

Q. And how long with the People's World?

A. Until July, 1941.

Q. Where were you living when you worked for the People's World?

A. In Oakland, California.

Q. What was your position?

A. For the first six months I was branch manager of the Oakland [1970] office. For the balance of the period just mentioned I was circulation manager in the San Francisco office.

Q. During that time were you still a member of the Communist Party? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you have any function or duties to perform for the party?

A. Nominal duties. I can't recall. All party members have nominal duties.

Q. Were you still receiving any compensation of any nature from the Communist Party during the time you were working for the People's World?

A. Yes, I did.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. What type was this compensation?

A. I was paid $21 a week.

Q. And what were your duties?

A. My duties for the larger part were as circulation manager, generally speaking, to increase the circulation of the People's World.

Q. Was that a Communist organ, this People's World?

A. It did not carry on its masthead the fact that it was a Communist organ, but it was the product of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, that that answer must be stricken as purely the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: The motion is denied. [1971]

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, after you left the People's World, what work did you take up?

A. Why, after two or three weeks I found employment as circulation manager of the Santa Cruz Sentinel-News, Santa Cruz, California.

Q. And how long were you with that paper?

A. Until October, 1942.

Q. Was that a daily newspaper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it a Communist paper or otherwise?

A. Republican paper.

Q. After that, what did you do for a living?

A. For a period of about three months I worked in and around San Francisco and the Link Belt Machine Shop, for one place, among shipside repair gangs, and in, I believe, the month of January, 1943, I entered the merchant marine.

Q. Where, here in San Francisco?

A. Here in San Francisco.

Q. Did you go to sea? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Began as a wiper in the engine room.

Q. Engine crew? A. Yes.

Q. And how long did you remain a sailor? [1972]

A. Until December 27, 1945.

Q. What type of work were you doing when you left?

A. I was third assistant engineer, acting second assistant.

Q. What did you do after that, Mr. Hancock?

A. Well, came out to visit my family in April. I went to work in Lockport, New York, on a newspaper, the Union Sun & Journal.

Q. How long did you work for that paper?

A. Well, it was in April, 1946, to approximately two years, to 1948, April, 1948.

Q. And then did you go with the Erie Dispatch?

A. Yes.

Q. And been with that paper since?

A. Yes.

Q. Did there come a time when you ceased to become a member of the Communist Party?

A. Yes, there did.

Q. Will you tell the Court and jury, please, sir, when that was? A. In July, 1941.

Q. Did you resign or were you expelled?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. In July, 1941, I asked for permission to leave the employment of the People's World for personal reasons, because it was necessary for me to assist my family fianancially. Permission was granted. On leaving San Francisco, I also left the party.

Q. Now, were you ever active in the party here in San Francisco? [1973]

A. There was a short period——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. It seems to me that that question calls for the witness to put a character on his own doings. He can tell us what he did, but he can hardly characterize it, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): You may answer the question.

A. There was a short period in 1933, the early part of 1933, when I was circulation manager of the Western Worker. I was up here, as I recall, for about three months. I don't remember any other party activities that I was officially in as a party member, involved in in San Frncisco.

Q. Well, I believe you say you were circulation manager at San Francisco of the People's World?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you learn where the Communist Party headquarters were in the City of San Francisco?

A. Yes; I did.

Q. Where were they?

A. At what times, please?

Q. Well, during any time that you know about.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. When I first knew, it was at 37 Grove Street; later it became 121 Haight Street.

Q. Have you been in those offices?

A. Yes, I have. [1974]

Q. Frequently or otherwise?

A. Quite frequently.

Q. Do you recall the California State Federation of Labor convention held in San Diego along about 1935? A. Yes, I do.

Q. You were then organizer for the Communist Party at San Diego? A. I was.

Q. Did you have any other position at that time with the Communist Party?

A. Not that I recall. I had many duties. I don't know exactly what you mean by "assignments."

Q. Well, just what your particular job with the Communist Party when that convention was held?

A. I was mainly concerned with work in the trade union fields at that time, in the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Were you ever a member of the District Committee of the Communist Party in the State of California?

A. I don't have any recollection of ever being so.

Q. Were you a trade union man yourself?

A. Well, that is a general question.

Q. Well, were you ever a member of any trade union?

A. Yes, at various times I have been.

Q. What unions of what unions have you been a member?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. The first union was the union—it was an agricultural union. [1975] I can't remember the initials. It was in the period of 1933, '34. United Cannery—no, I can't remember the initials. That was a union affiliated to the trade union Unity League, not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. I later became a member of the Cleaners & Dyers Local of San Diego, American Federation of Labor. On the Writers' Project for a time, we held membership in a unit of the Federal Employees Union. On the People's World I was a member of the American Newspaper Guild.

Q. Did you ever have anything to do with the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packers and Warehouse Union?

A. The union that I belonged to, to the best of my recollection, didn't have the word "warehousemen" in, but it was called the Ucapawa, and it was, these were the initials, U-c-a-p-a-w-a.

Q. Well, were you a member of that?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you belong to any union when you went to sea?

A. Yes, I did. I belonged to the Marine Firemen, Boiler & Watertenders & Wipers.

Q. Now, do you know one of the defendants in this case, Harry Bridges? A. Yes, I do.

Q. How long have you known Harry Bridges?

A. Since 1935.

Q. When and where did you meet him? [1976]

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. In an apartment in San Diego, just at the beginning of this convention you just mentioned.

Q. Is that the first time you had met him?

A. I am reasonably sure it is.

Q. Have you seen him—How often have you seen him since?

A. I saw him several times in 1938.

Q. Under what circumstances?

A. There was a CIO building or offices in a building on lower Market Street. He was the regional CIO organizer and I was an organizer in the CIO Agricultural Union, offices were next to each other. And I ran into him occasionally there.

Q. Have your seen him on any other occasions or at any other places that you recall?

A. Not that I can recall.

Q. Now, do you know one of the defendants in the case named Henry Schmidt?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When and where did you first meet him?

A. In an apartment in San Diego, September, 1935.

Q. Same apartment where you met Bridges?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen him since?

A. I don't recall that I have.

Q. Would you know if you would see him?

A. Yes, sir. [1977]

Q. Now, do you know the defendant J. [illegible] Robertson? A. No, sir, I do not.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Do you know a man named John Schomaker?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. When and where did you first meet him?

A. Well, I have known John Schomaker since about 1933; met him in San Francisco, '33 or '34, in there somewhere.

Q. Under what circumstances did you meet him?

A. John Schomaker was a section organizer for the Communist Party.

Q. Of the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. I suggest that that answer is not responsive to the question. It involves an opinion and conclusion by this witness, not called for by the question. It also involves matters outside the presence of the defendants, res inter alia acta.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Well, then, you met Schomaker in your Communist activities, I take it?

A. Yes, I did.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, pardon me. That is a leading question.

Mr. Paisley: Oh, of course it is, but you know it is proper.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest you shouldn't adopt that form, put the label "Communist" on a man in a leading question. That is [1978] even worse than some of the other matters.

The Court: Overruled. Proceed.

Mr. Paisley: He already said he was a section organizer of the party.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Well, did you see Schomaker often when you and he were Communists?

A. Well, not too often, no, because he was in San Francisco and I was in San Diego. But frequently why, when I came to San Francisco I met him.

Q. When you were active in the party in San Diego, were there times when you would come up here to San Francisco to Communist Party meetings? A. Yes, there were.

Q. Would you see Schomaker on those occasions?

A. On many such occasions I did.

Q. Now, do you know a man named Henry Schrimpf?

A. I met Henry Schrimpf—no, I will correct that; I saw Henry Schrimpf at this State Federation of Labor convention.

Q. Have you seen him since?

A. No, I don't believe I have.

Q. Were you a delegate to this California State Federation of Labor convention in San Diego on—in 1935? A. No, I was not.

Q. Just what, if anything, did you have to do with the convention? [1979]

A. Well, as the organizer for the Communist Party, I was interested in the policies to be adopted at that convention and the people to be elected at that convention.

Q. And to that end, what, if anything, did you do?

A. Well, I could describe that at great length, but generally speaking, we endeavored to have people we considered progressive elected as delegates to the convention out of San Diego, the various San Diego locals. And I attended at least one meeting where we discussed matters that the party was interested in having come before the convention.

Q. And where was that meeting held?

A. At the Sumner Apartments, at 12th and B Streets, in San Diego.

Q. Spell that word, Sumner.

A. S-u-m-n-e-r.

Q. Was that meeting held before the California State Federation of Labor opened or otherwise?

A. As I remember it, the convention opened the first day, the session was only a half a day. And our meeting was in the late part of that day, four or five o'clock.

Q. Now, who attended that meeting?

A. Some eight or ten people at that meeting; possibly a dozen.

Q. Can you remember the names of any persons who were present?

A. Yes, I can remember several of them. In addition to myself, Walter Lambert, trade union director, California District of [1980] the Communist Party; Jack Johnstone, member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party;——

Q. Of California or the United States?

A. Central Committee of the United States.

Q. Yes?

A. Harry Bridges, John Schomaker, a fellow from Los Angeles by the name of Rabin. There were—I have the impression, I believe there were some members of the Sailors Union of the Pacific there. I don't remember their names.

Q. Were they Communists?

A. The meeting was a fraction meeting.

Q. What is a fraction meeting?

A. A fraction meeting is where members of the party get together to plan an activity in a non-Communist meeting to follow.

Q. I see. Do you recall any others present at this time, Mr. Hancock?

A. Yes, Mr. Schmidt.

Q. Who? A. Schmidt.

Q. What is his first name? A. Henry.

Q. Now, how were you notified of the meeting and how did you get there?

A. Walter Lambert notified me of the meeting. I am not sure, [1981] but I have the impression that I went to the meeting with him.

Q. Do you know whether or not any security measures were taken?

A. As I recall, Mr. Lambert was at the door looking over people coming in.

Q. Now, have you exhausted your memory as to persons present?

A. Well, I remember three people from the longshoremen's union, a member of the Central Committee, and a member of the State Committee, and myself, and a member of the Cleaners & Dyers Union of Los Angeles. I am sure there were three to four additional people there, but I don't seem to recall their names.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Was a chairman elected, do you remember?

A. I don't remember any in connection with that.

Q. Were there—Tell us what part, if any, did Harry Bridges take in the meeting?

A. It is hard for me to say specifically. This was a meeting of between 8 or 12 people. I remember some of the things we talked about.

Q. Well, what were some of the things you talked about? A. Well, we were interested——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, if he is to narrate a conversation, I think he must narrate a conversation without passing a character upon what he was interested in at that time.

Mr. Paisley: Oh, I think he is answering the question, your Honor. [1982]

The Court: Well, I suppose as to that statement, "I was interested," or "He was interested," that is prefatory to some other part. You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Proceed, Mr. Hancock.

A. We were interested in preparing a slate of nominees to oppose the vice presidents of the American Federation of Labor, the California Division, and the secretary of the State Federation. We were further interested——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I want to move, if the Court please, that that answer be stricken and that the witness be asked to narrate the conversation which he may remember, either in substance or as closely as he can remember it.

The Court: Yes, you might state the conversation, to the best of your recollection.

A. We discussed the various people up and down the State that we might endorse.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Again, your Honor, the witness, although your Honor has advised him, does not give us conversation. If he can just say, "Mr. Bridges said this; So-and-so said that," I think the record would be much more clear.

Mr. Paisley: I think he is telling us your Honor, in substance what the discussion was about. I suggest——

The Court: Proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. There would be no way to cross-examine a witness as to a conversation if he [1983] doesn't tell us who said certain things.

The Court: I take it that you are coming to the conversations, are you?

A. Your Honor, I haven't anything in my mind about a specific conversation or sentence that any single individual said. I have a remembrance of the topic discussed.

Mr. MacInnis: Then, your Honor, I would move to strike all reference to the conversation; if he can't remember what a single individual said, his recollection of the topic would not be of any probative value in this case.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. Paisley: Oh, I think it would, your Honor. Nothing is more natural than a person attending a meeting——

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Tell us in general what you remember the discussions were about, Mr. Hancock?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, let me make the objection to that question, your Honor, as not calling for a conversation, but as calling purely for an expression of opinion from this man as to what may have been in the minds of other persons.

The Court: Overruled.

A. We had this meeting to discuss, and we did discuss, the individuals up and down the State that we would be willing to support on the floor of the convention for positions of either vice presidency or secretary.

Q. By "we"—— [1984]

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I move to strike that answer, your Honor, as not a narration of the conversation, purely an opinion of this witness as to what was contained in the minds of other persons without identifying them by conversation.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): By "we" whom do you mean?

A. I mean we Communists.

Q. What was the result of the meeting?

A. The result of the meeting was that we planned to hold, and later did hold, a progressive caucus, to which delegates, Communist and non-Communist were invited. That caucus was held at the Labor Temple in San Diego.

Q. And did you agree upon a slate of candidates to be presented to the convention?

A. Not an entire slate, but we discussed some of the people who we were willing to support or wanted to submit the names of.

Q. And who were they and for what positions?

A. For the position of secretary of the State Federation of Labor, A. C. Rogers; for the San Diego District of the State Federation, John Lydick.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you spell that, please?

A. L-y-d-i-c-k. I don't remember them all; I think there was eight or ten districts; I remember a Mahaffey from Stockton; Harry Bridges from San Francisco. [1985]

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): For what position?

A. Vice president of the State Federation of Labor.

Q. Any others that you remember?

A. I did remember the San Jose man, but I have forgotten him right now.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt or Mr. Robertson at the Communist Party headquarters here in San Francisco?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. The witness has already said that he never saw Henry Schmidt thereafter, and he never saw Mr. Robertson in his life. I think the prosecutor can't——

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. Paisley: I was trying not to lead him. If I suggested Bridges, he would have said I was trying to lead him.

The Court: It is now well after 4:00, 4:15. Is this an appropriate time to adjourn?

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: We will adjourn court until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. The same admonition, ladies and gentlemen, not to discuss this case in any conversation with any person and not to form or express an opinion hereon until the case is submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Thursday, December 8, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [1986]

Thursday, December 8, 1949, 10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: The United States of America vs. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed, counsel.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Stanley Benjamin Hancock, heretofore sworn.

resumed.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Paisley:

Q. Now, I call your attention to your testimony with reference to the fraction meeting in San Diego. Do I understand from your testimony that Henry Schrimpf was in this fraction meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. That question has been asked and answered and there has been no such testimony. The question is leading and would be cross-examination of his own witness.

The Court: That is a leading question. I thought the question was addressed to him last evening. May I have that record?

Mr. Paisley: I will tell Court and counsel and the jury the purpose. There was some question as to whether the witness meant he was in the fraction meeting or whether he saw him at the labor convention. I was not clear on that. [1987]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, there is no question at all. These matters are brought into the record by question and answer, and counsel cannot develop something over again by saying there is some question in his mind.

Mr. Paisley: Well, you do not object to making it clear to the Court and jury, do you?

The Court: The question last evening when we adjourned was, "Did you ever see Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt or Mr. Robertson at the Communist headquarters here in San Francisco?" Mr. MacInnis interposed an objection, and the Court then decided it was four o'clock and we should stand over.

Mr. Paisley: I was going on to something else.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

The Court: All right. You may ask the question, then.

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

The Court: The next question directed to the witness is whether or not he saw Mr. Schmidt at the fraction meeting or at any other time in San Diego at or about the time of this convention.

Mr. Paisley: He had testified that he saw him in the fraction meeting or at the labor convention.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. The testimony would reflect what he said. He can't ask him what he testified to.

The Court: You may ask the question whether at any time in San Diego at or about the time of this convention he met [1988] or saw Mr. Schmidt.

A. Yes, sir, I did. I saw him at the State labor meeting at the Eagles Hall in San Diego.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, Mr. Hancock, was there any business——

Mr. MacInnis: Now, pardon me, your Honor. In yesterday's testimony elicited by the same prosecutor the witness said that he once saw Henry Schmidt but that he didn't meet him and that he has never seen him since. I think that certainly precludes any further testimony on that point or any change in the meaning on that point.

The Court: I of course cannot anticipate what the witness is going to say. He may proceed and you may cross-examine him on that.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Was there any other business transacted at this fraction meeting, Mr. Hancock, than that you have already related?

A. Yes. In addition to the selection or endorsement of nominees for office in the State Federation of Labor, we discussed a number of resolutions which we were interested in placing before the convention.

Q. And what was the nature of these resolutions?

A. Well, there were several. One dealt with the desire—with our desire of having the Federation endorse a labor party. Another dealt with the convention going on record as [1989] opposing the criminal—California criminal syndicalism law; another had to do with voicing condemnation against vigilante activities in Sonoma County. Another resolution was to condemn the arrest of some men popularly known as—the case was known as the Modesto case. There were many other resolutions. These are the ones I recall.

Q. Were those resolutions that were to be offered on the floor of the labor convention?

A. Yes, and we discussed whether or not some or all of these had already been passed by local unions up and down the coast, and one particular one had not, and we arranged to have it introduced as a result of that meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: May that particular one be given us, your Honor? He speaks now of one of this number of resolutions that had not been discussed. Could we have which one it was?—

The Court: All right.

A. They were all discussed. I say one—it was brought out in our discussion that one had not been prepared, or prepared in a manner in which we desired for presentation at the convention. That was the resolution on the labor party. I might say that actually several resolutions were introduced on the labor party by delegates friendly to us and unfriendly to us, that is, resolutions favoring the labor party, but the precise wording that we desired was not contained in these other resolutions, and so we arranged to have one presented. [1990]

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): Now, I call your attention to your testimony yesterday with reference to your having an office adjoining Harry Bridges' office.

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us just when that was?

A. Just preceding 1938, in November and December of 1937. That is a correction of yesterday's testimony in which I inadvertently said it was 1938. It was 1937.

Q. Mr. Hancock, why did you join the Communist Party and why did you leave it?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I thought the question was not finished. I was waiting.

The Court: May I have the question? I missed it.

(Question read.)

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, the reasons of this witness would be incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, would not cast any light upon the charges in this case. That would call only for his opinion and conclusion upon matters not binding upon the defendants here.

The Court: I allowed the same question addressed to a witness heretofore produced by the prosecution, and I will allow this question and answer given to it upon the same reasons for the same grounds that I heretofore assigned with respect to the other witness.

Mr. Paisley: Yes, your Honor. [1991]

A. In answer to the question, at the time that I joined the Communist Party in 1932, I personally, and my family and my friends, were greatly concerned——

The Court: The other witness, for the record, was John Schomaker.

A. (Continuing): ——over the widespread poverty——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, now what his family was concerned about and what his friends were concerned about would not be matters which could come into the record, and I move to strike those comments. Even under the limited purpose for which your Honor has allowed the giving of the answer.

The Court: The motion is granted.

A. (Continuing): At this time I was greatly concerned with the widespread poverty existing in our community. A number of cases came to my attention while I worked for the San Diego Sun of people in very destitute circumstances. It seemed to me that at that time no one was doing anything about it. About this time my uncle came to me, because I was connected with a newspaper, and he asked me to attend a meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a minute. Now, what this man's uncle, whom we don't know certainly, said to him is not to be part of this record.

The Court: Yes, sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Paisley): You can't testify, Mr. Hancock, as to what persons told you. Now, briefly, just tell the jury, as [1992] briefly as you can, why you joined this organization.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, the question has now been answered. It now calls for a repetitive answer. Cumulative.

Mr. Paisley: All right, we will leave that.

Q. Then tell us why you left the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection, your Honor; that it would be immaterial.

The Court: The same ruling upon the grounds heretofore assigned in the record by the Court, and for that limited purpose, and solely for that limited purpose.

A. I left the Communist Party because slowly but very surely I learned that the party was not interested in human beings as such, but placed the interest of the Soviet Union above everything else. I had greater and greater reluctance in accepting that theory and it finally took me out of the party.

Q. Mr. Hancock, have you seen the Harry

Bridges concerning whom you testified since you have been in the courtroom? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you point him out to the Court and jury if you see him here now?

A. Mr. Bridges is seated at a table at my left, the third one in a row of four men.

Q. Do you see the Henry Schmidt concerning whom you have testified?

A. Mr. Schmidt is at Mr. Bridges' left, seated.

Mr. Paisley: You may cross-examine.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Hancock, you told the Court and jury that you first joined the Communist Party because of your own concern over poverty in your community, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent did that poverty impress itself upon you? Will you tell the jury about that?

A. To a very great extent. While I personally was not poverty-stricken, I was tremendously shaken by the acute hunger that actually existed at the time. I felt impelled to do something about it.

Q. You say that you found that no one else was doing anything about it, apparently, is that right?

A. Well, that wouldn't be entirely correct. There were half-hearted—I considered them half-hearted—attempts, but people were still hungry.

Q. What were those attempts?

A. Why, I refer to a very inadequate protest of city and county relief at that time.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And what did you expect to accomplish at that time when you entered the Communist Party?

A. I expected to be able to assist these people in eating and living. Beyond that, I might say that for many years I don't know whether this is permissible—but my father and mother had [1994] spoken to me about socialism and I accepted or began to accept at that time the idea that socialism was a higher type of society and that it would eradicate this very deplorable condition that existed.

Q. So that your motives in joining the Communist Party, as you tell them to us now, were motives solely directed at helping other people, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by other people you meant the ordinary people of your community, is that true?

A. I didn't understand that question.

Q. I say, by "other people" you had in mind the ordinary people of your own community?

A. I am sorry, I am a little confused. Would you repeat that question, "by 'other people' "? I don't seem to place it in context.

Q. In context? I don't know what you mean by that. I don't have any script that dovetails with anything you may have read in preparation for coming here. And by "other people" I mean the ordinary citizens of your community. Those were the people you wanted to help, isn't that right?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. (By the Court): Explain to counsel what you meant by "context."

A. It is just an expression I sometimes use. When something is [1995] removed from context—I didn't recall exactly how that phrase came into this conversation, and I will say I believe I understand it now, and the answer is "Yes."

Mr. MacInnis: What aims were presented to you as being the good aims of the Communist Party by which you thus help your fellow citizens?

A. Well, it is a large question. Stop me when you wish. The aims of the Communist Party were many-fold. The larger aim was to bring about a state of socialism, the term socialism being interchangeable with Communism. That was to be brought about by educational procedure and at a time some time in the future, when it was possible to be brought about, violently if necessary. Along in this same process of education, we were also interested in, and worked in behalf of people, to improve their immediate circumstances.

Q. Well, will you tell us a little bit more about the aims of the Communist Party so far as it was to aid people in their immediate circumstances, the reasons that motivated you at the time to enter?

A. Well, at that time my principal interest was in the field of unemployed, and we endeavored to represent the unemployed before the county and city relief boards and plead in their behalf for a larger relief allowance. Does that answer the question?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Well, how widespread was this hunger that was thus called to your attention, that you would have to do something to help [1996] the ordinary person to be fed through the agencies of county and city relief and the like?

A. There were many thousands in San Diego without any means of sustenance.

Q. Did you have the feeling that none of the organized political groups were doing anything of substance to help out hunger and unemployment at that time? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And what groups did you have in mind as comprising those who were doing nothing?

A. Well, I can't say they were doing nothing. They were, in my opinion, and not doing enough. Far from enough. It was true at that time that people drew some measure of relief, but it was entirely inadequate and in many cases, due to the technicalities, families didn't get any relief, and consequently were hungry. I have in mind the Communist Chest, for one group. I don't remember the exact organization, but as I recall in those days, relief, such as it existed, came from the city and county only. There wasn't even a state relief set up, or a national set up. Entirely local. So I would say those two groups.

Q. Well, now, were you persuaded to enter the Communist Party by other people or did you, because of your concern over the other members of the community, volunteer yourself into that organization? A. I was asked to join. [1997]

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And I take it you joined willingly?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you joined you had studied the objects of the Communist Party?

A. Why, I don't know that I can say I studied them; I had read publications, I was aware of the objects of the Communist Party, and being aware of them, I was willing to join.

Q. Now, were there any obstacles placed in the way of Communists like yourself in carrying out the ends of the party, particularly in San Diego, at the time when you joined?

A. Why, no one ever said to me, tried to prevent me from doing it, but it was a direct result of my membership in the Communist Party that caused me to leave employment on the San Diego Sun. It was not possible to do the things that I wanted to do and retain employment on that newspaper.

Q. Well, now, for example, when you tried to do something on behalf of the unemployed before the relief agencies of San Diego, did the police or any governmental agency seek to restrain you or prevent you from doing anything of that kind?

A. I must say that my experience covers a range of years. There has been that occurrence in my experience. But if you are talking about 1932, my activity then had to do with going out and talking to people and then, individually—and then going down individually to see officials on relief to see what might be done for them. [1998]

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Now, when you say that your experience covers a wide range of years, I take it you mean the years following 1932? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if you can carry your memory ahead a little bit, 1933, 1934, 1935 and those years, tell us what you meant when you said you did have the experience of being restrained by police and governmental agencies.

A. Well, in 1933 when, without employment, I was in a position to devote full time to this activity, I frequently appeared at meetings of officials having to do with relief. In my presence were great numbers of unemployed people, and I don't believe I can say that the officials were very cooperative. On occasions the police were—what I say?—obstreperous.

Q. You say the officials were obstreperous?

A. No, I say the police were. My definition is that the officials were not at all cooperative, didn't do the things we wanted done. And in some cases we were pushed around by the police.

Q. What did they do to you, Mr. Hancock?

A. Why, I don't think they did anything to me personally, but they were a little roughshod on us as a group as we stood in the halls.

Q. Did they stop your activities in any way?

A. I don't have any particular occasion in mind when they did.

Q. Did they arrest you?

A. I have been arrested, yes. [1999]

Q. About how many times?

A. Well, let's see. I was arrested in February, 1933, for turning, or—do you want that information?—for turning on the city water after it had been turned off, when people who couldn't afford to pay their bills. I was arrested around July, 1933, for representing a group of agricultural workers then on strike. [2000]

A. I was arrested around July, 1933, for representing a group of agricultural workers on strike.

Mr. MacInnis: May I stop you for a moment?

The Witness: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Tell us the circumstances of your arrest for turning on water. Was it water in your own house or water in the homes of other people?

A. Well, sir, I was a member of an organization known as the Unemployed Council, and this council was interested in securing relief for its membership, and we had a rather odd situation that in San Diego the water is owned by the municipality, and according to law, if bills are not paid, water is turned off. We felt that that was not quite the right thing to do, and exhausting all other avenues of correction, we turned it back on ourselves.

Q. You mean you took some mechanical instrument and went to these homes and turned on the water power which had been shut off by the authorities?

A. Yes, sir; I must say not surreptitiously, but quite openly, and the mechanical instrument was a pair of pliers.

Q. Yes, that would be about all the tools you would need to do it. You say you were arrested on that charge? A. Yes, I was.

Q. What was the charge brought against you then? A. Violation—— [2001]

Mr. Paisley: I think we have gone into that enough, your Honor. It is really not proper cross-examination, but I haven't objected to it.

The Court: Overruled.

A. It was a violation of a city ordinance which prohibited people from turning on city water without authority.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): The second arrest of which you were about to speak took place, you say, when you had something to do with agricultural workers? A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what that circumstance was, please.

A. It was in a little community near Escondido—between Escondido and the coast there—and it was strike workers in the tomato fields. I can't be entirely sure of the dates here; I am speaking from recollection, that it was somewhere around July, 1933. Some deputy sheriffs came to our group, a group of pickets who were attempting to coax the workers out of the fields.

Q. Pardon me. For what end or purpose were you trying to coax the workers out of the fields at that time?

A. For the purpose of bringing about a cessation of work until wages could be increased from about 18 cents an hour to 25 cents an hour.

Q. In other words, you and the persons working with you wanted the workers in the tomato fields to stop their work [2002] entirely?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to refuse to go back to work until the particular wage was raised?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what did you do in that endeavor?

A. Why, I had to do with preparing leaflets that had to be translated into the Spanish language, and then I went out with the group to the various fields and these leaflets were distributed; and other people, not myself, actually went into the fields and handed them to the workers. I was arrested for trespassing, as I recall. I think that was the charge.

Q. You were of the opinion at that time that the men in the tomato fields couldn't make living wages, I suppose, on the monies that they were paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you succeed in getting these people to stop their work and hold out for the raise?

A. We succeeded in getting a number to stop, but the conclusion was indecisive. We stopped for a while, I was arrested, and, as I recall it, some fields raised wages and some did not, but the men, after being out for a few days, just sort of straggled back.

Q. Anybody arrested with you at that time?

A. I don't recall anyone else being arrested at that time. [2003]

Q. Was a woman named Dorothy Ray arrested with you at that time?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. No, sir, that was at a later time.

Q. Let us proceed, then, to some of the later events which involved you in similar experiences.

A. In the fall of 1933 at the time, I believe—the first beginnings of the cotton strike or the agricultural strikes in the San Joaquin Valley——

Q. Would you tell us what the circumstances of those strikes were along with the narrative.

A. Never having participated in them, I can best relate my particular connection with them. I will add anything—if I may pursue this line of thought, then I will add anything you may think of—I received a telegram from Pat Chambers of the C&AWIU—Cannery and Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union—the telegram stating that two workers had been killed in Lindsay, I believe—Lindsay, California—and would we——

Q. How had they been killed?

A. Pardon?

Q. How had they been killed?

A. They were shot by—I don't know whether it was by police or vigilantes. They were shot.

Q. Under what circumstances?

A. I don't have the circumstances in mind.

Q. Now, you used a phrase a moment ago which is probably new to the record in this trial, the word "vigilantes." Would you tell the jury what the vigilantes were.

A. Well, as we used the expression, vigilantes were groups of growers or citizens under their influence who banded together to use extra-legal methods to oppose our strikes.

Q. What do you mean by "extra-legal methods," Mr. Hancock?

A. Such methods as en masse breaking up meetings.

Q. You mean these men would break into meetings in which you and persons like yourself were discussing matters with workers and urging them to take certain steps, and that by force they would cause you to disperse? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would there be violence carried out upon you and your fellow workers at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how often did that take place?

A. Well, in my own particular experience, I have in mind one rather flagrant case.

Q. Would you tell us about that?

A. I would just as soon work up to it, if I may. I have a line of thought.

Q. All right; work up to it. Fine!

A. In connection with the death of two striking agricultural workers in the San Joaquin Valley, I received a telegram [2005] asking me in my capacity as organizer of the San Diego section of the Communist Party to organize a mass public meeting in protest, and we were requested to hold the meeting the next day. So, the time being short, we endeavored to work out some means of drawing public attention to it, and I had a sign, which was prepared by folks other than myself, which announced the fact that we were going to hold a meeting in a public park in San Diego. Well, I raised that sign, or attempted to, on a flagpole in San Diego, and was arrested in that process.

Q. Was that in a public square that you raised this sign?

A. Yes, in Balboa Park. There is a flagpole there. I would like to say for the record that I did not raise a flagpole as the newspaper said at that time, but the sign was painted on red cloth. I did not have anything to do with the sign being painted or the material, but it was so referred to in the newspapers. It was a sign advertising a meeting.

Q. Can you remember substantially the language or invocation to the workers that this sign carried?

A. Essentially as follows: "Protest murder of two workers at such-and-such a park tomorrow, 12 noon," or "today 12 noon" perhaps—"today" or "tomorrow."

Q. The language was to indicate that that protest meeting was to be held right there at the park, was it?

A. No, it was to be held at a place about a mile from the [2006] park, a little public square near the post office in San Diego. This park was at a place called Inspiration Point where I raised the sign.

Q. Where you got your inspirations, I suppose, for these things. What happened when you put this sign in the air?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. Well, it was at night, and by some strange means a couple of policemen seemed to be aware of what we were about to do and they arrested me then and there.

Q. What do you mean, they seemed to be aware of what you were about to do?

A. Well, they were there, anyway.

Q. You mean they were waiting for you?

A. No; they drove up, much to our surprise.

Q. And what were you doing when they drove up?

A. I think I had the sign in my hand standing there rather foolishly wondering what to do next.

Q. And what happened to you next?

A. I was taken into custody.

Q. What happened to the meeting that you had called?

A. I spoke at it. I was released on bail at ten o'clock in the morning and I spoke at the meeting.

Q. Can you go on, as you say, carrying on this narrative?

A. Well, let's see. That is all I remember about 1933, but I do remember there were quite a few arrests in there, and possibly I have omitted some, not intentionally, however. But [2007] the most significant affair of this nature occurred in January, 1934, in the Imperial Valley where I was an organizer for the Cannery and Agricultural Workers Industrial Union, as was a young lady by the name of Dorothy Ray. We were both arrested for what we were trying to do.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. What was it you were trying to do there, Mr. Hancock?

A. We were trying to raise the wages of many thousands of agricultural workers in the lettuce season.

Q. What were they making, about, at the time you assembled in order to help them?

A. Somewhere around 20 cents an hour.

Q. What was your objective? What did you think that your efforts could accomplish for them by way of wage scale?

A. As a matter of fact, we never got down to that precise point, because we were so severely harassed that we never concluded a meeting with the growers, but we wanted more money, that is what we wanted.

Q. What do you mean when you say "severely harassed" or "harassed," as you put it?

A. Well, somewhere about eight or ten days after I got there—I think the name is Muldonado; I don't know whether that is the building—there was a big hall, actually an old garage, that held somewhere over a thousand people, and it was used by our daily strike committee—not committee, but strike meeting. It was filled with men, women and children, a soup [2008] kitchen in back. We held these meetings for several days for the purpose of organizing automobile caravan picket lines to all the fields to see that work had ceased. It had in fact completely ceased in the Valley. On one day about ten o'clock in the morning I was at a desk, the meeting was going on, there was a lot of sudden confusion, and I looked out to see the building surrounded by a line of men each with a black band on his arm. They possessed pickaxe handles. The next thing I knew some of them were inside the building and fighting with our people. The pickaxe handles were used freely. I along with several hundred others got out. I got out by window. For the next ten days I was in seclusion, and then I was arrested.

Q. You were hiding?

A. Yes, sir, and I was arrested. I recall that there were three charges. I was tried on one or more of them, convicted and sentenced to six months on a misdemeanor in Imperial County.

Q. You mean you were actually put in jail at that time?

A. I was put in jail at that time. I was formally charged with rout, which is a form of inciting to riot, with vagrancy, and some other charge I can't remember. I was released on bail. Some weeks later the trial was held and I was convicted and I served nearly six months, with some time off for good behavior. [2009]

Q. Now, can you think of any other incidents of the same nature that would show the trend of your work as an organizer in the Communist Party?

A. I can't, sir, at this time. It was a tumultuous period, and I seem to have the feeling that I was arrested one other time, maybe more than that.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

I don't—it isn't in my mind at the moment, if I was.

Q. Now, concerning this incident which you say recalls itself more vividly to you than any of the others, the time when you and your fellow workers were attacked with pickaxe handles were you actually struck yourself at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. You escaped through the window, as you pointed out. How did the less fortunate persons who couldn't get out of the building—what happened to them?

A. I saw a number of them struck down.

Q. You mean struck on the head with the pickaxe handles?

A. I couldn't exactly say where they were struck, but the noise of the percussion or concussion is in my mind today, like the crack of a pistol.

Q. You saw their bodies on the floor, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. After they were thus struck down, as you put it, were they also arrested.

A. I cannot say. Wait a minute. I will say that—I think [2010] that there were about eighty of us that were arrested. I don't know whether they were arrested at that time or a day later or a day before; I don't know.

Q. And at the time of this attack by the men with the black armbands and the pickaxe handles, you were having a peaceful meeting, were you?

A. Yes, we were.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Were you and the other persons with you urging the workers to commit any violence?

A. No, sir, we never urged them to commit violence.

Q. Were you doing anything but discussing with them the matter of whether or not they should hold out for better wages?

A. There were a lot of strike details on who was to be the picket captains and where they were to go, and who was to apportion out gasoline, who was to pass food, and that sort of thing.

Q. You weren't advocating any attack on the employers, of course?

A. No, our action took the form of patrolling the extended fields, lettuce fields, in Imperial County, covering a great distance, perhaps forty miles from one end to the other.

Q. And at the time that this attack took place which you have already described, all of the persons interested in the strike were assembled inside a building, is that true?

A. I can't say for sure, because the building held somewhere [2011] around a thousand people. There might have been an overflow.

Q. Had you or any of the persons who were addressing the workers exhorted them to commit any violence of any kind on the employers or upon property? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, concerning the crowd which you say consisted of several hundred people, about eighty of whom you recall being struck, were they all men or did they consist of men and women as well?

A. I will have to correct that statement. I do not recall eighty being struck. I recall that in the process of the strike some eighty of us were arrested.

Q. I see.

A. I saw men struck down. [2012]

Q. Were there any women in the crowd?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any children? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were among the group attacked by these men wearing black armbands and carrying pickaxe handles, is that right?

A. They were among the group that was attacked. The men that I saw actually—the people that I saw actually struck, were men; but they were among the group that was under attack.

Q. Did you ever find out who the people were who had launched that attack?

A. I can't say that I did. There was something in the papers about them being local citizens.

Q. Were they so-called Vigilantes?

A. I believe the expression was in use at that time.

Q. That expression was applied to people of that character a little later?

A. Later, in later years it was, yes.

Q. Now, you spoke a moment ago about a soup kitchen that you were trying to set up. What happened to that?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. It was demolished.

Q. You mean by force? A. Yes, sir.

Q. These men who attacked the workers also destroyed the soup kitchen? [2013]

A. I didn't see it, but I was told they did.

Q. How extensive was the soup kitchen which had been set up to aid the workers?

A. Well, actually, my personal duties weren't concerned with the soup kitchen, but we fed several thousand people a day.

Q. You did that in order to sustain the workers so that they could hold out in a physical way until such time as the employers would raise their pay?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, when you participated in this engagement involving the attack by the men with the pickaxe handles, you were sincere, were you not, in thinking that you were helping the workers?

A. I have always been sincere in everything I did. I was sincere at that time also.

Q. And would that be true of all of the other events that you have told us about, the time that you were raising the flag with the protest noted upon it? A. Was I sincere about it?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, I was sincere.

Q. In other words, you believed at that time that you were going to do something or try to do something to raise working or living conditions for people, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And when you were arrested for raising the flag or sign in [2014] the square in San Diego, you weren't at that time advocating any violence upon the part of the workers, were you?

A. No, except it must be admitted, I must admit that we were prepared to, and we did at times hold meetings in defiance of instructions from the police.

Q. Yes. You say that the police gave you in the first place no cooperation, and secondly, actually hampered you in all of your activities?

A. Why, certainly not in all of our activities, but there were times when they did.

Q. Would they forbid you to assemble or to have these discussions that you have narrated to us?

A. No, they would ask us to make a proper application for such meetings, and sometimes we felt that that wasn't the right thing for us to do, that our right to exercise freedom of speech should not depend upon permission locally granted.

Q. In other words, the police wanted you to make some formal application asking for permission to hold a meeting in a public square or similar place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you felt that that ruling itself was an infringement of your right to free speech?

A. That's correct.

Q. And so you held such meetings on occasion in defiance of those orders of the police? [2015]

A. Yes.

Q. You never attempted any physical retaliation on the police, though, did you?

A. Are you referring to me personally?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Yes. A. I don't believe so.

Q. And going back to the earlier incident when you tell us that you were interested in seeing that the unemployed had water in their homes, when you took the pliers that you have described on the water, you didn't at that time advocate any violence either, did you?

A. Only the violence of turning on water when we weren't permitted to do that. We did it anyway.

Q. About how many people at that time were without water?

A. I can't answer that, sir. I don't know.

Q. Do you have any estimation?

A. Well, it was enough so that it was an issue. But I don't know whether it was 10 or 110.

Q. Now, how about other people who worked along with you? I mean people like the lady you have mentioned, Dorothy Ray and others who went to these fields or other places and made recommendations to the workers? Were they sincere people?

A. I believe at that time that they were. I believe they were.

Q. And when you entered the Communist Party, would it also be true that you were sincere about believing that the aims of the [2016] Communist Party would help the ordinary person?

A. When I entered the party, I believed that they would, yes.

Q. And whatever study that you have made before going into the party did not reveal to you, at least at that time, the things that you now ascribe to the party and give us as your reasons for getting out?

A. No, the dual party procedure of advocating a long range program on the one hand and a short range program on the other existed at that time, and I was mainly interested in the immediate action. But I subscribed to the long-range action.

Q. And so far as the other people with whom you worked inside the Communist Party at the start, did they sincerely believe that they were helping out in some remedy for a very bad situation, as far as unemployment, poverty and hunger might be concerned?

A. Most of the people I have in my memory, I felt that they were sincere. Some of them I thought were not.

Q. You thought most were sincere although some were not. Now, when you were approached to join the Communist Party, did you have to make some formal application?

A. I signed an application card.

Q. And thereafter you were admitted to membership? A. Yes.

Q. Did you take some other name than your own for your endeavors inside the Communist Party?

A. I do not recall ever using another name but my own. But I might have. Nor do I recall any reason why I should have.

Q. In other words, so far as you remember, you used the name of Stanley Hancock?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. While you were in the Communist Party?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you don't recall any reason that might have existed that would have caused you to do otherwise?

A. Well, it was the general party procedure to have people register under other names. Now, 1932 is a long time ago, and it might be that the first application card had some other name on it. But I am reasonably sure from 1933 on, my name was correctly listed.

Q. In other words, regardless of what may have been the custom in 1932 when you joined the Communist Party, in 1933, '34, '35 and thereafter, you are quite sure that you used your own name?

A. I am reasonably sure. Although there might have been a period in there when for some reason or other, at the time the cards were collected or the renewal card came around, that I would have written another name. But I don't recall it if I did.

Q. Do you have any of the Communist cards in your possession? A. No, sir.

Q. You have destroyed those, I suppose? [2018]

A. Not "those," but "it." Because each year they are taken from you and the last one I had, 1941, I destroyed.

Q. You did away with it in some manner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are quite sure you haven't saved it?

A. No, I am definite; I never saved it.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And you are fairly sure that the name on that card which you possessed in 1941 was Stanley Hancock, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, let's proceed for just a moment to another subject. The meeting that you say you recall attending in a place called the Sumner Apartments at, I believe you said, 12th and B Streets, in San Diego. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Around 4:00 or 5:00 some afternoon, around the start of the A. F. of L. State convention in 1935, is that right? Now, you named, according to your best memory, the people who were present at that meeting, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, of those, let's go over them one by one for just a moment. Mr. Schmidt was there?

A. Yes.

Q. You had not ever seen him before, had you?

A. Don't recall ever seeing him before.

Q. And you are quite sure you hadn't met him before? [2019]

A. I don't recall having met him before.

Q. And you haven't met him since, have you?

A. It is awfully hard to say things definitely; that is a number of years.

Q. Well, to the best of your memory.

A. To the best of my recollection, I have not.

Q. And you had not met Harry Bridges until that time?

A. I cannot recall at this moment that I had.

Q. Now, you mentioned a man named Radin, I think; did you say it was R-a-d-i-n?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. No, Rabin, b as in butter, R-a-b-i-n.

Q. Had you met him before? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you mentioned that there were some members of the SUP present. By the "SUP," I suppose you meant the Sailors Union of the Pacific?

A. I did.

Q. You didn't recall for us the names of those persons, though, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you met those men before?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. So that to compile or go over that list again, you hadn't met, to your best memory, the members of the SUP, two or three of them who were there before the meeting; and you hadn't met [2020] Harry Bridges and you had not met Mr. Schmidt. Now, when you entered the meeting, you came because you had been notified of the calling of the meeting by Mr. Walter Lambert, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you told us that yesterday. Did you come along with Mr. Lambert yourself?

A. My memory isn't clear on how I came. I lived on 13th Street, the meeting was on 12th Street. I was informed at my home, but I can not say definitely I came with Mr. Lambert. I have an impression that I did.

Q. And when the government prosecutor asked you about what security measures were taken at this meeting you replied that Mr. Lambert stood at the door and looked over each person as he came into the room.

A. That was the normal procedure at many meetings, and I have the feeling in my mind, I can almost see him there doing that at that apartment.

Q. And I suppose of that kind of scrutiny would be to see that no person entered who had not been invited to the meeting? A. Yes, it would.

Q. Because you didn't know most of the people, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. You hadn't met them before, although Walter Lambert apparently recognized these people, is that right? [2021] A. That is correct.

Q. And you don't remember any of the actual conversation that was had by the persons present, although you do remember the subjects which were discussed, is that right?

A. I remember a number of things that were said there. I do not remember that a specific person said them.

Q. In other words, you don't remember who said what about any of the subjects you discussed?

A. I will have to repeat my previous statement. I remember a number of things that were said there. All of the people there took part in the conversation. I do not recall which person said what.

Q. You have given us, however, in substance, all that you could remember about the things that were discussed? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, may it please the Court, I now move to strike the answers given by this witness concerning the phrase "We Communists" and containing the further phrase "every person present was a Communist," because it now appears that he didn't meet, before this meeting, Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Bridges or the two or three members of the SUP who attended the meeting. He doesn't ascribe any conversation to them. He says he has given us his whole memory on what took place; nothing apparently was said which would give rise to a foundation for that kind of conclusion. And he says that Mr. Lambert looked these people [2022] over as they came in to see whether or not they were people invited. I think, your Honor, that under your previous rulings, the foundation would not have been established for the giving of that opinion.

The Court: My recollection is, counsel, that the record shows—according to my recollection, that this was a fraction meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: He said that, yes.

The Court: A fraction meeting. And that the fraction meeting was in the nature of an anticipating meeting of the members of the Communist Party looking toward a non-Communist meeting following.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: He said that, your Honor. I remember that well.

The Court: He said that. And under the circumstances, I believe that the motion should be, and accordingly the same is, denied, in the light of the record.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess at this time?

The Court: Yes. Ladies and gentlement, we will take the recess; the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2023]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Hancock, you told us about being an organizer for the Cannery and Agricultural Workers Industrial Union, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell us during what range of years you had that position?

A. As I recall, beginning somewhere around the end of 1933 and the early part of '34, and I might have still had it in the early part of '35, but I don't believe so.

Q. Mr. Hancock, when you went out into the fields in Imperial Valley or any of these agricultural areas to talk to the workers, those workers wouldn't necessarily be Communists, would they?

A. No, they wouldn't.

Q. About what percentage of them would be Communists? Would any be Communists, let's ask?

A. Yes, we carried on recruiting among their ranks. I don't know the percentage. It would be a small percentage.

Q. About how many workers would comprise an area such as the place at Escondido of which you spoke?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. How many workers were on strike?

Q. Yes.

A. Several hundred; maybe 300, 400.

Q. And a very small percentage of those persons would be Communists, would they? [2024]

A. Yes, that would be correct, a small percentage.

Q. In that period of time where a group of agricultural workers wanted to meet and discuss forming a union, those workers, whether they were Communists or not, would have to meet in secret, wouldn't they?

A. No, sir, not in secret to form a union.

Q. What would have happened to the 300 persons if they had gotten together to discuss union affairs or better wages or matters of that kind?

A. We had many meetings. At that particular period we had meetings in Carlsbad, which was about 15 miles from the area previously under discussion. We held open meetings; the suppression wasn't a permanent thing. It came at times with regard to meeting certain specific situations.

Q. When those periods of oppression came, would you have to take precautions when you were meeting with a group of workers?

A. I can't honestly say that in that period we took any precautions on meeting.

Q. Did you ever have to take any precautions to keep the workers from being beaten up by vigilantes and yourselves from being arrested?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. Well; there is another period involved, jumping up to 1935.

Q. All right.

A. Where such precautions were taken. [2025]

Q. Will you tell us about those?

A. I previously described a meeting in what comes to my mind as Muldonado's Hall in Brawley, California, and at that time the meeting was broken up and I escaped from the building. I went into hiding and remained so for about ten days. The papers said—the papers that were brought to me said that I was wanted on a warrant, and I didn't choose to be taken on a warrant, so I remained in hiding.

Q. Where did you hide?

A. A great many places. I changed several times a day. In the working-class section of Brawley.

Q. Would you stay under a roof or in the fields, or someplace where you couldn't be seen during all of that time? A. Mostly in homes.

Q. Some persons assisted you in hiding out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a rumor at that time that the vigilantes were going to lynch you if you could have been found?

A. There were many rumors, but I think you have in mind a little later period.

Q. Tell us about that situation.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. At a later time when I was serving my sentence, during a portion of that sentence I was stationed in what was popularly termed a "chain gang" in an area called Superstitious Mountain some 15 miles out of El Centro. We were a rock-crushing gang, [2026] we broke up big rocks into little ones. One evening a cross was burning on a hill. There were about 15 or 20 of us in prison at the time. We could see and hear the men talking, several score of men on the hill. We, of course, remained awake and alert all evening, and the next day—we had considerable freedom at that road gang camp. The next day I went up and inspected the charred members of the cross and found a package addressed to me at the foot of the cross. I don't remember the wording of it, but it was something to the effect that "Solarsano got his; you will get yours"—a Spanish name, S-o-l-a-r-s-a-n-o or -z-a-n-o. In the package was a hangman's noose, a leather metal-studded knot.

Q. Who was Solarsan?

A. Solarsano. He was one of the men serving in that Superstitious Mountain camp who had been released a few days before this incident and had been beaten up at home.

Q. Beaten up at home, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After his release from the prison camp?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. For what offense had he been serving in the prison camp?

A. I can't say. He was actually arrested before I was, and he just happened to be in that gang. He was considered to be a part of our striking group, but I don't remember what the charge was.

Q. He was a striking worker?

A. To the best of my recollection, he was.

Q. Now, what about this cross that was burning on the mountainside, Superstitious Mountain, I think you said? A. Yes.

Q. Who were the people, the several score of people whom you could see from the distance and hear talking?

A. I don't know who they were.

Q. Were they the Ku Klux Klan?

A. I don't believe so. I don't think there was a Ku Klux Klan at that time.

Q. You mean in California? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever find out who the men were who engaged in that activity and addressed that package to you?

A. No, sir. I really wasn't in a position to pursue the matter.

Q. Well, is this true, Mr. Hancock, on the same subject: That your apprehension about what might happen because of that threat was so great that when you were released from your prison term a motor transport was sent in to take you out of Imperial Valley? Is that true?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. I have been informed that that happened. It actually didn't escort me out.

Q. What did happen? [2028]

A. I was given my release a day or two before I should have been, and I was brought to San Diego to my home by a couple of deputy sheriffs.

Q. In other words, you were released before the date upon which a public record would have shown that you were to have been out of prison?

A. Yes.

Q. So that if there had been some efforts to lynch you or otherwise abuse you, you would have been safely comported away from the area by that time?

A. That is correct.

Q. When you were hiding out for this period of ten days what did you fear would have been done to you if you had been caught?

A. Why, generally it wasn't what I feared. I knew what would be done; I would be put in jail, and I wouldn't be able to assist in the continuation of our activities, our union activities.

Q. Did you fear any violence?

A. Not particularly. I thought it could happen, but I didn't particularly fear it.

Q. After the soup kitchen was smashed up by the vigilantes, as you have described, where were the women and children fed among the strikers?

A. It may have been reorganized at the same place. It just [2029] happened to have been smashed on that day. It was around the 18th of

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

January, 1934. The relief activities did continue. They might have been changed, but if you will bear in mind, please, I had no personal direction from that point on. Everything was conveyed to me, and I just don't know where the soup kitchen was maintained.

Q. It was rather cold in the valley on January 18, wasn't it?

A. It is only cold in the evenings; it is quite mild in the daytime.

Q. Did you ever have anything to do with an organization called the International Labor Defense?

A. Yes, I had a great deal to do with it.

Q. What was the purpose of that organization?

A. The purpose of the International Labor Defense was to represent Communists mainly, people sympathetic to Communists or people that the Communist Party was interested in their affairs with the law.

Q. Were pamphlets and various pieces of literature issued by that group?

A. They were. [2030]

Q. Did you help pass out those leaflets?

A. Why, it is quite possible I did.

Q. Did you help prepare those leaflets in any way?

A. For the International Labor Defense?

Q. Yes.

A. It is entirely possible that I did.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Do you remember the general contents of those leaflets?

A. Are you speaking of the 1934 Imperial Valley strike?

Q. During all of these periods of time, '33, '34, '35.

A. Why, I can tell you the general tenor of any leaflet that would have been issued by the International Labor Defense.

Q. The leaflets complained about the Immigration Department going into the fields and having deported any worker who joined a union, isn't that true? That is, any worker who was a Mexican or not a citizen of the United States?

A: I don't recall that specifically, but it could have happened.

Q. Was that the practice?

A. Well, that wasn't the main emphasis, no.

Q. Well, regardless of what the main emphasis may have been, was that the practice that Mexican workers who listened to organizers like yourself and joined the strike and took part in the union movement found themselves deported?

A. I don't have any particular case in mind, but I do have the impression that there were some cases in that period.

Q. Well, did the Immigration Department work along with the [2031] vigilantes against the workers?

A. I don't ever recall coming in contact with the Immigration Department or representatives of it.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Well, you wouldn't yourself, because you were a citizen, of course; but do you recall that other persons came in contact with that department?

A. No, I really can't.

Q. You don't have any specific instance in mind?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, in the fields, speaking of these large groups of people whose wages you were trying to raise, many numbers of those people were aliens, were they not?

A. The matter—I don't recall it came up, but they would have been. They would have been Mexican aliens.

Q. Do you remember what happened to any of those people?

A. I don't recall that any of them were deported. I remember one fellow escaped from our camp and went back to Mexico, and as far as I know, never came back.

Q. What happened to Solarzano after his beating? Did you ever hear of him since?

A. I don't recall now that I have.

Q. After you were transported back to San Diego, as you describe, and were taken home in this motor transport a day or two before your period of prison was up, what did you do then?

A. When I got back to San Diego? [2032]

Q. Yes.

A. Well, that was in October, 1934. I resumed my activities as section organizer of the San Diego Communist Party.

Q. Well, now, when you were in the square in San Diego, about to raise that red card or sign with the language on it, how many people were there with you? A. Just one.

Q. One companion? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how many police came? A. Two.

Q. Did you have any conversation with them?

A. I must have had. I don't remember.

Q. Did you tell them that you were merely exercising freedom of speech?

A. I don't remember what I said to them.

Q. Did you tell them that the card was merely inviting workers to attend a perfectly peaceful meeting to talk about their troubles?

A. Well, they had the sign. The sign spoke for itself.

Q. Yes. Well, did you tell them that you weren't trying to do anything unlawful?

A. I don't believe so. I don't think we debated the issue there.

Q. You didn't say anything to the police at all?

A. Oh, I am sure that I did talk to them, but I don't remember what I said. But I would not have tried to convince them of anything.

Q. Why is that?

A. Well, I realized that they wouldn't have had any authority to do anything other than take me down there.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Haven't you found our police to be perfectly reasonable people? A. Yes and no.

Q. You realize that whatever you would have said, you would have been arrested anyway, is that right? A. I felt that I would be, yes.

Q. Well, you knew that ordinances under which persons like yourself were arrested for putting up perfectly lawful signs were unlawful and unconstitutional; you knew that, didn't you?

A. Well, the issue in this case was, I was charged with destroying property in connection with that flag. It seems that the rope broke. And they made quite an issue of—I was alleged to have cut the rope. That was the actual case. I didn't, but the rope broke. But I was charged with malicious mischief.

Q. The police charged you with breaking a rope belonging to the county?

A. Yes, that is the way I recall it. The police or the district attorney or somebody did.

Q. Had you actually cut or broken any rope?

A. No, sir, the rope broke; I was obviously interested in getting the sign up, not in breaking any ropes. But the rope broke.

Q. And when you were arrested at that time, you say you were released on bail in time to address the meeting that you had called?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did the meeting come off as was scheduled? A. Yes, it did.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And what was the purpose of that meeting? What did you say to the workers who assembled there?

A. Well, I spoke about the conditions in the San Joaquin Valley, where wages were very low. For the first time in many years, the agricultural workers were attempting to organize, improve their conditions. They were meeting with great resistance on the part of the authorities, local citizens, and two men had just been killed in Lindsay, I believe, Lindsay, California. And we spoke about that, and I think we took, passed a resolution protesting about it. I don't remember who we sent it to.

Q. Do you remember the names of the men who were killed? A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Well, now, at that meeting were all the people invited workers, or were all members of the public invited? A. Everybody was invited.

Q. In other words, you were trying to enlist the sympathy of [2035] any members of the public who could be brought there to listen to the terrible things that were going on in the San Joaquin Valley? A. That's right.

Q. What were the wages in the San Joaquin Valley about which you made your protest at that time?

A. I am not familiar with them now. Cotton pickers worked a per hundred pound basis, and I just don't recall what it was.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Were they getting a living wage?

A. I didn't consider that they were.

Q. How about the other agricultural workers?

A. I considered that all agricultural workers were paid inadequately.

Q. What—in about what range of money were they being paid?

A. Well, the people that I was working with around San Diego were paid as low as 15 cents an hour up to 30, 35 cents an hour. There could have been some paid much higher, but these were groups I was interested in.

Q. Yes. And you were interested in seeing them get at least a living wage, were you?

A. Well, I was actually interested in a great number of things. I was interested in seeing them make a living wage, and I was interested in recruiting the largest possible number for the Communist Party.

Q. You invited all of the workers to organize, did you not? [2036]

A. Workers in a particular field?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, yes.

Q. And you invited them all to join a union, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Independently of whether or not you also wanted them to join the Communist Party, if that could also be possible?

A. Yes. There was no direct connection between the two. A number of the people that we selected were invited to join the party also.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And you would have been glad if you could have gotten the majority of the workers to join the union, whether they joined the Communist Party or not? A. Yes.

Q. What was the fate of that union in those years? What happened to all of your efforts to organize the agricultural workers?

A. It is difficult to answer that. We took some credit for improving conditions to some extent, but it wasn't decisive. I am speaking now of my particular field of activity in the San Joaquin Valley. Wages were raised somewhat. The union generally dissipated toward the end.

Q. You mean it died out?

A. Yes, it died out, as I recall it. As I recall.

Q. Did the vigilantes overcome the organization work in the union? [2037]

A. Why, there was vigilante activity tied to specific periods or meetings or strikes. But that wasn't the reason it died out.

Q. Will you tell us what you mean when you say that there was vigilante activity tied up with specific periods of strikes?

A. Well, I can best tell you about Imperial Valley where people close to or under the influence of the growers assembled in mass to attack our union meeting.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. When you say "attack" do you mean that they had weapons of some kind?

A. Pickaxe handles.

Q. Ever any other weapons?

A. Why, I saw lots of deputy sheriffs with weapons, but I don't recall that I ever saw these citizens, these arm-banded citizens with anything other than I have mentioned.

Q. Did the deputy sheriffs go along with the vigilantes?

A. It was a mixed group of both.

Q. And they would attack the workers at these meetings that you have described?

A. The people I saw doing the actual attacking were in civilian clothes, with black arm bands. I didn't see any deputy sheriffs swinging any clubs.

Q. Were their attacks successful?

A. Will you define that, please, successful in what way?

Q. From their point of view. Did they break up the meetings?

A. That particular meeting was broken up. We held meetings or [2038] meetings were held at later times. But I wasn't present in that same hall.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, some of the jurors are having difficulty hearing, is that correct? Would Your Honor ask the juror what he desires by way of sound, whether it is myself or the witness?

The Court: I was not conscious of it, Mr. MacInnis, of any juror being unable to hear.

Alternate Juror Wolfsohn: If Your Honor please, there seems to be a blank spot here and we find it difficult to hear just at this corner.

The Court: All right, sir. Did you miss any particular part?

Alternate Juror Wolfsohn: A little louder, if you please.

The Court: Did you miss any particular part of the testimony?

Alternate Juror Wolfsohn: Oh, I heard this, yes.

The Court: May I ask you to keep your voice up a little bit? Thank you very much.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask, can the juror hear me all right now?

Alternate Juror Wolfsohn: Fine.

Mr. MacInnis: I will speak a little louder if that will be all right.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, Mr. Hancock, when you say that the [2039] union was dissipated in those years and died out, what actually happened was the leaders of the union were arrested for criminal syndicalism, isn't that right?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And what was criminal syndicalism?

A. Well, as I recall, it is a California act which declares something to the effect that it is illegal to advocate force and violence, that is, it defines that as criminal syndicalism.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. How many members or leaders of the union were arrested for criminal syndicalism, to your best memory?

A. Oh, I remember Pat Chambers and Carolyn Decker were.

Q. Anyone else?

A. You see, the party membership in that period so overlapped into the union membership, now, I think there were about 10 in that Sacramento trial for criminal syndicalism, and they might have all held cards in the C. & A. W. I. U., but Pat Chambers and Carolyn Decker were the leaders of it.

Q. Was it after that that the union was dissipated?

A. I wouldn't say so. I think that was along in that period. No doubt that had something to do with it.

Q. And after that arrest for criminal syndicalism, what happened to the leaders who were thus arrested?

A. They were sentenced to jail for a number of years. I don't remember how many years.

Q. And thus went the union? [2040]

A. Well, a study of that period will show that the union had—it had its peak in '34 and perhaps the beginning of '35. But while that no doubt has an effect, it wasn't an absolute cause and effect process because the union had begun to break up by then.

Q. Well, now, coming back again to this meeting in the apartment around the time of the A. F. of L. state convention in 1935, we had gone over some of the persons assembled in that room at the invitation of Walter Lambert, and you have testified as to which ones you had ever met before. Had you ever met the man named Johnstone before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had. The members of the Sailors Union of the Pacific, whom you say you don't remember, were also men you had never met before?

A. I don't recall having met them before.

Q. Did you ever meet those men since?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Now, you say that your best memory is that there were eight or ten or twelve persons present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of those eight or ten or twelve there were at least seven whom you had never met before?

A. Oh, I thought perhaps there were three or four—oh, you mean that I had never met before?

Q. That's right.

A. To the best of my recollection, I had met Walter Lambert, I had met Jack Johnstone, I had met John Schomaker, I may have met some of the other ones. But it is not in my memory.

Q. If you had met them, it was not such a meeting that impressed itself on your memory at all?

A. Well, I met a great number of people in those days, in constant meeting, and it is very hard to say. It is my impression, and to the best of my recollection, I had not.

Q. Well, now, in speaking of the definition that you applied to a fraction meeting, was this also true, that a fraction meeting was always a meeting of trade unionists?

A. Well, actually the term "fraction" was applied to any organization, any organization. We would have a fraction meeting to go to a Civil Liberties Union meeting.

Q. Now, to your knowledge, was it ever possible that a non-Communist Party member could be invited to a fraction meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. It couldn't, in your knowledge, be possible?

A. You ask if in my knowledge?

Q. Yes.

A. I never recall any such thing happening.

Q. Now, you say that among the matters discussed for presentation at a later meeting, a caucus of Communists and non-Communists were a slate of candidates to run for office in the [2042] A. F. of L. and certain policies which your group wanted followed, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Now, among the candidates for office in the A. F. of L., whom you say the group wanted to sponsor, were A. C. Rogers, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And John Lydick? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a man named Mahaffey from Stockton?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Had you met Mr. Mahaffey before?

A. No, it is just a name that comes to my mind as having been discussed.

Q. Had you met John Lydick before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had you met A. C. Rogers before?

A. Yes, I had.

Q. So you had met two of those three men before? A. Uh-hm (affirmative).

Q. Now, this morning at the instance of the prosecutor you told us about the various matters upon which it was expected that resolutions would be made on the floor of the convention, is that true?

A Yes. [2043]

Q. And if I am correct, one of those resolutions was the Labor Party itself? A. Yes, it was.

Q. And what would have been the aim of that resolution, can you tell us?

A. The aim of that resolution was to present an argument for the State Federation of Labor sponsoring a Labor Party, a California Labor Party.

Q. And non-Communist as well as Communists would be invited to join that organization, isn't that true? A. The Labor Party?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, indeed.

Q. And the second purpose that you say was to be marked by a resolution to be presented on the floor of the A. F. of L. convention was a protest or a resolution asking for a repeal of the Criminal Syndicalism Act? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Now, that act, as you have described already, was an instrument which was used to destroy the leaders of the labor union, isn't that right?

A. Well, that, that act was used to arrest and incarcerate members of the Communist Party, to the best of my ability, to the best of my knowledge, rather. [2044]

Q. Well, when members of the Communist Party were arrested under the Criminal Syndicalism Act, it was because of their activities during strikes and in the labor movement itself, isn't that true?

A. I don't believe that I am qualified to say why it was, or because these Communists were engaged in trade union activities, strikes, or in Communist Party activities. They were engaged in a great number of activities, and they were arrested and convicted for criminal syndicalism. I don't really think that the charge was based on labor union meetings, but it might have been.

Q. Well, was the Criminal Syndicalism Act a hindrance to the labor movement at that time?

A. Well, it was a hindrance to our labor movement, and a great number of American Federation of Labor unions were opposed to it for fear that it would be applied against them.

Q. In other words, a great number of union members who were not Communists at all joined in a protest against the Criminal Syndicalism Act?

A. Yes, they did.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. So that that was a purpose that was by no means exclusively communistic in its origin?

A. I would say it was exclusively communistic in its origin, but it drew a great outside support as it went along.

Q. In other words, the conservative labor union members [2045] realized that some day the same Act could be used as an instrument of oppression against themselves?

A. I don't think the conservatives did. The more or less liberals in the trade union movement did, and the conservatives didn't seem to care one way or the other.

Q. By "liberals" you mean progressive persons in the labor movement who were not members of the Communist Party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the other resolution which was to be offered upon the floor of the convention was one condemning the vigilante movement?

A. Yes, it was condemning a specific vigilante movement in Sonoma or Sonoma County. I don't recall the details, but it was quite an issue at the time.

Q. In Sonoma County, the vigilantes had tarred and feathered a group of workers at that time, had they not?

A. I do have some memory of that, yes.

Q. And when you say that the resolution was to be directed specifically at specific vigilante activities, you mentioned the Santa Rosa incident as being in point, is that it?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. Yes. I cannot say at this point that that was the specific activity, but I do have in my memory that some people were tarred and feathered, and it is possible that that is the same situation.

Q. What do you remember about the tar-and-feathering incident [2046] in Santa Rosa?

A. Well, Santa Rosa is a long way from San Diego. The main thing I remember is that we discussed it in this meeting, the desirability of having a resolution protesting about it. Now, I think I remember further that we had arranged to have resolutions protesting against it being endorsed in various trade unions around San Diego. It was a matter that we made into a public issue.

Q. And the activities of vigilantes to follow the same thought were exercised against workers who were not members of the Communist Party, just as well as they were exercised against the Communist Party members, isn't that true?

A. Well, that certainly is true of Imperial Valley, 1934.

Q. It is true of all the vigilante activities that you have heard about, isn't it?

A. I don't believe I can say that it is, no.

Q. Well, it is true of all of those that you discussed with us today, isn't it?

A. My recollection is that the Sonoma people were Communist Party members.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Who were they?

A. I don't recall their names.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, we will take the recess. Mr. Reporter, I made reference this morning to a ruling in the transcript; [2047] that rule may be found at page 1555, where I referred to the prior testimony in connection with the matter.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Page 1555, and I think on some other pages. But particularly 1555.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the noon recess. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, not to converse with any person on any subject of the trial, not to form or express an opinion thereon until the case is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

Afternoon Session, 2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: The United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Witness on the stand is Stanley Benjamin Hancock, heretofore sworn.

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Now, Mr. Hancock, over the years while you were an organizer, either in San Diego County or elsewhere, for the Communist Party, did you have meetings from time to time with various prominent citizens who were not Communist Party members?

A. You mean did I personally meet with prominent citizens who were not?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, I spoke at meetings to which people from all walks of life came.

Q. Such as what meetings? Could you describe those for us?

A. I have in mind meetings in election campaigns, for one thing.

Q. And would you meet with other people in connection with obtaining the sponsorship of certain prominent persons for ends that you wanted to obtain? [2049]

A. I can't think of any particular instance, but that would be a reasonable summary of our actions at that time.

Q. For instance, in 1937 did you make some arrangement for Senator Sheridan Downey to speak at a certain auditorium?

A. No, sir, not that I recall.

Q. You can't remember any activity of your own?

A. I never met the Senator in question.

Q. Did you arrange for a meeting at all in which he participated, regardless of whether or not you met him at the time?

A. I haven't any recollection of arranging any such meeting.

Q. We were speaking at the noon recess about the Criminal Syndicalism Act, whose repeal, or the protest for it, was a subject in which you were interested at the time you say you first met Harry Bridges. A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was one of the matters that your group wanted taken up upon the floor of the American Federation of Labor convention?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Now, you were telling us about the labor leaders who had been arrested for violation of the Criminal Syndicalism Act. Do you remember that?

A. I talked about members of the Communist Party who had been arrested for violation of that Act.

Q. Do you remember what happened to those people? They went [2050] to prison, didn't they?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. And after they were in prison for three years the convictions were reversed by our Supreme Court; do you remember that?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Were any of the vigilante groups arrested for violation of the Criminal Syndicalism Act?

A. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. You have never heard of any, I suppose, if there were such incidents? A. No.

Q. And yet you tell us that the Criminal Syndicalism Act was directed at the use of violence in labor disputes.

A. I believe it was directed at the advocacy of violence. My recollection is that these people were specifically charged with having said things of an inflammatory nature. I may be wrong on that.

Q. I see. But you can't recall any incidents of any member or group of vigilantes, so-called, being arrested for violation of the Criminal Syndicalism Act? A. No, sir.

Q. In the matters that you have spoken about concerning attacks by vigilantes upon the workers and your own organization work in the Imperial Valley, most of that happened after the [2051] fall of 1933, didn't it?

A. I believe that is right.

Q. And immediately before you came into the Imperial Valley as a representative of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers Industrial Union, I think you called it, there had been some effort by the Mexican consul to establish a Mexican labor union, is that true? A. Yes, there had.

Q. Because most of the field and agricultural workers were Mexican nationals, weren't they?

A. No, sir, they were close to half, but——

Q. Then you would say, I suppose, that many of them were? A. Many were.

Q. Do you remember the history of the efforts on the part of the Mexican consul to get better wages for the Mexican workers?

A. Pretty well. His name was Joaquin Terrazas.

Q. Yes.

A. He set up—attempted to set up an organization that was limited entirely to Mexican nationals, and it was, we felt, an attempt to persuade these people against joining our organization. Yes, he campaigned quite vigorously in Imperial Valley on that issue.

Q. He was trying to get the workers to ask for 22½ cents an hour in the lettuce fields, wasn't he?

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. Your Honor, of course the [2052] Court in its discretion can allow this roaming all over the place, but it seems to me it is obvious now we are down to certain details that it has no relevancy.

The Court: I am inclined to agree with counsel. I notice that you have not entered an objection to the end that counsel have complete latitude in his cross-examination, but I do think we are going a little afield, counsel, with respect to the ramifications that this matter of the Mexican consul may take.

Mr. MacInnis: That may well be, your Honor.

The Court: Great latitude ought to be allowed in the examination.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: I am not foreclosing you, but at the same time I suggest that it is quite apparent to the Court that we are going far afield.

Mr. MacInnis: I won't transgress your Honor's ruling. May I ask one further question on the Mexican consul's efforts, then I will go to another subject.

Q. At the time of the Mexican consul's efforts, the workers in the fields were getting 15 cents an hour, is that about correct?

A. There were workers in the fields——

Mr. Paisley: Just a moment. That is just the point I make. I don't think we are concerned with whether they [2053] were——

The Court: Counsel said he had one question, then he would depart from the subject.

A. There were workers in the fields that received that little, but it is not true that they all received that figure. They probably ranged from 15 cents up to 25 or 28 cents, depending upon the needs of the particular growers and the difficulty in obtaining men to work. I had the figure in mind of 17 cents, or 17½, something like that. [2053-A]

Q. So that a worker in the fields, if he had worked ten hours a day, could get between one and a half dollars and possibly as high as two and a half a day?

Mr. Paisley: Now, that is just pure mathematics, Your Honor. I think the jury can add and subtract.

Mr. MacInnis: I am glad that Mr. Paisley can. Now, I will proceed, as Your Honor suggested, to another subject.

Q. Concerning the discussion in which you participated, Mr. Hancock, about the need for a resolution on the floor of the American Federation of Labor convention protesting about vigilante movements, did you tell us that after this first meeting, in which maybe eight to twelve people participated, that there were a caucus with a larger group of people present? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that caucus I think you said that members of the Communist Party and various progressive leaders of the labor movement, who might or might not be Communist Party members attended?

A. Yes, they did. It was the California State Federation of Labor, not the American Federation of Labor, convention.

Q. Yes. You are quite correct in that. And in that caucus did you discuss, that is, among all the members present, the resolutions which had been urged before at the earlier meeting?

A. I did not attend the caucus.

Q. I see. You attended only the earlier meeting? [2054] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in connection with the resolution to protest vigilante activities, concerning your own experiences in Imperial Valley, some of which you have told us, let me ask you this: Did you know a man named Grover Johnson? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was he?

A. He was an attorney for the International Labor Defense out of Los Angeles.

Q. And did anything happen to him in connection with the Imperial Valley matter?

A. Yes, it did. He was attacked on the courthouse steps in El Centro, California.

Q. What was done then?

A. Well, he was beaten, his wife apparently attempted to remove a pistol from her purse to protect him, and she was arrested and sentenced subsequently.

Q. And where was he taken after he was beaten, do you remember?

A. I am sorry, I do not.

Q. Was he taken out into the desert?

A. No, sir. That is someone else.

Q. Who was that? A. Mr. A. L. Wirin.

Mr. Paisley: Well, I think he has explored that enough, Your Honor, to show that it has no materiality to the issues in [2055] this case.

The Court: What is the purpose, counsel?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, the purpose, Your Honor, is this: Apparently under the implied claim that these resolutions were Communist Party matters, which were desirable to this man and his group at the time of the meeting which he has told us, we have the names of those resolutions. Now, I think we are entitled to show along the line of the same testimony what this vigilante movement really meant at that time and why it was strongly desirable that the entire convention of all laboring people at that time joined in the resolution of protest; and it is entirely based upon the direct testimony of this witness.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

The Court: Perhaps, for purpose of the record, Mr. Paisley may concede that. I do not know. It may be entirely immaterial in the issue, but I will permit you to proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

Q. Do you have in mind the last question?

A. No. Might I have it repeated?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the last question, please?

(Record read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was he an attorney also?

A. Attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union.

Q. And was he there to investigate what was going on or was he there to represent people who had been arrested, do you know? [2036]

A. As I recall, he was there to reestablish Civil Liberties in Imperial Valley. He wanted to test the possibility of holding an open meeting without interference.

Q. And what happened to Mr. Wirin?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. I wasn't there, I can only testify from hearsay.

Q. What was that?

Mr. Paisley: Well, we don't want hearsay. We have let a lot of it in without objecting.

Mr. MacInnis: I can't think of anybody who has invited more hearsay testimony than our prosecutor in this case.

Mr. Paisley: Well, why didn't you object? I don't recall any hearsay that I asked for.

The Court: He may have invited a great deal, but I think your invitations have been accepted more readily.

Mr. MacInnis: Possibly so, Your Honor, possibly.

The Court: However, I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, Mr. Hancock, did you take any part in the investigation later made before the Congress of the United States, before the Lafollette Committee with reference to the Imperial Valley outbreak of violence?

A. I remember a General Somebody—I don't think I was contacted by that committee. It was the general who was formerly chief of police of Washington, D. C., who was out there making an investigation. Someone from that committee may have contacted me.

Q. And didn't you get some information, to the best of your [2057] memory, on what had taken place in El Centro, Brawley, the Imperial Valley places?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. That is quite possible. I would have given the information I have given here.

Q. Well, I wonder this, Mr. Hancock, in fairness to yourself: Would your memory be refreshed if you were shown the report of the Congress of the United States to these matters?

A. That was General Glassford, by the way, Pelham D. Glassford.

Q. Yes. I think that name is contained in the report. That is the man to whom you spoke?

A. No, I don't remember speaking to him. I think there might have been an investigator of his.

Q. I see.

A. But I don't even remember that clearly.

Q. Do you think it would refresh your memory if you saw the report itself?

A. I certainly do.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, I will ask in view of that indication, Your Honor, that the official record of the hearings had before Senator Lafollette of the Congress of the United States, between pages 20140 and 20152, eleven pages in length, be shown this gentleman so that he may read them and thus refresh his memory.

Mr. Paisley: Now, just a moment, Your Honor. May we see it?

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, yes, you may see it if you like. I [2058] assume the Government probably has copies of the official government document, Your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: What is it on this page you want to show the witness? We have got two pages printed here. I would like to know. You want him to read the whole two pages?

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, the record shows the numbers of the pages which I suggested he might read.

Mr. Paisley: I don't see, Your Honor, where this witness has been testifying on either one of these pages or that anything of which he might be author appears on these pages. So I am unable to see how he could refresh his recollection.

Mr. MacInnis: I think he is the best judge of that, Your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: And certainly he is not trying to lay the foundation of impeachment for the witness by prior contradictory statements.

Mr. MacInnis: Not at all.

Mr. Paisley: Because his testimony doesn't appear there.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he says his memory might well be refreshed, and that is the basis of the offer.

The Court: He may have it.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

The Court: Eleven pages?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor.

The Court: I think there were eleven pages you refer to? [2059]

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, Your Honor.

(Volume handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

The Witness (Examining): Your Honor, am I to read these entire eleven pages?

Mr. MacInnis: Whatever you feel may refresh your memory.

Mr. Paisley: About what, Your Honor? About what? Concerning what does he wish to refresh his recollection? They ought to be that fair to the witness and the Court and the jury, too. We don't want to sit here while the witness reads eleven pages unless it is necessary to his cross-examination.

The Court: Could this be done at the recess period?

Mr. MacInnis: It could, Your Honor. Whatever you feel is more convenient.

The Court: If you have eleven pages that you would like to have him read—the print is rather fine, and I assume it would take certainly ten or fifteen minutes for him to digest it or to refresh his recollection.

The Witness: May I ask, sir, are you wishing to find out, did I write this, did I testify on it? I don't know what the question is.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it has already been pointed out that he did not write the reports, since it is a report of the Lafollette Committee of the Congress of the United States. I think we all understand that, including Mr. Hancock. And we understand that he says he didn't testify before the committee, but that he may well have furnished some information which got to the committee.

The Witness: I would be very happy to look it over. I would like a little more time than I probably will have here.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. Well, we will adopt His Honor's suggestion, then.

The Court: You may reserve that until the recess period. You may hand it down.

The Witness: May I make a suggestion? In glancing down here, I see the name of Azteca Hall, the owner is Maldonado.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Yes. Were gas bombs used by the police at that time in breaking up the assemblage of workers in Azteca Hall?

A. Tear gas, yes.

Q. Tear gas bombs were thrown by the police, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. When you and the other men who were the leaders, the organizers at least of the workers, had to hide after that breaking in by the vigilantes, about how many officers were said to be engaged in the hunt for you and the others?

Mr. Paisley: Well, Your Honor, just a moment. That is about fourth class hearsay and I am unable to see its relevancy to the issue.

The Court: Sustained. [2061]

Mr. MacInnis: Do you remember that about 80 state officers were assigned to the pursuit of yourself and the other leaders at that time?

Mr. Paisley: I think the Court ruled upon that, Mr. MacInnis.

The Court: Well, let's assume there were 80 officers.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. MacInnis: All right, Your Honor.

The Court: Let's assume it. I don't know, maybe there were 90.

Q. How many were there, Mr. Hancock?

A. I would only have to say a considerable number.

Q. It seemed quite a few to you, at least?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Hancock, you told us a little earlier this morning about the incident in which you were attempting to attract attention in the public square at San Diego by raising a sign on which you had printed some lettering in red asking people to attend a protest meeting? A. Correction——.

Mr. Paisley: It seems to me we have exhausted that subject. We have been back to it about four times.

The Court: Yes, the rope broke and the flag fell, I recall. It wasn't on red background, it was on some other background.

The Witness: There was no flag. [2062]

The Court: I recall it very vividly; it is clear.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sure Your Honor does.

The Court: It is very clear.

The Witness: There was no flag, there was a rope. The rope broke. I did not make the sign, somebody painted a sign in white letters on red cloth.

The Court: That's right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, you said that the papers, however, printed that you were attempting to raise a red flag, is that right?

A. Yes, I believe they did. They called the "Red Flag case," or something.

The Court: Counsel, this is repetitious.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, Your Honor. It merely procedes this question:

Q. Did the papers at that time give a true account of your activities in Imperial Valley or in San Diego?

The Court: Are we testing the authenticity now of the reporters on that particular occasion?

Mr. MacInnis: No, Your Honor, merely to bring out some of the obstacles.

The Court: Counsel, I am fearful again, as I said yesterday, that sometimes, occasionally, and I think all too often, I become very indulgent with you, Mr. MacInnis, on your cross-examination. And now we are repeating matters, I know that [2063] you know, which should not be repeated. You have covered this ground before. This is going to be a long trial, I am not going to foreclose you from any matter that may be material, but I say again, let us go on into the narrative testimony of the cross-examination. [2063-A]

Mr. MacInnis: That is fair enough, your Honor. I will try to adopt your suggestion.

Q. In the meeting that you say you attended in the Sumner Apartments when you were discussing the vigilante protest, was the matter of attorney A. L. Wirin and his fate discussed?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. Not that I recall. We were discussing the Sonoma affair.

Q. Now, the fourth resolution that you told us this morning in your direct testimony was discussed as a matter that you wanted particularly brought to the floor at the convention was the Modesto case, so called, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that case?

A. There were a group of nine or ten or twelve seamen, either sailors or enginemen, who were arrested in Modesto allegedly in possession of dynamite. That was the case.

Q. What happened to them?

A. I believe there was a tanker strike going on then, some kind of strike activity.

Q. Was that a Standard Oil tanker strike?

A. I know the name Standard Oil is associated with it. There was a lot of talk about Standard Oil.

Q. What was that talk?

A. I mean the Association.

Mr. Paisley: That would be hearsay and immaterial. It doesn't seem to me we are interested in the details. [2064]

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, if he had discussion in which he participated, we would be entitled to inquire into the bases of the discussion, the facts of it. That is entirely what I am trying to do now.

Mr. Paisley: Let him ask what was discussed, not about what the facts were, about the details, of which the witness obviously doesn't know, because he wasn't there. If he wants to ask what was discussed, I have no objection to it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Were you generally familiar with the details of the Modesto affair?

A. Generally familiar.

Q. And what discussion was had about the part that the union should take by way of resolution in the Modesto case? A. Where?

Mr. Paisley: The union? This is a fraction meeting of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: I am talking about the resolution that this man says he and his group wanted to be passed or offered on the floor of the convention.

Q. What discussion did you have?

Mr. Paisley: Where?

The Court: This is the San Diego meeting, fraction meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: The meeting that he has called a fraction [2065] meeting.

The Court: Well, we referred to it as a fraction meeting. It is in the record as a fraction meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: It is in the record he says it is a fraction meeting.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis asked you what, if any, discussion you had concerning this particular resolution at that meeting.

The Witness: I was only trying to determine whether he was speaking of that meeting or some previous or later meeting. At that meeting the only mention made of the Modesto resolution was to check to be sure some union affiliated with the State Federation and represented in the convention would introduce a resolution on the Modesto case. There was no discussion of the case's merits—the merits of the Modesto case.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What was the resolution to contain?

A. A protest against the arrest of these men in the Modesto case.

Q. Was the protest to make the claim that the arrest was unfair or—— A. Yes.

Q. Pardon me?

A. I believe it was called a frame-up.

Q. By the way, what happened to these men?

A. I am sorry, I don't know.

Q. Do you remember that the State Legislature had an investigation——

Mr. Paisley: Well, now, your Honor, what subsequently happened to them, of course, could not have been discussed at the meeting.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Paisley: Before it happened.

Mr. MacInnis: I think the prosecutor, by that objection, betrays the fact that he has not looked into the history of this proceeding, because the State Legislature's investigation came before this convention of the California State Federation of Labor. The investigation had already been made, and at the time that you discussed the passing of this resolution, the State Legislature had already made a finding that the arrests were frame-ups; is that not true?

Mr. Paisley: Well, I wouldn't think it would make any difference whether they had or not, if the merits of the controversy, as the witness says, were not discussed at the meeting. That is why I object.

The Court: The witness has no independent knowledge of the investigation. Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You were a participant, and, from what you tell us, a very active participant, in these discussions, were you not? [2067]

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And when it was proposed that a resolution should be taken to the floor of the convention protesting or condemning the arrest of the defendants in the Modesto case, what did you understand that to mean?

A. In that meeting we were only interested in determining whether or not provisions had already been made to introduce that resolution at the State Federation meeting, or whether it was necessary for us to have such a resolution drawn.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read that answer back to me?

(Answer read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What did you find out at the meeting as to whether provisions had already been made?

A. My recollection is that a resolution had already been prepared; that it was reported there that there is one all ready to be introduced.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Do you remember who was to introduce that resolution? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember what the provisions were that had been made?

A. The provisions, in the sense that I used the word, simply meant that someone, some union, had already arranged to introduce such a resolution. That might or might not have been inspired by our party, but we just knew that one would be introduced. [2068]

Q. Did you discuss, or was there discussed at that meeting, the general contents of that resolution? A. No.

Q. In other words, you discussed it, but its contents were not disclosed nor were the merits of the matter disclosed?

A. No. We just talked about a resolution on the Modesto case.

Q. Well, did you understand what the discussion was about? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Well, just tell us, if you will in your own words, what you understood the protest to be about in the matter of the Modesto case.

A. A protest against—I don't know whether—they might have been sentenced by then, because I was concerned with the Modesto case and a lot of other cases over the entire period of time; but it was either a protest against arrest or a protest against their conviction, but it was a protest against the fact that they had been arrested or convicted in this Modesto case.

Q. Was anything said about the Standard Oil Company at that time?

A. The name is in my mind as being associated with the case. I think there was talk about the Standard Oil Company having to do with the prosecution.

Q. What was that talk? Can you remember that for us? [2069]

A. I am not talking about talk in that meeting. I am talking about the general discussions we had in that period.

Q. Well, on that matter, would it refresh your memory at all if you were shown the official copy of our State Legislature's finding in the matter?

A. I don't think so. I never had anything to do with that; that was a long ways from San Diego.

Q. What was the date of this meeting?

A. Which meeting?

Q. The meeting, the only meeting that you have talked about, Mr. Hancock—the meeting at the Sumner Apartments, the only thing that you have talked about.

A. Well, I think I testified that it was in the latter part of September.

Q. Of 1935?

A. Of 1935. And I know that the California State Federation of Labor convention was from September 16 to 20, and I know the meeting was on the day the convention began, which would have made it on the 16th.

Q. Did you know at the time that this matter of the resolution about the Modesto case was discussed, that back in January of 1935 the Legislature had made its findings?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, your Honor. It doesn't make any difference what he knew.

The Court: Sustained. [2070]

Mr. Paisley: What was discussed is what the Court has permitted him to ask about.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard briefly on that, your Honor? These matters were elicited from the witness under the implication that the Communist Party was interested in certain resolutions. That matter cannot be foreclosed by his saying the title of the resolution and having the witness say that he knows nothing about ~~the~~ contents. If they discussed this resolution and if he understood what they were talking about, we should be entitled to inquire into what he understood was meant.

The Court: I think, as it has been indicated, that the witness might give the full purport of the conversations in which Mr. Bridges and others participated in this fraction meeting, and state the reasons underlying the resolutions all and singular, the motivation behind the meeting, looking toward the aftermath, to wit, the presentation before the non-Communist group. You might go into that narrative, but to take this witness through the Congressional Record and legislative matters concerning which he has no independent recollection, for the purpose of indirectly presenting the matter to the Court and jury, is not a proceeding that I think may obtain, and to which I will sustain objections interposed along those general lines. We have gone now on a rather grand circle, and I think we have just about completed the course. [2071]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Hancock, following his Honor's suggestion, tell us everything that you now recall as being said at the meeting where you were present with Harry Bridges concerning the Modesto offense.

Mr. Paisley: I object to any repetition, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Paisley: He has told us.

The Court: Overruled.

A. In this meeting I was already familiar with the issues involved in the resolutions I have already mentioned, and I do not recall any discussion at all in that meeting of the merits or demerits of any particular resolution. We talked about two things in that meeting, two things we were interested in having come before the California State Federation of Labor convention. One had to do with the matter of candidates for vice presidency. Some—there were I believe twelve—eight to twelve vice presidents to be elected, and a president and secretary. We were not interested, or felt that we were in no position to oppose the president, but we talked about opposing—putting up an opposition candidate for secretary. In this meeting, this meeting particularly was concerned with the matter of opposing the secretary, because up to that time the selection had not been made. As a matter of fact, the selection had already been made in a number of districts for the position of vice presidency, and [2072] this was just a recap to make sure that we had every—a nominee lined up for the posts for which we wished him to run.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Pardon me. You say that most of these choices had already been made and that the meeting was just a recap, as you put it?

A. I say that the major emphasis in this meeting was on the matter of who should run for the position of secretary of the State Federation of Labor, and while we talked about who should run for vice president of the various districts, some of the—some of these had been apparently agreed upon previously, and it was just simply reported. But I do recall our discussing who we wanted to submit from San Diego—I recall that specifically—for the position of vice president.

Q. Mr. Hancock, don't you recall specifically that there were discussed and that you talked about the resolutions which you already gave us at the start of this morning's session, those being a resolution concerning the labor party in California, a resolution concerning the vigilante movement, and a resolution concerning the Modesto case?

A. Yes, sir, I do. You haven't permitted me to finish. You asked me what we talked about there.

Q. Yes.

A. I am endeavoring to explain what we talked about there.

Q. Fine! [2073]

A. Now, in addition to discussions of candidates for vice president and secretary, we discussed the matter of seeing to it that several resolutions were presented before the State Federation meeting. The process of presentation consisted of having an authorized delegate to the State Federation submit a resolution to the Resolutions Committee of the State Federation of Labor. Some of these resolutions had already been submitted, and it was so reported there, but this was sort of a check-up to make sure that the resolutions were submitted.

Now, I can tell you, for example, that several resolutions almost similar in content were submitted on the Labor Party, but we were interested to see that they were worded right, and we arranged at that meeting to have another one submitted by a San Diego delegate. I could tell you the disposition of that on the floor if you would like to know.

Q. Did you follow the disposition of most of these resolutions?

A. I sat through several of the proceedings, if not all of the proceedings.

Q. What particular wording did you want to have inserted in the Labor Party resolution?

A. Well, there was a resolution on the Labor

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Party already turned in by a fellow by the name of Hugo Ernst here in San Francisco. He was not a Communist, but he had turned in [2074] such a resolution.

Q. Is that the head of the Culinary Workers' Union?

A. He had something to do with them at that time. I just recall his name. Because there were, I think, perhaps three to five resolutions on this Labor Party that actually were submitted to the Resolutions Committee including the one that we decided should be drawn in that fraction meeting. I don't remember the wording of this one, but it brought out certain things about—it was felt necessary that it should be properly worded to include "Whereas, there are vigilante attacks and whereas Fascism is incipient," and that sort of thing. And I suppost I felt—I believe the feeling was that perhaps these other resolutions, while they endorsed the Labor Party, may not have had the appropriate wording that we wanted. Is that the answer to your question?

Q. Yes. Now, have you read that resolution yourself? A. Have I read it?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I read it in the proceedings of the California State Federation of Labor convention.

Q. You are familiar with its contents?

A. Well, not too familiar, but familiar to the extent that I have just testified.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Concerning the next resolution, will you tell us more about that? [2075]

A. Which next resolution?

Q. The resolution on the vigilante movement.

A. I must say that I seem to have exhausted my sum of knowledge on that. I will be glad to repeat what I have said if it is of any value.

The Court: No.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Just tell us, without telling us the long narrative which you have given us already, tell us what was said at that meeting concerning the vigilante resolution.

The Court: This is the same meeting in San Diego?

Mr. MacInnis: The only meeting on which testimony has been given.

A. Why, someone asked, "Now, how about a resolution against vigilantism in Sonoma County?" and someone else, I believe, said, "Why, it has already been entered by such-and-such a union." It is even conceivable that that was one of the resolutions that we assigned at that time. But that is my recollection. That is all I can do, that is, give my recollection.

Q. There wasn't any further talk about it?

A. No talk about the merits of the case, just the matter of getting it before the convention.

Q. Now, on the matter of the vigilante resolution, did you follow that through to the floor of the convention?

A. I have just been speaking about the vigilante resolution. [2076]

Q. And you heard that resolution pass, did you?

Mr. Paisley: I don't think it is material whether they passed or not, your Honor. I think we are beyond the meeting now. We are out on the floor of the convention.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it has to do with the implied purpose of the prosecution in bringing in these matters, your Honor; also with the recollection of the witness. He said that he followed the Labor Party resolution through to the floor.

The Witness: I haven't been aware of the fact that I testified to that. I have thought I have been talking about the meeting at the Sumner Apartments.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you read the vigilante resolution as you said you read the Labor Party resolution? A. Yes, I have read them.

Q. Did you read the Modesto defense resolution? A. Yes, I have read them.

Q. That resolution was drafted according to the wishes of those present at the meeting?

A. It was the wish of those present that these three resolutions we are talking about would come before the State Federation meeting.

Q. Was there a fourth resolution that you mentioned? A. There may have been.

Q. Do you remember what it was? [2077]

A. I don't seem to now.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. MacInnis: May I have a moment now, your Honor? [2077-A]

Q. Well, whatever the subject of the fourth resolution may have been, I will probably come back to that in a few moments when it comes to mind. You saw the resolution itself, did you?

A. No, I have never testified that I saw the original resolution. I have read the printed copy of the resolution which appeared in the official proceedings of the California Federation of Labor, 1935, San Diego.

Q. And would that be true of all of these resolutions? A. Have I seen copies?

Q. Yes. A. All the——?

Q. Printed in the report of the official proceedings.

A. Every resolution submitted was printed in the official proceedings.

Q. Now, would your memory be refreshed if you looked at the record of the official proceedings of that proceeding?

Mr. Paisley: About what?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis, Continuing): As to the content of the resolutions.

A. Well, I thought I had pretty well identified the contents of the resolution..

Q. Do you think your memory would be refreshed at all?

The Court: He answered that by saying he has——

Q. (By the Court): What was the answer?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. Identified the contents. I thought that I had testified as to the content of these resolutions. You don't want me to testify word for word, I presume?

Mr. MacInnis: No. I don't expect your memory to be that extensive, Mr. Hancock. But you don't claim that you have told us everything that was in each resolution, do you? A. Oh, no.

Q. Do you know who presented the resolution against the vigilantes?

A. No, I don't believe I do.

Q. Did you know Mr. Vandeleur who was at that time the president of the California Federation of Labor? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know who he was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he a conservative leader?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Didn't you know that Harry Bridges made the motion against the vigilante movement and that Mr. Edward Vandeleur, the president, not only endorsed that resolution, but added an amendment to it of his own condemning the vigilante practices and that both were adopted?

A. I don't recall that that happened, no.

Q. To refresh your memory, I would like to pass to you a record of the official proceedings of the 36th annual convention of the [2079] California State Federation of Labor held at San Diego on September 16th to 20th, 1935, on this very point.

Mr. Paisley: Well, what is the question?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you hand this, then,——

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

The Court: The witness has said he did not attend that particular meeting.

Q. Is that correct, sir? A. Your Honor,——

Mr. MacInnis: He said he read this, Your Honor.

The Witness: Your Honor, I did not attend the caucus that was arranged for at that fraction, but I attended many of the sessions of the actual convention, and I have read that book.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you pass him the material I have in my hand, which I have identified, and ask him particularly to read Proposition No. 87, beginning on page 78, finishing with the paragraph on the top of the following page; and I will ask him then to turn to page 104 and read the top of that page.

Mr. Paisley: May I inquire what the purpose of this is, Your Honor? We don't know what the question is. He—if he is just going to take up time having the witness read something, it may take five minutes, it may take half an hour.

Mr. MacInnis: No, it won't.

Mr. Paisley: I would like to know what the question is.

The Court: Maybe that should be taken up in recess also?

Mr. MacInnis: I think this, Your Honor: This witness has [2080] testified about four resolutions which he says he and his group were interested in having had passed.

The Court: Correct.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, we certainly ought to know what we are,——

The Court: I have no objection.

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think this will take long, Your Honor, and I haven't another point to which I could conveniently proceed until we pass this.

(Document examined by the witness.)

The Witness: That was what resolution, Your Honor? Was it 87?

Mr. MacInnis: 87, yes.

(Document returned to Mr. MacInnis by the Clerk.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Has the witness read the top of page 104 also?

A. I might say here that that is not the resolution I am talking about. There were over 100 resolutions introduced at this convention, as I recall, and many of them overlapped. That isn't the Sonoma, the resolution for protesting vigilantism in Sonoma County.

The Court: Would you like to take a recess, Mr. MacInnis?

Mr. MacInnis: If you wish, Your Honor.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take [2081] a recess at this time. In the meantime, the witness may read that record for the purpose of refreshing his recollection—that is, the other matter.

The same admonition to you, ladies and gentlemen; not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is submitted to you.

(Recess.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Hancock, the meeting that was held on September 16th in the Sumner Apartments, with the persons present whom you have mentioned, was to come to an agreement that certain resolutions would be presented on the floor of the convention?

Mr. Paisley: Objected to on the ground it has been testified to a half a dozen times, repetitious.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): When the subject matters of the four resolutions which you and your group wanted offered to the floor of the convention were discussed, did the persons present bind themselves to do what they could to get those resolutions passed?

A. No, sir. That was a checkup, to make sure that these resolutions would come before the convention. As a matter of fact, resolutions are in the process of preparation for a convention for weeks ahead of time, before the actual convention. We were checking up to make sure that—actually many other resolutions [2082] were presented. These are the one I recall. I recalled three, that I mentioned before. Maybe I mentioned four before. I don't know.

Q. Yes. The other resolution which I had forgotten at the moment was the resolution asking for the repeal of criminal syndicalism law?

A. That's right.

Q. That was the other resolution that you discussed, wasn't it?

A. Yes. And at this meeting we were checking up to make sure that these resolutions would appear before this State Federation meeting.

Q. Now, at the close of the first hour of this afternoon, you were shown what purported to be a resolution made against the vigilante activities by Harry Bridges and you read that substantially, did you?

A. Yes, sir. [2083]

Q. And you say that isn't the resolution that was agreed upon in this meeting at the Sumner Apartments?

A. That resolution may or may not have been discussed. That isn't the resolution I have been referring to for some past hours.

Q. So that, if your memory is correct in that regard, Harry Bridges then introduced a resolution different from that agreed upon in this meeting at the Sumner Apartments?

Mr. Paisley: I object to anything that went on at the convention hall. I don't see that it is material.

The Court: Sustained.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you if this was substantially the resolution——

Mr. Paisley: I object to his reading the resolution. It is obviously in the proceedings of the convention.

The Court: It may be the resolution you are referring to, I don't know.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, they have talked about these resolutions——

The Court: All right; proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you if this was substantially the resolution offered on the matter of the vigilante activities:

> "Whereas, there has been an intensive and mounting tide of vigilante terror and insidious propaganda [2084] against organized workers that tends to intimidate the leadership of labor in their natural functions of bettering the conditions for workers"——

Mr. Paisley: I would like to stop him there and object to his reading something that isn't in evidence.

The Court: Has the witness had an opportunity to investigate that record?

The Witness: Your Honor, I was asked to read that resolution, I believe it was 87, on that, and that isn't the resolution. As a matter of fact, there were about five or six resolutions presented on vigilantism from many organizations and they were complementary to each other; they weren't antagonistic to each other; they said many of the same things. But that just doesn't happen to be the one I am talking about.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the position that I offer the Court is this: This man says that there were discussed four resolutions. Now, we certainly ought to be allowed to find out what those resolutions were.

The Court: He said that isn't the one, Mr. MacInnis. I think you are foreclosed by that answer of his.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean that I do not have the right to ask him if this is substantially the resolution?

The Court: He said it wasn't the resolution. Is that your testimony, sir? [2085]

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you find in this book the actual resolution to which you referred?

Mr. Paisley: I think that is an unfair question, your Honor. The witness isn't required to thumb through a huge document like that and ask him if he found it. He is under no obligation to find it.

Mr. MacInnis: The "huge" volume is the rather slim volume that I have in my hand.

Mr. Paisley: How many pages?

Mr. MacInnis: It is about a hundred pages.

Mr. Paisley: Printed, too, isn't it?

Mr. MacInnis: It isn't in handwriting.

Mr. Paisley: Small type, too, isn't it?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you encounter the resolution of which you spoke?

A. No, sir. There is a resolution in there that refers specifically to Sonoma County, and I think you will find that it was introduced by a delegate from the County Federated Trades Labor Council of San Diego on the floor of this convention, but I don't know the number. It's in there.

Q. What was this Santa Rosa matter concerning which the other vigilante resolution was to be directed? A. I don't remember.

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, your Honor, unless it [2086] was discussed at the meeting. We can't go into all the proceedings of this labor convention down there.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Hancock, you have already stated that the matter of Santa Rosa in connection with vigilante activities was discussed.

A. Correction: I said Sonoma County.

Q. Sonoma County, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that place where people were tarred and feathered by vigilantes?

Mr. Paisley: I object to that, your Honor. He is asking him about details now, not about what was discussed.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Paisley: Obviously the witness wasn't there. It is hearsay.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Tell us what was discussed.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. Paisley: Where?

A. In reference to what, please?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In reference to Sonoma County and vigilantes.

A. The question was asked, "Are we—do we have, or is there to be a resolution on the Sonoma County vigilante question introduced on the floor of the convention?"

Q. Yes? A. That is what was discussed.

Q. And what was discussed, what was said about the matters taking place in Sonoma County concerning vigilante activities?

A. At this meeting nothing was said about it.

Q. Nothing at all? A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, all of those present, although you had seen and met five or six of the people for the first time, all of those present mentioned the subject matter of these resolutions without ever discussing their content?

Mr. Paisley: That is an argumentative question, your Honor.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was there any discussion of the contents of any of these resolutions?

A. No, sir, not of the contents—of the title. We all knew, when we would talk about the Labor Party resolution, we knew exactly what we meant. When we talked about vigilantism in Sonoma County, we knew exactly what we meant. When we talked about the Modesto case, we knew what we meant. When we talked about the Criminal Syndicalism Act, we knew what we meant. It wasn't necessary to agitate ourselves as to what had actually happened.

Q. So that you people, meeting for the first time largely, all knew what each other meant just by the bare title of those proposed resolutions? [2088]

A. I knew. I am not in a position to say what everybody knew.

Q. Now, you said that this meeting was in the nature of a recap, did you not?

A. I think I used that expression.

Q. In other words, at some previous meeting there had been discussions among other persons about the candidates to be endorsed on the floor of the convention and the resolutions which were to be sponsored?

A. It is entirely possible. Not in San Diego, to my knowledge.

Q. When you say it was a recap of things that were already agreed upon in advance, you must refer to some previous meeting, mustn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. To what do you refer?

A. I refer to the fact that this was a check-up, a last-minute check-up to make certain that things in which we were interested would come before the Federation meeting, convention.

Q. Well, this is true, isn't it, that whatever was the basis of your knowledge concerning what you wanted and concerning what was already on the floor of the Legislature concerning those things you wanted a recap on, you hadn't met, until you walked into the Sumner Apartments that day, Henry Schmidt, Harry Bridges, or—— [2089]

Mr. Paisley: He has already testified to that. We have heard——.

The Court: He has already testified to that.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he says this meeting was a recap of what had occurred theretofore.

Mr. Paisley: No, he didn't say that. He said this matter about the vice presidential nomination was a recap.

The Court: If there is any doubt about it, I will overrule the objection. He may answer.

A. It is my impression that certain things had been brought to a—had been discussed somewhere before by virtue of the fact that not too much time was dwelt on them in this meeting. I say the dual purpose of the meeting was to make sure that we had all the candidates that we wanted to support for the position of vice presidency; but until that time apparently no decision had been made as to who was to oppose the secretary. I recall distinctly that we talked about that and made a decision in that respect.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): When you say it is your impression that some of these matters must have been discussed before, you mean discussions in which you were present, don't you?

A. Well, sir, it is entirely possible that there were other meetings. This is fourteen years ago. I am testifying as to what I remember right now.

There may have been other meetings. I don't recall them at this point. [2090]

Q. And if there were any matters brought up by way of recap, they were matters that came into your mind from other meetings?

A. I can't say that; no, sir.

Q. Now, the ending of vigilante terrorism and the other activities that you have described was an end for the good of labor generally, was it not?

Mr. Paisley: Oh, that calls for the witness' appraisal of the facts. It seems to me it is argumentative, something we can argue to the jury about.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Paisley: I don't think it is proper cross-examination.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you know who presented the resolution on the Modesto case upon the floor of the convention?

Mr. Paisley: I don't see that that is material, or whether it was ever presented.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that, your Honor? He says that those four resolutions were proposed, according to him, as Communist Party measures. I have all the resolutions here, and we certainly have a right to show that no such thing was the fact; that other people proposed them, and there was nothing communistic about any of them. We certainly should be allowed, and the record should disclose, what the resolutions were, since this man says they didn't even discuss them. [2091]

Mr. Paisley: I am unable to see, your Honor, that it makes any difference. It has been testified here by several witnesses that the Communist Party supported certain proposals that labor unions were favoring, too. Now, what difference would it make if on the convention floor some member of the Communist Party moved the adoption of the resolution or some conservative labor leader moved the adoption of the resolution or introduced it? I am unable to see that that is material.

Mr. MacInnis: It would have this difference: If the contents of the resolution itself was entirely conservative, entirely consistent with the known facts of the particular matter——

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you, Mr. Hancock, if this was substantially the resolution presented on the floor of the convention on the matter of the Modesto case:

"Whereas, eight members of the"——

Mr. Paisley: I object to his reading from this convention report. It isn't in evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we have the official document here, and I certainly am perfectly willing that the whole document may be marked at this time, and I would like to offer it into evidence as well.

The Court: I will accept your representation that it is [2092] an official document, Mr. MacInnis, but I cannot see how the reading of this resolution is going to aid and assist in the determination of any issue in this case. I have heretofore given sufficient latitude on the matter of this resolution; the witness has been more than specific concerning the general subject matter, the tone of the resolution, the general purport and the avowed purposes thereof. To now take us to the legislative halls to determine the various vicissitudes that ultimately reached out and had some bearing upon the ultimate fate of the resolutions will not aid or assist the Court or the jury in the determination of the issues. Accordingly, the objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: So that I won't err——

The Court: You may mark them for identification, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: May I have this understanding with your Honor——

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis:——so that I won't repeat questions of similar ilk, is it understood that if I put the same question to this witness regarding the contents of the resolution for the repeal of the Criminal Syndicalism Act, for the Modesto defense, for the vigilantes, and for the Labor Party, that your Honor would sustain objections upon the same grounds?

The Court: Yes, and for the same reasons.

Mr. MacInnis: With that in mind, we ask that the [2093] document itself as already shown this witness be marked for identification.

The Court: So ordered.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Mr. MacInnis: And we offer the resolutions themselves into evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Paisley: Of course, we object to them, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained, and the objections are sustained to the several offers and to each of them.

The Clerk: The exhibit is marked Defendants' U for identification.

(Proceedings of California State Federation of Labor convention were marked Defendants' U for identification.)

Mr. MacInnis: Then, your Honor, we offer into evidence, in addition to the particular resolutions, to which reference has been made, the title of each proposed resolution and the name and the union of the person sponsoring that resolution.

The Court: Yes, sir. Same objection, I suppose?

Mr. Paisley: Yes.

The Court: Same ruling.

Mr. MacInnis: In the recess, Mr. Hancock, you were given his Honor's permission to read over the congressional report of Senator Lafollette's committee on the Imperial Valley matter. Have you refreshed your memory to any extent from that reading? [2094]

Mr. Paisley: Concerning what? I presume he is trying to refresh his recollection about some incident. A. My memory is very vivid.

Mr. Paisley: I want the question to relate to some incident so that I can determine whether I want to object to it as immaterial.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Upon all of your testimony concerning vigilante activity and your own activity and the activity of the workers in their attempt to organize in the Imperial Valley.

Mr. Paisley: I don't think we are concerned with the details of those matters. The question is what was discussed in the presence of Bridges and Schmidt at this fraction meeting.

Q. (By the Court): Do you understand that question?

A. I understand the question, yes, sir.

Q. Is there anything in the congressional record which you read during the recess that would tend to refresh your recollection concerning any of the events or happenings concerning or pertaining to or otherwise integrated in that particular meeting?

A. No, sir; there was nothing in that congressional report that had to do with this meeting.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Nothing that had to do with your meeting in the Sumner Apartments. Did you refresh your memory [2095] concerning what you said about the attorney named Grover Johnson?

Mr. Paisley: That is just another incident of where we strayed into a lot of immaterial matters.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he has given an answer on that subject. I think we have a right to ask him——

The Court: He gave an answer concerning

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)
Grover Johnson on the steps of the courthouse, as I recall it.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: You may answer it, if your recollection has been refreshed or replenished.

A. I believe that what I testified is just what I read a few moments later in the congressional report. I don't know that anything I said earlier here was different from what I read in that report.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Hancock, that report itself tells you that Mr. Grover Johnson, the attorney, after getting the men released on a writ of habeas corpus, was beaten, kidnaped, taken out into the desert and his shoes taken away from him and his automobile pushed into the river.

A. Counsel is confused.

Mr. Paisley: Not tarred and feathered there? I object and move that that all be stricken. He is testifying.

The Court: Counsel does have that habit. It is hard to break, I suppose. But you do have that habit. [2096]

Mr. MacInnis: I am glad to accept advice from your Honor.

The Court: I am not intending to give you advice, counsel, after all these years, but I merely say to you that you have that habit. I am not going to ride herd on you; I merely say it is repetitious, it is not proper practice, and I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you know a man named Ernest Bessig?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. I am not sure that I ever met him. I know of him.

Q. Did he have anything to do with the matters of the vigilante activities?

Mr. Paisley: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Will you tell us who Ernest Bessig is.

A. He is an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union—was at that time.

Q. Did he go to the town of Brawley to make an investigation of vigilante activities?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, I object.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Hancock this meeting at the Sumner Apartments, which you very properly say was fourteen years ago, you didn't make any written memorandum of it, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. During all of the years that you were a member of the [2097] Communist Party, about how many Communist Party meetings did you attend?

A. A very difficult question to answer. It is into the score and scores.

Q. Let us get back momentarily to the first year—I think you said 1932 was the year you joined that group? A. Yes.

Q. How many times weekly did you go to meetings that year?

A. Why, ordinarily you go to a meeting once a week known as a unit meeting. [2098]

Q. Did you go to any other weekly meetings besides unit meetings?

A. Well, it is entirely possible you might go to a trade union fraction meeting, you might go to two or three other fraction meetings. You might go to a county committee meeting, you might go to quite a number of meetings.

Q. Could you give us a number of, a rough or general estimate of about how many Communist Party meetings per week you would have attended in the year 1932?

A. Why, my guess is, in '32, I probably attended an average of one a week.

Q. And in 1933 what would your estimate be?

A. I probably attended, oh, it is only a rough approximation, but I probably attended most of the unit meetings. That would depend on how many units we had set up. And I might have attended three or four per week.

Q. In 1933? A. Um-hm. (Affirmative)

Q. In 1934 approximately how many meetings a week would you have attended?

A. Why, to the limit of my physical endurance, as many as I could crowd into the day.

Q. You mean there would be a daily meeting?

A. Frequently there were daily meetings, sometimes several days would go by without a meeting.

Q. Would it be fair to say that you attended at least three or four a week in 1934?

A Of one character or another.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. In 1935 would you make the same approximation of three or four meetings a week?

A. I have to make a correction on 1934. For half of 1934 I was in Imperial Valley serving time; no meetings.

Q. You didn't organize the prison camp, I suppose? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you try?

A. Why, I don't know that I did. I don't remember.

Q. How about 1935? About how many meetings a week?

A. Why, I suppose that in a given week, three would be a pretty heavy schedule.

Q. About three a week. Would '36 be the same?

A. I can only say approximately; yes.

Q. And would you say the same about the ensuing years, '37, '38, '39 and '40?

A. No, I would not. 1937, my activity dwindled off. By September of that year, somewhere around September of 1937, I left San Diego. From that time on I attended actual party meeting—it was a much lighter schedule.

Q. Now, to go into some of the matters you told us about yesterday, you were working for 19 months, I think you said, for a newspaper in Erie, Pennsylvania? [2100] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a paper that had a circulation of 40,000? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Did you say it was 140 years old?

A. I said 129.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. 129. And what was the name of it? The Erie Dispatch? A. Dispatch.

Q. And you say you resigned on Friday last?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what is your activity now, or your employment?

A. I have no employment right now.

Q. You mean you resigned preparatory to coming out to testify at this trial?

A. That's correct.

Q. You have no job at the present?

A. As far as I know, I do not have. I resigned from my last job.

Q. You have no application for any other job or definite prospect?

A. No, sir, I do not have.

Q. You definitely are not returning to the Erie Dispatch?

A. Well, I can't say about that, because I made a hurried trip out here. I resigned. I wrote out, I gave a written resignation and there wasn't any time, really, to argue or discuss the [2101] thing. But to the best of my knowledge, I am not to be further employed on that newspaper.

Q. What do you plan to do?

A. Oh, I hope to continue my profession somewhere.

Q. You don't know where?

A. At this time I do not.

Q. Now, did you come out here by plane or by train? A. By plane.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And arrived here when?

A. Saturday night, a few minutes after 7:00, at the San Francisco Airport.

Q. Now, when, before last Saturday night, had you last been out to the Pacific Coast?

A. Early part of September of this year.

Q. In other words, while you were actually working for the Erie Dispatch, you did come to California in September of this year, 1949?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of that trip?

A. I was requested to make a trip by the Immigration Department.

Q. I see.

A. To explore meetings that I may have attended with the defendant Mr. Bridges.

Q. You came out here at the express request of the Immigration Department? Did you? [2102]

A. Yes.

Q. How many days were consumed in that trip?

A. I believe about four. I think it was four days.

Q. Did you come on a weekend or in the middle of a week?

A. Came on a weekend and went back in the middle of a week.

Q. Now, did that trip bring you only to San Francisco? A. No, sir.

Q. It brought you to San Diego? A. Yes.

Q. And whom did you see in San Diego?

A. I saw my brother; I saw my sister; I saw the lady who was my ex-wife, who is my ex-wife.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Her name was Winnie Hancock, is that right?

A. It is not now; it was at that time.

Q. Yes. What is here name now?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, you saw her in September of this year, did you not? A. Yes. It begins with an R.

Q. In whose presence did you see her, Mr. Hancock?

A. In the presence of Mr. William Kaiser of the Immigration Service.

Q. Oh. He went to San Diego with you?

A. I met him in San Diego.

Q. In other words, you flew directly from Erie, Pennsylvania to the city of San Diego? [2103]

A. Direct? That is where I landed eventually.

Q. Yes. And you were met there by Mr. Kaiser?

A. He met me at my mother's home.

Q. And did he talk to your mother with you?

A. No.

Q. To your sister? A. No.

Q. But to your former wife?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And you accompanied Mr. Kaiser to the home of your former wife, I suppose, to see if she had any information that might be of assistance to the Immigration Department in this case?

A. I did not accompany him to her home.

Q. He went alone?

A. I don't know whether he went. I didn't.

Q. You didn't go to her home? A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you see her?

A. In the Courthouse, the old Courthouse Building in San Diego.

Q. And how was that meeting arranged?

A. I didn't have anything to do with the arrangement.

Q. Well, will you tell us how you happened to assemble there and who was present?

Mr. Paisley: I don't think that he can just go into all these matters, Your Honor. I object to that unless he has some [2104] purpose in it. Nothing more natural than that the Immigration authorities should have a witness come and check up on him, and the testimony.

The Court: May I ask the purpose of this?

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, we certainly have a right to inquire into the activities of the Immigration Department or its agents in connection with this man prior to his coming here as a witness.

The Court: Overruled; proceed.

The Witness: May I have the question again, please?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Just tell us how you happened to assemble at the Courthouse in San Diego and who was present at that meeting?

A. I have already testified who was present. There were three of us present. I was at my mother's home in San Diego when Mr. Kaiser came there, and he said, "I would like to have you come down with me to meet your former wife."

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. When had the request been made to you that you fly out to San Diego in September of this year?

A. Some time in August of this year, early August.

Q. Who made that request of you?

A. Mr. William Kaiser.

Q. Where and in what form did he make that request?

A. He came to Erie, Pennsylvania, called me up at the office, and asked me to come and see him.

Q. Where did you go to see him then?

A. Why, he was in a drug store across the street. We went down to a restaurant and had a cup of coffee.

Q. And you had a discussion with Mr. Kaiser in August of this year concerning this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the first meeting or discussion that you had had with any member of the Immigration Department concerning Harry Bridges?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was.

Q. In other words, no one contacted you before you received the telephone call from Mr. William Kaiser in August of this year?

A. Well, as I remember, during the war I was investigated a few times on the general question of Communism, but nothing was ever said about Mr. Bridges. I didn't say anything.

Q. Did you take any loyalty oath or matter of that kind during the war?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. I don't recall any.

Q. In connection with your duties in the merchant marine service?

A. I was asked if I was now a Communist or had been.

Q. Were you asked if you had ever been a member of the Communist Party? A. Yes, yes. [2106]

Q. And you naturally answered truly on those questions? A. I did.

Q. And after you had been questioned in respect of your merchant marine service as to whether you had ever been a member of the Communist Party, you heard nothing from any official agency until Mr. Kaiser contacted you in August of this year concerning Harry Bridges, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you spend with Mr. Kaiser the day you met him in the drugstore or restaurant in Erie, Pennsylvania? A. About two hours.

Q. Did he take some written statement from you at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go anywhere else with him other than the restaurant? A. Not on that day.

Q. When did you next see Mr. Kaiser?

A. The next day.

Q. Where did you see him then?

A. In his hotel room.

Q. Do you know the name of that hotel?

A. The Lawrence Hotel.

Q. Who was present at that conversation?

A. Mr. Kaiser and myself and a stenographer.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Do you remember the stenographer's name?

A. No, I do not. [2107]

Q. Was a statement taken on that occasion?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Did you dictate the statement?

A. I talked.

Q. Well, was it taken in question and answer form or—— A. Yes, I was sworn in.

Q. Pardon me? A. I was sworn.

Q. Who administered the oath to you?

A. Mr. Kaiser.

Q. He asked you to swear to the truth of what you were going to say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long did the taking of that statement consume? A. I think a couple of hours.

Q. Two or three?

A. About two. It was from 11:00 in the morning, it was over the lunch period, from 11:00 in the morning until 1:00 or a little after.

Q. Now, was that statement transcribed later?

A. Same day.

Q. When did you see Mr. Kaiser or the stenographer on that day after the lunch period had passed?

A. At the end of the workday, about 5:30.

Q. Where did you see him then? [2108]

A. In the Courthouse. I mean, in the Postoffice Building in Erie.

Q. And in what part of that building did you see him that time, late in the day?

A. In the Immigration Office; I think it was the Immigration Office.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Did he then have a typed transcript?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many pages, about?

A. Well, I don't really recollect.

Q. Can you give us an estimate?

A. Maybe eight, nine, ten; somewhere in there.

Q. Did you sign that? A. I did.

Q. Did you sign each page?

A. Initialed the pages that were not signed.

Q. After that transaction took place, did you then talk further with Mr. Kaiser?

A. In reference to what?

Q. To this case.

A. I came out to see Mr. Kaiser in September, the following month.

Q. Now, after you signed the document, did you then part company? A. Yes, we did. [2109]

Q. And what was the next communication or contact which you had with any member of the Immigration Service or any one connected with the prosecution of this case?

Mr. Paisley: Your Honor, does the Court and jury have to sit here and listen to these wholly immaterial questions forever on some promise that he might get to some relevant question eventually? Certainly these questions don't tend to impeach the witness in any way or to discredit him. Nothing more natural than that government investigators would go around locating witnesses, getting statements from them, having a stenographer present, having it typed out, having them come to the scene about which they have testified, and so on. I don't see what the counsel's purpose is.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, we have a right to explore any contact between the prosecution agents and the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. May I have the question again?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): The question was this: When, after the time you signed this document, at 5:30 in the afternoon in August of this year, in the Postoffice Building in Erie, were you contacted by any member of the prosecuting agency of the department in respect of this case?

A. Well, Mr. Kaiser called me on the telephone about two weeks after that. [2110]

Q. At your office or at your home?

A. Called me at my office.

Q. From what city or telephone station did Mr. Kaiser call you, if you know?

A. I believe he was in Chicago; it was either Chicago or New York.

Mr. Paisley: Now, does he want to know, Your Honor, how much money he dropped in the box?

Mr. MacInnis: I am so grateful for the crumbs that you occasionally drop my way that if you will give me that information, I will be happy to put it in the record. I have no doubt that Mr. Kaiser is amply paid for his expenses. If you want to give me that information, I will accept it.

Q. Did you have a talk with him on the telephone on that occasion about this case?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. No, just the matter of when it would be possible for me to come to California.

Q. Did you then make an arrangement to fly out to San Diego?

A. Why, I don't think it was made right then. Possibly it was, but we finally agreed—he wanted me to come out earlier, and I couldn't possibly do it before somewhere around Labor Day. So there might have been two telephone calls in there. It seems to me there were. But all we talked about over the telephone was when I could come out.

Q. How did he suggest that your employment duties be taken [2111] care of in this lapse of time from your work?

A. Why, he didn't suggest, but I will tell you how they were taken care of. I haven't had any vacation this year except this one right here.

Q. Well, you told us you resigned your job?

A. That's right.

Q. You resigned your job preparatory to coming out here and you were willing to let your vacation time be the time that you are devoting to this case, is that what you tell us?

A. It used up the days out of my vacation time, that's right. So that—I might also say that also by coincidence my mother was due in Erie at that time, and I explained that I wished to go around to Niagara Falls and so forth with my mother. That is the explanation I gave the office.

Q. Niagara Falls?

A. Yes, that is a hundred miles from Erie.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. When did you tell your office that you went to Niagara Falls?

A. Why, I don't say that I told them I went to Niagara Falls, but they knew that my mother was coming and we talked about, that when she came, why, we would like to go to Niagara Falls. And so when I took off four days, I think they assumed that I had gone up there with her.

Q. Although actually you saw your mother in San Diego on that trip? [2112]

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. She was not at home? A. No.

Q. You say you went to her house?

A. I did.

Q. And you let it be known in Erie that you were going up to Niagara Falls with your mother?

Mr. Paisley: Well, now, how many times do you want him to tell you that?

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I am content with any number of times, Mr. Paisley.

Mr. Paisley: Do you want to ask him again?

A. No, I didn't let it be known, if you mean did I go around telling people, "I have been to Niagara Falls." But it just happens that before this entire matter came up, I had been talking to friends in the office that when my mother comes, why, I intend to take her to Niagara Falls. And so I believe that most of the people thought I had gone to Niagara Falls on those four days.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, after the telephone conversation that you had with Mr. Kaiser, did you talk to him again or to any other agents of the Government in this case before you flew out to San Diego?

A. I repeat, I think there were two telephone conversations in there, and I believe one of them was to my house. The first one [2113] was to the office. I think, I believe, I am sure that is right. The first one he mentioned a preliminary date, and we couldn't agree on it, and on the second one, why, we agreed on a date.

Q. And while in San Diego in September of this year, did you talk to any other agents of the Government in addition to Mr. Kaiser?

A. There was another fellow in the car when we went to the Sumner Apartments. I don't recall his name.

Q. You went to the Sumner Apartments to see if you could identify the name and the number of the particular building?

A. That isn't the reason. I used to deliver newspapers in that apartment. I know it well.

Q. You don't remember the name of the other man in the car?

A. In the car at that time, no.

Q. But he was the only other agent whom you met? A. Yes, in San Diego at that time.

Q. Yes. Now, after you left San Diego and went back to Erie, Pennsylvania, what contact next did you have with either Mr. Kaiser or other members of the government prosecutors?

A. Well, I didn't leave San Diego and go directly back to Erie. But do you want to know, did I leave San Diego and go directly to Erie, or what did I do when I got to Erie?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Well, you say you didn't leave San Diego directly for Erie? A. No, sir. [2114]

Q. Where did you go?

A. Went to Long Beach, then up to San Francisco.

Q. Was Mr. Kaiser with you in Long Beach?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Whom did you see there?

A. Mr. Taylor, Dan Taylor.

Q. Do you know his address?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you see anybody else in Long Beach?

A. I am not even sure it is Long Beach; it is along in there somewhere. I was driven there. It is one of those beach communities in that general area.

Q. And then you came up to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. In whose company?

A. Mr. Kaiser's company.

Q. Did you drive or fly? A. Flew.

Q. The two of you flew together? A. Yes.

Q. And for what period of time were you here in San Francisco? A. Two days.

Q. Where did you stay?

Mr. Paisley: Now, I don't see that that is material, Your Honor. The cases are replete with cases—the books are replete [2115] with cases you can't ask a witness, "Where did you stay last night"; such questions as that. I just don't see where we are getting with all this.

Mr. MacInnis: The only purpose is to——

Mr. Paisley: With all this idle cross-examination.

Mr. MacInnis: In connection with government agents. It has no other purpose, as to the inquiry of where he stayed.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I think it was the Cartwright Hotel.

Q. Cartwright Hotel. Did Mr. Kaiser stay there, too? A. Yes, he did.

Q. While at the Cartwright Hotel, did you meet any other members of the prosecution staff in this case?

A. I am not sure it was there. At the time I was in San Francisco, I met other members of the Immigration Service.

Q. Whom did you meet?

A. Oh, a fellow by the name of McGowan.

Q. How many times did you meet him?

A. Why, he was in a car that we drove around San Francisco in. I don't know how many times I met him. I was with him for a few hours.

Q. Well, who else was in the car, if you can recall? A. That is all.

Q. Just you and Mr. McGowan?

A. And Mr. Kaiser. [2116]

Q. Did you meet anyone else besides Mr. McGowan, in addition to Mr. Kaiser? A. Yes.

Q. Who? A. Mr. Bruce Barber.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. Bruce Barber. He is the gentleman sitting at the prosecution table, an official of the Immigration Service, is that right? A. Yes.

~~Q. And how many times did you meet him?~~

A. At that time just once. I was in his office.

Q. And who else did you meet?

A. I don't recall meeting anyone else. I might have been introduced to people in passing, but I don't recall meeting anyone else.

Q. And was another written statement taken from you on that visit?

A. I didn't sign any. They might have been writing down things, but I didn't sign any other statement.

Q. Were you at some interview when a stenographer made written reports of what was said?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you meet with these gentlemen, Mr. Kaiser, Mr. Barber and Mr. McGowan, in the offices of the Immigration Service?

A. Yes, I have been in the office of the Immigration Service [2117] with all three of them.

Q. And you talked about this case, did you?

A. Yes, we did; talked about this particular meeting and several more.

Q. Now, when did you go back to Erie, Pennsylvania?

A. Well, let's see. I got there on a Thursday night, so I left here some time on Wednesday, Wednesday evening.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

Q. And then what was the next contact you had with any member of the government service in this case?

A. I received a letter from Mr. Barber some time around the first of October, in which he said that the list of witnesses was in preparation and I would be notified at the earliest opportunity as to when I would be called upon to come out here.

Q. And did you make any reply to that?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What reply did you make?

A. Why, ——

Mr. Paisley: Are we really concerned about that, Your Honor? Correspondence that might have passed back and forth about the date of a possible trial and so forth?

The Court: I suppose not. I will sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And whom did you see next, or who contacted you next in reference to this case?

A. Mr. William Kaiser called me on the first of December, this year, at my home. [2118]

Q. Did he then make arrangements with you to come out here? A. Yes, he did.

Q. And then you say that following that on December 2, you resigned your job with the Erie Dispatch and came here? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were you served with any subpoena asking you to come here?

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

A. When I arrived here Saturday night I was served with a subpoena.

Q. You mean after you voluntarily undertook the trip from Erie, Pennsylvania to San Francisco you were served here in San Francisco with a subpoena?

Mr. Paisley: Well, that is utterly immaterial. It is done every day, your Honor, and he knows it.

Mr. MacInnis: We would be most delighted if we could get that assistance.

The Court: Overruled. Your comment, of course, is not called for, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Who served you with the subpoena, Mr. Hancock?

A. Mr. William Kaiser.

Q. Did you talk following your arrival here with any of the men connected with the prosecution?

A. Yes, sir, I have talked to several of them.

Q. What ones are those? [2119]

A. I have talked to Mr. Donohue, Mr. Paisley, Mr. Boyd, Mr. Barber, and probably others, too.

Q. Where are you staying while you are here?

A. At the Marines Club.

Q. Is any member of the Immigration Service staying at the same place?

A. Mr. Kaiser is staying there.

Q. Do you and he share a room?

A. Yes, we do.

Mr. MacInnis: That is all. That sounds like this is where we came in.

(Testimony of Stanley Benjamin Hancock.)

The Court: That completes your cross-examination?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: Redirect examination, please.

Mr. Paisley: I have one question, your Honor.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Paisley:

Q. Counsel, or Mr. MacInnis, asked you how many Communist meetings you had ever attended, and you told him. How many fraction meetings did you ever attend at which Harry Bridges and Henry Schmidt were present?

A. I attended one that I recollect now. Possibly there were others; I don't recall them.

Q. Is that the one you have testified about at San Diego? A. It is.

Mr. Paisley: That is all. [2120]

Mr. MacInnis: That is all, your Honor.

The Court: The witness is excused.

Will you have a witness available in the morning?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: I remind the jury that we intend to adjourn tomorrow at noontime and we will then resume the following Monday at ten o'clock.

The Clerk: Eleven o'clock.

The Court: Eleven o'clock, rather. We have some matters on for Monday morning.

Now we will adjourn regularly until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock, Friday morning at ten, and the same admonition to you not to discuss under any conditions nor converse with any person on any subject of the trial, nor to form or express an opinion hereon until the case is submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Friday, December 9, 1949, at 10:00 a.m.) [2121]

Friday, December 9, 1949, 10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: The United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: Will you call Mr. Charles Krolek.

The Court: Will you spell his name.

Mr. Donohue: K-r-o-l-e-k, your Honor.

KERMIT CHARLES KROLEK

called for the Government; sworn.

The Clerk: Will you state your full name to the Court and jury.

The Witness: Kermit Charles Krolek—K-r-o-l-e-k.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Krolek, where do you live?

A. I live in Belmont, California.

Q. And how long have you lived in Belmont, California? A. Approximately eleven years.

Q. Are you married? A. Yes.

Q. And you live there with your wife?

A. Correct.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Krolek?

A. I was born in Athabasca, Alberta, [2122] Canada.

Q. And when? A. 1911, July 28.

Q. When did you come to live in the United States?

A. When I was approximately a year and a half old.

Q. And at the time or shortly after you came to the United States, if you know, was your father naturalized in the United States?

A. That is correct; he was naturalized in Glendive, Montana, in May of 1919.

Q. I didn't get the year. A. May of 1919.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I move that the answer be stricken out as not being the best evidence. If there is a record of this man's father's naturalization, that record should be produced.

Mr. Donohue: I have always believed, if your Honor please, that matters of family history were an exception to the hearsay rule.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And you claim your citizenship by derivation from the citizenship of your father? A. That is correct.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. What this man claims is a matter of opinion. It would be a matter of law or a question of fact and law for the Court and jury. [2123]

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Where did you obtain your schooling, Mr. Krolek?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. My primary schooling was obtained in Montana and in Portland, Oregon; secondary schooling also in Portland, Oregon. I have obtained a number of credits in the University of Oregon extension—summer extension. I am a graduate of a business college, and I have had certain training in electronics sponsored by M.I.T. in Boston, Massachusetts.

Q. What is your present occupation?

A. I am an electronic engineer, regional service manager for the Magnavox Company.

The Court: With respect to M.I.T., the witness might give the full name.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You said that you had training in Boston at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology?

A. That is correct; Cambridge, I might say, at a class sponsored by the Massachusetts Institute through the Raytheon Manufacturing Company.

Q. What was your first employment, Mr. Krolek? A. My very first employment?

Q. Yes.

A. I would say in a logging camp in 1929.

Q. And from there you went to what work?

A. I was an amateur in my early youth, and I graduated from [2124] that into commercial radio.

Q. Where were you employed in commercial radio, in what capacity, and when?

A. I was employed in various capacities—as a technician, licensed operator, and subsequently became an engineer for Oregon Radio, Inc., in Oregon.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Can you tell us when that was?

A. In 1934, I would say.

Q. And where? A. In Portland.

Q. What was your next occupation?

A. Thereafter I went into the labor movement.

Q. And in what capacity did you join the labor movement?

A. I became secretary or, as you might say, business agent of the American Radio Telegraphists' Association, Local No. 8, in Portland, Oregon.

Q. Can you tell us when you became secretary of that local?

A. Approximately, I would say, November of 1935.

Q. And how long did you remain with the ARTA?

A. I terminated my association with ARTA in approximately the middle part of the year of 1937.

Q. And what was your occupation next?

A. I entered my own business in the manufacture of X-ray tubes in San Francisco.

Q. And how long did you continue to operate your own business? [2125]

A. Approximately a year.

Q. From there you went to what employment?

A. I became confidential secretary for the brother of Culbert L. Olson, who was then the Governor of California.

Q. How long did you remain as secretary for Mr. Olson?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Two and a half years, I would say.

Q. That brings us to what year?

A. That brings me into 1939.

Q. And you then took what employment?

A. That was sometime prior to the war. I went into the capacity as supervisor of radio, radar and sonar for the Bethlehem Steel Company in San Francisco.

Q. San Francisco? A. That is correct.

Q. And you continued with Bethlehem Steel for how long? A. Until 1943.

Q. And then you took what employment?

A. I went to work for the Raytheon Manufacturing Company in Waltham, Massachusetts.

Q. How long did you remain in Waltham?

A. I was with the Raytheon people until the termination of the war.

Q. And then did you return to California?

A. That's correct.

Q. And to what employment?

A. I was asked by the Navy to take over the consolidation of the electronic engineering staff at San Francisco Naval Shipyards.

Q. And how long did you remain employed by the Navy?

A. Approximately a year, better than that, I would say; maybe a year and a quarter.

Q. And then your next employment?

A. With the Westinghouse Electric Company as an X-ray engineer, field engineer.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And how long were you employed by Westinghouse?

A. Better than a year, I would say.

Q And then your next employment?

A. My present.

Q. You have been with Magnavox how [2127] long? A. Since September of last year.

Q. Mr. Krolek, did there come a time when you became a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me.

A. That's correct.

Mr MacInnis: The same objection, Your Honor, as heretofore made, and we ask that the answer be stricken pending the Court's ruling upon the objection. Not the best evidence; calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness; not binding upon the defendants.

The Court: The objection is overruled. I need not state the reasons; I have already ruled on similar objections heretofore with respect to the witnesses.

Mr. MacInnis: In that event, Your Honor, may the record show that the same understanding exists, as you suggested yesterday, that the same objections would be made to the same line of questioning and that the Court would make the same rulings. I have particular reference——

The Court: I would not care at this juncture to have the record so all embracing as to a stipulation or some order, for fear there might be some confusion hereafter in the record. But it will suffice for the moment that the objection is overruled and these matters, if you do intend to intrude the examination on matters of general affairs concerning this witness and the Communist Party, I will instruct the jury accordingly, [2128] as I did with the other witnesses, that the testimony elicited in this particular phase of the matter having to do with the internal operations of the Communist Party, if such testimony be elicited, is not binding upon the defendants nor either nor any of them.

Mr. Donohue: Would you repeat the question for the witness, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read.)

A. (Continuing): I joined the Communist Party, I would say, in the winter of 1935.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us where, when and the circumstances surrounding your becoming a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: May the record show the same objection, Your Honor, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: If the Court would make a statement of his ruling, I would be glad to refrain from the individual objections at each question.

The Court: Well, I think Mr. Donohue will stipulate with you, as he has with other witnesses.

Mr. Donohue: I think, Your Honor, that we might enter into the same stipulation as we did with respect to the witness Henry Schrimpf, that such questions as you have already [2129] objected to are also objected to by counsel, and his rights are preserved.

Mr. MacInnis: That will be all right.

The Court: That may be the order, in the light of the stipulation.

A. The question was when I joined the Communist Party, and I believe I answered in the winter, I would recall, December possibly of 1935.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you tell us, or will you tell us, Mr. Krolek, the circumstances of your joining?

A. I was recruited by A. T. Pringle, who was the secretary of Local No. 6 of the ARTA in Seattle, Washington, and the purpose for it, my joining the party, if that is the intended question, is that——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The question did not call for such a volunteer answer.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): I will come to that in just a moment, Mr. Krolek. Will you confine your answer to the circumstances of your joining. Just what you did in order to become a member of the party?

A. I indicated my willingness to accept the program as it was outlined to me by Pringle, in the hope, shall we say, of being able to better conduct my relationship as a business agent or secretary of the union with respect to the other locals.

Mr. MacInnis: It appears to me, Your Honor, it is a non-responsive [2130] answer which has followed, although the prosecutor indicated he would come to this other material later.

Mr. Donohue: I think the answer——

The Court: The objection is overruled; the motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you continue, Mr. Krolek?

A. The circumstances of my joining were, as I recall, Pringle proffered me a membership card and indicated to me that it would be expedient to join the Communist Party for the reason that by not so doing I would be alienated from obtaining information that otherwise would be available to those who were members.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We are now receiving, Your Honor, hearsay testimony from persons not parties to this action. I suggest that that answer must be stricken.

The Court: Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, if Your Honor pleases, the witness is being asked, and is making responses to, a question as to the circumstances surrounding his joining the party. Your Honor has already instructed the jury, and soundly, that these conversations are not binding in evidence as against the defendants, but certainly——

The Court: And you are not offering the conversation against the defendants or either or any of them, are you?

Mr. Donohue: Of course not, if Your Honor please.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Objection overruled. [2131]

A. The overture to my joining the party under the circumstances I stated was made to me, or were made to me by Pringle in Portland, Oregon, and subsequently I attended the meetings with him and with others in Seattle. I was introduced to the party.

Q. May I ask you, Mr. Krolek, you said that at that time Pringle was the secretary to the ARTA local in Portland, correct? A. In Seattle.

Q. Seattle. At that time were you employed by the ARTA?

A. I was secretary, as I stated—business agent for the Portland local, which is No. 8, once Local 8.

Q. Over how long a period did you continue as a member of the Communist Party?

A. Terminated my active relationship in the Communist Party in the spring of 1937.

Q. And you would count your membership as extending over how long a period of time?

A. Well, by a process of arithmetic, I would say approximately a year and a half.

Q. What were the circumstances—Strike that, please.

Did you leave the Communist Party voluntarily or were you expelled?

A. I left it voluntarily.

Q. And will you tell His Honor and the members of the jury the reason for your leaving the Communist Party? [2132]

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, the same objection, calling for hearsay, calling for the opinion and conclusion of this witness, not binding upon the defendants, not probative of any issue in this case.

Mr. Donohue: I thought this question would be subject to our understanding, that you wouldn't object to it.

Mr. MacInnis: This is a new question, as I understand it.

Mr. Donohue: They are all new.

The Court: The objection is overruled, Mr. MacInnis.

A. I left the party for several reasons; primarily, the first one being I recognized the expediency of various actions of which they were engaged with respect to the labor movement. Secondly, at the moment of my termination, it so happened that the Committee for Industrial Organization under the tutelage of John L. Lewis at the time was pouring some funds, quite a considerable amount of money, into the organization of the unorganized people. And I frankly reached a situation, or rather, a condition, where I was forced to oppose the policies that the Communist Party was inaugurating with respect to taking some of the monies which were being expended through the honest form of union organization, rather than into the channels of the Communist Party organization.

The Court: Mr. Witness, may I address myself

to you? Will you speak a little louder? Because there is a little dead zone over in the corner. I notice the juror in the corner is [2133] having a little trouble there. There is a dead zone; speak just a little slower and I think it will be helpful.

The Witness: Thank you.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): At the time you joined the Communist Party, Mr. Krolek, were you issued a book? A. Yes, sir, I was issued a book.

Q. And will you tell us whether or not that book was issued in the name of Charles Krolek or in some other name?

A. The book was issued me in the name of Conrad.

Q. Can you tell us why the book was issued in some name other than your own?

A. For the reason that——

Mr. MacInnis: Did you say Comrade or Conrad?

The Witness: Conrad.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you spell it?

A. C-o-n-r-a-d.

Mr. MacInnis: Comrade Conrad.

Mr. Donohue: Comrade Conrad, yes.

A. Can I have the question?

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question, please?

(Record read.)

A. The reason being——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness upon the motives and activities of persons not before the Court, Your Honor, and we object to [2134] it upon the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Donohue: It is apparent, if Your Honor please, that such a book, upon the application as testified to by the witness, filed by him, could only have been issued to him in a name under instructions by him to whatever person may have issued that book.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you continue with your answer, Mr. Krolek?

A. The reason being that people who are, shall we say, paid functionaries of the Communist Party, that is, officials of the party, do not assume——

Mr. MacInnis: Now pardon me just a moment. Your Honor, counsel advised us of the propriety of this question upon the ground that this witness can tell us some reason of his own. Now he is assuming to tell us the motives of persons whom he calls high functionaries of the Communist Party. Now, that answer must be stricken out on that point, Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: If counsel wouldn't interrupt the witness, if Your Honor please, I am sure he will answer the question. But he must answer it in his way, not in counsel's way.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I would much prefer to make the objection at the right time.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolck.)

The Court: I understood that there was a running objection [2135] to this particular phase of the testimony.

Mr. Donohue: I understood so, Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: There is a motion to strike a non-responsive answer, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, the motion is denied.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard a moment?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: A moment ago I made the objection, a moment ago Mr. Donohue replied to Your Honor, saying that this man would be the only one who could give the reason in his own mind and hence he should be allowed to tell the purpose, so that with that in mind, Your Honor overruled the objection. Then the witness started on an answer and starts telling us the motivations and the thoughts of third persons—not his own at all.

Mr. Donohue: No, that isn't——

Mr. MacInnis: That is why the answer is non-responsive, even if the question could be proper in the first place.

Mr. Donohue: Well, I assume that the question was proper because the Court allowed it.

The Court: Well, let us have the full text of the answer. If it then be objectionable upon any grounds that you assert or affirm for any reasons, I will entertain the motion then.

Mr. Donohue: Thank you, Your Honor.

A. Well, I may rephrase the answer this way.

that people who [2136] are functionaries in the party with respect to being officials, retain their proper names, and those who are recruited from the ranks of labor and elsewhere assume other names, for purposes, shall we say, of—well, non-identity.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Now, will Your Honor please entertain that motion to strike? He hasn't given us his thoughts at all, but the thoughts he says are the thoughts of third persons not before the Court.

Mr. Donohue: Well, I don't understand Mr. MacInnis' expression, because Mr. Krolek, the witness, is testifying to what the conclusions in his mind were, and the reason why he received his book in the name of Conrad, rather than in the name of Krolek; which, of course, from the circumstances, could only have been done because as a member of the Communist Party he knew something about the reasons that motivated the Communist Party in giving books to applicants for membership in names other than their own. We couldn't testify to that, because we are not familiar with the problems or the principles of the Communist Party—but the witness obviously could.

The Court: The motion is denied. [2137]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Krolek, during the period of time when you were a member of the Communist Party did you attend any Communist Party meetings? A. I attended several meetings.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. What is your best judgment of the sum total in number of the meetings which you did attend during the period you were a member, no matter where they may be? A. Possibly 30 to 35.

Q. And could you indicate generally where geographically these meetings took place?

A. The meetings took place in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, San Pedro, Long Beach.

Q. Mr. Krolek, do you know the defendant Harry Bridges? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you indicate where he may be?

A. I believe he is seated in the chair directly behind you.

Q. Do you know the defendant Henry Schmidt?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom?

A. Correct. He is sitting directly behind the light—behind you on your left shoulder.

Q. Do you know the defendant Henry Schmidt?

A. No, sir. [2138]

Q. At any time, Mr. Krolek, during the period when you were a member of the Communist Party did you ever attend a Communist Party meeting at which either the defendant Harry Bridges or the defendant Henry Schmidt were also present?

A. I attended several such meetings.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, may the answer be stricken pending the objection, your Honor? We object to that question as being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for the opinion and conclusion of this witness, for this reason: that the witness may tell us if he attended a meeting, but to place a character upon that meeting is to intrude upon the function of the Court and jury. He may be asked what meetings he attended with these men, but for him to give us the conclusion would be to invade the province of the jury, your Honor.

The Court: You might——

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, may I just briefly say that I think we have been around this problem before, but certainly it would seem to me in all logic and reason that no one is better qualified to testify as to the nature of a meeting that a person who attended that meeting.

The Court: Yes. Well, I ruled on this matter heretofore under the decision in the Eisler case.

Mr. Donohue: The Marzani case.

The Court: As well as in the Marzani case. [2139]

Mr. Donohue: This witness——

The Court: I believe my ruling is correct. It is a matter for cross-examination. You might lay some foundation with respect to the time and place of this meeting.

Mr. Donohue: It is only a preliminary question, if your Honor please.

The Court: All right. The objection is overruled.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question to the witness, please.

(Question and answer read.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, Mr. Krolek, will you tell me where and when the first of such meetings at which either or both of these named defendants were present took place?

A. I might qualify my answer, Mr. Donohue, this way: that I won't state that this was the first of such meetings, but I will recall a meeting which probably may have been one of the first at which both these gentlemen mentioned were present.

Q. And where was that meeting held?

A. It was held in Long Beach, California.

Q. And when?

A. The latter part of May, 1946.

Q. By whom were you notified that there was to be such a meeting?

The Court: Pardon me. What was the date?

Mr. Donohue: In the latter part of May, [2140] 1936.

Mr. MacInnis: He said '46.

The Witness: 1936. Excuse me.

Mr. MacInnis: Did you say 1946?

The Witness: 1936, I meant.

Mr. Donohue: I didn't hear it.

Mr. MacInnis: I heard it, '46.

Mr. Donohue: Is there any doubt as to whether it was 1936?

The Court: That is why I interrupted the witness.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Witness: 1936.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And where in Long Beach, California, did this meeting take place?

A. The meeting took place in the Venetian Square Apartments in Long Beach at the end of the Boardwalk at the far end of the Pike in Long Beach.

Q. Can you tell us whether you went to this meeting alone or were you accompanied by someone else? A. I was accompanied by A. T. Pringle.

Q. Is that the same A. T. Pringle about whom you testified shortly ago? A. Correct.

Q. Where within this building was this meeting held, Mr. Krolek?

A. The meeting was held on the—I believe the third floor of this particular building. It was, as I recall, on the left-hand [2141] side of the building. I can identify the location of it. The actual room, or, rather, entrances to the room, consisted of a narrow spiral staircase which was surrounded on one side by a metal railing or wrought-iron railing.

Q. Was it a hall or living quarters, or what was the nature of the room?

A. It was an apartment.

Q. It was an apartment. Can you tell us, about how many people were there?

A. Eight or nine.

Q. And of the eight or nine who were there, will you tell us how many you can recall by name.

A. There was A. T. Pringle, Pyle——

The Court: What was that?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. R. A. Pyle; T. J. Van Ermen——

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How do you spell that name?

A. V-a-n E-r-m-e-n, I believe. There was Mr. Bridges, Mr. Schmidt, a chap by the name of Harry Jackson from Seattle, I believe. There were—there was a woman present who I understood the apartment to belong to, by the name of Hazel Wood, as I recall the name.

Q. Hazel Wood?

A. That is correct. And there was the waterfront organizer for San Francisco of the Communist Party, Walter Lambert. Those were the ones I recall at the moment. [2142]

Q. Now, on the occasion of this meeting, had you known Harry Bridges prior thereto?

A. I had met Bridges on various occasions. I have seen him in public.

Q. And had you met the defendant Henry Schmidt prior to this meeting? A. I had.

Q. Who was R. A. Pyle, who was also present?

A. He was the secretary of the American Radio Telegraphists' Association, Local 3, from San Francisco, at the moment—at that time.

Q. Had you attended prior to this meeting meetings of the Communist Party at which Mr. R. A. Pyle was also present?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me.

A. Various meetings.

Mr. MacInnis: Same objection; calling for the opinion and conclusion of this witness upon meetings between other persons, not binding upon the defendants.

Mr. Donohue: I am trying, if your Honor please, to meet the request of counsel by showing that this witness is able to state to your Honor and the jury that the meeting in question was a meeting of the Community Party, or, perhaps I should say, rather, was a Communist Party meeting by showing his intimate knowledge of the membership in the Communist Party of every person present. [2143]

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Did you move to strike that answer? I think he answered the question.

Mr. MacInnis: If you would like me to move to strike it, I will.

The Court: If there is a motion to strike, the motion is denied.

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the last question and answer.

(Question and answer read.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you know Mr. T. J. Van Ermen before the meeting about which we are now inquiring? A. I did.

Q. And who was Mr. Van Ermen?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That calls for the opinion and conclusion of the witness who a person is.

Mr. Donohue: Of course, I think the witness understands my asking that question is identifying him as being, as he said with respect to Pyle, associated with a local of the ARTA; just as if someone would ask me if I knew Mr. MacInnis, I would say I knew him as a member of the bar of the State of California. I think I am entitled to show that.

Mr. MacInnis: We are engaged in a lawsuit here, your Honor, and this man cannot bind other persons to any character that he wishes to ascribe to [2144] him.

Mr. Donohue: I am not trying to bind anybody. I thought your Honor's ruling on that matter was clear.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you answer the question.

A. You asked the question if I knew T. J. Van Ermen. I did. I had met him on several occasions in Seattle. He was the secretary of Local 6 of Seattle.

Q. Local 6 of the ARTA? A. ARTA.

Q. And had you, prior to this meeting about which we are inquiring, attended a Communist Party meeting at which Mr. T. J. Van Ermen was present? A. I did.

Mr. MacInnis: Same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Who was Mr. Harry Jackson?

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Harry Jackson——

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: One moment. The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: You may now answer.

A. Harry Jackson was a waterfront section organizer in Seattle for the Communist Party.

Q. Then you knew him to be a member of the Community Party? A. I did. [2145]

Mr. MacInnis: That is rather leading and suggestive.

Mr. Donohue: He said he was a Communist Party organizer on the waterfront in Seattle.

Mr. MacInnis: Then it is cumulative and repetitive of something that has already been answered, if that be the fact.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you know Walter Lambert prior to the time of this meeting?

A. I did.

Q. Who was Walter Lambert?

A. He was——

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. He was a waterfront section organizer in San Francisco for the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And who was Hazel Wood? Did you know her prior to this meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I did not know Hazel Wood; I met her for the first time when I attended the meeting in Long Beach.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And it is your testimony it was her apartment? A. Correct.

Q. At which this meeting was held. Will you tell us, Mr. [2146] Krolek, what was said and by whom in so far as you can recall it. Or may I strike that for a moment, if your Honor please? Mr. Krolek, have you exhausted your recollection as to the persons who were present at that meeting?

A. I believe I neglected to mention the name of Mervyn Rathborne.

Q. Did you know Mervyn Rathborne prior to this meeting? A. I did.

Q. And prior to the meeting about which we are inquiring had you attended meetings of the Communist Party at which Mervyn Rathborne was present?

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I attended several such meetings.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, Mr. Krolek, will you tell us as best you can recall it what was said and by whom at this meeting?

A. The meeting concerned itself with the matter of——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The witness has been asked to narrate a conversation. I think that he may do that by saying substantially what was said in his recollection by the persons present.

The Court: Counsel, he had only uttered three words.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. Those words were not the words of any declarant and any conversation. [2147]

Mr. Donohue: I had the definite impression, if your Honor please, that the witness—I may be in error—was about first to state the general tenor or purpose of the meeting; and I hope to go from that point to the point where he may tell us who said what with respect to what.

Mr. MacInnis: I have always understood that the purpose or tenor of a meeting was to be implied by the Court or jury out of the context of the statements attributed to persons, but that a winess could not give his opinion and conclusion and thus bind the Court and jury.

The Court: There may be several answers to that, counsel. One immediate answer would be the nature of the call of the meeting. They may receive a call. There may be many answers to it, I don't know, but I will overrule the objection.

A. You asked the general tenor of the meeting, I believe, Mr. Prosecutor. The meeting itself was concerned with discussion pertaining to the slate of progressive candidates that would be recommended on the floor of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific convention which was being held currently at that time. I believe that was the main purpose—the discussion of the individuals from the standpoint of presidency, vice presidency, secretaryship, and so forth—minor officials—of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific for the forthcoming year, and the program that was to be—was to have been determined upon at this meeting was the proponency or the [2148] sponsorship of certain people who the Communists, shall we say, and the liberal movement combined felt to be to the best interests of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Have you any recollection of what conclusion was reached in consequence of that meeting?

A. There were several. The full slate of the officers——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment, your Honor. Your Honor, first this man has been asked for a conversation, then pursuant to your Honor's ruling he was allowed to state first the general purpose of the meeting. Now the prosecutor has abandoned entirely any request for conversation to ask him now for the conclusion.

Mr. Donohue: Oh, no, I haven't.

Mr. MacInnis: We are entitled to know what was said and not be bound by any unnamed persons saying unmentioned things beyond the memory of the witness. No record could be complete and cross-examination would be utterly frustrated if we were to be bound by the opinion of the witness without any attempt to state a fact or a statement that is alleged to have been made by some person present.

Mr. Donohue: I suppose, if your Honor please, if I adopted the unhappy method employed by my distinguished adversary in making long and self-serving statements to the witness, calling for a negative or affirmative answer, I might avoid all these interruptions; but I think, if your Honor please, that one who [2149] has attended a meeting for a stated purpose, which he has stated, is certainly permitted to tell us what conclusion was reached, having in mind that your Honor has carefully instructed the jury that these matters are not binding upon these defendants but are only asked by me and testified to by the witness to show the character of the meeting.

The Court: With respect to the meetings wherein the defendants participated——

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor; and these defendants were present, two of them.

The Court: I haven't undertaken to limit the rule that the testimony is not binding with respect to meetings wherein they participated.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: Certainly if evidence is elicited material where you contend it is with respect to meetings wherein the defendants participated, I assume that the Government is offering that evidence as against the defendants for all purposes.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor.

The Court: I would assume that.

Mr. Donohue: Yes. The point that I had in mind was, if your Honor please, the nature of this meeting—and that is the purpose of the question—is to be determined by the jury.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: I think this: I feel that the witness should give to the best of his recollection the purport or the [2150] conversations, and attempt, so far as he is able and within the confines of his recollection, to ascribe the several conversations to the defendants, if any emanated from the defendants, and the pro and con of the conversation to the best of his recollection.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question.

The Court: And to omit a conclusion at this stage.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Krolek, can you tell us any of the conversation by any of the persons present at this meeting?

A. Obviously, after a lapse of so many years it is difficult for me to state it.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The witness is not allowed to make a comment upon the excellence of his own memory or upon his own credibility. That is purely a gratuitous, self-serving statement.

The Court: The objection is overruled, and the observation is likewise made that apparently this is a prefactory remark dealing with some matter.

The Witness: That is correct.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, isn't it for the jury to determine if his memory is dim or if he should be expected to remember more or less after a period of years? It isn't for the witness to say what he should be expected to remember.

Mr. Donohue: I think the Court ruled.

Mr. MacInnis: I haven't heard his Honor make any ruling. [2151]

Mr. Donohue: He did.

The Court: No, I haven't made any immediate ruling. I was thinking about the subject matter of your observations, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: And true enough, the credibility of a witness is for the jurors in the final analysis under instructions appropriately given by the Court. At the same time we cannot so circumscribe the language to the end that the witness be obliged to give categorical answers Yes or No. I think that in fairness to you, Mr. MacInnis, that was a prefatory statement. If it be considered otherwise, it may go out of the record so we will have no dispute about it hereafter.

All right, sir. [2152]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you continue, Mr. Krolek?

A. As I started to say, it is most difficult to specifically state that this——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor just allowed the same observation to go out. The man may say, "As best I can remember, this was said." I mean that would be perfectly proper.

The Witness: May I answer the question in this way?

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. There is a matter before the Court.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Yes, you may delete that from your remarks.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, will you answer the question, Mr. Krolek?

A. Everyone that was present at that meeting partook of the general discussion and the matter, the paramount matter of prime importance was the determination, the selection of the candidates, the slate of officers who would be supported by the progressive element in the currently held Maritime Federation convention.

Mr. MacInnis: We move to strike that answer as repetitive of what has already been said and as not responsive to the Court's suggestion, now, that this man give us as best he can what was said by whom.

The Court: The motion is denied. I indicated in my [2153] observation the purport of the conversations. I assume that would be within the definition of "purport."

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you recall anything, Mr. Krolek, which may have been said or was said by Mr. Bridges?

A. I might state this, that Mr. Bridges was chairman of the meeting.

Q. Do you recall any specific statement that he may have with respect to the purpose of that meeting or any of the incidents which occurred during the course of the meeting?

A. Well, presumably being chairman of the meeting, he must have introduced the subject.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: That is subject to Mr. MacInnis' motion.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to that going out, if Your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I think that the witness should be instructed——

The Court: Counsel, I have instructed him already.

Mr. MacInnis: I appreciate that, but I would suggest and ask Your Honor to instruct the witness to refrain from similar observations of his own opinion.

Mr. Donohue: Of course, if Your Honor pleases, Mr. MacInnis is within his right to object when he thinks objections are proper and within his duty, but it seems to me that the course of all these objections is futile in the light of the fact that as soon as a witness is subjected to cross-examination [2154] the same Mr. MacInnis asks for all kinds of conclusion on ~~the part~~ of a witness, in the light of which I think he might bear a little bit with us in the course of conducting this examination.

Mr. MacInnis: But what Mr. Donohue means by that is to criticize the law of evidence, which permits an entirely different rule to exist on cross-examination. The analogy——

Mr. Donohue: I will ask Your Honor to strike my own remark from the record. May I proceed to the witness, if Your Honor pleases?

The Court: Yes.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Krolek, have you exhausted your recollection with respect to anything that might have been said by any particular person who was present at this meeting?

A. I can't specifically state, Mr. Prosecutor, that anyone individually made any one specific statement.

Q. Now, having stated the purpose of this meeting, can you now tell us what, if any, conclusion was reached as a result of this meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection, Your Honor; having now stated under oath an inability to remember any specific statement which he can attribute to the lips of any person whom he says was present, I think, Your Honor, the witness is somewhat stultified from now going further and giving us a conclusion on a conversation which in whole he does not remember, and which [2155] in part he does not remember.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. The determination of the slate of candidates, as I best recall, for the presidency, the forthcoming presidency of the Maritime Federation was determined as Mr. James Ingstrom. The vice presidency I am not familiar with. I believe the subject of the secretaryship was involved, the question of Mr. Rathborne coming into the Maritime Federation from the position, that is, that he occupied at the time, as secretary of the District Council No. 3, I believe it was—District Council, to excuse me from San Francisco.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Did you subsequently attend the convention of the Maritime Federation?

A. I did. I was a delegate to that convention.

Q. And are you able to tell us, therefore, whether or not Mr. James Ingstrom, the candidate which your meeting had selected for nomination, was or was not elected?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The records of that convention would certainly be the best evidence, Your Honor, unless they are unavailable. And I think we should not receive secondary evidence, and the objection is upon that ground.

Mr. Donohue: This witness was present as a delegate, if Your Honor pleases; certainly he would know.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I tried in vain yesterday to [2156] elicit from a man who said he knew something about motions at a convention, and each time the prosecution——

The Court: No, he said the resolution he referred to was not the same resolution he had under discussion.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, and he said before that that Mr. Harry Bridges had bound himself to make that resolution.

The Court: I hoped and expected that we had completed the events of yesterday. I thought we had launched into a new day.

Mr. MacInnis: I would hope so, Your Honor.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: However, we may proceed with the witness.

A. I will answer the question this way, that none of the candidates who were discussed and proposed by the Communist fraction meeting referred to were subsequently elected by the convention as a whole.

Q. Did there come a later time, Mr. Krolek, when you attended Communist Party meetings at which either the defendant Harry Bridges or Henry Schmidt or both were also present?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor. The objection to that question is, it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, it is putting a character upon an alleged meeting before the witness himself gives any answer. I think he may be asked if there was any meeting where he met these men and then the Court and the jury can pass upon the type of meeting which it may turn out to be, if it existed.

Mr. Donohue: We have just been through this, if Your [2157] Honor pleases, and of course I shall, as I did before, bring out the detail of the meeting to justify the conclusion of the witness.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. There were other such meetings, yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): When was the next such meeting that you now recall?

A. I recall a meeting which was held in Portland, Oregon, at the time that the Maritime Federation Convention of the Pacific, after the one that I have just referred to—in other words, the succeeding year, took place.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Where in Portland, Oregon?

A. There were several such meetings. One was held in the New Lennox Hotel. Another was held in, I believe, the second story of the Bus Terminal Building, and another meeting was held in, I believe, a studio building on Park Street.

Q. And all of these places are in Portland, Oregon? A. That is correct.

Q. What is your best recollection as to the time at which these meetings took place?

A. May I clarify that? You mean, with respect to the year or the month?

Q. Yes. Let's begin with the year.

A. Well, the meetings took place in 1937, I would say, the second week of June, to the best of my recollection. [2158]

Q. Going back to the year 1936, the year during which the meeting you have just described took place, did you attend any other meeting at which either the defendant Harry Bridges or the defendant Henry Schmidt was present?

A. I attended, not a meeting, Mr. Prosecutor, but I was present at 121 Haight Street.

Q. When?

A. I would say two weeks after the meeting in Long Beach that I referred to. It was at the time when I subsequently returned on my way back to Portland, Oregon, and passing through San Francisco I had occasion to be present at 121 Haight Street.

The Court: Pardon me, Mr. Witness. The juror—Can you hear all right? Speak just a little slower.

The Witness: I tried to slow down a bit.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What was 121 Haight Street?

Mr. MacInnis: Same objection, Your Honor: calling for the opinion and conclusion of this witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. 121 Haight Street was the Communist Party headquarters in San Francisco.

Q. And this, you say, was shortly after the conclusion of the convention at Long Beach?

A. I would say about two weeks thereafter.

Q. Did you go to 121 Haight Street alone or were you accompanied by someone else? [2159]

A. No, sir, I was accompanied by Pringle and Pyle.

Q. And that is A. T. Pringle and R. A. Pyle?

A. That's correct.

Q. And those are the same persons concerning whom you have testified just a few minutes ago?

A. That is true.

Q. What occurred when you went to 121 Haight Street with these two men?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I couldn't hear that question.

The Court: Would you repeat the question?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What occurred when you went to 121 Haight Street with these two men?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we don't have the time or place or persons present. I would like to know if it is in advance of one of these meetings that these defendants are alleged to have been present, or any or either of them.

The Court: He said Mr. Pyle and Mr. Pringle accompanied him to this meeting.

Mr. Donohue: And the time is two weeks after the close of the Maritime Federation convention, and the place was 121 Haight Street, in the Communist Party headquarters.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, if this is not in the presence of the defendants,——

Mr. Donohue: We will get it in their presence.

The Court: This is preliminary, perhaps; if the presence [2160] is not indicated, I will make an appropriate ruling.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What occurred when you went to 121 Haight Street?

A. The two individuals with whom I stated I went to this meeting, and myself, were asked to remain in the corridor of the building, and Mr. Schomaker, Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt went inside an office, presumably in consultation with Mr. Schneidermann.

Mr. MacInnis: Now pardon me.

The Court: "Presumably" may go out.

Mr. MacInnis: "Presumably in consultation with Mr. Schneidermann?"

The Court: Yes, that may go out.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, the basis for that statement will be apparent in just a moment.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Now, let's get down to the physical facts. You went there with Pringle and Pyle?

A. Right.

Q. Whom did you see and in what part of the building when you first went into the building?

A. We walked in the entrance. I observed Mr. Bridges, Mr. Schmidt and through the opening of a door I was able to observe Mr. Schneidermann sitting in a room.

Q. And whom else did you see other than Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Bridges, and through the open door, Mr. Schneidermann? [2161]

A. Schomaker was present.

Q. And will you tell us what occurred after you saw these three men in the corridor? A. Yes.

Q. What did you see them do?

A. We waited a considerable period of time, after which we became impatient and started to inquire as to when this discussion would be concluded, and the appointment——

Q. Pardon me. You may not testify——

Mr. MacInnis: We don't want to hear what he said to other persons.

Mr. Donohue: I was just about to advise him that we were not permitted to ask you what was said to you by any person unless it may have been either of these defendants.

The Witness: I am sorry.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): But in consequence of what was said——

The Court: Or in the presence of the defendants.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Or in the presence of the defendants. In consequence of anything that was said, did you do anything?

A. We waited.

Q. And what happened? How long did you wait, can you tell us?

A. Waited a very extensive length of time. I would say better than an hour.

Q. And during that period of time was there anyone else with you other than Pringle and [2162] Pyle?

A. Those are the only ones I can recall.

Q. And did there come a time when the door opened and if so, tell us what happened.

A. I don't recall the fact that either Mr. Bridges or Mr. Schmidt left, as I did not see them leave. But the word was communicated to all three of us——

Q. You may not testify to what was said to you. Did there come a time when you left the building?

A. We did.

Q. And up to the time when you left the building, did you ever again see Mr. Schmidt or Mr. Bridges? A. I did not.

Q. And as far as you are able to tell us, they were still in that room where you saw them enter?

A. Correct.

Mr. Donohue: I wonder if we might take the recess?

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to move to strike this whole colloquy. The prosecutor promised us that he would lead us to some purpose in a moment.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Now it appears that this man looked in a room and saw Harry Bridges, and then didn't see him thereafter. Didn't hear him speak or anything else.

Mr. Donohue: Maybe he didn't hear him. He said he looked in a room in Communist Party headquarters in which Mr. Schneidermann was present and saw Mr. Bridges and Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Schomaker go in. [2163]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, that wouldn't throw any light on this case, any more than it would be a matter of defense to show that on other occasions Mr. Bridges has been sitting with some bank president in San Francisco.

The Court: Well, no doubt counsel hereafter, as well as the defense, will argue circumstances in this case?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: The motion is denied, counsel.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I admonish you again not to discuss this case with any person or persons nor to converse with anyone on the subject of the trial, not to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

We will take the morning recess.

(Recess.) [2164]

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, you may.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Krolek, do you know now who Hazel Wood was?

A. Hazel Wood, I understand, is the wife of Walter Lambert.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And it was her apartment at which this meeting was held about which you have testified?

A. True.

Q. Mr. Krolek, has any reward or compensation been offered to you by the United States in return for your testifying here?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. He is cross-examining his own witness.

Mr. Donohue: I am not cross-examining him.

Mr. MacInnis: That is for the Court and jury to determine, after all his testimony is offered.

Mr. Donohue: I think that is a question I am entitled to ask this witness on direct examination.

Mr. MacInnis: The question can be asked on cross-examination.

Mr. Donohue: Why can't I ask it?

Mr. MacInnis: Because it is a question that goes to the credibility of the witness.

Mr. Donohue: I may even be bound by the question, and I am willing to be bound by it.

Mr. MacInnis: Then it is a self-serving question, your [2165] Honor.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Will you answer the question.

A. There was no compensation offered me, no, sir.

Q. Have any promises been made to you in return for your coming in to testify today by the United States? A. None whatever.

Q. Or by any of its agents? A. No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: You may have the witness.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. You say that it was in the winter of 1935 that you became Comrade Conrad, is that right?

A. That is true.

Q. And you were a member, according to your lights, of this Communist Party when you went to Long Beach in 1936? A. Correct.

Q. What was the month of that meeting that you described in the apartment at Long Beach?

A. The meeting, I believe, as I believe I stated in my testimony, was the latter part of May, 1936.

Q. The latter part of May, 1936. And did you say that the name of the apartments was the Venetian Square Apartments?

A. That is correct.

Q. What floor did you say that apartment was on? [2166]

A. I believe I stated on the third floor.

Q. And you described the kind of staircase that you climbed in order to reach it?

A. Quite true.

Q. What kind of a staircase was it?

A. Very narrow stairway, I would say possibly three feet in breadth, which was surrounded by an iron railing—wrought iron railing.

Q. And when you got to the third floor landing, this apartment was on what side, the right or the left? A. As I recall, it was on the left.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. The left side. Mr. Krolek, have you been down to that apartment since May of 1936?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When.

A. I would say approximately two and a half weeks ago.

Q. So that is why you can tell us based on your supposed memory of fourteen years ago——

Mr. Donohue: Object to that, your Honor——

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis, Continuing): ——the name and the floor and the left side?

Mr. Donohue: That is argumentative.

Mr. MacInnis: I will withdraw the question.

Mr. Donohue: You shouldn't have asked the question in the first place. [2167]

Mr. MacInnis: I will select such procedure as I will choose myself.

Mr. Donohue: No; I think you should select such procedure as his Honor chooses.

Mr. MacInnis: I will always try to obey the rulings of the Court.

Mr. Donohue: You didn't obey it then.

Mr. MacInnis: But not the ruling suggested by you in advance.

The Witness: May I offer a comment, your Honor?

The Court: Certainly.

The Witness: This visit that I made approximately three weeks ago was as a matter of fact made at no expense to the Government. I happened to be in Los Angeles at the time and I was asked by the Government if I could identify, of my own volition and free will and without any prompting, the apartment in which this meeting was held, and I volunteered to do so, and I did so.

Mr. MacInnis: We appreciate that you are quite willing to give this testimony, Mr. Krolek.

Q. Was anyone from the Immigration Department of the United States with you in Long Beach at the time?

A. Correct. I was accompanied by a gentleman.

Q. Who?

A. One of the officials from the Department in Los Angeles. [2168]

Q. What was his name?

A. I have it here. Shall I answer the question?

The Court: Yes. Counsel asked you——

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You mean you are unwilling to answer questions put to you by the defense even when they are asked you, unless the Court orders you?

The Court: Mr. MacInnis——

Mr. MacInnis: That reflects the tendency of the witness, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: Let the jury decide that. It isn't for you to say.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, it is.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I again state to you that I am reluctant to interfere with the cross-examiner at any stage. I have tried to refrain from any interference during the last several days, but I know that you must know that this practice and procedure is not in keeping with orderly court procedure.

Mr. MacInnis: May I respectfully say this to your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: We have a man who has been brought here; the Government itself elicited the question, "Have you been offered any reward?" The man has given a story with perfect details about a place he visited fourteen years ago. Then I asked him a question on cross-examination, "Who was with you?" and he turns and he asks the Court's permission before he will [2169] even answer it.

The Court: No, no. He said this—Is the record available? Will you read the question and answer so we will have a clear concept of what occurred in the record.

> (Record read as follows: "What was his name?" "A. I have it here. Shall I answer the question?")

Mr. MacInnis: And may the record show that the witness turned to the Court when he made that statement?

The Court: You haven't the text. There was a colloquy between Mr. Donohue and Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. Donohue: It follows the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: Do you have that colloquy that occurred?

The Reporter: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: May I have it?

(Record read.)

The Court: I think I have sufficient. As I understood it, the witness turned to me to ask whether he could answer the question from a memorandum. Is that you have in your pocket?

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: I assumed that he had a memorandum because he was reaching into his pocket.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not in doubt about that, your Honor.

The Court: I think it was apparent. [2170]

Mr. MacInnis: Your observation is the same as mine.

The Court: As though he had a memorandum with a name on it.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. The point is, he turned and asked your Honor before he would answer the question, even though there was no objection by the prosecution.

The Court: All right. I was about to say, maybe we are drawing too fine. I have no reflection on you, but I thought the man was reaching in his pocket.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor was quite correct on that.

Q. Having consulted this memorandum, who was the person who met you or accompanied you in Long Beach at that time?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. The gentleman is John R. Heldring.

Q. John Helderle?

A. Heldring—H-e-l-d-r-i-n-g.

Q. Is he in the courtroom now?

A. I don't believe he is.

Q. Was he the only person from the Immigration Service whom you saw in Long Beach on that occasion? A. Correct.

Q. And on that occasion you went to this place which you call the Venetian Square Apartments, you went to the physical apartments, did you?

A. Right.

Q. Did you walk up to the third floor? [2171]

A. I did.

Q. Did you observe this narrow staircase and put your hand upon the wrought iron stairway side wall? A. Precisely.

Q. And you walked up to the third floor landing again two and a half weeks ago and saw that the door to this apartment was on the left?

A. That is correct. I might ask you—answer your question this way: that I believe I stated in the testimony that I was not certain—certainly not certain as to the room number, and I merely described the location of this room geographically.

Q. We understand you, Mr. Krolek. Now, Mr. Krolek, in addition to the precise description which you gave us about the apartment and how it was situated, although disclaiming any good memory on other things of fourteen years ago——

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Donohue: That is argumentative, your Honor, and is highly improper.

The Court: It is argumentative, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: I will rephrase the question.

Q. You did tell us the names of persons whom you say you now recall as being present, is that right? A. Right.

Q. You were able to give us the names of about eight persons, giving us initials of each person, weren't you? [2172] A. True.

Q. And I think you said that one man's name was T. C. Van Ermen, is that right? A. T. J.

Q. T. J. And you said another man's last name was Pyle? A. Right.

Q. What were his initials? A. R. A. Pyle.

Q. Another man named Pringle?

A. Correct.

Q. You gave his initials, too?

A. Right; A. T. Pringle.

Q. You gave the full name of Harry Jackson?

A. That is right.

Q. And the full name of Hazel Wood, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Before taking the stand this morning as a witness on behalf of the prosecution had you seen any written memorandum at all in which those names were listed? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you see that?

A. On several occasions. I may state at this time in the year 1939 I offered testimony to the

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Federal Bureau of Investigation consisting of approximately six or seven pages, at which time my memory was considerably more refreshed, shall we [2173] say, than it is at the moment with respect to the activity of certain people in the Communist movement.

Q. You gave testimony in 1939 before the Federal Bureau of Investigation? A. I did.

Q. And were you shown that testimony or a transcript of it? A. I was.

Q. Were you shown any other documents with a list of the names of the eight people you have given us today?

A. The names of those eight people I had recalled in 1939; consequently my memory, of course, was refreshed.

Q. The last question was, Had you seen any other list with those names upon it?

A. I have not.

Q. You have not? A. No, sir.

Q. How lengthy a statement did you give to the Federal Buerau of Investigation in 1939?

A. I believe I said about six or seven pages.

Q. About six or seven pages. Now, with reference to these names and these lists—I see you keep looking down into the courtroom where Mr. Kaiser is sitting.

A. I will confine my direct look to you, if you wish.

Q. You may look where you chose, Mr. Witness,

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

but were you looking at Mr. Kaiser at that [2174] moment? A. Not at all.

Q. I will tell you why I asked that question——

Mr. Donohue: I don't think it is important why counsel asked the question, and I don't think the question was pertinent in the first place.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor will perceive——

Mr. Donohue: I don't think he partakes of the Divine. Only the Divine can tell where the man was looking in the courtroom, not Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: You have asked a lot of these people questions that only the Divine could answer.

Mr. Donohue: I think, Mr. MacInnis, that if you read the record you will find that 90 per cent of the record is taken by your verbose questions and about only 10 per cent with what the witness says.

Mr. MacInnis: I will cheerfully accept this criticism if I may be permitted to go on.

Q. When you were asked by the prosecutor, who just now chided me on my manner of conducting the case, about this list of people, you left out the name of Mervyn Rathborne at first, did you not?

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And you were looking out toward the courtroom at that moment, were you not?

A. I can't particularly recall. I don't [2175] believe so.

Q. Didn't you notice at that time that Mr. Kaiser rose from his seat with a document that he had, walked up to this gentleman, Mr. Boyd, who in turn transmitted a note to Mr. Donohue, and then by some process which I won't call Divine, you were then enabled to add the name of Mervyn Rathborne to your list; is that correct?

A. The only action I was observant of was the transmission of a yellow piece of paper to Mr. Donohue, but I am certainly not stating that such action prompted my addition of Mr. Rathborne's name.

Mr. Donohue: I think I should observe at this time, without any comment on my part, that Mr. MacInnis has been carrying messages—I should say Mr. Hallinan has been carrying messages to Mr. MacInnis for three days. I have made no point on that.

Mr. MacInnis: I have been cross-examining the Government's witnesses without memoranda, knowing all the background of their testimony.

Mr. Donohue: You not only had memoranda; you have had records and books. I never saw so many papers.

Mr. MacInnis: We do the best we can, it is true.

Q. Now, with reference to your meeting in Long Beach with the member of the Immigration Service whose name you have offered us, when did you make the arrangement to meet him in that city for the purposes which you have described? [2176]

A. I made the arrangement by telephone. I happened to be staying in Los Angeles at the time, and I called this particular gentleman. I was asked if my cooperation could be elicited by Mr. Donohue in San Francisco and I told him that it would be; that I would call the gentleman upon my arrival in Los Angeles, which I did.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. In respect to you, let us take one thing at a time. You telephoned the Immigration Service in Los Angeles?

A. I contacted the Immigration Service.

Q. You mean you went to their office?

A. By telephone.

Q. A moment ago I asked you if you telephoned and you said that you "contacted" the Immigration Service.

A. I believe you phrased the question to indicate there was something different in your mind.

Q. You contacted by telephone the Immigration Service in Los Angeles, you being down there on business, is that right? A. Correct.

Q. You weren't contacted first on that occasion by the Immigration Service, but you instigated the contact by placing a phone call to that office?

A. I was asked to contact the Immigration Service in Los Angeles.

Q. Now, who made that request of you?

A. The Immigration Department in San Francisco. [2177]

Q. And when was that request made?

A. Say possibly three or four weeks ago.

Q. What person made that request to you?

A. As a matter of fact, I was visited by Mr. Meyers at my home, and the request was made by him.

Q. Who is Mr. Meyers?

A. A gentleman that I understand is connected with the prosecution of the case.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Is he here in court?

A. I see him sitting there in the rear, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: May we ask that Mr. Meyers stand and identify himself.

(A gentleman arose in the body of the courtroom.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was he the first man from the Immigration Service to whom you had talked? A. By no means.

Q. Now, before you talked to Mr. Meyer or Meyers, as the case may be, whom had you talked to before?

A. Various individuals, representatives of the Immigration Department. I spoke to Mr. Donohue, as a matter of fact, when he called on me in my home, which happened to be last Memorial Day.

Q. Mr. Donohue called at your home on Memorial Day? A. That is correct.

Q. That is your home at Belmont? [2178]

A. That is correct.

Q. Was he alone, or was any other person with him?

A. Well, he—the remarks to me were made alone by him.

Q. You mean if there was someone with him, that person did not enter the house with him?

A. He did not.

Q. Mr. Donohue, however, paid a call upon you upon Memorial Day? A. That is right.

Q. And was taken inside of the house?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Right.

Q. Did you discuss this case then?

A. We did.

Q. How long a time was consumed by that interview or conversation?

A. I would imagine possibly three-quarters of an hour to one hour.

Q. Mr. Donohue was entirely alone?

A. He was alone in my home, yes.

Q. Had you met him before?

A. I had not.

Q. In your home was your wife present during the conversation? A. She was.

Q. And you hadn't met him before?

A. I hadn't. [2179]

Q. He introduced himself to you on that holiday and stayed an hour or so talking about this case?

A. Correct.

Q. Before Mr. Donohue thus visited you on Memorial Day, had you seen any other person connected with this prosecution? A. Several.

Q. Would you name them, please.

A. I would say possibly the one most important in the order of—that is, from the standpoint of the trial would be Bruce Barber.

Q. Yes, I guess he is rather important. He is chief of the Immigration Service, is he?

A. So I am told. [2180]

Q. Where had you seen him?

A. Called at my home several times. As a matter of fact, I remember, possibly as far back as a year ago.

Q. Was he alone at that time?

A. The occasions were various; sometimes he contacted me when he was alone and sometimes there were others with him.

Q. About how many times did he contact you?

A. Possibly three or four.

Q. And was he the first person from the Immigration Service or from this prosecution to contact you? A. Correct.

Q. On the visit that you have now described?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that was about a year ago?

A. Right.

Q. From that point onward in time, how many contacts or visitations did you have with persons connected with the prosecution of this case?

A. Numerous.

Q. Pardon? A. Very many, I would say.

Q. Would you make——

A. On the order of, oh, possibly a dozen—maybe more.

Q. How many times were these men to your house?

A. It would be very hard to name. They were there quite a [2181] number of times, yes.

Q. Have you met Mr. Kaiser? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Has he had some interview with you?

A. He has.

Q. How many times?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Possibly three times.

Q. Did you give him any written statement on this case?

A. I gave no written statement to Mr. Kaiser, no.

Q. Did you go over any portion of your testimony with Mr. Kaiser?

A. I went over portions of my previous testimony which I gave to the FBI with other individuals.

Q. I am speaking of the testimony that you have offered us here in court.

A. The matter of testimony, I believe that I am citing here, I did offer in written form, yes, to the Immigration Department.

Q. When did you make a written statement in connection with this case, first?

A. Possibly a month ago.

Q. Where was that?

A. Made here in San Francisco.

Q. Who was present and where?

A. Mr. Meyers was present and took my deposition.

Q. Anyone else? [2182]

A. That is all; the stenographer.

Q. Just you, Mr. Meyers and his stenographer?

A. Right.

Q. Have you met Mr. Boyd?

A. I met him this morning.

Q. You had not met him before?

A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And how many times in all had you seen or been interviewed by Mr. Meyers?

A. I would say probably half a dozen.

Q. You are living at home, of course, now, in Belmont?

A. Well, whenever I am home, yes.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. I travel extensively.

Q. Well, isn't that your fixed place of residence?

A. Belmont is my legal residence, yes.

Q. Now, when I asked you a few moments ago about the name of the person who accompanied you in Long Beach to the Venetian Square Apartments you indicated at least that you would have to refresh your memory on that person's name from a memorandum, is that right?

A. That's correct, because his name is rather unusual, and I wanted to get the correct pronunciation.

Q. May I see that memorandum?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor [2183] pleases.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Your Honor, a memorandum——

The Court: Did the witness resort to the memorandum?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, he did.

Mr. Donohue: I don't know.

The Witness: I did not resort to the memorandum. If it pleases the Court, I can submit the contents of my bilifold and you will not find the name of John Heldering in it.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Your Honor, he told us he had to look at his memorandum because it was such an unusual name.

The Court: If the witness resorted to the memorandum, you may have it on cross-examination. Apparently he did not. Is that correct?

The Witness: I did not. I started to look in my notebook, and the thought came back to me that I did not have the name, and I recalled it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you have some other memoranda on this case?

A. I have no memorandums whatever.

Q. How many times did you see Mr. Barber in all?

A. I believe I answered the question previously; three times or so.

Q. Did you stay last night in San Francisco?

A. No, I stayed in Los Angeles.

Q. You just arrived from some business trip?

A. Correct. [2184]

Q. And how many times in all did you tell us that you had seen Mr. Kaiser?

Mr. Donohue; Oh, I object, if Your Honor please; I don't know what the purpose of this perpetual and continuous questioning of the witness is. Mr. MacInnis knows, as every lawyer knows, that no one puts a witness on the stand unless he has talked to the witness to find out what the witness will say. If Mr. MacInnis will state to Your Honor that his purpose in this line of questioning is to show that we have influenced or persuaded or intimidated or promised reward to any witness for his testimony, I will have no objection to any number of questions. But it seems to me it is repetitious, it serves no purpose except the purpose of delay.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it serves this purpose: This witness in the first instance gave us a very vivid account of a meeting and described a place perfectly. Then it comes out that two and a half weeks ago he was taken there by a member of the Immigration Service and walked over the same ground. Now, obviously,—

The Court: I think, if I may interrupt you, there is a slight correction. As I understand his testimony, to the best of my recollection, he stated under oath that he was not taken there, that he went there of his own volition.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, yes, he did say that.

The Court: That it was at the behest of the Department of [2185] Immigration, to determine whether he, the witness, might, independently of any outside influences or persuasion or the like, identify the place. Is that correct, sir?

The Witness: That is correct, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, when you say that you have made no memorandum, that statement applies to the meeting that you say you attended in May of 1936, at Long Beach?

A. That is true. I made no memorandum on any subject in connection with this case.

Q. You mentioned a union in which I think you said you held membership, the ARTA, is that correct? A. Correct.

Q. What is the full name of those initials?

A. American Radio Telegraphists Association.

Q. And when did you leave that union, if you ever did?

A. I left the union, Local No. 8, which I testified I was secretary of in Portland, at the conclusion of the 1935-1936 strike—or the '36-'37 strike, I beg your pardon. And I came to San Francisco and assumed the duties of acting secretary of Local 3 of that same union.

Q. You were still a member of the union, then, when you came to San Francisco?

A. Correct.

Q. Could you tell us when you left that [2186] union?

A. Well, the question is difficult to answer, in this respect, that I had no occasion to pursue the activity of the type for which the union had control; that is, namely, the placement of radio operators aboard vessels. And I gravitated into other fields. I might give you this instance, that when I did leave the union, that the, shall we say, the people that were in control of certain activities in the union regarded me, as, in the vernacular, a Trotskyite and I was thereupon blacklisted by the union, and of course the interpretation by the employer class naturally being that I was also a Communist, I was naturally blacklisted by the employers, so for that reason I went into my own business.

Q. Now, in what month of what year did you deem that you left the union?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. I would say in July of 1937.

Q. Now, were you an officer of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific?

A. I was secretary-treasurer of District Council No. 3.

Q. And for what period of time did you hold that office?

A. Not quite concurrently with that of my duties as secretary of Local No. 8 in Portland.

Q. What do you mean by "not quite concurrently"?

A. I believe I indicated that my tenure of office in Local No. 8 was approximately a year and a half, and my tenure in the Maritime Federation was about one year. [2187]

Q. Did you resign from that office in the Maritime—— A. I did.

Q. What was the reason for that?

A. I had pneumonia and I had to come to San Francisco with it.

Q. And do you remember what time that resignation took effect?

A. The resignation took effect right after the conclusion of the 1936-'37 maritime strike.

Q. Which was about in what month of 1937?

A. February, I believe, of 1937.

Q. And then you came to San Francisco, is that right? A. Correct.

Q. Now, you tell us that you joined the Communist Party in the winter of 1935 and remained in as a member until the spring of 1937?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. That is correct.

Q. Is that correct? A. Correct.

Q. You told us about some of your employment. Now, you worked in Waltham, Massachusetts during some part of the war, did you not?

A. I did not work in Waltham, Massachusetts. I worked in various localities; my work principally in the Bay Area. I went out on several task force units in connection with the war effort. I was a radar engineer. [2188]

Q. For what companies were you working?

A. For the Raytheon Manufacturing Company in Waltham, Massachusetts.

Q. Yes. And later you worked at the Naval Shipyards as a, did you say, electronics engineer?

A. I was supervising electronics engineer.

Q. That was here in San Francisco?

A. That's right.

Q. And what period did that cover?

A. It covered slightly better than one year.

Q. And what was that year?

A. Well, the year was 1946, as a matter of fact, until September of 1946 to be exact.

Q. Have you told us about all of your employment, to the best of your memory?

A. I believe so.

Q. Did you have any other government job that you haven't told us about?

A. I had a job with the National Youth Administration for a while, yes—just prior to the war.

Q. Called the NYA? A. Right.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And in what period of time did you work with that organization?

A. Upon the termination of my employment with Mr. W. F. Olson, [2189] until shortly before the advent of Pearl Harbor.

Q. In any of these government employments or employments connected with the war effort, were you given any loyalty questionnaire or check?

A. I was given many.

Q. And in those many loyalty questionnaires, were you asked if you had ever been a member of the Communist Party? A. I was.

Q. When was the first of such loyalty tests that you took?

A. I would say the most extensive would be, to answer your question directly, it was the one that was given to me prior to entering employment with the Raytheon Manufacturing Company.

Q. Did you have a similar or further checkup or test when you came to the Naval Shipyards in San Francisco? A. I did.

Q. Back in 1941 did you have such a test?

A. I did.

Q. And similar questions had been asked you at that time? A. Correct.

Q. You said that you were born in Canada, is that right? A. Correct.

Q. Brought here when you were an infant?

A. Right.

Q. And that your father was naturalized?

A. That is true. [2190]

Q. Is he living? A. No, sir.

Q. Where was he naturalized?

A. Naturalized in Glendive, Montana, in the year 1919.

Q. Now, as to the Communist Party, during the periods of time that you say you held membership, you say that you attended at least 30 to 35 meetings, is that true? A. That's correct.

Q. Were those meetings meetings which bore various titles? That is, was one or were all meetings the same, or did they have different names?

A. They were unit meetings, section meetings and fraction meetings.

Q. Those were the three general types of meeting, is that true? A. Correct.

Q. Did you ever attend meetings in which members of the Communist Party gathered to discuss some subject with persons who were not members of the party? A. I did.

Q. What were those meetings called?

A. They had no specific name; they were termed generally "open meetings."

Q. Opening meetings.

A. Any one of a liberal, progressive nature that cared to [2191] attend, I believe, was welcome to do so.

Q. Well, would there have been meetings during this period of time between members of the Communist Party and persons in the labor movement who might be sympathetic but who were not actually members of the Communist Party?

A. Those meetings were quite frequent, and they were generally called for the indirect purpose of organization.

Q. In other words, on those occasions the persons who were asked to attend along with the members of the Communist Party were being urged to support some move which would be to the good of the labor movement generally?

A. That is right.

Q. And maybe particularly to the good of the Communist Party? A. Quite true.

Q. So that the non-Communists and the Communists, to that extent, could work together on those occasions? A. Exactly.

Q. Could a non-Communist attend, on any kind of occasion, a Communist meeting by invitation?

A. No, sir.

Q. There would never be such a purpose?

A. True Communist meeting was called only for Communists, and of course was called by the extension of an invitation to people who were known Communists.

Q. About how many meetings do you recall having attended in [2192] which members of the Communist Party, that is, persons who were in your opinion members of the Communist Party, met along with trade unionists who may not have been members of the Communist Party?

A. That is a difficult thing to state. There were many of them. I don't recall the exact number.

Q. You couldn't recall that very well?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Very difficult.

Q. And actually, of course, your acquaintanceship with the Communist Party, I suppose, had begun to dwindle before you actually dropped out?

A. That's correct. I think I began the explanation of that in my testimony, that I discovered in 1937 that the—shall we say, the emasculation of the Communist Party of the true liberal movement was such that I could no longer tolerate it, and consequently I dropped out. I might say in connection with that, further, that considerable amounts of money were being poured in before the Committee of Industrial Organization, that was then headed by Lewis for the CIO, and before it was officially set up, and that a portion of those monies were diverted into Communist channels for the organization of Communists, rather than those of trade unionists.

Q. Was John L. Lewis a Communist, in your opinion?

A. I have no knowledge; I understand not.

Q. Now, you said a few moments ago that when you began to [2193] leave the union, I think the ARTA, that you were called a Trotskyite?

A. That's correct.

Q. What is a Trotskyite?

A. Well, the liberal interpretation of a Trotskyite is a man who at one time has been a member of the Communist Party and then deviates for some reason of an independent nature away from its policies—that is, away from its policies in the line of blind obedience. Let's put it this way.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Now, this disillusionment that you had with the Communist Party came into your mind probably not suddenly or immediately but over a period of months, at least? A. It did.

Q. When would you say that you began to be disillusioned with the Communist Party?

A. I would say the early part of the spring of 1937.

Q. And that was when you left the party?

A. Well, I would consider officially, possibly leaving the party at a time when one of the gentlemen that I mentioned as being in the ARTA was brought up for charges by a Communist section for non-obedience.

Q. About what month of 1937 was that?

A. That was, I would say, June of 1937.

Q. About what time, the early part of that month or the late part? [2194]

A. It is difficult for me to say.

Q. You haven't any real memory on that part of it?

A. No, I recall it was in the spring of 1937.

Q. And thereafter you had nothing to do with the Communist Party?

A. Obviously, by the nature of the fact that I resigned and the fact that I took an oath of opposition to the program of blind obedience to the party, expressed in that meeting, I had, of course, only one alternative left for me.

Q. In the spring of 1937, when you began to feel that the Communist Party was not the great organization that you had previously thought, did you convey your sentiments to other people?

A. I believe I was rather expressive about it in some meetings.

Q. I mean before you actually resigned; was there a gradual period in which you began to criticize different matters and then finally got out yourself? A. That is exactly right.

Q. And that began, that critical attitude on your part, in the early spring of '37, and continued until the incident when the man whom you knew was disciplined? A. That is true.

Q. Did you speak openly about your feelings to other people?

A. On that particular occasion I spoke openly about my feelings in this meeting and I did criticize the policies of [2195] the party on the floor of trade union meetings.

Q. So that by the late spring of 1937, it would have been fairly well known that you were, to say the least, not a good party member and that you were probably about to get out?

A. I would say definitely.

Q. And yet you tell us this morning that in the second week of June of 1937, that you attended a Communist meeting in the Lennox Hotel, the New Lennox Hotel in Portland, Oregon?

A. That's correct.

Mr. MacInnis: Whatever Your Honor's pleasure is. I know that for the convenience of the jury and for ourselves, we have all agreed that this is going to be a Christmas shopping afternoon, and I think that probably it would be better to adjourn than to ~~go on.~~

The Court: I assume you have considerable additional material?

Mr. MacInnis: I have, Your Honor.

The Court: All right. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury,——

The witness is instructed to return Monday next, the 12th of December, at 11:00 o'clock.

The Witness: Right.

The Court: Without further order.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will regularly adjourn this case until next Monday, the 12th of December, at 11:00 o'clock in the morning. Not 10:00 o'clock but 11:00 [2196] o'clock, by reason of the fact that I have other little matters. And in the interim may I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any circumstances, nor to converse with any person on any subject of the trial, nor to form nor express an opinion hereon or thereon until the matter is finally submitted to you.

We will stand regularly adjourned, then, until next Monday, the 12th of December, at 11:00 o'clock. This court otherwise stands adjourned until 10:00 o'clock next Monday.

(Thereupon the case at bar was adjourned until Monday, December 12, 1949, at 11:00 o'clock a.m.) [2197]

Monday, December 12, 1949—10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: United States v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. MacInnis, with further cross-examination.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Kermit Charles Krolek, heretofore sworn.

KERMIT CHARLES KROLEK

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Krolek, you were telling us on Friday last about many meetings which you attended in which there were Communist Party members and also people who were not members of the Communist Party; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And those meetings, I think you said in substance, would be meetings where the Communist Party members and various progressive persons or members of the so-called liberal groups would have the same end in view, is that correct?

Mr. Donohue: Just a minute, Mr. Witness, please. If your Honor please, the question has already been answered.

The Court: Overruled.

A. That is correct.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And I think you said that a meeting [2198] where members of the Communist Party met with trade union leaders or other people who were not members would be called an open meeting? A. That is true.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Did you have any categories into which you would divide the phrase "open meetings"?

A. Not specifically.

Q. Well, now, for example, if a group of Communist Party members, let us say 10 or 12 of them, were assembled, and there were three trade union leaders who were not Communist Party members invited to join, would that be an open meeting?

A. That would be.

Q. Suppose you had the same group and there were only two trade union leaders who were not Communist Party members invited, would that be an open meeting? A. Correct.

Q. Suppose you had the same meeting of Communist Party members and only one trade union leader who was not a member, would that still be an open meeting?

A. That would be an open meeting. May I qualify that statement by this fact: that to people who were in the Communist Party as well as union leaders themselves, there were occasions at which, for practical purposes, a meeting could be considered a Communist Party meeting and yet have an outsider who may not have been a Communist Party member present at that [2199] meeting.

Q. That is exactly what I was probing to discover. In other words, there would be a real Communist Party meeting and yet there could be a person present, trade union leader or otherwise, who might not himself be a member of the Communist Party? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mr. Krolek, going back as best you can, over the period of time in which you were actually a Communist Party member, can you recall for us the names of any trade union leaders who were not Communist Party members but who attended meetings of the Communist Party or meetings with Communist Party members?

A. It is difficult to recall offhand. I believe one such individual might have been the leader of the Alaska Fishermen's Union in Portland; I believe his name was Martin Olson, who I do recall on several occasions was present at meetings.

Q. That would be Communist Party meetings?

A. That is correct.

Q. Yet he was not a member of the Communist Party?

A. He was not a member of the Communist Party in name, but in fact, for practical purposes, he might be so considered.

Q. In other words, he may have been a sympathizer, and even a deep sympathizer, but he wasn't actually a member of the Communist Party? [2200]

A. That is correct.

Q. Can you think of any other labor leader who fell into that category?

Mr. Donohue: I think I will have to object, if your Honor please. I don't think that this is a matter which was asked of the witness on direct examination, and I am sure it is not for the purpose of impeaching the witness. I think we are going far afield, talking about other labor leaders. There are only three on trial.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, ——

The Court: Overruled.

A. There may have been others; possibly John Brost in Portland. I recall the name of one man who I believe was present at meetings that were strictly sponsored by the Communists, and yet I don't believe he was a Communist.

The Court: What was his last name?

A. Brost, B-r-o-s-t.

Q. John Brost? A. Brost.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What was his labor affiliation?

A. I believe he was connected with the ILWU.

Q. And he was not a member of the Communist Party? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. But I suppose he was deemed to sympathize with the general objectives of the Communist Party? [2201] A. That is correct.

Q. About how many meetings can you recall that this man Brost attended with Communist Party members.

A. It is very difficult to say. I recall him associated with one meeting; that is, I recall his presence there.

Q. You can recall at least one meeting specifically? A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Concerning the man named Olson, who was a director of the Alaska Canneries' Union, did you say? A. Alaska Fishermen's Union.

Q. Can you recall more than one such meeting which he attended?

A. I could not specifically state, no.

Q. I don't mean specifically, because I don't expect any exact dates, but is it your general recollection that Olson attended more than one meeting with members of the Communist Party?

A. I would say several; possibly two or three.

Q. And again those would be meetings which you called Communist Party meetings?

A. That is correct.

Q. Although Olson was actually not a member of the Communist Party?

A. That is correct. May I make this differentiation, however, qualify your question, that such meetings that were [2202] sponsored by the Communist Party, that is, held for a general trade union purpose, made no reference in those meetings of any sort pertaining to strictly Communist matters. In other words, the question of recruitment or organization as proposed by the Communist Party was not a point of discussion. The meeting was one of a strictly trade union nature.

Q. Now, you said, when you were asked about the reasons that motivated you to drop out of the Communist Party, that you discovered in early 1937 that the Communist Party had been emasculated of the true liberal spirit; is that about correct?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Well, the phrasing isn't exactly that. I believe I stated that the Communist Party had emasculated the liberal spirit, or, rather, liberal movement, the trade union organizational movement that was more or less spontaneous at that time, that was growing throughout the country. [2203]

Q. Yes. Now, was that a statement that you made fairly openly at the time?

A. I put it this way: I took issue with the policies of the Communist Party on the floor of meetings, yes.

Q. And by the phrase "emasculated" I suppose you meant that the Communists had robbed the liberal movement of its vigor or vitality or virility? A. That's correct.

Q. Now, the word "emasculated" as applied to the Communist Party in that sense was the criticism that the so-called "Trotskyites" were always applying to the Communist Party, isn't that true?

A. That might be.

Q. In other words, a man who was labeled a Trotskyite would be a person who said that the Communist Party had emasculated the true liberal trend out of the movement?

A. Well, that may or may not be the case. That is, the symptoms of, shall we say, proselyting with the trade union movement on behalf of the Communist organizational effort were so obvious that the people who were not actually Communist Party members were able to observe that.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Yes. And you said that the members of the Communist Party considered you a Trotskyite?

A. Subsequently, yes.

Q. Now, the Trotskyites, as I am told, are people who consider [2204] the Communists reactionary, is that right?

A. Well, that is, shall we say, a very technical interpretation; but a general interpretation would be any person who had at one time been a member of the Communist Party and subsequently repudiated it—was labeled a Trotskyite. That is the interpretation I place on it.

Q. Well, the Trotskyites originally were people who left the Communist Party because they wanted to stage a world revolution at once?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. The witness has already stated the interpretation which he places on the term "Trotskyite," and I think this question is argumentative.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: May I have the question again? Are you referring——

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the question, please?

(Record read.)

A. Well, maybe you might place the interpretation of a Trotskyite on the type of government which we have in Jugoslavia under Tito at the moment. But my interpretation was that—as I stated before, a Trotskyite was a dissenter, no matter what the type of differentiation might be from the program of the Communist Party as set forth strictly and rigidly by its people who represented it.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Well, speaking now of the time when you say you left the [2205] Communist Party, what would be the feeling between the Communist Party members and a person who was labeled a Trotskyite?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases; it makes no difference what—That has nothing to do with this witness, nothing to do with these defendants, what the attitude of a person who belonged to the Communist Party may have been to one who may have been called a "Trotskyite."

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it will have some materiality on some questions I am about to come to.

Mr. Donohue: We have been told that, if Your Honor pleases, for three weeks.

Mr. MacInnis: And each time I have come to the point and demonstrated, possibly not to your satisfaction, Mr. Prosecutor, but we have come to exactly the points that we have suggested.

Mr. Donohue: In no instance—on one occasion after four days of cross-examination—did he ever reach the point he said he would. Object to the question, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Well, of course I can not be prophetic in my rulings as to what may eventuate on the part of Mr. MacInnis. I will abide by his assurances that he is coming to a point that may be material; accordingly, the objection is overruled.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Witness: You were asking the attitude of members of the Communist Party toward Trotskyites, I believe?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Or one who was labeled or suspected of being a Trotskyite. [2206]

A. Well, the feeling is definitely antagonistic.

Q. And you say that that was the label applied to you when you left the Communist Party?

A. Evenutally, yes.

Q. And would members of the Communist Party be suspicious of the person who was ever labeled a Trotskyite?

A. I think I know what is in your mind, Mr. MacInnis. The feeling, in so far as the Communist Party is concerned, toward me was, shall we say, one of coolness and aloofness. I was excluded from many meetings which I knew were taking place. Toward approximately the middle of 1937, as I stated, I left. I can't specifically give the time of a definite break between myself and the Communist Party, but I would say that it occurred in the late spring or the summer of 1937.

Q. In other words, in the late spring of 1937, your views were pretty generally known, at least among Communist Party groups?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, after you left the Communist Party, you took up an employment different from that which you had enjoyed in Portland, is that true?

A. That is true.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. What was your employment in the year 1938?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. He has already answered the question.

The Court: It was answered. [2207]

Mr. MacInnis: That is quite true.

The Court: You might have the answer again.

A. I entered a partnership with another individual in what was termed the Belmont X-ray Company in San Francisco.

The Court: What was that again?

The Witness: Belmont.

The Court: Belmont X-ray. All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, had you broken all of your connections with the members of the Communist Party by that time?

A. I would definitely say yes.

Q. Now, you told us, I believe, that you entered the Communist Party because you found it necessary to join that group in order to succeed in the union called ARTA? A. That is true.

Q. And did you break all of your connections with the union at the time you left the Communist Party?

A. By no means. I still have a number of friends who are members of the subsequent union.

Q. Did you break with the segment of the ARTA which had invited you to join the Communist Party?

A. Not particularly. I will put it this way: I lost track of the particular individual that recruited me. Particular individual that recruited me.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Well, was your resignation, if we can put it that way, or your leaving the Communist Party, generally known within the [2208] Maritime Federation of the Pacific?

A. I don't believe that it was generally known that I was a member of the Communist Party to members of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. Was it known to the members of the ARTA?

A. To some; not many.

Q. Did you have any break with trade unionism itself? A. No, not that I recall.

Q. Well, now, having reached these conclusions in the spring of 1937, over a gradual period, would it be fair to say that you had your suspicion of the true ends of the Communist Party as early as the fall of 1936?

A. That I wouldn't particularly state. I believe that the inception of my attitude toward the Communist Party and the reasons for my leaving it were particularly brought out to the front in 1937, the spring of 1937.

Q. But not before that to any extent?

A. Not before '37, no.

Q. In the fall of 1936 did you take any part in the making of protests against the so-called "Modesto frameup," a case taking place in the City of Modesto, California?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases; not proper cross-examination.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In the fall of 1936 did you take any [2209] part in the uttering of protests to "frame-ups" against organized labor generally, based upon the use of labor spies, stool pigeons and the like?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: Sustained.

(Document handed to Mr. Donohue by Mr. MacInnis.)

Mr. MacInnis: Would you display that document to the witness, please?

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, without awaiting the formality of a question, I object to any question being asked the witness of this paper, because in substance and in subject matter it is embraced by the ruling which Your Honor has just made; that the subject matter of this letter is not a proper matter for cross-examination. I ask Your Honor, when the witness has read the letter, if Your Honor will read it in the light of that objection.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, after I identify it, I will certainly be glad to have Your Honor look at it. Now, I wanted to ask this question.

Q. Is that a letter written by you?

A. That is true.

Q. It bears your mimeographed signature?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Correct.

Q. And it is on the stationery in the Maritime Federation of [2210] the Pacific?

A. That's correct.

Q. Written to all Portland locals?

A. Quite right.

Q. Bearing date of October 21, 1936?

A. Right.

Mr. MacInnis: I will defer questions as to the contents until Your Honor reads the letter.

(Examined by the Court.)

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest, Your Honor, without again discussing the contents aloud, that the general trend of the letter is something that should be before the Court and jury in this case as bearing upon the testimony and its credibility?

Mr. Donohue: No, if Your Honor pleases, in the light of that statement, which isn't a proper statement, that letter in no way and in no wise could affect the credibility of this witness.

Mr. MacInnis: His Honor has the letter before him. Let's let His Honor decide that.

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, please.

Mr. MacInnis: I think he should do that.

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor sustained an objection to a question asked of this witness on a certain subject matter. How, possibly, could that letter, on the same subject matter impeach the witness when he was not permitted by Your Honor's ruling to [2211] even answer the question, and I think that the inference which Mr. MacInnis seeks to get before the jury, that the Government is trying to keep out of evidence a document which tends to impeach him, is an erroneous and improper inference.

Mr. McInnis: Well, you are objecting rather strenuously.

Mr. Donohue: I object to it only because we can't stay here for the balance of the year trying irrelevant and immaterial issues.

Mr. MacInnis: I think we can perceive that counsel is not objecting out of an abstract love for the laws of evidence, Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: You do violence to our perception.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggest, Your Honor, the context ~~of~~ that letter definitely bears upon the testimony of the witness in this cause, looked at as a whole.

The Court: I will sustain the objection, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: May I ask that the letter be——

The Court: It is not proper cross-examination, the subject matter being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to any consideration of any examination of this witness, not tending to prove or disprove any issue in the case.

Mr. MacInnis: I ask, Your Honor, that the letter be marked for identification.

The Court: It may be marked appropriately for identification. [2212]

(Whereupon letter dated October 21, 1936, from the witness Krolek to union locals was marked Defendant's Exhibit V for identification only.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Krolek, to return for a moment to a matter that you discussed a moment ago, you were speaking of meetings of the Communist Party attended in instances by two men, Mr. Olson of the Alaska Fishermen's Union, and a Mr. John Brost, neither of whom were members of the Communist Party. Can you tell us the subjects, as best you now recall them, which were generally discussed at those meetings, where those men were present?

A. It is very difficult to answer, because Mr. Olson happened to be the president of the District Council No. 3 of the Maritime Federation, of which I was secretary, and there were occasions, several of them, at which both he and I were present at meetings which in effect were sponsored by the Communist Party. And by virtue of his, shall we say, sympathy and very closeness to all the programs and sponsorships, shall we say, of the party, the man was permitted to attend these meetings. There was no objection raised.

Q. Now, those, you say, would be meetings at which trade unionism and its ends would be discussed? A. That's correct.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And it would happen on those occasions that the ends which were suited to the trade union movement were also the ends of [2213] the Communist Party in that instance?

A. That is true. However, meetings which pertained strictly to the interests of the Communist Party, from a standpoint of organization and so forth, were not attended by outsiders.

Q. I appreciate that you said that, but with reference to these meetings where Mr. Olson, a non-Communist but a labor leader, was allowed to attend, and where Mr. Brost, also a non-Communist, was allowed to attend, matters of interest to the trade union movement and to the Communist Party alike would be discussed freely?

A. That is true.

Q. Would those be matters of policy in relation to labor party conventions or labor union conventions?

A. Generally speaking, I would say they pertained to problems that pertained to the welfare of the trade union movement, within a specific locality.

Q. Well, would you have been able to discuss with those men, Mr. Olson and Mr. Brost, matters involving the election of officers within a particular union? A. That is true.

Q. That would be a matter that you could safely, under those circumstances, discuss with non-Communists? A. That's correct.

Q. Now, you have told us about the circumstances of your resignation, or the leaving of the Communist Party; now, previous [2214] to that time, you had resigned your position as—was it the secretary of District Council No. 3 or District Committee No. 3?

A. I resigned both positions. One was the secretary-treasurership of District Council 3 of the Maritime Federation, and the other was the secretaryship of Local No. 8 of the American Radio and Telegraphists Association.

Q. And one of the reasons that you have said impelled you into a disillusionment with the Communist Party was something you mentioned concerning diversion of funds from the CIO into the Communist Party? A. That is correct?

Q. Now, when you resigned your post as the secretary-treasurer, you were in charge of the funds, were you not?

A. As a matter of fact, the disillusionment of which you speak took place in San Francisco subsequent to the time that I resigned as secretary of District Council 3 in Portland.

Q. No, I am speaking now about your post as secretary-treasurer. You were in charge of the funds of that particular committee or council, were you not? A. Correct.

Q. And after you left, was there some difficulty over the books that you had kept?

A. As a matter of fact, upon my leaving I was tendered a gift of $50 from the District Council

No. 3 as a token of appreciation [2215] for my work.

Q. Would you answer the question, please?

A. Not to my knowledge. There were questions raised regarding disposition of vouchers and possibly allocation of funds for certain purposes, but there was certainly no question at any time ever raised regarding any discrepancy in the funds.

Q. Did you ever claim that the trustees were unfair in criticizing your——

Mr. Donohue: Object, if Your Honor please; this is not proper cross-examination.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, with respect of this $50 donation of which you speak, that was voted in your favor, do you know who the person was who proposed that to the members of the union?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. He has already stated he got it.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you know a man, during his lifetime, named Maurice J. Cannalonga?

A. Yes, I am familiar with him.

The Court: How do you spell that?

Mr. MacInnis: C-a-n-n-a-l-o-n-g-a.

The Court: Did you know him?

A. I did, sir. [2216]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was he the man who arranged for the $50 donation to you?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. Counsel knows that Your Honor already sustained an objection, that he couldn't answer the question. Now he tries to get the witness to answer the question another way.

Mr. MacInnis: If Your Honor will bear with me one more question, I think you can see the relevancy.

The Court: Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You know, do you not, Mr. Krolek, that Mr. Cannalonga was one of the witnesses produced by the Government against Harry Bridges in his 1939 deportation trial?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. What difference does it make whether he was or was not?

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, you said a moment ago, Mr. Krolek, that your disillusionment with the Communist Party in respect of diversion of funds did not take place in your mind until you had left Portland and come down to San Francisco.

A. That is true.

Q. I think you said that in February you resigned your position with the union, your office?

A. That's correct.

Q. And then you took employment in San Francisco? A. Correct. [2217]

Q. And did you say that funds were being diverted from the CIO into purely Communist objectives?

A. Subsequently thereafter, after I arrived in San Francisco. As you may know by reference to labor history, Mr. Lewis at that time formed the Committee for Industrial Organization and was interested in organizing the unorganized crafts. Toward that end I believe there was a matter of in excess of a million dollars set aside and portions of that money were diverted to various crafts which needed organization, and in our specific instance it pertained to the organization of Western Union, Postal Telegraph employees and so forth, the unorganized crafts in the communications industry. Part of that money, as I say, was appropriated to San Francisco and once again, to reiterate my testimony, a portion of that money then, instead of being diverted purely into organizational purposes, was also diverted into strictly Communist Party organization work.

Q. Now, in what month of 1937 do you say that you made that discovery about the diversion of funds?

A. Well, the discovery, I would say, roughly, would be May, possibly, 1937.

Q. Well, actually, Mr. Krolek, don't you know from your own activity in connection with the history of the union movement, that the CIO had no funds at all on the West Coast in May of 1937?

A. Well, that's correct, as far as the official CIO movement [2218] is concerned; but nevertheless, the fact is that Mr. Lewis put forth certain amounts of money for the organization of the unorganized crafts, and that money was made available.

Q. And isn't it true that it was not until July of 1937 that the longshoremen's union of San Francisco had voted to join the CIO?

A. I don't believe that that is pertinent to the discussion. I believe your question to me is whether I had knowledge of the diversion of funds which Mr. Lewis had made available to the crafts throughout the country, and that money was made available, I would say, prior to July of 1937.

Q. Your memory is that there was such money on hand prior to July of 1937?

A. That's correct.

Q. You said in your testimony of Friday that you knew a man named Mervyn Rathborne?

A. That's right.

Q. Actually he is your brother-in-law?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is it the fact that your wife and Mr. Rathborne's wife are sisters? A. Right.

Q. And you have known Mr. Rathborne over a considerable period of time?

A. That's correct. [2219]

Q. The same Mr. Rathborne whom you recalled at the end of your testimony as being present at the meeting in San Diego, of which you spoke?

A. The meeting in Long Beach.

Q. Long Beach. Is that correct?

A. Right.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Do you see Mr. Rathborne with any regularity?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases —I withdraw the objection.

The Court: Do you see him—What was that last question?

Mr. MacInnis: I said: "Do you see Mr. Rathborne with any regularity?

The Court: Objection is overruled.

A. I haven't seen Mr. Rathborne for two years.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Does he live down the Peninsula?

A. I believe so. I believe he lives in Half Moon Bay.

Q. You don't visit with him or with your wife's sister? A No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. He has said he hasn't seen Mr. Rathborne for two years.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Do you know Mr. John Schomaker? A. I do.

Q. Have you seen him at all of late?

A. I haven't seen Mr. Schomaker since the time of the discovery of the microphone in Mr. Bridges' room in Portland. [2220]

Q. Now, you said the other day, in reference to another part of your testimony, that you remembered the names or were able to give us the names and the initials of all of the persons who you said were present in a room because you looked over a statement you had given to the FBI; is that correct?

A. I believe I stated that my memory in certain particulars was refreshed by a statement which I gave the FBI, but the names of the people who were present at that meeting are and have been very clearly fixed in my mind.

Q. And you said that in 1939 your memory was much better concerning events taking place in 1936 than your memory would be right now?

A. Obviously so.

Q. Having refreshed your memory out of this statement that you made to the FBI in 1939, can you now tell us what the conversation was at this meeting of which you spoke.

A. I believe I offered that in the previous testimony.

Q. You told us that you couldn't remember who said what; you said you could only remember the substance of the conversation and the general direction.

A. Well, is it your desire for me to interpret what the statements were that I made to the FBI in 1939?

Q. No, I don't wish you to interpret anything; I will come to that in just a moment. To what member of the FBI in 1939 [2221] did you make your statement?

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if your Honor please. Obviously the person or persons associated with the Federal Bureau of Investigation to whom this witness made what he has characterized as a voluntary statement are not proper on cross-examination.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, I am certainly entitled to probe into all of the sources concerning meetings between this man and part of the prosecuting arm of the Federal Government.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I will answer the question this way: That the FBI—that is, the agents of the FBI generally do not make themselves known.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Pardon me?

A. The agents of the FBI do not make their identities specifically known by name.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think your Honor can take judicial notice——

Mr. Donohue: I don't think the Court can take judicial notice.

Mr. MacInnis: ——that members of the FBI show their identification to every person they interview.

The Witness: I mean specific people, that they happened to say such-and-such and that they offered a statement to [2222] that effect; that is, in the presentation of the testimony to the FBI I am not particularly interested, or certainly I wasn't interested in identifying the names of the people who took that testimony.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You don't know who they were? A. Not their names, no.

Q. Tell us the circumstances under which that statement was taken from you.

A. The statement was made voluntarily. And I might for the record state that it was due to the result of infiltration of the Communist Party that I observed was taking place at that time in the State political picture. I believe I stated I was secretary to the brother of Culbert L. Olson, and I therefore had an opportunity of analyzing, again to wear the phrase thin, of noting the emasculation of the progressive political movement as well as the progressive labor movement in several years back from that.

Q. Did you approach the FBI and offer this statement or did they come and ask you to give a statement?

A. I approached the FBI through an intermediary.

Q. Who was that?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I see no basis upon which counsel can cross-examine a witness who has stated in substance that in 1939 he made a voluntary disclosure of certain facts to the Federal Bureau of [2223] Investigation; that he has since read again the statement which he made at that time to refresh his recollection for the purpose of this trial. Obviously, the report that he made to the FBI could not be introduced in evidence, and therefore I say, if your Honor please, that an examination of its substance is neither admissible in evidence, and I object to it.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The name of the individual to whom the—that is, who acted as intermediary was Edward B. O'Grady, who has since died.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What was the circumstance under which you made that contact with Mr. O'Grady?

A. A matter of mutual discussion and analysis of the activities of the Communist Party with respect to the political picture and a determination on my part that something should be done to correct it.

Q. Where did you make your statement?

A. In San Francisco.

Q. At the offices of the FBI?

A. 111 Sutter Street.

Q. Did you make it in the presence of one agent or more than one?

A. I made it in the presence of several agents.

Q. Do you remember the names of any of them?

A. Not at this moment, no. [2224]

Q. Do you remember the month in 1939 in which this giving of the statement took place?

A. It was possibly in October, 1939.

Q. Did a stenographer transcribe that statement?

A. Correct.

Q. Was it later shown you for your signature?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Correct.

Q. And did you sign it?

A. Initialed it.

Q. You were not called as a witness by the Government in the 1939 deportation trial against Harry Bridges, were you? A. I was not.

Q. Do you know the months in which that trial was held in the year 1939 in relation to the time in which you gave your statement to the FBI?

A. I am not familiar with it.

Q. And you have no idea one way or the other?

A. No, sir.

Q. But regardless of the element of time, you weren't called or used as a witness on behalf of the Government in that deportation hearing?

A. That is true.

Q. Although the FBI had a statement of yours at that time? A. That is correct.

Q. How about the 1941 hearing, in the deportation charges [2225] against Harry Bridges upon the ground that he was a member of the Communist Party, were you called as a witness in that trial?

A. I was not.

Q. Were you subpoenaed?

A. I was subpoenaed, yes.

Q. And where were you brought when you were subpoenaed?

A. I was brought to the—well, specifically, the office was located in 111 Sutter Street, and it was the headquarters of—I believe the man's name was Delgurcio—Mr. Delgurcio.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Were you brought to this building actually when the hearing was in progress?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you brought under subpoena to the office of Mr. Delgurcio? A. Correct.

Q. He was the prosecutor, was he not, in the Government's last case against Harry Bridges on the charge that he was a member of the Communist Party? A. I believe so.

Q. In what fashion were you brought to the office of Mr. Delgurcio?

A. I believe I was escorted by two individuals.

Q. Did you then have conversation with Mr. Delgurcio? A. I did. [2226]

Q. And were there various agents present at that time? A. Correct.

Q. And after that conversation you were not used as a witness in the case? A. Correct.

Q. Tell us what the conversation was that you had at that time.

A. Well, the gist of the conversation was a reiteration of the information which I presented to the FBI. I would say that would be it.

Q. You reiterated to Mr. Delgurcio in 1941 the same information that you had given to the FBI?

A. Correct.

Q. You gave that statement again at a time when you had been brought by subpoena to the office of the FBI here in San Francisco?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. That is correct.

Q. And after you gave that information the gentleman let you go your way and did not use you as a witness? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you protest at being brought to the office of Mr. Delgurcio?

A. I prefaced the remark that I made to Mr. Delgurcio to the effect that I did not care to be produced as a witness for personal reasons. [2227]

Q. And what did Mr. Delgurcio say then?

A. There was some discussion on the subject.

Q. Can you tell us what that discussion was?

A. Well, the very obvious discussion on his part was to utilize me as a witness, and I did not care to appear as a witness.

Q. And you were able to offer such arguments and persuasions to the end that they saw the thing your way and did not use you?

A. Presumably so.

Q. Well, what was your job in 1941 at the time you were brought before Mr. Delgurcio?

A. I believe I stated for the record that I was employed by the then Governor Culbert L. Olson's brother, W. F. Olson.

Q. Pardon me. You told us that was your job in 1939? A. Correct.

Q. Was that also your job in 1941?

A. In 1941 I was at the time a supervisor for the radio training program for the National Youth Administration.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. You were working for the Government at that time, weren't you? A. Correct.

Q. For the NYA? A. Yes.

Q. And you tell us today that you were brought in by subpoena [2228] to the office of the chief prosecutor of our Government in the Harry Bridges trial in 1941 when he was faced with the charge that he was a member of the Communist Party, and after you discussed your information with Mr. Delgurcio, the prosecutor, he permitted you to go and did not use you as a witness?

A. I believe I stated that the testimony that I previously offered was based on my desire not to testify for certain personal reasons, and my wish in the matter was respected, apparently.

Q. Was that in the month of April of 1941?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, before you were brought to the office of Mr. Delgurcio in April of 1941 did any agents call upon you at your home?

A. Several agents, yes.

Q. They called upon you, and I suppose your wife as well? A. Correct.

Q. How many times did they come to see you?

A. It would be hard to state. A number of times.

Q. Did they come to see you at your work as well?

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if your Honor please. Haven't we gone far enough into the question? Is he about to show that this man did not make a statement to the FBI?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolck.)

Mr. MacInnis: I am about to come to the facts of this situation, your Honor. [2229]

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: However obliquely.

A. I don't recall that any representative of the Government contacted me on my employment, no.

Q. Isn't it true that on April 13 of 1941 two members of the FBI came to see you at your work, your work with the Government, the NYA?

A. I certainly don't recall any discussion on the job, shall we say, with any representative of the Federal Government.

Q. When did you take your job with the NYA?

A. Well, that is difficult to outline. I was with the NYA a matter of a comparatively short time.

Q. You took that job in November, 1940, is that correct?

A. You seem to have a very comprehensive record of it.

Q. I do. Is that about correct?

A. If that is the statement, I will accept it, yes.

Q. When you took your job with the NYA in November of 1940 or thereabouts, you of course were given a loyalty test?

A. Loyalty tests in those days, I might say, were somewhat different than they are today.

Q. Were you asked at that time whether you had any information concerning Harry Bridges?

A. I was not.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

I didn't know that that was a qualification for employment by the NYA. [2230]

Mr. MacInnis: It seemingly has become a matter of qualification for United States Government employment, I am told.

Mr. Donohue: It may become more so.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I again admonish you not to heed the remarks of counsel as evidence in the case, nor the retaliation made by one to the other is not evidence. The evidnce is unfolded from the witnesses.

The last question was, were you asked whether you knew Bridges?

Mr. MacInnis: I think I asked that question.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

A. I was not asked that question as a condition of employment, no. As a matter of fact, Mr. Bridges' name was never once mentioned to me.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Were you examined by any members of the FBI when you took your employment with the NYA? A. I was not.

Q. Between the time you entered your employment with the NYA and the month of April of 1941 did you have any discussion with any members of the FBI who came to inerview you at work?

A. I believe you asked that before, and I think the answer was yes.

Q. Those gentlemen informed you at that time that they knew of your connection with the Communist Party from the years 1935 to 1937, did they not? [2231]

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And they also informed you that they knew that you were the person who had discovered the dictaphone in Harry Bridges' hotel room in Portland in 1937, did they not?

A. I believe the statement may have been made incidental.

Q. So that the name of Harry Bridges was mentioned at that time, wasn't it?

A. It was mentioned by the FBI.

Q. Yes.

A. But I believe your question that you tried to bring out was that the name of Harry Bridges may have been mentioned by my employer as a condition of employmtnt.

Q. Your employer was the United States Government, was it not? We are speaking about the FBI.

A. Broadly speaking, yes, but my direct superior was not.

Q. Now, on April 23 were you taken to the FBI offices in San Francisco by agents along with your wife? A. That is correct.

Q. And were you kept there for about four hours? A. Correct.

Q. Your wife was made ill by that meeting, was she not?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I can't see any basis for this examination when the witness has testified on cross-examination, "I went to the FBI and I made a statement." Is he trying to impeach the witness now? [2232]

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we are not bound by the character he ascribes to the statement.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: If he had said he had not been there, if your Honor please, I could well understand this line of examination, but he said he was there.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I will answer the question by stating that my wife was made a bit upset, yes, as naturally any woman would be.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Would you say that you were grilled during the four hours that you were there?

A. I was cross-examined rather thoroughly.

Q. For the four hours by the FBI agents, is that corerct? A. That is correct.

Q. How many agents were with you at that time?

A. I recall possibly three.

Q. Never anymore than that at one time?

A. Well, there may have been more in the room, but my conversation pertained to about three.

Q. Were there ever twelve FBI agents present in the room?

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if your Honor please, whether there were one or a hundred; the man said he was there and he made a statement.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I don't recall the number of twelve personally. [2233]

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. By Mr. MacInnis): On this occasion, the one of which we now spoke around April 23 of 1941, were you sworn to tell the truth when you were questioned in the offices of the FBI?

A. I was.

Q. Did you tell the members of the FBI at that time that you knew nothing about whether or not Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party? A. I did not.

Q. Did you discuss the matter of your job with Mr. Delgurcio on the occasion when he was present?

A. I stated this, and the reason for my apparent exemption from being called as a witness publicly, was the fact that at that time I was in neither a financial nor a sufficiently secure economic position to make an open presentation on the matter.

Q. In other words, you argued that the only reason impelling you to argue against appearing as a witness was the fact that you were not financially secure?

A. Plus the fact that I was associated with Governor Olson's brother in a position of some public importance, shall we say, and the testimony that I might have given at the time may have proven embarrassing to the administration.

Q. Shall we say this: that you told Mr. Delgurcio that you would appeal to the trial examiner in the Harry Bridges case, the Hon. Judge Sears of New York, against intimidations [2234] which were being exercised against you at that time?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. That is definitely not correct.

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if your Honor please.

A. Definitely not correct.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you——

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question and move that the answer be stricken.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I made no reference to any appeal to Mr. Sears.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did Mr. Delgurcio tell you that he would request the NYA to have you fired from your job?

A. No such statement was made.

Q. Did he tell you he would have the Department of Justice request the NYA to fire you?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. What do you remember about that? Was there any talk about your keeping your job with the Government?

A. The basis of my offering to give testimony at that particular time was made to me by Mr. Delgurcio strictly in the spirit of, shall we say, patriotism and cooperation with the Government. It was offered to me on a voluntary basis.

Q. He merely asked you to volunteer your services as a witness and you declined?

A. That is correct; with a degree of pressure, of course.

Q. What do you mean by "a degree of pressure"? [2235]

A. Well, I think you have covered that. You asked me whether I and my wife had been subject to, as you put it, grilling, and I believe I have answered that. That is what I would term possibly pressure.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the recess at this time, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, we have reached the noon hour, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. We will resume the case at two o'clock this afternoon.

May I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to converse with any person on any subject of the trial, or to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.) [2236]

Afternoon Session, 2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America vs. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed, counsel.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Kermit Charles Krolek, heretofore sworn.

KERMIT CHARLES KROLEK

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Your Honor, I think I neglected to make an offer on the last exhibit which was marked. For the record, we offer that exhibit into evidence proper.

Mr. Donohue: Object to it, if your Honor please.

The Court: The objection heretofore interposed is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Krolek, for our better understanding of some of the backgrounds of these matters, I would like to go back for just a moment to one of the matters that you discussed already. You said that money in the hands of the Committee for Industrial Organization being set up by John L. Lewis was sent out for the purpose of organizing certain non-organized trade groups, is that true? A. That is true.

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if your Honor please; the [2237] question has already been answered.

The Court: It has been.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary to something else.

The Court: He may answer it.

A. That is correct.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And you said that part of your disillusionment with the Communist Party arose out of your discovery that some of that money was being misdirected into direct Communist Party sources? A. That is true.

Q. And that was a discovery that you made here in San Francisco after you resigned your job in Portland? A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And when you say that those funds were misdirected, you mean by that that some person having control of them would use them for improper purposes, that is, purposes not directed by Mr. John L. Lewis or by the Committee for Industrial Organization itself?

A. I mean substantially that there was an amount of $10 per diem was paid to an organizer to be appointed by various unions, in our case the ARTA, and of that amount the legitimate trade union organizer actually received $5, and $5 went into the organization of the Communist Party.

Q. And you said, I think, that that was particularly true of the Postal Telegraph and Western Union employees' groups? [2238]

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, if there was such a misuse of funds from that particular group, the misuse of funds would have been handled by Mr. Mervyn Rathborne, your brother-in-law, isn't that true?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. Just a moment, Mr. Krolek. I object, if your Honor please. I see no pertinency in the examination of this witness as to who it may have been that may have been responsible for any misuse of funds.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Unless he alleges it was the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The determination as to how much money each union would receive from the funds set up by

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

John L. Lewis was determined by the president, I would say, of our union, who happened to be Mr. Rathborne.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Rathborne was president of the local of the ARTA and then he became national president, did he not?

A. At that time he was national president.

Q. And he was national president from February, 1937, continuously through that year?

A. Correct.

Q. And that was the year in which you say this misappropriation of funds to the Communist Party took place? [2239]

A. I am not stating that it was a misappropriation of funds. I am stating that it was a diversion of funds, which apparently was made at the discretion of the local organizer.

Q. Now, you said that your second reason for becoming disillusioned with the Communist Party was you say the great infiltration of Communists into other official walks of life, did you?

A. I so stated at the time I was associated with the Governor's brother, yes.

Q. Now, who were the Communists who you say infiltrated into the State administration? Do you know the names of any of those persons?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I don't think you can offer testimony of the infiltration of Communists into political or labor organizations. This certainly is not asked for the purpose of impeaching the witness. He has stated that he left the Communist Party, among other reasons, because of the fact that certain Communists had infiltrated into the political organizations, and I think counsel is bound by that answer.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, the prosecutor has misunderstood the proof of this man. This gentleman stated this morning that the reason he put himself in contact with the FBI in 1939 was because he became appalled, working as he was for the State government under Mr. W. F. Olson, with the [2240] infiltration of Communists into the State government. That is the point at which this question is directed. He made that flat statement. I now want to ask him to identify those Communists who were infiltrating into the government. [2240-A]

Mr. Donohue: But there can't be any doubt, if your Honor please, that he did make a statement to the FBI. Therefore this question couldn't be purposed to show that he didn't, or to impeach him. His motives are unimportant.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, a statement is never any stronger than the reasons ascribed to it, and we now inquire into the reasons which this man ascribes to his own activity at that moment.

Mr. Donohue: And I say his motives or reasons for giving a statement to the FBI are unimportant. The fact is that he did. He says that he did.

The Court: Well, I believe that counsel's question is directed to another phase, not with respect to the underlying reasons, motivating his giving a statement, but rather as to his underlying reasons in becoming fearful or apprehensive as he stated: and to that extent, I believe the question is pertinent.

A. I observed the infiltration of Communists specifically in state depeartments, such as the State Relief Administration.

Q. Any other department?

A. There were a number of others, yes.

Q. What were those?

A. The Board of Prison Terms happened to be one. That is the board under which the various probationary officers and so forth were connected. And the Department of Public Works. And there were numerous ones at the time. [2241]

Q. Now, in these departments which you give us, I suppose from your best memory at this time, who are the people you remember that you complained about is being Communists?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: I will sustain the objection to that question.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this, Your Honor: It isn't with any desire to bring out the name of any public official or to bring shame upon anyone in public office, but the question is directed to the legitimacy of the motives of this witness, you see.

The Court: I understand, counsel, and I understand the reason for your asking. But I say to you that eliciting the answer to that question—and I assume the basis for the objection would be, although the reason for the objection was not stated, that the answers would require the trial of many collateral phases, and in addition, the scrutiny of many collateral phases that would not altogether be immediately material. And for that reason I sustain the objection.

Mr. MacInnis: I think your objective in doing that is the right one, because we certainly should keep other names—a lot of people should not be vainly accused of Communism.

The Court: Well, "vainly" or otherwise, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: I certainly agree with you on that.

The Court: And with respect to your ascribing to my reasons underlying the sustaining of the objection any "vain" [2242] observation made by the witness, of course it may be stricken from the record, so far as I am concerned. You understand my reasons and I understand yours.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, and you will understand I didn't use the word "vain" in the improper sense.

The Court: I understand. I merely want to keep the record clear.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, in deference to His Honor's ruling, of course I don't want to ask you the names of any of these people who you complained were Communists, infilterating into the Government. I suppose the basis for any information which you then brought it upon yourself to pass to the FBI was information which you gained in the course of your job as the secretary of Governor Olson's brother?

A. That isn't quite correct, because the information I gave to the FBI was given prior to the time I asosciated with the Governor's brother.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Well, now, could you give us the date of your association with the Governor's brother?

A. Well, the association took place in the early part—let's see—of—excuse me; the latter part of 1938 and continued through until the latter part of 1940, I believe.

Q. From the latter part of 1938 until the latter part of 1940? A. That's correct.

Q. You were associated with Governor Olson's brother, Mr. W. F. [2243] Olson?

A. As nearly as I recall.

Q. Was that in the course of your job as his secretary? A. Correct.

Q. But you told us this morning, didn't you, that the date of the statement that you gave to the FBI was 1939? A. Right.

Q. So that it was during the course of the time that you were in association with the brother of Governor Olson?

A. I believe you will find that the record which I gave to the FBI makes no inclusion of any Communists within the political field. The reference made in that statement pertained to the people who were working on the waterfront and the associates which I had at that time in connection with union activities.

Q. Well, was some person or group of persons at that time approaching you in some endeavor to tie up Harry Bridges and members of the ILWU with Governor Olson?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. None whatever.

Q. But you knew that Harry Bridges and the ILWU had supported Governor Olson and were working along with him in many phases of his administration?

A. Let's put it this way, that although that may be the case, the Communist Party also supported the candidacy of Governor Olson, and after the man was selected, shall we say, then damned him with faint praise. [2244]

Q. We may say that, if you like. Now at the time that you were giving this information to the FBI, you were at the same time appearing before the ILWU, which was then, as now, headed by Mr. Bridges, and asking for the ILWU's support so that you would get your state job, weren't you?

A. You seem to know a lot about my activity.

Q. I do; indeed I do. Is that right?

A. I can qualify that.

Q. In other words, you say "yes" with a qualification; is that it? A. Substantially so.

Q. If you wish to qualify it, you may.

A. I made the appeal to the various unions in behalf of that particualr position you state, not on the basis of any Communist affiliation, but on the basis of support from the trade union standpoint. And I thought that I should receive that support, and I expected to receive it.

Q. And you did receive it?

A. Let us say in token.

Q. Pardon me? A. In token.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Let us say in what?

A. In token, t-o-k-e-n.

Q. In token of what?

A. I mean token support. I mean, the sort of support that you [2245] might say, "A man is a good man, but——," with a qualification that there is just a little bit wrong with him.

Q. You mean they said the "but" as regards you?

A. In other words, my ability and so forth, my background, and circumscribed with a qualification that I might have been at one time a very good man, but——.

Q. In other words, whatever support they gave you had that qualification?

A. As far as the rank and file was concerned, people who knew me or thought possibly that I might be an individual just from the ranks, that support naturally came without qualification and it was wholehearted. But as far as the leadership was concerned, and certain people, I would say that that support was definitely with qualification.

Q. Well, now, adopting the dates that you have given us concerning your association with the brother of Governor Olson, let me ask you this: In December of 1938 you appeared before the Maritime Federation of the Pacific and asked that group to support you in your quest for a state job, did you not?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that group gave you an endorsement, didn't it? A. Correct.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. Was that a qualified endorsement?

A. I would say not. I would say that the endorsement was probably very straightforward; but nevertheless, the type of [2243] support which was actually received at the time that my name came up for appointment was somewhat different. In other words, the people who were in charge of making the appointment were apparently persuaded through certain pressures brought to bear that I was not exactly the right person to receive the appointment. Where these pressures came from is your guess as well as mine.

Q. I won't do any guessing, Mr. Krolek; I will bring you the records.

Now, it was on December the 6th of 1938 that you appeared and asked for an endorsement for the state job before the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, was it not?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. I can see no bearing upon an application that this man may have made for any position, or what endorsement he may have had, which could affect his credibility as a witness or which tends to show bias or prejudice against these defendants. On no other basis could it be admissible. I object to it.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: It would appear to me, Your Honor, from my own perspective, which may be biased, of course, that if this man on the one hand was going before Harry Bridges, the ILWU, and the Maritime Federation of the Pacific and asking for its support, their support, ~~for him~~ to be given a state job, asking [2247] for that recommendation because he knew that Harry Bridges was close to the administration, and at the same time was going to the FBI with a story about them—that would seem to me to bear a little bit on his credibility, Your Honor.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Counsel, you may reserve your argument until a later date.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: The objection is overruled. The witness may answer.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the last question, please?

(Record read.)

A. I asked the endorsement on the basis of the vote by the rank and file. I am not particularly concerned, and I wasn't concerned at that time, by the endorsement of the officials of the ILWU or any other organization, for that matter.

Q. Who drew the resolution having to do with the job that you wanted? Have you any idea?

A. I recall one resolution being drawn up by—I believe the name was Hansen.

Q. Hansen was a member of the ARTA, wasn't he? A. That's correct.

Q. And he was the one who proposed this resolution on your behalf? A. That's correct.

Q. And such a resolution was drawn up? [2248]

A. That's right.

Q. And that was an unqualified resolution, wasn't

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

it? A. To my knowledge, yes.

Q. Have you ever seen the resolution?

A. I believe I have a copy of it still.

Q. In fact, the resolution was the matter that you went before the meeting to obtain, wasn't it?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that you would have the support of these groups before Governor Olson.

A. May I state that the meeting that I presented the resolution to was not a meeting of at least what I knew to be all Communists or partially of a Communist nature; it was a rank and file meeting.

Q. Of course not. Exactly. We are talking about precisely the same thing.

(Document shown to Mr. Donohue and Mr. Paisley by Mr. MacInnis.) [2249]

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think it is rubbing it in, Mr. Paisley.

Would you show this to the witness, please.

The Court: What was your last remark?

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Paisley said I was rubbing it in. I said I didn't think it was rubbing it in.

The Court: May I ask counsel on both sides to address their remarks to the Court. I am offended that you leave me out. As a matter of fact, I would like to hear the thing.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sorry, your Honor. I should have repeated it after Mr. Paisley. It was a volunteer remark and it was a volunteer response. I am sorry I made it.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: I thought it was someting I might rule on.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I would like, as I did with respect to a prior document, to at this time object to what seems to be a mimeographed copy of an unsigned and undated resolution.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it isn't before his Honor yet.

Mr. Donohue: You won't mind my addressing myself to the Court without interruption?

Mr. MacInnis: I think that the rule is that until the document is scrutinized by the witness and the Court, it isn't in the record.

Mr. Donohue: I will take my rules from the Court.

The Witness: Do you wish to see it? [2250]

The Court: No.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, what has been shown the witness is apparently a mimeographed copy of an unsigned, undated resolution, which may or may not be the resolution concerning which the witness testified a moment ago. Whether it is or not, in my judgment, is unimportant, but certainly this document or this piece of paper is not admissible for any purpose.

Mr. MacInnis: I haven't offered it yet, your Honor.

The Court: The document was presented to the witness for identification. The witness has read it. Now you may proceed.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Krolek, did you read the document which was just now shown you by the clerk?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question. I object to any question on this document, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I have read the document, yes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Does that appear to be a copy of the resolution which was rendered at that time in your behalf?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if the Court please. The best evidence, as my friend has so frequently stated, is the written document.

Mr. MacInnis: Don't make us friends.

Mr. Donohue: I am sorry I said it. I didn't mean it. [2251]

Mr. MacInnis: You shouldn't confess insincerity like that.

Mr. Paisley: Isn't it about time the Court admonished counsel on both sides, if necessary, that their remarks should be addressed to the Court? This wise-cracking and repartee have no place in court, in my judgment.

The Court: Well, counsel, I felt some degree of pardonable pride in the alacrity with which this evidence was unfolding in the last few days, and I haven't regarded any personal differences between counsel as impeding that rather happy progress of this trial. I see no reason for admonitions at this juncture.

Now, what is the question?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the last question, please.

(Question read.)

A. It is.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you find any qualification in that particular resolution?

A. I found none.

Q. Is this the resolution as I will now read it to you:

> "Resolution regarding endorsement of Brother Charles Krolek"——

Mr. Donohue: Just a minute. I object to the reading of this resolution, if your Honor please. It has been marked for identification. It is not in evidence. [2252]

The Clerk: It has not been marked.

Mr. MacInnis: It has not been marked either.

Mr. Donohue: I assume it should be; it was identified by the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: I would be glad to have it marked, and if necessary we might have the same arrangement, to substitute a copy for the original document.

The Court: What is the basis of the objection, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: If the Court please, I can see no basis upon which a resolution adopted by a union endorsing this witness for appointment to a position with the State of Cailfornia has to do either with the credibility of this witness or the truth or falsity of the charges against these defendants.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Mr. MacInnis discussed with Court and counsel the basis for his offer with respect to asserted inconsistent positions that he sees may have been taken.

Mr. Donohue: The witness says that this is not the resolution, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, he has said it. Your Honor, the point, if I may be heard, is this: The witness has said that he was endorsed but that there was a big qualification added to it, a "but"—that he had once been a good man, "but." I propose to show——

The Court: The objection is overruled. [2253]

Mr. MacInnis: So I will ask that Mr. Mitchell mark the page for identification first.

The Court: I haven't read it, counsel, but I assume it is the resolution the witness has identified.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: You say you haven't any question about it?

The Witness: That is correct.

The Court: That appears to be the correct version?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Would your Honor like to see it before it is marked?

The Court: I will take the witness' version and your version.

(The copy of resolution referred to was marked Defendants' Exhibit W for identification.)

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis (reading):

"Whereas: It is highly important that various administrative offices in the government of the State of Cailfornia be filled by individuals particularly qualified in their respective fields of endeavor; this being particularly true in the case of the several state departments administering labor's problems in order that its efficient government may be protected from maladministration at the hands of incompetent and inexperienced individuals; and [2254]

"Whereas: There will be available by appointment of Governor-Elect Culbert L. Olson in the Department of Industrial Realtions of this State several positions of trust and high responsibility; one namely being that of Chief of the Bureau of Hearings and Compensation, and

> "Resolved: That San Francisco Bay Area District Council #2, Maritime Federation of the Pacific, do hereby at this December 6th meeting, go on record as requesting Governor-Elect Culbert L. Olson to respectfully give his consideration to the appointment of Brother Chas. Krolek to the post of Chief of Bureau of Hearings and Compensations, Department of Industrial Relations, [2255] and be it further
> "Resolved: That San Francisco Bay Area District Council #2, Maritime Federation of the Pacific, refer this resolution to its component organizations and to the CIO Industrial Union Council, with a recommendation for concurrence." [2255-a]

Is that the resolution?

A. That seems to be it, yes.

Q. Do you find in the text which I have read to you any qualification?

A. I don't believe you are getting the point, Mr. MacInnis. The qualification that exists does not exist in writing.

Q. Oh, this qualification was somewhere else, then, not in the resolution; somewhere else in the minds of some men?

A. It is a characteristic about the manner in which the Communist Party operates by attaching themselves to any progressive cause, and then by a process of, to repeat the term, damning with faint praise, proceeds to destroy the integrity and the character of the cause and the individual to whom it may be attached. I certainly cannot state here on this stand that the resolution as you have read it was not concurred in by the union. I will say that the rank and file presumably were honest in their support of this and any other resolutions that were presented before the District Council and other councils; but the fact of the impediment of that particular resolution or whatever was placed on the table was accomplished by certain actions of individuals which can be identified as Communists, actually took upon itself, presumably under orders of the Party to carry out, and therefore to nullify any effect which the written word as put forth in that resolution might stand for. [2256]

Q. These other things of which you speak were not written things?

A. They are not written. They obviously would not be written. A situation—a condition of action of, shall we say, stultification and verbal sabotage cannot be expressed in writing.

Q. What do you mean by "verbal sabotage"? Is that another of these so-called Trotskyite phrases or what?

A. It is very easy to destroy a man's reputation by dropping a hint every now and then that there is just a little bit less of his ability and credibility and so forth, and it seems to be the manner in which the Communist Party operates.

Q. You have some feeling that your reputation was destroyed by certain people?

A. I won't say it is destroyed. My ability, shall we say, in that particular line as set forth in that resolution was definitely destroyed, yes, but by inference made by members of the Communist Party to certain people.

Q. And the resolution which you were given to present to the State administration notwithstanding? A. Presumably so.

Q. You made a speech also, did you not, when that resolution was passed?

A. I made a speech where?

Q. Before the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. [2257]

A. I suppose you would call it a speech. I introduced myself so that people could see who I was.

Q. And pledged yourself to act, to quote you, "a hundred per cent on behalf of organized labor"?

A. Presumably. I was sincere in the matter.

Q. Now, you joined the Communist Party, according to what you told us the other day, because you found it expedient to do so?

A. That is correct.

Q. It helped you with your job?

A. That is true.

Q. You didn't join it as a dreamer or a visionary to help out? A. I would say so.

Q. You had a very practical reason?

A. I analyzed the step before I took it very carefully.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Q. And you also found it expedient to make this statement to the FBI in 1939?

A. Exactly. I might qualify that by saying that the expediency was based strictly on the inroad which I had observed, as I have stated, of the Communist movement both in labor and political ranks, and my action in so doing was chiefly motivated by the infiltration into the political ranks.

Q. Let me ask you this: Did this thought enter your mind: You say that after this resolution was passed extolling you [2258] in rather good language, to say the least, by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, that some other persons engaged in verbal sabotage of you?

A. I don't quite follow your point there.

Q. I will repeat that. You say that in spite of this resolution, some other people, by word of mouth, spoke against you?

A. Well, that is very definitely so, yes.

Q. You did not in fact get the job that was mentioned in that resolution?

A. Well, I didn't get the job. There were apparently others that were more qualified, but the fact did reach my ears through good sources at the time that the reason for not obtaining the same was probably due to efforts of certain people who were Communists.

Q. When you say that you were prompted by expedience to make this statement to the FBI, is this what took place——

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. I believe I qualified that statement of expedience, did I not?

Q. Yes. Is this what took place: that you were aggrieved because you heard that some people were speaking against you, and you decided that then you would go to a public agency and speak against that group of people?

A. Not particularly. The reason that the testimony was given was very simple. As you know, in all major political parties we have supporters, we have people that go out and [2259] ring doorbells, that distribute literature, that do all the countless one and other things which is necessary to elect a candidate. And we had such people at the time of the Olson candidacy, I being one of them, and at the conclusion of his successful election to the office, it was unfortunate to observe that certain people who paid a lot of lip service to him seemed to be the people that were worming into various State political offices, and I frankly took exception, to that.

Q. That is probably true of every administration, isn't it? A. That may be.

Q. Go on. A. That's it, period.

Q. Now, you say that in 1941 in the month of April when the FBI had you escorted by agents to its office and asked you to testify against Harry Bridges in the 1941 trial, you convinced Mr. Delgurcio and the other agents that your lack of financial security was a good enough reason to impel them to let you go?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. Well that was one reason, yes.

Q. Now, did you talk over the summoning of yourself and your wife by the FBI with other persons at that time?

A. I did not. I might make this statement, however: that fact that I had contacted the FBI on a previous occasion was made known to me by a known member of the Communist Party, and that particular gentleman, shall we say, voiced a veiled threat against my offering such testimony at that time.

Q. Was that your brother-in-law?

A. That is correct.

Q. And your brother-in-law, as you know, was a witness for the Government before the Grand Jury in this present case against Harry Bridges?

A. So I understand.

Q. Now, isn't this true: that on the night of the 13th of April, 1941, you asked your brother-in-law, Mervyn Rathborne, to come to your house?

A. That may be.

Q. And you and your wife then had a conversation with him, is that correct?

A. I believe that is correct, yes.

Q. Did you and your wife in each other's presence tell Mr. Rathborne at your home that you had been taken to the offices of the FBI that day?

A. We did.

Q. And when Mr. Rathborne rang the doorbell of your home, your wife answered the door alone, is that correct, to your memory?

A. It is possible.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Rathborne that you had been hiding in the back of the house because you were sure the FBI agents would make a return call?

A. That isn't my recollection, no.

Q. Do you deny that you said that or do you know one way or the other? A. I don't know.

Q. You may have said that?

A. I frankly don't remember.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Rathborne on that evening that agents of the FBI had visited you at work?

A. I don't know whether I specifically stated at work; I told him that I had been visited by agents of the FBI, yes.

Q. And did you tell Mr. Rathborne that you told the agents of the FBI that you had no evidence one way or the other to offer against Harry Bridges?

A. Could you amplify on that statement? I don't quite follow that.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read my question, please?

(Question read.)

Mr. Donohue: Just a minute, Mr. Witness. If your Honor please, I am impelled to make an objection this minute. May I ask your Honor what possible connection there may be between this witness' testimony and this proceeding with something that he may or may not have said to his brother-in-law back in 1941? I object to it, if your Honor please; it is incompetent, immaterial, and not relevant to the issues and certainly not for the purpose of impeaching the credibility of this [2262] witness.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the point I would suggest is this: that if this witness told Mr. Rathborne that he told the FBI agents that he had no knowledge one way or the other about Harry Bridges, it would certainly be material to our present inquiry.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I don't recall what my conversation was with Mr. Rathborne at the time.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Pardon me?

A. I don't recall what the conversation was with Mr. Rathborne at the time.

Q. You mean you have no definite memory one way or the other? A. That is correct.

Q. You don't deny that you may have said that?

A. Possibly; I don't know.

Q. You may possibly have said to Mr. Rathborne on the night of April 13, 1941, that the FBI had visited you at your office that day and that you had told them that you had no information one way or the other about Harry Bridges as to whether or not he was a Communist?

A. That statement may have been made for a simple reason: that Mr. Rathborne at that time was still a member of the Communist Party. There was the implication made, as I think I stated, on his part that my appearance and testimony [2263] before the Grand Jury in that second case would be, shall we say, somewhat undesirable as far as the Communist Party was concerned.

Q. You haven't seen Mr. Rathborne of late, you say?

A. I believe I stated I haven't seen him for the past two years.

Q. So of course you have no personal knowledge of his association with the prosecution on this particular case? A. None whatever.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Rathborne on the night of April 13 that the FBI agents had tried to intimidate you?

A. I told Mr. Rathborne that I was under a considerable amount of pressure, and obviously my wife was also under pressure.

Q. What pressure did you tell Mr. Rathborne that your wife was under?

A. Well, I think I can answer a question like that by you putting yourself in the position of a woman that is absolutely innocent of any connection with an activity of this sort and suddenly being called into the picture as, shall we say, a corroborating witness.

Q. You were indignant, I suppose, at the treatment that was accorded your wife?

Mr. Donohue: I object, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained to that.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you tell Mr. Rathborne on the [2264] night of April 13 of 1941, that the FBI agents told you that they knew all about your Communist connections in 1935 to 1937?

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

A. I believe I did, yes.

Q. Did you have another meeting at your house with Mr. Mervyn Rathborne on the evening of April 20, 1941?

A. Since you have the records so clear, I possibly may have. I don't recall.

Q. You asked him to come to your house on that evening yourself, did you not? A. It may be.

Q. Did you tell him on that occasion, again in the presence of your wife, that the FBI had visited you within the last two or three days on two occasions? A. It is possible.

Q. Did you tell him that they had twice, the FBI, brought you and Mrs. Krolek from your home in Belmont up to the FBI offices in San Francisco?

A. It is quite possible. [2265]

Q. Did you tell Mr. Rathborne on that evening that you and your wife were both subjected to extreme pressure by the FBI?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. This man had testified that he made a statement to the FBI. He has stated when, he has stated his recollection of what he said and his reasons. Now, certainly he can't be impeached by a conversation he had with his brother-in-law after the statement was made, two years after the statement was made. I object to it.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, if these statements are inconsistent with the present testimony that he gives here, I think that the Court and the jury should receive them.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Donohue: Well, he hasn't introduced——

The Court: I have given you considerable latitude, Mr. MacInnis:

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, you have.

The Court: In connection with the surrounding circumstances of the taking of the statement. I think the objection might be sustained at this juncture.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I will try not to parade the point too long, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: I appreciate, there is much discretion in Your Honor's rulings at this juncture.

Q. Did you and your wife tell Mr. Mervyn Rathborne on the night of April 20th of 1941, that you had been given the third [2266] degree by Mr. Del Gurcio in the presence of twelve FBI agents?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you tell Mr. Rathborne on the night I have just mentioned that Mr. Del Gurcio told you that unless you testified for the Government you would be discharged from your job with the National Youth Adiminstration?

Mr. Donohue: We object to the question.

A. That is not correct—excuse me.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, that this goes directly to the matters he has testified to. I will reframe the question, Your Honor.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: I would suggest you do. I was interrupted, the witness had answered partially.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you tell Mr. Rathborne on the night of April 20, 1941, that you had told Mr. Del Gurcio and the FBI agents that you did not want to be a witness in the Bridges case for two reasons; first, that you had no information that would be of any interest, either to the prosecution or the defense; and secondly, that you were a member of organized labor and that you would not go on the witness stand and give false testimony?

A. That may be so, Mr. MacInnis. The chief objection, I have told you in the past, to my appearing on the stand at this [2267] other Bridges hearing was for personal reasons, the fact that I was in no position to sustain myself economically. And the fact also that I was associated with the state administration in a minor capacity, which might serve to embarrass them.

Q. Well, did you tell Mr. Mervyn Rathborne on the same night that I have mentioned that your reason for arguing against appearing in the Bridges case was not because of any friendship or loyalty for Harry Bridges, whom you didn't like personally, but because you had an aversion in principle toward giving false testimony?

Mr. Donohue: I object. If Your Honor please, if this were directed to a reason for his appearing here, I would make no such objection.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): On the night of April

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

23rd, a further occasion, 1941, did Mr. Mervyn Rathborne come to your house at your request——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. It doesn't make any difference whether he did or didn't.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Your Honor, there are further conversations which took place on this occasion, as well. I think it would be for Your Honor to judge whether the particular question would be competent in view of the testimony here.

Mr. Donohue: It is obvious, if Your Honor pleases,——

The Court: Well, there might be a question of direct [2268] impeachment or collateral impeachment.

Mr. Donohue: But it could only be, if I may respectfully say to Your Honor, with respect to the reasons or motives for this witness in making a statement to the FBI. Now, if the same question were addressed to his motives or reasons for testifying here, I would make no such objection.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor,—(To Mr. Donohue) Are you finished?

Mr. Donohue: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, if it appeared from the conversation or colloquy had in April, 1941, the three different conversations with his brother-in-law, that this gentleman made statements to his brother-in-law totally inconsistent with the position that he takes here, that would be a matter for the Court and jury to look upon, certainly.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Counsel,——

Mr. Donohue: Again I say, if Your Honor please, if it had to do with the motives of this witness testifying here, I would make no such objection. This witness has been asked and he has said on a dozen occasions, "I went to the FBI in 1939, here are my reasons, and I gave a statement." Now I don't see how we can attempt to impeach him by something he may have said to his brother-in-law two years later as to his motives for giving that statement. Again I say, his motives are unimportant.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Your Honor,—— [2269]

Mr. Donohue: With respect to his statement to the FBI.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, when a man offers us his motives, we certainly are not bound by them, but the right of cross-examination is to inquire into those motives by questions as to what was done at the time and what may have been said at the time or at related times. Now, here we have a man who says the Government served him with a subpoena to appear in 1941 in the case against Harry Bridges. And he tells us that he was able to argue to them that because he wasn't financially secure, they let him go. Then he tells you that he may well have told Mr. Mervyn Rathborne things to the contrary, that he told the agents of the FBI that he had no information one way or the other about

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Harry Bridges. That one thing or another was said to him, that pressure was put upon him. Now, all of those things would be material, certainly, to the testimony that he offers us today.

The Court: You might ask him the question. The witness may offer any explanation he may have in association with the motivation he gives, why he makes such statements to Mr. Rathborne, if he did many any statements and the reason why; whether he tried to propitiate himself or not I don't know; I think he can give a full response.

Mr. MacInnis: I think he could.

The Court: All right, you may answer the question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): On the night of April 23rd of 1941, [2270] did you and your wife, in each other's presence, have a conversation with your brother-in-law, Mr. Mervyn Rathborne, in which you said that on Monday morning, April 21, 1941, you had been served with a subpoena and brought down to the United States Postoffice, this building, to the Bridges hearing?

A. I don't recall the conversation, but for your information, Mr. MacInnis, we have had, at that particular time, there were several discussions that I had with Mr. Rathborne. Mr. Rathborne, as you know, at that time was——

Q. Pardon me. Do not tell me what I know, because I have never met Mr. Rathborne in my life.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Pardon me. The witness may complete his answer.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, he shouldn't state what a person knows. I know many names of these people through documents that I have stayed up late hours reading in the last few nights, and I have never met Mr. Rathborne in my life.

The Court: Well, the witness has mentioned now that this is a prefatory statement, is it?

The Witness: That is correct, your Honor.

The Court: You may complete it.

A. (Continuing): The discussions that I had with Mr. Rathborne, I don't know whether they particularly occurred in my home or whether they occurred in his home. The occasion of [2271] discussion, of course, concerned my appearance before the grand jury, before the trial; and as you know, or rather, as must be very evident in your mind, Mr. Rathborne then was an active member of the Communist Party.

Q. I have heard he was.

A. The fact that you are so very clear on the information that you possess is, of course, ascribable to one reason, but Mr. Rathborne did obtain the information which I had given the FBI in 1939 and which was subsequently transmitted to him and which he——

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment.

Mr. MacInnis: You may go to the head of the class on that.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, there is a matter which I think counsel should discuss at this point with the Court, in the absence of the jury.

The Court: It is agreeable with the Court, counsel; it is now five minutes to three. If you have matters to discuss in the absence of the jury, we will accommodate counsel.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the afternoon recess. It is now five minutes to three. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form nor express an opinion until it is finally submitted to you. The jury may retire.

(The jury retired from the courtroom and the following [2272] occurred without the presence of the jury:)

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, the matter is one which I respectfully suggest to your Honor——

The Court: Stipulated the jurors are absent?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

And the matter is one, if your Honor pleases, which I respectfully say to your Honor we should be permitted to discuss with your Honor in chambers and not in public hearing.

The Court: Yes, sir. If you so desire, the Court will accommodate you in chambers.

Mr. Donohue: Thank you, sir.

The Court: We will recess to chambers. This is a regular recess to chambers, and the Reporter is to be present.

(Whereupon the following occurred in chambers;)

The Court: May the record show that the counsel for defense and counsel for the Government are present; the Reporter is here and the court is in regular session. Mr. Mitchell, the Clerk of the Court, is present. Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, the witness was about to volunteer a statement which, perhaps I may be in error, but I think is a subject matter which I should——

The Court: Keep the door closed.

I was interrupted; I am sorry. What was that last, Mr. Reporter? [2273]

(Record read.)

Mr. Donohue: ——discuss with the Court in order that it may not, as a result of a question from Mr. MacInnis, a question which he may or may not ask him. We are discussing a meeting of the witness at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne or at the witness' home. I am afraid that the witness, in response to a question of what happened, may make reference to a certain letter which was written to Mrs. Mathborne with relation to the testimony of Mr. Krolek before the Federal Bureau of Investigation. I have reason to believe counsel for the defendant Bridges may have that letter or a copy of that letter, and in the light of the fact that I happen to know who the author of that letter was, I think it would be highly improper for that letter or the substance of it to be testified to by this witness. It certainly could have no bearing on——

Mr. Hallinan: I don't think this is a matter for chambers; if there is any objection——

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think it is a matter for your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I think it is a matter for chambers.

Mr. Hallinan: Calling us in to explore as to what we have or haven't got.

Mr. Donohue: If the witness is permitted or led into testifying about this letter, I think it would be—I would have been remiss in my duty if I didn't call the Court's attention to the fact that I know that—at least I know because the witness [2274] has told me—such a letter was written to Mrs. Rathborne and that Mrs. Rathborne on several instances waved that letter in front of her and made some comment about it.

The Court: In front of "her"?

Mr. Donohue: In front of her, Mrs. Krolek, and in front of her husband, when the two couples were together.

The Court: Well, I can't follow you through. Of course, I again look through the bowl. I am not a clairvoyant.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor.

The Court: But are the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Krolek secure?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, yes.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: Well, is there anything in the letter that would bring any disgrace or opprobrium on any innocent person or anything of that nature involved? I can't follow you through, frankly.

Mr. Donohue: I think I will have to say about that, for the record, that the letter was written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and certainly no statement that Mrs. Roosevelt may have made with respect to the fact Mr. Krolek gave a statement to the FBI would have any pertinent——

Mr. Hallinan: Why not?

Mr. Donohue: ——bearing on the issue before this jury.

Mr. Hallinan: We are entitled to bring that out, and we certainly intend to bring it out. [2275]

Mr. Donohue: Just what I suspected, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: His reply to it.

Mr. Donohue: I will call it to the Court's attention.

Mr. Hallinan: And condemnation of his action in that respect. Certainly we do intend to bring it out.

Mr. Donohue: I don't think that the letter should be admitted to evidence. I don't think it is material testimony or proper evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: Mrs. Roosevelt's name isn't sacrosanct, and I doubt very much if she would object to us using it.

Mr. Donohue: The same would be true if it was Mrs. Somebody Else, but certainly no letter——

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Hallinan: But his retort to it——

Mr. Donohue: ——written to Mrs. Rathborne characterizing unfavorably the action of Mr. Krolek in testifying before the Federal Bureau of Investigation isn't admissible in this proceeding.

The Court: Well, I may agree with you on legalistics with respect to its admissibility.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think, Your Honor, that there is any—Pardon me. Did I interrupt you?

The Court: There is nothing before me at the present time.

Mr. MacInnis: That is what I think, that we can't——

The Court: There is nothing before me. We are venturing into a field of unknown. I don't know what counsel has in mind. [2276] I could only guess —I can not be prophetic.

Mr. Donohue: Counsel has stated now——

Mr. Hallinan: We have his reply as a pertinent piece of evidence.

The Court: Yes. I will meet the matter on a ruling when an appropriate offer is made.

Mr. Donohue: Yes. I may say, if Your Honor pleases, that when the offer is made, of a letter or an answer to a letter of Mrs. Roosevelt, we will have to object to it——

Mr. Hallinan: Go ahead.

Mr. Donohue: ——and I think it is unfair to us to require us to object in front of the jury.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think, Your Honor,——

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krelek.)

The Court: Well, counsel,—

Mr. Donohue: And the letter has no probative value in the trial.

Mr. Hallinan: We have others from people just as high and higher.

Mr. MacInnis: I would think, Your Honor, that there are many questions which we ask and which, when asked, are objected to. Then Your Honor determines whether they are proper or not.

Mr. Donohue: To let such a letter in would be to say that Mrs. Roosevelt's or Mrs. Jones' opinion of what the witnesses may have done is important in the issue of this trial; and it isn't.

The Court: Well, of course, the Court may well sustain an [2277] objection. I can't determine at this juncture, however. There is nothing before the Court.

Mr. Donohue: Well, I thought Your Honor might perhaps——

Mr. Hallinan: We are not going to offer the letter itself for its contents; we are going to offer it for his answer, his comment on the letter— nich is very pointed and very much to the point; and in which he denied specifically having made any of the statements criticized in the letter.

Mr. Donohue: You can't get the answer in unless you put the letter in.

Mr. Hallinan: All right, then, that doesn't rule it in or out.

The Court: We will rule on it when we come to it.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis: That is the only matter?

Mr. Donohue: That is the only matter.

The Court: I appreciate your bringing the matter to my attention in advance, but there is nothing before me now. We will be in recess.

(Recess.) [2278]

(The following proceedings were had in the courtroom within the presence of the jury:)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Rathborne, to continue our discussion of the meeting you had on the 23rd day of April, 1941——

The Court: One slight correction.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Krolek—I am sorry, Your Honor; it occurred to me in the middle of the question.

Q. To continue that discussion, did you tell in the presence of your wife, your brother-in-law, Mr. Rathborne, that your wife was also served with a subpoena to appear in the Bridges case but that she became nervous and in fact was confined to her bed because of the circumstance?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if Your Honor please; it obviously makes no difference whether his wife was served with a subpoena or not.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: On the same night, Mr. Krolek, did you in the presence of your wife tell Mr. Mervyn Rathborne that you had told Mr. Albert Delgurcio, the Bridges case prosecutor, that if you were placed upon the stand you would make a direct appeal to the trial examiner who sat in the position of judge in that case and that you would tell him about the persecutions, intimidations and third degree methods that had been used against you and your wife?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if Your Honor please. Again, I say, [2279] if Your Honor please, if these so-called methods of pressure or intimidation were being used——

The Court: I think thus far, as I said to Mr. MacInnis earlier in his cross-examination, I have given considerable latitude to the circumstances surrounding this man being subpoenaed, the statements emanating from him, and the like, and under the circumstances I sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Krolek, can you remember what you told Mr. Rathborne as being the circumstance under which the Government acceded to your request and failed to put you on the stand as a witness in 1941 in the case against Harry Bridges?

A. I don't particularly remember whether I did or not.

Q. You don't remember that. Well, I won't repeat the question in deference to Your Honor's ruling.

Now, Mr. Krolek, taking your memory back to this voluntary statement that you said you gave to the FBI in 1941 when you became alarmed at what you thought was the Communist infiltration into our state governmental administration, did you ever tell Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne about the making of that statement?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please; it doesn't make any difference whether he did or not.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary, Your Honor.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you this, Mr. Krolek: After you made the statement in 1939 to the FBI, weren't you [2280] present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne on an occasion when Mrs. Rathborne, your wife's sister, displayed to you the letter which she received from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt condemning you because of your treachery in making false statements against Harry Bridges and members of the ILWU?

Mr. Donohue: I not only object to the question, if Your Honor please, but I invite Your Honor's attention to the characterization of a letter which is not in evidence, which is not before the Court, which was advisedly made by Mr. MacInnis for the sole purpose of prejudicing the United States in this prosecution.

Mr. Hallinan: May I be heard on the legal end of that, Your Honor? You have ruled heretofore on matters somewhat of this kind.

The Court: Pardon me, Mr. Hallinan. One moment before I pass to that phase. I have an objection now interposed to Mr. MacInnis' question. I sustain the objection.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, I wanted to be heard on the matter before you ruled.

The Court: Then I will reserve my ruling.

Mr. Hallinan: If you will, because the propriety of the preliminary approach to questions of this kind before the display of the document involved has heretofore involved some discussion with the Court, and you have ruled correctly—in other words, I mean you have ruled upon how we contended the [2281] law stood on it; but in order to get that matter perfectly straight, Your Honor, I have a short statement here that I would like to read about a Supreme Court decision of the State of California; People v. Hart, 153 Cal. 263, which exactly approaches this matter. Now, there was a conviction that was reversed for one error. The Supreme Court said:

> "We have stated all the material evidence in the case so that the main point upon which the claim for a reversal is based may be better understood. This is that the Court erred in sustaining the objections of the prosecution to questions asked by the defense of Barkeeper Hall as to whether he had at the preliminary examination as he then did on the trial, made the statement concerning what took place in the saloon after the robbery while Dowane Davis and Hart were there."

Now here is the precise point:

> "It is insisted by the People that the rulings were proper because it did not appear, 1, That the witness had testified upon any preliminary examination; 2, That the attorney for defendant had not offered to exhibit to the witness any transcript of his testimony taken at the preliminary examination; and thirdly, that in any event the ruling was not prejudicial to the defendant."

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Now, here is how the Court disposed of that:

"As to the further argument of the prosecution that [2282] the questions were impeaching questions and therefore that a transcript of the witness' testimony should have first been shown him, it is sufficient to say that these questions were not by way of direct impeachment. In the first place, they were but preliminary in their nature, and had answers been allowed, the explanations of the witness might have been full, complete and satisfactory. He might, for example, have said that he did so testify on preliminary examination, or he might have answered that he was not interrogated upon the subject at all. Only as he answered, and depending upon the character of his answers, would questions by way of direct impeachment have followed. As it was, in sustaining the objections to these questions, the Court cut off the right of defendants' counsel to proceed along a legitimate line of cross-examination, while, in addition to this, the questions in and of themselves were pertinent, proper and valuable cross-examination as testing the credibili> ity, memory and fairness of the witness."

> Citing People v. Manasse, 94 Pac. 92.

Now, I say that is in line with the ruling that the Court made. [2283]

The Court: There is no parity, Mr. Hallinan, between the circumstances presented in the Hart case and that presented immediately confronting me with respect to this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, the question in this case is this: The contents of the letter itself is not evidence, but the reply that the witness made; the reply, let us say, for instance, without committing that this is it, that the witness said that Eleanor Roosevelt was a liar for saying that he had made the statements; that that, by contradicting the allegations in the letter, was a statement contrary to his present testimony here, and that is the purpose for which it is sought to be introduced.

The Court: Without committing myself to any immediate ruling on that matter, Mr. Hallinan, I may say to you somewhat preliminarily that these matters are wholly collateral. To try these collateral matters would end in lawsuit upon lawsuit and integrated lawsuit upon integrated lawsuit.

Mr. Hallinan: But, your Honor——

The Court: It is purely collateral, as I look on it, but I will reserve my ruling in the matter until Mr. Donohue has stated his objection.

Mr. Donohue: I have an objection to a question as to whether or not he has seen a letter which was written by someone else.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. MacInnis: That wasn't the question. [2284]

Mr. Donohue: Let's let the reporter read the question.

Mr. MacInnis: You will perceive that the question asked for conversation concerning the letter.

(Question read.)

Mr. Donohue: In addition, and before I offer my objection to the question, if your Honor please, I ask your Honor at this time to say to the jury that they are not to accept Mr. MacInnis' characterization of this letter which is not before the Court or jury.

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to rephrase the question, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained. And to the end that the record may be clear, I say to you that the contents of any asserted letter or alleged letter as referred to by Mr. MacInnis is not to be regarded by you as evidence in this case. I think we understand that. The jurors have been so admonished time and time again.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, to complete the record on that objection, and in answer to it, will the Government stipulate that such a letter is in existence?

Mr. Donohue: I can't stipulate to something I don't know. If there is such a letter I have never seen it.

Mr. MacInnis: It was the prosecutor who brought the letter to your Honor's attention, so it would appear to me that he would know it to be in existence. It was he who [2285] brought it before your Honor, not I.

Mr. Donohue: It was you who characterized the letter in spite of the fact that I had told you about it.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, the prosecutor brought up that letter to your Honor in chambers, the existence of the letter of Eleanor Roosevelt.

Mr. Donohue: Isn't it apparent——

Mr. MacInnis: I think I am in a position to ask for a stipulation.

Mr. Donohue: Isn't it apparent, if your Honor please, from Mr. MacInnis' characterization of this letter, either he has the letter, has seen the letter, or he has in front of this jury characterized a letter that he has never seen?

The Court: The objection is sustained. The letter, if it be in existence, has no more binding effect than any gratuitous statement made by any other person or any other citizen.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Krolek, after the time you made your first statement to the FBI in 1939, did you have a conversation concerning that meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne in which you discussed also a letter written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt concerning you and the making of that statement?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please, as its only purpose is to evade the ruling which [2286] your Honor made a moment ago.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That question calls for the direct conversation that they had; if he had no such conversation, he can say No. It seems to me that we can always ask for conversations inconsistent with testimony already given.

Mr. Donohue: I don't know where he——

The Court: I am content with my ruling, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Very well, your Honor. [2287]

Q. Did you make any reply to a letter written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt concerning the fact that you had made a statement to the FBI?

Mr. Donohue: Object to the question, if Your Honor please; it presupposes a letter which is not before us.

The Court: The objection is sustained, purely collateral, not tending to prove or disprove any issue in this case, and not tending to impeach or otherwise discredit the witness.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, Mr. Krolek, let me ask you if this conversation took place in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn Rathborne in the presence of yourself, your wife and the two Rathbornes——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, that counsel is stating that conversation which Your Honor has already said may not be testified to by the witness.

The Court: He has not completed the question.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Mr. Donohue: I know counsel; he is just about to narrate the supposed conversation.

Mr. MacInnis: He knows me. I guess in a measure that is true. I have listened also to Mr. Donohue for some time. But, Your Honor, the only way an impeaching question can be asked regarding a conversation is to ask the witness if a certain conversation took place, then he can either affirm or deny it.

Mr. Donohue: May I respectfully say to Your Honor, Your Honor has just ruled that this witness may not be asked whether [2288] or not a conversation took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne during which conversation there was some reference made to a certain letter. Now counsel proposes to narrate what he says was the conversation.

The Court: My sustaining the objection heretofore would seem to answer the objection to this particular question.

Mr. MacInnis: No, Your Honor; this question is to a direct conversation, not as to the contents of the letter as such.

The Court: Would you read it?

Mr. MacInnis: I hadn't completed the question.

The Court: Rephrase it.

Mr. MacInnis: All right, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Krolek, tell us this: Whether or not after the time you say you made a statement to the FBI in 1939 you did not engage in a conversation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne, your wife's sister and your brother-in-law, in the presence also of your wife, in which the following in substance was said——

Mr. Donohue: Now——

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis) (Continuing): Now let me ask you if in that conversation Mrs. Rathborne did not ask you if it was true that you had made such statements about Harry Bridges as were contained in a letter which she had before her, and if you did not reply, that that letter was false; that you had never made such statements; that you would take steps to answer the letter [2289] and to assure the writer of the letter, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, that such was not the fact?

Mr. Donohue: In objecting again, I call Your Honor's attention to the fact that just a moment ago I said that counsel was going to ask the witness a question by stating to him a supposed conversation on a subject matter which Your Honor had already barred. He has done it, and I object to it.

Mr. MacInnis: I think Your Honor would not have indicated the subject matter was barred, merely that a certain question in Your Honor's discretion was improper.

Mr. Donohue: I might say that counsel then stated a specific conversation in which there was no reference to the contents of the letter as such.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I have no further questions.

(Testimony of Kermit Charles Krolek.)

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Krolek, may I ask you, in the light of your answer to Mr. MacInnis this morning in which you described three types of Communist Party meetings, to tell us what kind of a Communist Party meeting was it presided over, as you stated, by the defendant Harry Bridges concerning which you testified took place in the year 1936 at Long Beach, California?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The objection first of all is this question is improper redirect examination; it has been [2290] asked and answered; the second objection is that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for the opinion and conclusion of this witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The type of meeting that was presided over in the meeting that you refer to was known as a top fraction meeting.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And a top fraction meeting is what kind of a meeting?

A. It is a meeting in which only members of the Communist Party are permitted to be present.

Q. Mr. Krolek, when you first made your statement which you have described in some detail, to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1939, did you have any understanding or promise made by the Federal Bureau of Investigation with reference to your appearing publicly as a witness?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it would seem to me that the fundamental basis advanced by this prosecutor would bar him now from inquiring into the same subject.

The Court: There was reference made to some understanding, either express or implied, that this witness had with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Whether or not it was completely answered I can't recall. At least I will overrule the objection.

A. The understanding that I had with the Federal Bureau of Investigation was that the testimony which I offered was offered with the understanding that I would not be called for public [2291] testimony.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Krolek, do you in any way know what, if any, testimony has been offered to the United States by the person referred to as Mervyn Rathborne?

A. I have no knowledge of the information.

Q. At any time prior to your appearing here on Friday did you discuss your testimony here with Mr. Rathborne?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. It would apear to me this has been asked and answered. He says he hasn't seen him for two years.

The Court: He hasn't seen the gentleman for two years.

Mr. MacInnis: I think Mr. Donohue heard him say that.

Mr. Donohue: Do you accept his answer as being correct?

Mr. MacInnis: I do not have to accept his answer, but I think you are bound by your own witness.

Mr. Donohue: May I ask the question?

The Court: You may ask the question.

Mr. Donohue: Will you read the question?

Mr. MaInnis: I accept the fact that that answer is in the record from this witness as a Government witness.

(Question read.)

A. I have not.

Mr. Donohue: I have no further questions, your Honor.

Recross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Krolek, you tell us now that when you made your statement to the FBI in 1939 you had some [2292] kind of an understanding with those public officers that you would not be called as a witness? A. That is correct.

Q. In other words, you were what would be called a secret informer at that time, a person who would give information who would not be called as a witness?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, to the characterization of a person who gives testimony to the Bureau as an informer, secret or otherwise. That is a conclusion drawn by the examiner which may or may not be correct.

The Court: Well, he might answer.

A. I will answer it in this way: I do not certainly consider it to be a secretive situation where if I am able to present any testimony that may be detrimental or dangerous to the welfare of the country or to any group of majority people specifically, if I present that testimony, why, I should not ask that it be—that my testimony be not withheld from the standpoint of publicity.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In other words, you asked the FBI, you tell us now, not to call you as a witness as to the facts which you disclosed in information? A. Precisely.

Q. With respect to the other matter asked you just now by the prosecutor, Mr. Donohue, about the meeting you say you attended with Harry Bridges, did you have any discussion of [2293] that matter during any recesses with the prosecutors?

A. I might have commented or touched upon certain phases of that meeting, yes.

Q. You had a discussion with them in which they told you that they were going to ask you that question; isn't that right?

A. Not that question specifically, but other questions.

Q. The general subject?

A. The general review of such information as I had volunteered to them, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: That is all.

Mr. Donohue: We have no further questions.

The Court: The witness is excused.

The Witness: Thank you, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, due to the uncertainty of knowing exactly when we might proceed and the fact that a witness whom we expected to call is not available, we have a witness here, but I would like an opportunity to talk with him before I call him as a witness, and I would like, your Honor, if you would at this time, to adjourn until tomorrow morning.

The Court: I have no objection. Is that agreeable to defense counsel?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we are quite willing to go ahead, because I think, as your Honor has pointed out, more [2294] time has been consumed than any of us anticipated; but we will certainly defer to your discretion. If you want to go ahead, we are glad to go ahead. If you want to adjourn, we will accept that, too.

The Court: I suppose the jurors have no objection.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, we should probably accommodate the prosecutor. We wouldn't want to take an unfair advantage of him, of course.

The Bailiff: Order in the courtroom. This is no laughing matter.

The Court: I will reserve my comment, Mr. MacInnis.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the afternoon adjournment until ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Again may I admonish you not to discuss the case under any circumstances or conditions or to converse with any person on any subject of the trial, nor to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, December 13, 1949, at 10:00 a.m.)

December 13, 1949, 10:00 o'Clock

(Conference in chambers out of the presence of the jury:)

The Court: Mr. Mitchell has advised me that Mr. Donohue desired to see me in connection with matters that occurred yesterday; is that correct?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: May the record show that counsel representing both sides, the Government as well as the defendant or defendants, are in chambers.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor will indulge me for just a moment.

If Your Honor pleases, I direct Your Honor's attention first to a question which appears on page 2280 of the record.

> "Mr. MacInnis: Q. ——" ——

The Court: Pardon me. 2280?

Mr. Donohue: 2280, yes, sir.

The Court: Do you have your transcript?

Mr. MacInnis: I do not, Your Honor. I can listen to it as it is read.

Mr. Donohue: Beginning on line 15.

> "Now, Mr. Krolek, taking your memory back—" —oh, I am sorry. On line 24 on the same page, 2280:
> "Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you this, Mr. Krolek: After you made the statement in 1939 to the FBI, weren't [2296] you present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rathborne on an occasion when Mrs. Rathborne, your > wife's sister, displayed to you the letter which she received from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt condemning you because of your treachery in making false statements against Harry Bridges and members of the ILWU?"

I direct Your Honor's attention to page 2288 of the record at line 1:

> "Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you make any reply to a letter written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt concerning the fact that you had made a statement to the FBI?"

To which question objection was made.

Now referring back, if Your Honor pleases, to page 2275, to get the continuity, page 2275 at line 24, this colloquy having occurred here in chambers:

> "Mr. Hallinan: We are entitled to bring that out,"——

The Court: Pardon me. So the record may be clear, Mr. Reporter, this colloquy that you are referring to now and the colloquy that you referred to——

Mr. Donohue: I am referring to page 2275.

The Court: This is another colloquy?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir, the prior questions referred to were questions asked in open court.

> "Mr. Hallinan: We are entitled to bring that out, and we certainly intend to bring it [2297] out."

Page 2276, line 1:

"Mr. Donohue: Just what I suspected, Your Honor.

"Mr. Hallinan: His reply to it."

Line 13:

Page 2277, line 3:

Page 2278, line 5:

"Mr. Hallinan: We are not going to offer the letter itself for its contents; we are going to offer it for his answer, his comment on the letter—which is very pointed and very much to the point; and in which he denied specifically having made any of the statements criticized in the letter."

Now, I may say to Your Honor that at the time of the conference here in chambers I did not know whether the witness Krolek, concerning which these remarks were made, had or had not made a reply to any letter written by Mrs. Roosevelt to which reference has been made. However, as soon as the conference in chambers ended, I asked the witness Krolek if he had ever made any reply to Mrs. Roosevelt concerning this letter, and his answer was that he had never written a letter to Mrs. Roosevelt at any time in his life on any subject.

Now, with respect to the question to which I first made [2298] reference to Your Honor, which I think was page 22[illegible].

The Court: 2280, line 24.

Mr. Donohue: That question asked of the witness in the presence of the jury characterizes the letter written by Mrs. Roosevelt in person by stating: "A letter which he received from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt condemning you because of your treachery in making false statements against Harry Bridges and members of the ILWU."

I read in the press this morning that Mr. MacInnis has stated that he has a copy of the letter in reference; that he is not going to make use of the letter until the witness Rathborne is offered to him for cross-examination.

At this time, if Your Honor pleases, I am offering to the Court, and to the Court only, for the Court's determination as to whether or not the question which was characterized by Mr. MacInnis or the question of Mr. MacInnis which characterized the letter of Mrs. Roosevelt is a proper characterization of that letter. I offer you a letter on the White House stationery.

The Court: For that purpose and that limited purpose?

Mr. Donohue: For that purpose and that purpose only, signed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. (Handing document to the Court.)

Mr. MacInnis: Has you Honor read the letter?

The Court: I am reading it slowly. Yes, Mr. MacInnis. [2299]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it appears to me, not having seen the piece of paper, of course, that has been displayed to you, that the time in which the prosecutor could have brought that matter out if the thoughts implied in the question are incorrect, would have been yesterday when the jury was here. If it is true, as he tells us now, that Mr. Krolek never made any reply to Eleanor Roosevelt, assuming of course that Mr. Donohue is faithfully repeating what this man said to him outside of court,—if that were the case, Mr. Donohue, by a very simple question, could have asked the question, "Did you ever in your life make any reply to any letter by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt?" and the negative answer would have ended the whole situation.

Similarly, he tells your Honor that when he left the conference in chambers yesterday that he asked the witness this question about whether or not any answer was ever written. Having the information that he says he received from the witness Krolek, when the question was put to Krolek, "Didn't you make an answer," Mr. Donohue, thus advised, could have withheld his objection and permitted a negative answer to come into the case. I don't know what we are talking about.

The Court: I think the position of Mr. Donohue probably is pointed to the characterization which you ascribe at page 2280, line 24, over to and including page 2281, line 5, and particularly with reference to this part of your question,—— [2300]

Mr. MacInnis: I understand his point.

Mr. Hallinan: May we see the letter? What are we doing here? Is this a secret between Court and counsel?

The Court: Pardon me; I am just trying to get my thoughts together.

> "The letter which you received from Eleanor Roosevelt condemning you because of your treachery in making false statements against Harry Bridges and members of ILWU."

I might say to you, Mr. MacInnis, that there is nothing in the letter that would justify that characterization or that would justify the inclusion of any condemnation on the part of Eleanor Roosevelt by ascribing to her any such conduct.

What is your precise point?

Mr. Donohue: I just wanted to bring it before your Honor, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: We have not been shown the letter, if the Court please. In other words, your Honor is not receiving evidence, of course, because you can't receive evidence not on the witness stand.

The Court: I am not receiving evidence now. May the record show that I am not assuming to take evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: I am trying to figure what is before the Court.

The Court: I want to know precisely, Mr. Donohue, what [2301] have you in mind?

Mr. Donohue: I simply thought, if your Honor please, that it was my duty to lay before the Court the facts which are in my possession; that in so far as I have been able to determine, the only letter to which reference could have been made yesterday—if there be another, then that is something which should be presented to your Honor, but the only letter dated May 13, 1941, addressed to the Rathbornes from Mrs. Roosevelt is the letter which I have exhibited to your Honor. And I objected yesterday to the characterization of the letter of Mrs. Roosevelt by Mr. MacInnis when the letter obviously was not admissible in evidence, and I thought it my duty to exhibit to your Honor the only letter of which I have any knowledge, which certainly wouldn't bear the characterization which was given to it by Mr. MacInnis yesterday.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't think he has any right to smoke out our testimony by having a conference in chambers to see if we have another letter. Let us see this letter.

Mr. Donohue: And in the light of the fact that Mr. Hallinan had three times stated yesterday that while the letter from Mrs. Roosevelt might not be admissible, questions concerning it would have to be asked in order that he might introduce Mr. Krolek's reply to it, I thought I should say to your Honor that Mr. Krolek says that he never answered any letter to Mrs. Roosevelt. [2302]

The Court: In order to clarify my own thinking as to what if any action you may seek from the Court——

Mr. Donohue: I do not seek any action; I just thought it was my duty to lay the facts before the Court.

Mr. MacInnis: I frankly am completely in the dark as to the purpose of the discussion.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, may I ask you, without asking you to violate any confidence that may be reposed in you as a trial attorney, if you have any copy of such a letter on which you based the question addressed to the witness which question started out on page 2280.

Mr. Hallinan: That is not fair to counsel.

The Court: If you regard it as not fair, then the answer, Mr. Hallinan,——

Mr. Hallinan: To divulge our information.

The Court: You may not disclose it. I am not asking you to disclose it.

Is it your point, Mr. Donohue, that injury has been sustained, in your opinion, to the prosecution's case by reason of the mention of this letter in the form which it took? I of course appreciate your visitation here and presentation of the matter, but what if any bearing has it on the trial?

Mr. Donohue: Well, I do think, if the Court please——

The Court: I want your frank comment.

Mr. Donohue: I do think it hurt us to have the impression [2303] put in the minds of the jury that Mrs. Roosevelt had written a letter in which she characterized the conduct of Mr. Krolek in giving testimony to the Federal Bureau of Investigation as treachery.

The Court: Well, I regarded the matter yesterday as collateral. I sustained objections to it.

Mr. MacInnis: You also instructed the jury that my remarks were not evidence.

The Court: What effect it may have had on the jury, I do not know. I sought to admonish them. Whether or not I admonished them with sufficient care, I do not know. These matters rest to some degree in an uncertain field. In the trial of the cause the letter was not relevant. I sustained objections to the characterization of Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. Donohue: I may say further, if your Honor please, that I thought it was my duty to the Court if it appears from what evidence may be before us that Mr. MacInnis has characterized a letter which was not and could not have been introduced in evidence in a manner which the letter itself would not justify, and if Mr. Hallinan has stated, as he did here three times yesterday, that he had a reply to a letter, which he does not exhibit, that those are facts which I should place before your Honor, and I have done so.

Mr. MacInnis: Again, your Honor, I can only accept without dispute with Mr. Donohue what he says with his [2304] conversation with Mr. Krolek. We of course assume that he had that conversation, of course, but that wasn't the position he took in court yesterday. He objected to the question about any reply, and it would appear to me to be rather simple to end the whole controversy, the witness could have said, "I have never made any reply."

Mr. MacInnis, I say to you if that is the only letter written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt bearing upon this particular subject, then there is no basis in fact for the questions which you asked.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we don't know what is before us.

The Court: I don't know whether the Government intends to open up the subject in the course of the hearing; I don't know whether the Government intends to reserve the matter or you intend to reserve the matter until when Mr.——

Mr. Donohue: Rathborne.

The Court: (Continuing): ——Rathborne takes the stand. There has been some intimation on the part of the defense that you might be reserving this matter until Mr. Rathborne takes the stand. The matter has some delicacy.

Mr. Donohue: I understand, your Honor.

The Court: It is an intensely delicate situation. Of my own volition I don't know that I need take any other [2305] action than I have taken thus far, in fairness to both side.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, you have given the appropriate instruction which you would always give on any matter on which you considered admonishing the jury.

The Court: I have given an admonition. The matter approaches great delicacy. Of course, I appreciate Mr. Donohue's visit here, but I don't think, in the absence of a move or some motion on the part of the prosecution made in open court, that it behooves the Court to take any action.

Mr. Donohue: I have made no motion. I came here simply to lay before your Honor the facts.

The Court: The matter will then, so far as formalities, rest as it is. It may hereafter be that the Court during the course of my final instructions to the jury may advert to matters of this character so that there may be no confusion in the minds of the jury. That is a matter of my own individual province at a later stage.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this, your Honor, in response to the last discussion from yourself, I would like to say the only knowledge we have as to witnesses who will be produced in this trial comes from the statements that are attributed to Mr. Donohue in the newspapers. He made reference to a statement he says I made in the press. We have been informed out of the newspapers only that he intends to produce Mr. Rathborne. Of course, we have a lot of material that [2306] we would like to use with Mr. Rathborne. We obviously should not be required upon any kind of a request from Mr. Donohue at this time to reveal what we have or do not have on Mr. Rathborne, so that Mr. Donohue may be guided in his course.

Mr. Donohue: I have no such purpose in view. We do not want the material that the defense may have.

The Court: Adverting again to the questions addressed to the witness by Mr. MacInnis, in the light of the state of the record, there may well be some confusion in the minds of the jury as to the state of the record. However, I will meet that when I come to it. [2307]

(The following proceedings were had in open court and in the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: The case of United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: Will you call the witness Mr. Manning Johnson?

MANNING JOHNSON

called on behalf of the United States; sworn.

The Clerk: Will you state your full name to the Court and jury?

A. Manning Rudolph Johnson.

The Clerk: Will you attempt to talk so your voice is about fourteen inches from this microphone?

The Witness: O.K.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Johnson?

A. In New York City.

Q. What address?

A. 62 West 125th Street.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. At the present time I am international president for the Retail Clerks International Association, affiliated with the [2308] American Federation of Labor.

Q. How long have you been so employed?

A. I have been with the Retail Clerks International Association since last March.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Johnson?

A. I was born in Washington, D. C.

Q. When? A. December 18, 1907.

Q. Did you receive your schooling in Washington? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. What was the extent of your schooling?

A. I attended the Elijah P. Lovejoy elementary school, the Robert Gould Shaw junior high school, and the Armstrong Technical high school.

Q. When did you finish your schooling in Washington?

A. I was graduated from the Armstrong Technical High School in 1925.

Q. Where did you obtain your first employment? Was it in Washington or elsewhere?

A. No, my first job was for the Pennsylvania Railroad in New York City.

Q. What kind of work did you do for the railroad?

A. I was a janitor on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Q. How long did you remain employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad?

A. I don't recall. A little over a year and a half, I think. [2309]

Q. What was your next work?

A. I went west to Casper, Wyoming. I went to work for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, first as a sandblaster and later as a truck and tender repairman.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Did you continue to work for the Burlington over a long period or a short period of time?

A. No, I worked for the Burlington for a short while, and I was offered a proposition in Alliance, Nebraska, to take over a restaurant and pool hall.

Q. Can you tell us about what year that was?

A. That was in 1928.

Q. How long did you operate the restaurant in Alliance?

A. Up until nearly the last part of 1929.

Q. What employment did you take next?

A. I left Alliance, Nebraska, and went to Buffalo, New York. There I went to work as a longshoreman on the Erie docks.

Q. How long did you work as a longshoreman?

A. During 1930 and 1931.

Q. What was your next occupation?

A. I became an organizer for the Communist Party.

Q. Where and when did you become an organizer for the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to this, Your Honor, on the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; res inter alios acta; and furthermore, this is not the [2310] best evidence. The records of that party and the official documents of it would be the best evidence. We object to secondary evidence.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You may answer the question on His Honor's ruling.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. Do you mind repeating that question?

(Question read.)

A. I became an organizer for the Communist Party in Buffalo, New York, in 1931.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you tell us by whom you were enrolled as a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. The same objection, if the Court please, calling for hearsay, matters done among other persons; not binding on the defendant; too remote.

The Court: Overruled. I may say to the jury now, as I have in the past, that in connection with these matters elicited from witnesses, as from Mr. Johnson, concerning internal affairs of the Communist Party or asserted internal affairs of the Communist Party, that the same may not be regarded at this juncture at least as being binding upon the defendants at the bar. You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you recall the question, Mr. Johnson?

A. Do you mind reading it back?

(Question read.) [2311]

A. I was recruited into the party by Otto Hall.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Were you issued a membership book or card?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if it please the Court. If we might have a stipulation at this time, it would save annoyance.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Yes, the same stipulation we have had in the past.

Mr. Hallinan: That all objections to matters done outside of the presence of the defendants and relating to the alleged induction of this gentleman into the Communist Party and his activities within it, will be objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, res inter alios actae, hearsay, and not binding upon the defendants, no proper foundation has been laid.

The Court: The objection is overruled for the reasons I have heretofore assigned and the same admonition to the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: We have the stipulation of the prosecution that the same objection is deemed to run to all these questions.

Mr. Donohue: Would you mind reading the question to the witness?

(Question read.)

A. Yes, I was issued a card, which I filled out, and later I was issued a membership book. [2312]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Over how long a period did you continue as a member of the Communist Party?

A. I continued until a few months after the Nazi-Soviet attack.

Q. Can you recall in what year that occurred?

A. The Nazi-Soviet attack was the latter part of 1939. After that I attended a number of meetings up until the early part of the 1940's.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Hallinan: The early part of what?

Mr. Donohue: 1940's.

The Witness: Or '40.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Johnson, did you voluntarily leave the Communist Party or were you expelled by that party?

A. I voluntarily left the Communist Party.

Q. Would you tell the Court and the members of the jury what your reasons were for joining the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, we object to this as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness. I know Your Honor has heretofore ruled adversely to us on this matter, but I saw just yesterday a case in California, Supreme Court case, People v. Ware, holding that matters of this kind are absolutely inadmissible and the use of them is reversible error. The witness can testify as to things that happened within an organization of which he was a member and he can explain terms that were used that are not ordinarily employed outside. But he can not give [2313] conclusions or opinions or even inferences that he derived from such matters. Now, to ask a witness why he came into a party and why he left it is certainly permitting him to give conclusions and opinions which are not binding on the defendants, absolute hearsay, and violating the hearsay rule in every respect. We object to this man being allowed to state why he entered it or why he left.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if Your Honor please, the reasons which obviously moved Your Honor on prior instances to admit the answer to such a question as was just asked this witness, are equally compelling today. Not only does it not call for an opinion on the part of the witness, but rather, the witness is called upon to state to Your Honor and to the members of the jury his own personal reasons for an act which he himself performed.

Mr. Hallinan: That is of no consequence to the defendants. They are not concerned with what motives the man may have for doing something ten or twelve years ago, and certainly in any case the witness can not be asked now, "Why are you a witness here?" or "Why did you do a certain thing?" They can be asked that on cross-examination, but the prosecution under no circumstances can adduce such evidence. In People v. Ware questions much less vicious than that were held to be reversible error. I did not bring the citation with me, but I can get it at noon time. I will show Your Honor the citation. You will see [2314] such questions are improper.

Mr. Donohue: If I may be permitted to continue, if Your Honor please, I think that which makes this question particularly pertinent lies in the fact that in his opening statement Mr. Hallinan told the Court and jury that he would show that every witness who was called by the United States was of a certain type or character, and I think, if Your Honor pleases, in order that the jury may evaluate the testimony of this and any other witness, the reasons which motivated this witness to join the Communist Party and the reasons which motivated him to terminate his membership in that party are pertinent, not only on the question of the man's own character as a witness, but they are peculiarly pertinent in the light of the suggestion that has been made by counsel in his opening statement, that each of these witnesses is a part of a conspiracy to do injury to these defendants, and that each of the witnesses who testifies is a witness who is testifying either because of some prejudice or because of some fear or pressure. In the light of those facts, I think that Your Honor has correctly ruled before that the answer to such a question is proper, and for that reason I think that the objection should be overruled.

The Court: I have heretofore overruled the objections. I am content with my ruling. I am content with the reason underlying the rule, and I therefore abide by it.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you recall the question, Mr. Johnson? [2315]

A. Do you mind reading it back to me?

(Question read.)

A. I joined the Communist Party on the basis of idealism. At the time I felt that the Communist Party was a medium through which I could combat segregation, discrimination, lynching and many other injustices that prevailed in our system. The

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Communist Party was giving considerable effort from a propagandistic point of view along these particular lines, and I joined hoping that through that medium I could combat these evils.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Prior to your joining the Communist Party, had you been a member of any other organization?

A. I was a member of the American Negro Labor Congress prior to joining the Communist Party. It was through the medium of the Negro Labor Congress that I was recruited into the party. The Negro Labor Congress was a Communist Front organization.

Q. Mr. Johnson, would you now, covering the period of your membership in the Communist Party, as you say, from 1931 to some time in 1940, tell us what, if any, positions you occupied with the Communist Party?

A. I was district agitation and propaganda director, district organizer, member of the National Trade Union Commission of the National Committee of the Communist Party, a member of the Negro Commission of the National Committee of the Communist Party, a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, a member of the New York State Committee of the Communist Party, [2316] a member of the Trade Union Commission of the Communist Party at New York State. In addition to these positions, I was also a national negro organizer for the Trade Union Unity League.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Was your activity in the Communist Party wholly centered in New York State?

A. My activities in the Communist Party were centered entirely in New York State.

Q. You told us that you joined the Communist Party in Buffalo. How long did you remain in Buffalo?

A. I remained in Buffalo from 1930 until 1934.

Q. Where did you go from Buffalo?

A. I went from Buffalo to New York City.

Q. Did you continue your party activities in the City of New York? A. I did.

Q. Have you lived continuously in the City of New York since 1934?

A. I did, until I went into the navy in 1944.

Q. Will you state the circumstances under which you joined the navy?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. That calls for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, and is of no validity in this case.

Mr. Donohue: I can't quite follow the suggestion that it calls for the opinion and conclusion of the witness as to when [2317] he joined the party.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: He was not asked when he joined; he was asked the circumstances under which he joined.

The Court: I suppose where, when and the circumstances.

Mr. Hallinan: Correct, Your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Do you mind reading the question back, please?

(Question read.)

A. The usual circumstances that I could have gotten a deferment, and I would not accept the deferment, and I just went in because I wanted to do something for my government.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I ask that statement, that "I could have gotten a deferment," be stricken out, if the Court please.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to that.

The Court: That may go out.

Mr. Hallinan: I did not think that Communist Party organizers were deferred by the Government for enlistment.

The Witness: I was not a member of the Communist Party at that time.

Mr. Hallinan: I am not addressing you, sir.

Mr. Donohue: May I now proceed, if Your Honor please?

The Court: Yes. [2318]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you briefly tell us what your navy service constituted?

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. After my induction I was sent to Great Lakes, Illinois to boot training. From there I was sent to the Naval Air Technical Training School, to a class in aviation ordnance. After the completion of my course in aviation ordnance, I received the rating of Aviation Ordnance Man third class, petty officer third class. I was transferred to the Naval Air Station at Alameda. There I received two advancements in rating from a third class to a second, and finally to a first class petty officer, Aviation Ordnance Man first class. My job was to supervise the handling of high explosives that went aboard all the aircraft carriers that were operating in the Pacific.

Q. Did you have any further schooling in the navy?

A. I also attended the Aerial Gunnery School at Lake Chabot, California.

Q. Did you graduate from that school?

A. I did.

Q. When did you leave the navy?

A. I left the navy in May, 1946.

Q. Where were you discharged from the navy?

A. Shoemaker, California.

Q. Where did you go or what did you do by way of employment [2319] after you left the navy?

A. I went to work for the navy in a civilian capacity at Naval Air Station, Alameda. My occupation there was electric crane man.

Q. How long did you continue as an aviation employee of the navy? A. Until 1947.

Q. And you did what thereafter?

A. I went to New York City. I went to work for the Bloomingdale department store.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. And you worked for Bloomingdale how long? A. I worked for Bloomingdale's, oh, nearly a year.

Q. And from that employment did you go to your present employment? A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Johnson, you stated a minute ago that you were a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party. Would you describe for His Honor and the members of the jury the composition and function of the National Committee of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that, Your Honor, as calling for an opinion and conclusion, and invading the province of the jury; furthermore, that it is not the best evidence. In the case that I cited to the Court it was held that the records, constitution and by-laws of an organization are the best evidence [2320] as to what its purpose is, and a witness is not allowed to give characterizations or define matters of that kind. If it is pretended that this is a matter for expert testimony, then I point out to Your Honor that the Communist Party constitutes neither an art, trade, science or profession, to which matters the Code limits expert testimony. This is an invasion of the province of the jury. The only way such matters can be proved is by producing such constitution, records, by-laws and so forth to show the purpose of the party.

I do not suppose, Your Honor, that it would be contended that, say, some person had been an officer of the Republican Party, the Democratic Party, or even some private organization, that a witness could be allowed to take the stand and testify as to what the different elements of that party were, what their duties and faculties were, at least in the absence of showing that the constitution, bylaws and other such records were not available. Then it would be secondary proof at best. But I submit, Your Honor, that this is not the proper method for showing any such thing. If there is such an organization or such a body, then the way to prove this matter is to produce the constitution or the rules and regulations of the organization of which it is a part and let the jury draw its own inferences and deductions as to what it is and how it is constituted.

Mr. Donohue: If the Court please, I am not asking a [2321] question which requires a reply as to anything relating to the purpose, the organization or function of the Communist Party. I am simply asking a witness who has testified that he was a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party to tell us what that organization or what that committee to which he was elected was and what its function was. If he was a member of that committee, obviously he can testify as to how he became a member and as to what the function of that committee was. I am not asking him anything about the policies of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: We understand the question, Your Honor, but that is not the way to prove that piece of evidence he is trying to introduce.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: Will you read the question?

(Question read.)

A. Yes. I was a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party. I was elected to the National Committee at a convention of the National Committee in 1936. The National Committee is composed of the outstanding leaders in the Communist movement throughout the country. They are selected on the basis of the particular district or type of industry from which they come. In most instances they lay emphasis on persons——.

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. This is not responsive to the [2322] question. He was asked what the composition is. By that I suppose it is understood the persons, the number of persons and matters of that kind. He is adducing now just what he said he did not intend to adduce. Furthermore, by asking the functions, Your Honor, he is invading also the province of the jury and the statement that he made as to the purpose of these questions. He said he was not going to ask anything as to the purposes or the method of its operation.

Mr. Donohue: I said I was going to ask him—the question connotes no understanding of the policies or the purposes of the Communist Party. I have asked a witness who stated he was a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, who has stated he was elected to that committee in 1936, only to tell us how it was constituted, this committee, and what are the functions of that committee.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. The major emphasis was laid upon persons from the basic or strategic or mass production industries, such as steel, mining, marine, packing, railroad, and so forth. In 1936, if I recall correctly, there was 50-some-odd members on the National Committee.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you tell us, Mr. Johnson, having stated that you were elected in that year, the process whereby you were elected or persons are elected to that committee?

A. Well, delegates came in from all of the districts throughout [2323] the country. The Communist Party at that time was organized along district lines, and each district was entitled to so many delegates based upon its membership. These delegates assembled, and at that convention, why, we listened to speeches and reports by the national leaders, and then we were given a list of the various persons to be elected to the National Committee. Each delegation submitted a list. You read over the list, and then after that they have a voting for acceptance of the list.

Q. Can you tell us from whom the delegates received that list of candidates?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that as calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, if the Court please.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question, if the Court please.

Q. May I ask you, Mr. Johnson, from whom did you, as a delegate, receive a list of the candidates in the convention of the Communist Party in 1936?

A. At the 1936 convention the list of the persons to be on the National Committee were distributed by Jay Peters and Abe Benson. I received my list, for the election that I was a part of, from Jay Peters.

Q. Who is Jay Peters, do you know?

A. Jay Peters was in charge of certain technical phases of the Communist Party work, such as the handling of the special codes, secret codes, espionage and illegal forms of party [2324] organization.

Q. Where and when did the 1936 convention of the Communist Party take place?

A. The 1936 convention of the Communist Party was held in Manhattan Center, 34th Street and Eighth Avenue.

Q. Do you recall about what time of the year?

A. That was during the warm months.

Mr. Hallinan: Can we have that more exactly?

Q. Don't you have that exactly?

A. I can't recall the exact date of the convention, but it was during the warm months. It may have been in June or it may have been in July, but I know it was during the warm months.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How long did you continue after your election to the National Committee of the Communist Party in 1936 as a member of the National Committee?

A. I remained a member of the National Committee for the balance of 1936, 1937 and 1938, until the 1938 convention.

Q. Were you reelected in the 1938 convention?

A. No, I was not reelected to the National Committee at the 1938 convention.

Q. How many conventions, national conventions of the Communist Party, have you in fact attended?

A. I attended the 1934 convention in Cleveland and the 1936 and 1938 conventions in New York City. [2325]

Q. During the period of your service as a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, did you learn the method whereby candidates were selected for membership upon the National Committee?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection, if the Court please: calling for hearsay and the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The candidates for membership on the National Committee—the candidates for membership on the National Committee were selected by the political bureau of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Would you describe the function only of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: The same thing, Your Honor,

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

calling for an expert opinion and secondary evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The political party is the all-powerful leading body of the Communist Party.

Q. How is the Political Bureau selected?

A. The Political Bureau is selected from the National Committee of the Communist Party.

Q. Will you tell us the process whereby the Political Bureau or the National Committee selects the candidates for election to the National Committee?

Mr. Hallinan: Might it be understood now, in order to save the recurrence of these objections, that the same objections [2326] I made to the prior questions run to all this line of questioning, Your Honor?

The Court: So ordered.

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question back to me?

(Question read.)

A. I don't quite understand that.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): I think you told us shortly ago that when you were elected in 1936 to the National Committee you received a list of the candidates from Jay Peters.

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, having served on the National Committee, did you determine or learn during the period of your service how that list was prepared, such as the list that you received from Jay Peters?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. Yes, the Political Bureau submits a list of names to the National Committee with regard to who shall and who shall not be recommended to the convention for membership on the National Committee.

Q. And it is that list which subsequently goes to the delegates?

A. That list goes to the delegates.

Q. Can you tell us whether or not from your experience as a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party the delegates are listed on such a list in their own or in his own individual name? [2327]

A. Well, here is the way that works——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. That, Your Honor, is certainly calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness. Here is a list of candidates from whom 50 people are to be selected. There is no foundation laid to show that this man knows any of them, and so how can he tell whether they are listed in their own names or somebody else's name? That is calling for an opinion and conclusion, hearsay, guessing and surmise.

The Court: He can testify as to a course of conduct and practice that appears to be uniform.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, sir, and I may say this is merely a preliminary question.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: Will you read the question?

(Question read.)

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I might say——

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, that calls for a direct answer. This gentleman wants to make a speech in every answer. He can state whether it is a delegate's name or another name.

The Court: I might say in deference to the witness he has not sought to make a little speech. You might answer it now.

A. As far as the names on the list are concerned, some of them [2328] are in their own names and some are in an alias.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Are you able to tell us from your experience as a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party why the distinction?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. That is calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. It is the customary practice of the Communist Party to use aliases. I was asked to use one, but I refused to use it. I continued to use my own name. The reason behind that is that in order to safeguard and protect the hierarchy of the party, they would give them an alias, and often that alias was used. For example, Jay Peters went under the name of Alexander Stevens.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, if the Court please. We object to this. It is just enlarging his answer, giving illustrations not called for by the question.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Jay Peters was already referred to in the evidence.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, You Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Hallinan: And, Mr. Reporter, may I have the page on which this occurs?

The Reporter: 310.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Johnson, after the convention of [2329] 1936, at which you testified you were elected a member of the National Committee, did you meet subsequently with the National Committee as a member thereof?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where and when, to the best of your recollection?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was either at the Center or in a hotel in New York, because we had a number of meetings in different places during that particular time, which is always customary.

Q. And when?

A. That was right after the election of the National Committee.

Q. When you say "after" you mean how long after? A. Shortly after.

Q. Will you tell us now, Mr. Johnson, the name or names of such persons as you can recall who were present in attendance at that meeting of the National Committee of the Communist Party?

A. Well, I can. There was Earl Browder, Jack

Stachel, Jay Peters, William Weinstone, William Steiner alias Blake, Sam Don, James W. Ford, Maude White——

Q. How do you spell that last name?

A. W-h-i-t-e; Alex Biddleman, A. Brown alias Alpi.

Q. (By the Court): How do you spell the last name?

A. A-l-p-i; Harry Hayward, Alexander Durba, Tritonberg, Morris Childs, Clarence Hathaway, Anna Damon, myself, Manning [2330] Johnson, Schneidermann——

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you know his first name?

A. No. He was a district organizer from California, that district, at that time. I don't remember his first name. Paul Crouch, Harry Bridges—he was going under the name of Rossi at that time, alias Rossi, Puro—I forget his first name. George Hewitt alias Tim Holmes.

Q. How do you spell his name?

A. Hewitt?

Q. No, the alias.

A. Tim H-o-l-m-e-s. There were a number of others I can't recall. I might recall them later.

Mr. Donohue: May we take a recess at this time?

The Court: Yes, we will take the morning recess, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2331]

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Johnson, what if anything did Harry Bridges have to say, if you can recall it, at this meeting you have just described?

A. At the closed session of the—at the ~~closed~~ meeting of the National Committee he was introduced to the Committee, and he stated his—stated that he enjoyed the proceedings and the way the Party operated. That was all.

Q. Did you attend the 1938 national convention of the Communist Party? A. I did.

Q. Were you a delegate to that convention?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. At that time were you still a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party?

A. I was.

Q. Where and when was the 1938 national convention of the Communist Party held?

A. The national convention of the Communist Party in 1938 was held at the Hotel Center on 43rd Street, New York, of course, we had a number of sessions at different other halls, but the main business was conducted at the Hotel Center.

Q. At the 1938 convention of the Communist Party, national convention, did you at that convention vote to re-elect Harry [2332] Bridges to membership in the National Committee of the Communist Party?

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that as leading and suggestive, if the Court please.

Mr. Donohue: He was a delegate with power to vote.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Will you read that question back to me?

(Question read:)

Mr. Hallinan: Might we have, before that, when this was, if the Court please?

Mr. Donohue: He stated it was—oh, I am sorry.

Q. When in 1938 was this convention?

A. That was in the summer of 1938.

Q. Can you tell us the month?

A. I don't recall the exact month. It was around in the warm months of the summer, about June or July, somewhere along there.

Q. When you cast your vote at the 1938 convention for the election of Harry Bridges to membership on the National Committee of the Communist Party, did you cast your vote for Harry Bridges under the name of Harry Bridges?

A. I don't recall exactly what alias he was using at the '38 convention.

Q. Mr. Johnson, do you see the Harry Bridges who you have stated was in attendance at this meeting of the National [2333] Committee of the Communist Party in 1936 in the courtroom?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Will you indicate where he is in the courtroom.

A. There he sits there, one, two—the third person from my left.

Q. Mr. Johnson, you left the Communist Party, you stated, in 1940?

A. Yes. It was a few months after the Nazi-Soviet pact. I imagine it was around the first part of '40.

Q. Will you tell us your reasons for leaving the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Same objection, if the Court please, calling for an opinion and conclusion and incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I felt the Communist Party because I had come to the conclusion that the Communist Party was an organized conspiracy against our Government; that the whole policy, on the basis of my experience through the years, was——

Mr. Hallinan: Now, just a minute, sir. If the Court please, now he is stating this opinion and conclusion, this expert opinion on the non-expert matter. It is not the best evidence.

The Court: Yes. Mr. Johnson, state the reasons in brief why you left the Communist Party. [2334]

A. I left because of my experience in relation to the leadership and the policy of the Party. The steel core of the leadership of the Communist Party were mostly aliens who worked with might and main for only one thing, and that is support of the policy of the Soviet government as against the government of the United States. I realized that on the basis of this, that I couldn't serve Uncle Sam and at the same time serve Joe Stalin any more than——

Mr. Hallinan: Now, just a minute.

A. (continuing)——he can serve God——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, if you will, sir. This witness has testified in about a hundred of these cases, and he doesn't stop when an interruption takes place. Your Honor, here is a speech. This is just a speech from the dock.

The Court: What was that last?

Mr. Hallinan: I say this witness has testified in numerous of these cases, and he doesn't stop when I try to make an objection. I want to object to a continuation of this. This is a just speech, if the Court please. This isn't any kind of a reason. In the first place, if he left the Communist Party for some reason, if he was discontented with it or didn't like their policy, that is all right. What do we care? Here he is being permitted to make an argument.

The Court: The witness is stating the reason why he left. [2335]

Mr. Hallinan: If it is proper for him to state it at all, he has already stated it. He stated because he was discontented with its leadership or didn't like their policy. Here he is making a speech. These people are Communists, not us. Mr. Donohue produced these Communists. My clients are not Communists. We are not interested in what they wanted or did not want, or whether they upheld the United States or the Soviet Union. To permit a witness on the stand to make a speech lauding themselves—that is all it amounts to. They produce a witness to testify to a situation, first because he was a member of the Party and because he is now turning against the Communist Party, and, second, they want to protect their witnesses in advance from impeachment by showing that they are just ordinary Communists; that they are some kind of Communists who saw the light. As far as we are concerned, they are all in the same boat, and I don't think they ought to be permitted to make these speeches justifying themselves in advance of cross-examination.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, what you have just said seems to supply the underlying reason why counsel for the Government has sought to elicit, (1) why Mr. Johnson joined the Communist Party, and later why he terminated his relationship. I think your very assertion here justifies the query. Now, it may be that the last part of the answer may be a degree argumentative, but I am not going to foreclose the [2336] witness from making a full, fair and complete statement. You may cross-examine him at length on that statement.

You may answer.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, your Honor, I am obliged under the rules of evidence to make these objections.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: I am not going to waive them.

The Court: There is no question about that, Mr. Hallinan, but I merely say to you the very statement that you make is eloquent for allowing the Government to elicit the very answer that you seek to attack.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't know whether they are trying to prove that they are better than the ordinary Communist or worse, but if they will state which they want to show, we will stipulate to it.

The Court: Well, Mr. Hallinan, hereafter we shall have an opportunity to hear argument on both sides. The Government will present argument and you will present argument, and I assume your associate will. I look forward to those arguments with a good deal of expectation. I should rather not have them now.

You may answer.

A. My association with such persons as Durba. Alexander Biddleman, Max Bidot, Moreau, Puro, Abe Benson, Jack Stachel, and Gerhart Eisler and others who constitute the steel core [2337] of the Communist Party convinced me definitely that there is no possibility of serving two masters. I had to serve constantly Joe Stalin as against Uncle Sam. One cannot serve two masters any more than a man can serve God and Beezlebub.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor,——

A. Then I decided that I would leave.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, sir. Just a minute. First, we have this portion of it in which we have a conflict between two persons to whom he apparently claims some allegiance, and then this "Beezlebub," who suddenly came in here. He has not been identified yet as a member of the national convention of which this gentleman was a member or associated with any of them. I think we ought to first identify who "Beezlebub" is before we go any farther.

The Court: I don't know, Mr. Hallinan——

Mr. Hallinan: Here is a brand new name. Is he a prospective Government witness, or is he one of this gentleman's associates in the so-called organization of fifty members of the National Committee? I think before we step any farther that Beezlebub ought to be so identified that we can know who we are talking about.

The Court: Maybe he is an uninvited guest.

Mr. Hallinan: We had two or three mysterious guests who accompanied Mr. Schomaker.

The Court: Maybe Mr. Donohue can identify him. [2338]

Mr. Donohue: I am happy to say that I am sufficiently familiar with the Bible to identity Beelzebub as the Devil.

Mr. Hallinan: Beelzebub. This was "Beezlebub," a different man. Maybe he and Mr. Donohue have different devils.

The Court: Maybe that was the name ~~he~~ used.

Mr. Hallinan: He was elected to the National Committee under the name of "Beezlebub," I understand.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you continue, Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Hallinan: Let us use the same devils that Mr. Donohue uses from here on.

The Witness: Would you read my last statement to me, please.

(Record read.)

A. I decided that the Communist Party was no place for me and that I wanted no part of that alien conspiracy, because there was no more ruthless, cold-blooded group of enemy alien conspirators in our day or any other time in recorded history.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Now, I move that that statement be stricken. Here we have a volunteer statement by the witness, a speech, a declaration that has nothing to do with the case. If these people constitute the conspiracy that he says they do, that seems to me sufficient reason why he got out. That should be good reason why he shouldn't have gotten in, but for him to start off now on a dissertation on these various persons whose names he mentioned, I think [2339] it is highly improper.

The Court: Apparently that is one of the bases upon which he terminated his relationship.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor.

The Court: The motion is denied.

A. At the time of the Nazi-Soviet pact, no one knew what to do, because it caught us unaware; we were all amazed and stunned when we picked up the papers, and we read of the Nazi-Soviet pact. No one in the National Committee at that time knew just what particular position to take on the matter.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, your Honor, we are having a dissertation of what other people knew or did not know.

The Court: The objection is sustained. The motion to strike is granted.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Was your decision to leave the Party in any measure influenced by the Nazi-Soviet pact to which you have made reference?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and as having been asked and answered already. He said it was, that that was one reason.

The Court: He said it was, Mr. Donohue. Mr. Johnson said that was one of his reasons, according to his testimony.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Have you completely stated the reasons which motivated you in leaving the Communist Party, Mr. [2340] Johnson?

A. I think I have.

Mr. Donohue: You may have the witness.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Johnson, let me ask you this at the outset: Did you memorize that little statement that you gave us a moment ago about not being able to serve two masters at once, including carefully Uncle Sam and Joe Stalin, God and, as you put it, "Beezlebub"? Did you memorize that?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. No, I did not. I don't think I have to.

Q. I call this to your attention, then, Mr. Johnson: that you started to give the same answer in the identical words, were interrupted by an objection, by a discussion between the Court and the lawyers, and when the question was put to you again you repeated it in the identical words.

Mr. Donohue: I object to this speech, if your Honor please. It is certainly not a question. If it is a question, it is argumentative.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I did not memorize it. I don't have to memorize it. Those words that I put together express or almost—express all or almost all that I have to say with regard to my reasons for leaving the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You have probably said the same words a great many times in these various hearings in which you [2341] have been produced as a witness by the Government?

A. I have at no other time in any other case used the expressions that I have used at this particular time.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Johnson: You came out here from New York to testify in this case?

A. I was subpoenaed to come out here by the Government.

Q. When and where were you given the subpoena?

A. I was subpoenaed at the union office in New York City, 1440 Broadway.

Q. May I see the subpoena?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. If I have it with me. (Producing paper)

Mr. MacInnis: We ask that this subpoena be marked for identification, your Honor.

The Court: So ordered.

The Clerk: Marked Defendants' X for identification.

(Subpoena of Manning Johnson was marked Defendants' Exhibit X for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You were given this subpoena in New York? A. Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: It is about the first time that we have heard the process of subpoena under your Honor's seal would extend to the City of New York.

Mr. Donohue: Is this evidence, if your Honor please, or is it a question? [2342]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Your expenses, I suppose, were paid?

Mr. Donohue: Just a minute, please. I move the remark of counsel be stricken from the record.

The Court: I will strike it from the record. [2342-A]

Mr. MacInnis: Doesn't Your Honor take judicial notice that this Court does not have the power by subpoena to bring a witness from New York to San Francisco?

The Court: There is nothing before the Court at this juncture.

Mr. MacInnis: The point is obvious that the subpoena had no validity.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: The subpoena is not in evidence, if Your Honor please.

The Court: The remarks are stricken from the record.

Mr. McMillan: I want to make a correction because counsel says it is obvious. Subpoenas in criminal cases run throughout the United States under the statute.

Mr. Paisley: Can he be that ignorant of the practice in these courts?

The Court: I can't hear you, Mr. Paisley.

Mr. Paisley: Or is he just trying to put on a show?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I have never been able to bring a witness from New York to San Francisco by subpoena. Let me continue with Mr. Johnson now.

Q. Your expenses were paid to San Francisco by the Government?

A. Yes, they paid my transportation here.

Q. Are you being paid for your services as a witness as well?

A. I am getting the usual witness fees of about $6.00 or $7.00 a day. [2343]

Q. You mean you do not know what the exact sum is?

A. I do not know what it is. I never asked.

Q. You get paid in all cases in which you testify, do you not?

A. I get the usual witness fees in each and every case I testify in.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. When did you arrive in San Francisco for your testimony in this case?

A. I arrived here, I think, a couple of days before. May I see that subpoena a moment, please?

(Subpoena handed to witness.)

I came here the Sunday before the date of this subpoena. Do you have a calendar there? (A calendar was handed to the witness.) Sunday, November 20th. That was the day before I was slated to appear.

Q. You have been here in San Francisco since Sunday, November 20th? A. That is correct.

Q. And the sole purpose of your coming here has been to testify in this case?

A. That is correct.

Q. Where have you been staying, Mr. Johnson?

A. In San Francisco.

Q. Yes, but where? Where in San Francisco?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases. I know of no reason why the witness should be required to answer a [2344] question as where he is staying, unless Mr. MacInnis would suggest that there is some purpose behind the question.

Mr. MacInnis: We have a right to make that inquiry, Your Honor. The witness hesitates and looks down at the prosecution table waiting for an objection; then, of course, alert counsel rises and says the matter is immaterial. I have never heard that a witness could be protected in telling us where he is staying, a witness brought from a foreign city to testify here, held here since November

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

20th, and we are now, I think, upon the 13th of December.

Mr. Donohue: Of course, his being held here is due to the MacInnis-Hallinan filibuster.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor will appreciate that we did not ask that this case be brought and any delay in this case is no doing of ours.

Mr. Donohue: What?

The Court: You may answer, please.

A. I am staying at the Hotel Sutter.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You have been there continuously since you came here?

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you been regularly in attendance in this building? A. No, I have not.

Q. Were you here yesterday?

A. Yes. [2345]

Q. Were you here the preceding Friday?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you were stationed in some witness room adjacent to this court both upon Friday last continuously and all day yesterday?

A. That is correct.

Q. At the close of yesterday afternoon, at 3:30, Mr. Donohue told the Court that he had a witness here whom he had not talked to. Did he ever talk with you yesterday afternoon at 3:30?

Mr. Donohue: I object to this question, if Your Honor please, in the form in which it appears. I stated to Your Honor yesterday afternoon that I asked Your Honor to adjourn this trial until this morning because the witness I had hoped to call at this time was not here. At that time I said to Your Honor, "I have a witness in the building, but I have not had an opportunity to talk with him. I would appreciate that opportunity before I call him." This witness was not present in the room and obviously could not know what happened between Your Honor and myself.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, did you meet Mr. Donohue for the first time yesterday?

A. I talked with Mr. Donohue yesterday.

Q. Did you meet him for the first time yesterday? A. No, I have met him before. [2346]

Q. When had you met him before?

A. Oh, one day he was coming from the court—I think it was Friday—and he greeted me and that is about all.

Q. He had met you before that, since he was thus enabled to greet you, I suppose?

A. Yes, I met him when I appeared before the grand jury.

Q. So that yesterday was not the first occasion that Mr. Donohue had to talk with you, was it?

A. No. It depends upon what you mean when you say talk.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Johnson: Were you told by anyone not to be specific about the date or even the month in which these supposed National Committee conventions were held because Harry Bridges might be able to prove that he was not in New York in those months if you gave a specific month? Were you told that?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. No, I was not told that. I gave my answers to the best of my recollection.

Q. You can't tell us the month?

A. I can't tell you the exact month. I can only approximate because you are carrying me back over a span of years.

Q. You say that one of the reasons that impelled you to leave the Communist Party was that you were amazed at the Nazi-Soviet attack in 1939, is that correct?

A. That was one of the reasons.

Q. Were you also amazed at the later pact between the Soviet [2347] government and the United States during the war?

A. No, I was not amazed at that.

Q. You were not amazed at that but you were amazed at the other? A. That is correct.

Q. Concerning your occupation, have you told us generally everything you have done over the past years? A. Practically all.

Q. You were an organizer for the Communist Party between the years 1930 and I suppose continuously up to 1940 when you say you left the Communist Party?

A. I was not continuously an organizer for the Communist Party. I was continuously a member of the Communist Party.

Q. You say that you left the Communist Party voluntarily? A. That is correct.

Q. You were not expelled?

A. Not that I know of. If I was expelled, I know nothing of it. I was never given a trial. I was never given a hearing of any kind by the party.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Haven't you testified previously that the Communist Party announced that you were expelled?

A. No, I said in my previous testimony that I was told by someone that the party expelled me, and if my memory serves me correct, you will find that so stated in the record.

Q. What record is that, Mr. Johnson? [2348]

A. In any record of any case where that question was asked and I testified.

Q. What particular case do you recall giving that testimony in?

A. I don't recall which. I testified in a number of them.

Q. What was the reason given you for your expulsion from the Communist Party by this person who informed you?

A. That was only hearsay. I couldn't put any credence in that.

Q. You were not told you were expelled for being a spy, were you?

A. No, I do not recall being told that.

Q. You have no recollection of being told that?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any other occupations between 1930 and 1940, when you left the Communist Party?

A. I was an organiz*ation* for the labor organization after I left the party. In fact, I was still an official of the labor organization when I left the party. I was business agent of Local 302, Cafeteria Employees Union, A. F. of L.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Had you been a cafeteria employee yourself?

A. No, I had not been one, but the Communist Party, through the party fraction, put me in as an organizer. That is how I became an official of that union.

Q. Were you with any union?

A. In the Bartenders Union.

Q. When were you in the bartenders [2349] Union.

A. In 1941, 1942 and 1943.

Q. Did the Communist Party get you that job?

A. No, the Communists tried to get met out of it.

Q. They got you in one job and tried to get you out of another? A. Yes.

Q. And then you tell us in 1944, for reasons which you have ascribed to yourself, you entered the United States Navy? A. That is right.

Q. I see that in this year, 1949, you still wear your discharge button.

A. Yes, I always wear it. I am proud of it.

Q. You always wear it when you testify in these cases?

A. I wear it whether I testify or not because I am proud of what we used to call the ruptured duck.

Q. You entered the Navy in 1944, you say, although you could have obtained a deferment, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Since you speak of your patriotism, I suppose that would have been true of 1943, 1942 and 1941, the years in which you did not enter the Navy?

A. That is true.

Q. So you entered in 1944 and you served with the Navy in the manner that you have described until finally at Alameda, California you were made a chief petty officer, it that right? [2350]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. No, I didn't say I was made a chief petty officer. I said I was made an Aviation Ordnance Man first class or petty officer first class.

Q. Yes, petty officer first class.

A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the rating you enjoyed when you left the Navy? A. That is correct.

Q. You were with the Navy, did you say, until the month of May, 1946? A. That is correct.

Q. What had been your occupation between May, 1946 and the present time?

A. I worked for the United States Navy in a civilian capacity.

Q. For what period of time?

A. From the middle of 1946 until 1947.

Q. And after 1947 what was your occupation?

A. I went to work for the Bloomingdale department store in New York City.

Q. What was your general work at that place?

A. I was a merchandise distributor and handler.

Q. Pardon me?

A. A merchandise distributor and handler.

Q. In what department was that?

A. That was in the receiving——

Q. That is the largest store at Lexington ——[2351]

A. And 59th Street, that is correct.

Q. You were what?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I was a merchandise handler and distributor.

Q. You kept that job how long?

A. Until February of 1949.

Q. You worked continuously from some date in 1947 until February of 1949 at Bloomingdale's department store?

A. No, I said—I didn't say that. I said I worked in Bloomingdale's department store up until February of 1949.

Q. When did you start at Bloomingdale's?

A. Let's see. I think it was in the spring—I think it was either in the spring of—I think it was in the spring of 1948, if I am not mistaken, somewhere in the beginning of 1948.

Q. So that you left that store after being there approximately ten or eleven months?

A. Yes, I might say it was about ten or eleven months.

Q. Under what circumstances did you leave that employ?

A. Because of my opposition to the Communists, who were in control of the union, and they insisted that management fire me because I was anti-Communist.

Q. The Communists got you fired from Bloomingdale's——

A. That is correct, and the employment record at Bloomingdale's will confirm exactly what I have stated.

Q. Bloomingdale's is one of the largest department stores in the world, isn't it? [2352]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. It is one of the largest, yes.

Q. And the Communists got you fired from the store?

A. Yes, the Communists have a union contract in that store. The Communists control the union there.

Q. What was your occupation, Mr. Johnson——

The Court: Pardon me. What is the union in that store?

A. It is Local 3, Independent. They seceded from the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees of the CIO because they refused to sign a non-Communist affidavit.

The Court: Is this an appropriate time to take the recess?

Mr. MacInnis: Whatever Your Honor suggests.

The Court: We will take the noon adjournment and will resume at 2:00 o'clock, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to converse with any person on any subject of the trial. You are not to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you. You may retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.)

Afternoon Session—2:00 p.m.

The Clerk: United States v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The witness on the stand is Manning Rudolph Johnson, heretofore sworn.

MANNING RUDOLPH JOHNSON

resumed.

Cross-Examination

Mr. MacInnis: May we have the last question and answer, please.

The Reporter: I am sorry, but the other reporter was in here at that time, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, you told us, I think, before the noontime adjournment that in the spring of 1948 you went to work for Bloomingdale's department store, is that correct?

A. Yes, I think that is correct.

Q. And you remained there until about January of this year, 1949?

A. No. I worked there until February of 1949.

Q. And now, what had been your occupation after you left the civilian employ of the United States Navy up to the spring of 1948 when you went with Bloomingdale's?

A. Well, I was unemployed for a period of time. I was [2354] unemployed for a period of time between the time I left the employ of the United States Navy and the time I went to work for the Bloomingdale department store.

Q. So you didn't have any occupation during that period? A. No, I did not.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Johnson, in the month of

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

February of 1948 didn't you testify under oath on behalf of the Government in an immigration proceeding entitled In the Matter of Nat Yanish here in San Francisco?

A. I testified in the Nat Yanish hearing held by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Q. Was that approximately the time in which that hearing or trial took place, February of 1948?

A. I don't recall exactly when that hearing was.

Q. In that hearing, more of which we will speak later, you testified, did you not, that your occupation was that of a writer of articles?

A. I testified at the Nat Yanish hearing, when asked where I was employed, I stated that I was not employed but that I was writing on a series of articles that I hoped to have published. I think the record will show exactly that.

Q. And you told the trial examiner and the attorneys in that case that the matter that you were writing, as well as your employer in the matter of the writing, was strictly confidential, did you not? [2355]

A. I stated at that time that the people who were negotiating with me for those articles was a matter of confidence and I didn't want to divulge the names of the persons that I had talked with.

Q. Have you published those articles?

A. No, I have not.

Q. In February of 1948 you told the trial examiner in the Yanish hearing under oath that you were supporting yourself because you had received an advance from those who expected to publish the articles that you were writing, did you not?

A. Yes, I think I did. I am not sure.

Q. Who was it who was paying you to write the articles which have not yet been published?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, it is a matter of his occupation. We have a right to know what it was if there was such an occupation at that time. The matter, as I understand it, took place when he was placed on the witness stand under oath and asked his occupation, and he said, "My occupation is a writer of articles; I have received an advance, but I am not going to tell you who paid me the money because I consider that confidential."

Mr. Donohue: I don't know that that is what he said. That is what Mr. MacInnis says that he said. But in any event, if your Honor please, if this man had a confidential [2356] arrangement with some person by the terms of which he was to write an article or series of articles, certainly the identity of that person would have no bearing in this particular case, obviously not for the purpose of impeachment.

Mr. MacInnis: We have a right to know what he was doing in that particular period of time. We have a right to know if his answer about that occupation was real or spurious.

Mr. Donohue: We might then try the contract, whether it was a valid agreement or whether the consideration——

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard to this extent, your Honor: Is this any different than saying to this man, "Weren't you employed at Bloomingdale's in a particular month?" and if he said, "I refuse to tell; it is confidential," then your Honor would betray some astonishment. The matter is no different where he refuses to disclose a person who pays him his sustenance, I think.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you say that you had appeared as a witness at the instance of the United States Government in a number of cases?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us generally what those cases were by name. A. I——

Mr. Donohue: I think I shall object, if your Honor, please. [2357] This witness has testified that he has appeared in a number of cases. To identify all those cases, I think, has no bearing here. If he wants to know the substance or nature of his testimony there, I have no objection.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, we have a right to know the relationship between this witness and the agency which now produces him as a witness against these defendants.

Mr. Donohue: I don't know what he means by "relationship." He is a witness here under subpoena, and he testified that he has appeared as a witness for the Government in a number of proceedings. If he asks the nature of his testimony, I have no objection.

Mr. MacInnis: We have a right to know those proceedings.

Mr. Donohue: To ask him to state the name of the proceeding or case in which he appeared, I think is not proper, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, one of the fundamental rules of cross-examination, aside from inconsistent facts or matters of straight impeachment, would be the relationship between the witness and the side producing him in a particular case, the interest of the witness.

The Court: The objection is overruled. I assume that this is preliminary.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

(Question read.) [2358]

A. Well, I testified in the Gerhart Eisler case.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Pardon me. Gerhart Eisler? A. Yes.

Q. That was what approximate date?

A. I don't recall the exact date.

Q. Do you recall the year?

A. It was in the——

Q. 1947, wasn't it?

A. I think so. I think it was in the summer.

Q. What city? A. Washington, D. C.

Q. And after you completed your duties as a witness in that case did you receive a check for your expenses and fees?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. Of course he did. The Government of the United States doesn't ask witnesses to testify for nothing.

Mr. MacInnis: That is exactly what we want to bring out.

Mr. Donohue: You don't have to bring it out. The statute provides what a witness shall be paid.

Mr. MacInnis: We don't care to accept the stipulation from Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: It is not a stipulation; I know you don't care to accept the stipulation, but I am referring to the statute which determines what shall be paid to any witness testifying for the United States. [2359]

Mr. MacInnis: Well, the statute isn't of record here. I think we have a right, if this man can tell us, to know what compensation he received. Whether it was done in propriety is a matter to be argued later.

Mr. Donohue: Are we going to try the propriety of his testifying in every case in which he appeared, if your Honor please? That is what it will amount to. I don't know how many cases this witness may have testified in, if any, excepting from what he says.

Mr.. MacInnis: We certainly have a right to probe, since he has testified in so many cases, into the relationship between this man's occupation as a witness and his livelihood, and I think it is highly proper to ask him that question with respect to the Eisler case in which he testified as a Government witness.

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: What logical or legal relevancy would the compensation he may have received in the Eisler case have in the actual case at bar?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, certainly if he received large compensation continuously over a mature period of time as a Government witness of a professional nature, why, that certainly would highlight the testimony that he has given here.

Mr. Paisley suggests into the ear of Mr. Donohue that a witness could be impeached by showing that he—I have sharp [2360] ears; I heard what Mr. Paisley said—by showing that he got the statutory compensation, then no witness would be immune. That may well be. I would like to hear what they have paid this gentleman. It is certainly material to know what fees he got.

Mr. Donohue: I assume that this gentleman doesn't know what he received in the Eisler case. I am familiar with the statute, and I will be glad to show it to him.

Mr. MacInnis: I am familiar with the statute, Mr. Donohue.

Mr. Donohue: You know what he gets.

Mr. MacInnis: I think it is a perfectly proper mode of inquiry, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: If you asked——

The Court: Were you correctly quoted by Mr.

MacInnis, Mr. Paisley? I want you to be perfectly comfortable on the trial.

Mr. Paisley: Not quite correctly.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I can hear him from there as well.

Mr. Paisley: He misquoted me slightly.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: Both my eyes and ears are sharp.

The Court: I would like the record to be correct.

Mr. Paisley: I said no party could safely call any witness [2361] if you could impeach the witness by showing he got the statutory fees for testifying.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

The Witness: Will you read the question to me, please.

(Question read.)

A. Yes, I did.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): The total check?

A. I don't recall the total check. [2361-A]

Q. Do you recall how many days you were in attendance on that trial?

A. No, I do not recall the exact number of days I was there.

Q. In other words, you have in mind that you have been in attendance at this trial theoretically since November 20th, I think you said?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Now, in the Eisler trial, was the situation the same, that you were on the scene in advance?

A. It is customary to come to a trial the day before. I have at all times come in before the beginning of the trial.

Q. Whatever the period of time was, you received a fee for your services? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was the second case in which you testified at the instance of the United States Government?

A. The Santos case in New York City.

Q. Santos, and what case was that?

A. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Q. By the way, each of these cases, if I am informed correctly, were matters in which the Government had sought to prove that the particular man was a member of the Communist Party, is that right?

A. I would say that it was a case—in the Gerhardt Eisler case it was a question of the use of aliases and false passports. In [2362] the Santos case it was a question of deportation of an enemy alien.

Q. You did not testify as to the use of false passports, did you?

A. I testified with regard to the aliases used by Gerhardt Eisler.

Q. The aliases? A. That is right.

Q. Was he charged also with being a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: I object, Your Honor. Are we going to retry the Eisler case?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: I hope not, counsel. I am perfectly content now in trying this case. I hope we will not try the Eisler case.

Mr. MacInnis: I heard Mr. Donohue a moment ago say that if I sought to inquire into the nature of the testimony this man gave in the other cases he would have no objection. I see now he is objecting.

Mr. Donohue: You are asking about the charge. He was neither the prosecutor nor does he represent the United States.

Mr. MacInnis: That is a matter the Court and jury can understand, whether this man is in form a prosecutor. I think that is a matter that may become an issue in the case before too long a time transpires. [2363]

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if the Court please.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): The Santos case took place in what year?

A. I don't recall. There were so many cases before the Immigration and Naturalization Service I do not recall exactly when the Santos case was held, because there were several other cases that came up during that particular period of time, both on the East Coast and the West Coast.

Q. May I ask you this, then: In how many cases in all have you been called as a witness on behalf of the United States Government?

A. In the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Santos case, the Doyle case, the Ferdinand Smith case, the Nat Yanish case, and about ten or twelve more here in California, both in San Francisco and in Los Angeles.

Q. It would be fair to say that you have testified on behalf of the Immigration and Naturalization Service as a witness in about 18 cases?

A. Approximately.

Q. As you said a moment ago, in addition to the Yanish case, which was held in San Francisco, you testified in about 10 or 12 more simliar cases here in California? A. That is correct.

Q. So that although you live in New York you have been brought [2364] out to California on 13 occasions, or at least for 13 different trials since 1947? A. That is not correct.

Q. You mean some of the trials were held continuously?

A. They were held continuously. When I came out on the Nat Yanish case, I was used to testify in the other cases here in California.

Q. Could you tell us what the average number of days might be in which you participated in each of these cases?

A. I don't recall. I never kept track of those things.

Q. Would you be, for example, on an average of ten days to a particular case?

A. No. For example, the ten or twelve enemy aliens that were up for deportation in Los Angeles required only a day, because the attorney, Gallagher, agreed to stipulate to testimony from the Yanish case in the cases involving the twelve, ten or twelve, I am not sure of the exact number.

Q. What I am trying to arrive at, Mr. Johnson, is this: During about how many days over the past two years has your time been taken up with your duties as a witness for the United States Government, particularly on behalf of the Immigration Service?

A. I really couldn't tell you. I know that they have called me in a number of times on cases and I couldn't say offhand. I never kept any record of it. [2365]

Q. Would it be fair to say out of the past two years you have been engaged in about 200 days of work, either as a witness or in preparation for taking the stand as a witness?

A. Heaven knows!

Q. Heaven knows?

A. No, sir, that is not so. Heaven knows that that is not so.

Q. Heaven knows that that is not so?

A. That is correct.

Q. About how many days?

A. I told you before I couldn't say. I kept no record of them.

Q. In addition to cases in which you appeared as a witness for the Immigration and Naturalization Service which you have now mentioned—I think those run to approximately 18—have you been called as a witness for the federal government or by various agencies of the state government in other matters?

A. Will you read that question?

(Question read.)

A. I was called by the federal government in the cases which I have mentioned. In addition to that, I was subpoenaed to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Q. Pardon me——

A. If that is what you mean. Of course, that is not a state. That was the District of Columbia, but that was a committee I was subpoenaed to appear before, and I would assume that that is what you are seeking after. [2366]

Q. Was that the committee headed by Representative Thomas who commenced his term in the penitentiary last week?

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor, that is improper and Mr. MacInnis knows it. That committee was also headed by Mr. Dies at one time and now by a gentleman from the State of Florida—I should say from the State of Georgia. It is a wholly improper question. I move that the last question be stricken, if Your Honor please.

The Court: One moment. Will you read that question, Mr. Reporter? There was so much noise in the courtroom I could not hear it all.

(Question read.)

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, that it wholly improper.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: I think it identifies the particular committee, Your Honor.

The Court: It is wholly improper. I am satisfied you know it is improper, and I say to you now it is somewhat characteristic of the mode of examination you have employed in the past. I have been extremely patient with you and extremely indulgent. I say to you now, and this will be the last time, to refrain and desist from that type of question.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I admonish you to disregard the question presented by Mr. MacInnis and to ignore any and all implications contained in that question. It is wholly improper. [2367]

Mr. MacInnis: I want to say this, Your Honor: I do not ask for any special indulgence.

The Court: No, I say to you in fairness for the record here that particularly yesterday, in connection with questions asked containing the subject matter of asserted foundational matter, that you have a habit—I am not chiding you for it—I am not trying to break you of it, but I say it is improper—of containing in your questions long dissertations of factual matter that would appear in the record. I think we have come to a point where I must, in fairness to this Court and in fairness to the record, ask you to refrain from indulging in that practice in the future.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I have heard of no decision in which the offering of conclusions in a question has been said to be disrespectful of the Court. I think nothing in that question was disrespectful of either you or any ruling that you have made.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I say again, so we understand each other, I ruled on these matters in the past and notwithstanding my ruling, you have assumed to engage in the same type of questioning. To that extent it is an affront to my ruling, and that ruling is made. I abide by it. I am satisfied it is the proper rule, and I ask you respectfully to abide by it.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I certainly have no intention of violating any ruling that you have made. It has not been brought [2368] to my attention that the matter just now mentioned was contained in any ruling that you have made in this case.

The Court: No, this last matter is certainly one that has no place in this record and I am satisfied you know it is.

Mr. MacInnis: If Your Honor feels I have merely departed from our field of inquiry, I will abandon that.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You say that you were called to testify before the Un-American Activities Committee of the Congress of the United States? Is that right?

A. I say I was subpoenaed to appear.

Q. But you were not questioned, is that it?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. Yes, I was questioned.

Q. You were questioned? A. That is right.

Q. And you did give testimony before that committee?

A. I did give testimony before that committee.

Q. What was the date of that testimony?

A. That was last July, I think.

Q. July of 1949?

A. That is correct, last July.

Q. Were you subpoenaed to appear before a similar committee in any state of our United States?

A. Well, I was subpoenaed to appear before the Un-American Activities Committee of the State of Washington. [2369]

Q. That is familiarly known as the Canwell Committee? A. Canwell is correct.

Q. When did you give your testimony before that group?

A. I think that was some time sandwiched between the other times that I was testifying for the Immigration Service.

Q. Did you ever appear before a committee called the Rapp-Coudert Committee?

A. That was a committee investigating Communist infiltration in the school system of New York?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor, I can scarcely hear the witness from the talking of Mr. Paisley. I get so curious when I hear him talking, my ears pickup on one side to hear what he says, and with the other ear I am trying to listen to the witness.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: You have an amazing auditory sense.

Mr. MacInnis: It is not bad, Judge.

Mr. Paisley: I think he is allergic to me or I am allergic to him.

Mr. MacInnis: No, I am wholly indifferent to the man.

Mr. Donohue: I wish we could hear counsel on the other side of this room as well as you can hear counsel on this side of the room.

The Court: Let us proceed.

The Witness: There was a committee set up by the Legislature of the State of New York that was investigating Communist [2370] infiltration into the school system of the City of New York. If I recall correctly, they did subpoena me to appear at their office, but I do not recall the name of that committee, but I think it was the Coudert committee.

Q. Did you ever give a statement to the Immigration Service?

A. A statement to the——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. That is a pretty broad subject. On what subject? When?

Mr. MacInnis: The subject of Communism.

Mr. Donohue: I withdraw the objection.

The Witness: I do not know exactly what you mean about giving a statement to the Immigration and Naturalization Service on the subject of Communism. If you mean in the sense have they ever asked me information on any specific case, and if I gave them that information, I would say yes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In all of these matters, Mr. Johnson, in which you appeared as a witness, whether on behalf of the Immigration and Naturalization Service or before the Congressional Committee or the committee in the State of Washington or the other matters you appeared as a confessed ex-Communist, did you not?

A. I appeared as an ex-Communist and as a witness for the Government.

Q. As a confessed ex-Communist, did you not?

A. What do you mean by confessed? [2371]

Q. In each of those matters, you confessed that you were an ex-Communist?

A. I only associate the word confession with the church. I stated my reasons for leaving the Communist Party. I stated also my experiences and my association and membership in the Communist Party.

Q. By the way, Mr. Johnson, these repeated allusions that you make to the subject of religion is a matter upon which one might ask you some questions.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. That is another improper statement by Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: It is only prefatory to a question I am about to ask.

Mr. Donohue: All wholly improper statements you say are prefatory.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: You speak relative to some question?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Johnson, let me ask you this: I suppose from 1930 to 1940 while you were a member of the Communist Party you did not belong to any religion?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. That is argumentative.

Mr. MacInnis: I will reframe the question if there is any doubt about it.

Q. Were you a member of any religion while you were a member [2372] of the Communist Party from 1930 to 1940?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. We all know that membership in the Communist Party negatives the possibility of a man having any religion.

Mr. MacInnis: If that is true, the witness certainly should tell us.

Mr. McMillan: If Your Honor please, it is Hornbook law that to test the validity of a witness, his bias or interest, you can not question him with reference to race, creed or religion.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not know what Hornbook law is, Your Honor, but this man has three or four times invoked the deity in the course of his testimony, and I propose to show that if he now embraces any religion, it is very recent because he has testified under oath in certain years he did not belong to any religion.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: Perhaps Mr. MacInnis does not remember the parable in the Bible of the man who worked for the last hour and got the same wage as he who had been working all day.

Mr. MacInnis: He is a confessed sinner and he is now forgiven. I suppose that is the answer to it.

Mr. Donohue: No. The answer to it is I object to the question, if Your Honor please, on the grounds stated by myself and on the further grounds stated by Mr. McMillan.

The Court: The objection is sustained. [2373]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, in these matters in which you gave testimony as an ex-Communist—I suppose there are more than 20 in number, adding the other hearings to the Immigration trials—you mentioned your assertion that you had been a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, did you not?

A. I did not make an assertion. I made a statement of fact.

Q. That you were? A. That is correct.

Q. Have you ever before this day or before your appearance in this case made the assertion in any testimony that Harry Bridges was elected to the National Committee of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, unless he can show that the question was asked of the witness.

The Court: The question is broad in its implication. If you are attempting to lay a foundation, state the time, place and persons present and show him the transcript when he made such a statement.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to do that, Your Honor.

Q. Did you in the Gerhardt Eisler case make a statement that you had been a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party? [2374]

Mr. Hallinan: Could I interrupt, your Honor? On that very point we raised yesterday it possibly was not so pertinent. You remember the case I cited in which the questions were whether or not the witness had at the preliminary examination testified——

The Court: That was the Hart case.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: I said yesterday there was no parity of reasoning; I could see no parity of reasoning.

Mr. Hallinan: But now on this point, Judge——

The Court: That was People v. Hart.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: I recall the case.

Mr. Hallinan: Yesterday it was not so apropos.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, do you not agree with me that in the light of the testimony heretofore given by this witness in the Eisler matter, let us say, and other matters to which he has alluded, that the man be confronted by the transcript of his testimony and that the proper foundation be laid?

Mr. Hallinan: I think it is entirely improper to require us to do that on cross-examination, and under the holding of the Supreme Court of the State of California in this Hart case it said this:

> "As to the further argument of the prosecution that the questions were impeaching questions, and that [2375] therefore a transcript of the witness' testimony should first have been shown him"——

The Court: That was a case, Mr. Hallinan, under the State practice when the preliminary hearing was had. There was a holding.

Mr. Hallinan: The practice is identical in the Federal Court.

The Court: I can't agree with you.

Mr. Hallinan: And this is a general rule of law. This is not a question of the Supreme Court——

The Court: The practice in the Federal Court I have already alluded to in several cases, more recently referred to in the transcript——

Mr. Hallinan: For impeachment, there is no question about it. In other words, if it is intended to confront the witness with a transcript. But the witness can be queried as to whether he said such matters to show his willingness to evade, his veracity, or even his memory, or even to get from the witness information as to other places and circumstances under which he has testified so that the examiner can consult them and see what he may have said.

Mr. Paisley: What he is trying to say, your Honor, I think, if I may interpose——

Mr. Hallinan: I wish counsel would not say what I try to say. I have a great deal of difficulty understanding [2376] counsel's neologisms. I can't make out a word he says, or only half of them, at any rate, and I would rather not have him translate what I intend to say. He speaks a different idiom from what we do here in California. I think I can make myself sufficiently understood without any translation of what I am intending to say. I think your Honor understands what I have intended to say.

The Court: Thus far I have had no difficulty.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I hoped.

The Court: I think you have understood me fairly well up to this point.

Mr. Hallinan: Correct.

The Court: I have ruled on this matter, Mr. Hallinan. I thought I did. Mr. McMillan, do you have any thought?

Mr. McMillan: Just this, if it please your Honor: I was very much interested in hearing Mr. Hallinan say that the Federal rule was the same as the California rule. The old cases to which he refers, People v. Jones and People v. Hart—I am quite familiar with those cases—that is not the Federal rule. I have read the rule in the Federal Courts here a few days ago, and when we do not have a Federal decision on it or a Federal statute, we hearken back to the rule under the common law. The common law rule is basically like our State statute, that whenever a question is asked of a witness with reference to a statement or writing, he must first be shown that writing [2377] or statement, and counsel must see it before a question is put to the witness. Otherwise, they have said in those cases that asking questions of that kind to find out from a witness whether he made a statement at this time or that time are aimless, random shots in the dark. Counsel will ask those questions and then perhaps proceed to impeach his credibility without laying a proper foundation.

Mr. Hallinan: It is only when the document is then sought to be introduced in evidence that that foundation need be laid. Questions can be addressed to whether he said different things at different times without any proposal to introduce the document. It is simply a question of searching to find out. That is what the trial of a case is. It is not merely a matter that we have certain things that we want to put in and the other side has certain things they want to put in. We are entitled to find out from the witness things that neither of us may know until that time. The common law is followed in California and the California Supreme Court rule is the same as the common law rule, which is that unless it is then intended to introduce the document in evidence, there is no necessity of submitting it to the witness.

Mr. McMillan: That is not the common law rule.

Mr. Hallinan: Mr. McMillan just gets up and says, without citing cases, "That is not the common law rule."

The Court: I have cited two cases in my remarks some few [2378] days ago, the case of the late Judge Garrecht wherein he refers to another decision, United States v.—I can't recall the name —it is in the record—and the authorities hold with uniformity in this district that the witness is entitled to be confronted with the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Do you have the name of the Judge Garrachet decision?

The Court: It is in the record. I cited it before. And I am content to rest on that rule. It is the rule of our Circuit and I am bound by it. I shall rest upon it.

Mr. MacInnis: May I point this out, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The question now before Your Honor is not quite the question which both sides have been discussing with the Court, because this calls for a negative answer, for this reason: I have asked this gentleman if at a certain trial he made a particular assertion. Now, the mandate that the prosecution would lay down that he be confronted with a transcript is a rather ridiculous one for this reason: It means he must be given that old transcript, no matter how many hundreds of pages it contains, and he should be asked to read it all through and then asked a question. This is a negative question. He can tell us certainly whether he recalls giving any such testimony in cases. It is negative rather than positive. It is not saying, "You said this, didn't you?" [2379]

The Court: The question itself, Mr. MacInnis, is one that may or may not be relevant. The occasion for addressing myself to that subject matter may or may not be present. I do not know what was present in the Eisler trial. [2379-A]

Mr. MacInnis: It may not have been.

The Court: I do not know what was present in the Eisler case, nor do I know what was present in the Yanish case. If you intend to impeach the man, lay the foundation for impeachment, confront him with the record and ask the proper question, I will allow the question.

Mr. MacInnis: I intend to show, your Honor, that in no case before, so far as my inquiries have permitted, has he ever said Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party.

The Court: That is the very matter that I only recently urged in my position to you. There may or may not have been an occasion to address himself to that subject matter. And I do not intend to retry either the Eisler case, the Yanish case, or any other case. We will try this case to the best of our ability. Now, proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, apropos of his Honor's remarks just now, let me ask you this: In any of these other matters in which you have testified have you given a list of those persons who you say were on the National Committee of the Communist Party along with yourself?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, there is nothing before this Court to show that that was an answer made by him or that he was ever asked the question.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, did you tell us this [2380] morning that you joined the Communist Party through motives of idealism? Was that the word you used?

A. That is correct. That is correct.

Q. By "idealism" at that time you said you had in your mind thoughts about segragation, lynching, and matters of that kind?

A. Yes, I had the thought of doing something about those conditions.

Q. Tell us what you meant by that.

A. I meant precisely this: that I had during the—during my years in Washington, D. C., experienced Jim Crow and segregation and that sort of thing.

Q. Pardon me. What do you mean by "Jim Crow," Mr. Johnson?

A. By "Jim Crow" I mean the separation of the Negroes from white people.

Q. You had experienced that in an extreme degree? A. Yes.

Q. To the end that members of your race were discriminated against?

A. That is correct.

Q. Tell us how and in what fashion that took place.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, we have tried a lot of union matters. Now I suppose we are going to try a lot of racial matters.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this gentleman used the [2381] language.

Mr. Donohue: No, that is your language. Why don't you let him state in answer to the question that you asked him as to what he meant, instead of your trying to supply answer in the form of the question? I object to the question, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: To say the least, without being disrespectful, this gentleman is experienced enough so that he does not need the admonishment or assistance of the prosecutor in answering the question.

The Court: All right; proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the last question.

(Question read.)

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, that is far afield and it is a time-consuming inquiry. Everybody knows about Jim Crow and everybody knows with reference to the discrimination of races. Now, we are not trying issues of that kind here.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the record in this case cannot be bound by what one of the prosecutors says everybody knows, so, your Honor, some descriptive words are necessary. This witness was allowed over objection to tell us his reasons for joining the Communist Party.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question for me, [2382] please?

(Question read.)

A. Well, we had separate schools, and many of the restaurants we couldn't go in to get anything to eat. We had to go to the colored community to get something to eat if we wanted to get something to eat at all, except go in the back way and get a sandwich and take it out. In addition to that, there were many reports of lynchings, et cetera, in the South. All of these things combined led me to the conclusion that something ought to be done about it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, were the reports—— A. May I finish?

Q. Yes.

A. When I went to—when I went to Buffalo, New York, I heard Otto Hall speaking on the street corner about lynching and discrimination, and I became interested, and after the meeting was over I walked up to him and I spoke to him and congratulated him on what he was trying to do, and said to him that I had much in common with him insofar as his program and his policy as set forth was concerned, and that I would like to join up. So I joined the organization which he was head of at that time, the American Negro Labor Congress.

Q. Mr. Johnson, did any of the reports that you say you received about segregation and lynching link those activities with any particular group in the United States? [2383]

A. I would say—I would say this: that that condition of things is more or less a hangover from slavery and that, in time, these conditions will be eliminated within the framework of our existing laws.

Q. I dare say that the reasons that you ascribed for joining the Communist Party might well be the reasons advanced by other members of your race in the Communist Party.

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): The reports of lynching that you received, I suppose, were reports emanating from the South?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you this, Mr. Johnson, in respect to these evils,—the segregation of the colored people, lynching and the like, —have you ever been asked by the Government to testify in any case against the Ku Klux Klan?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, in reference to the matters that you offered us this morning as to your reasons for leaving the Communist Party, it is fair to say that you became disillusioned with the hidden or inner purposes of the Communist Party, is that right? [2384]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I became aware of things in the latter years in the Party as a result of being in the hierarchy of the Party that I was not aware of when I first joined the Party. I became aware of the fact that the whole policy of the Communist Party was tied to the policy of the Soviet government and that every action, everything we did, was directed toward the end not only of support of the policy of the Soviet government but also for the overthrow of the Government of the United States.

Q. You say that you learned these things when you became a member of the hierarchy of the Party? A. That is correct.

Q. Those were things that you did not know when you were an ordinary member of the Party?

A. That is not—Yes, we knew that, but not to the extent that—not to the extent that you acquire a knowledge of it after you get into the hierarchy.

Q. Well,——

A. To make that more specific, I mean precisely this: that we knew that the objective of the Communist Party was to overthrow the Government of the United States, but the methods and the techniques, the concentration, the marshaling of the social forces that were necessary for the destruction of the Government and the utilization of the grievances of the people toward that end, one who is new in the Party is not familiar [2385] with; but as you grow and develop and rise in rank in the Party, then you become aware of the fact that it is a gigantic conspiracy that you are engaged into.

Q. Yes. You found that out as you rose in the ranks or hierarchy of the Communist Party, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Well, let me put the matter to you this way, Mr. Johnson: Suppose a person like yourself in 1929 was receptive to some of the notions of the Communist Party, an idealist as you say you were, would that person at the outset while he was entertaining the thought of joining the Communist Party learn about the more sinister things that you now ascribe to it?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. It sounds like a hypothetical question which obviously this witness couldn't answer.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: What was the ruling on that?

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Will you read that question to me, please.

(Question read.)

Mr. Donohue: I object on the further ground, if your Honor please, that the statement made to the witness pre-supposes a knowledge of facts which one acquired in membership in the Party. This question presupposes one who was flirting or skirting around the edges, who might be not a [2386] member and therefore could not be aware of the facts he has testified to.

The Court: Maybe Mr. MacInnis has someone specifically in mind; I don't know.

Mr. MacInnis: That is possible, if your Honor please.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

A. It is possible for a person to come into the Communist Party on the basis of idealism. After coming into the Party on that basis, he eventually becomes rudely awakened by the fact that—by the fact that the movement is not what he thought it was at the beginning; that the people who lead and direct and head this movement are not honest, sincere persons seeking to wipe out the ills that exist in our system of society, but that they are unscrupulous, unprincipled politicians, persons who would make Machiavelli and Florentine look like an amateur.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Yes. Well, you make precisely the distinction that we want to make, too, Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Donohue: Is that a question, if your Honor please?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I think I am trying to ask a question, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: You are engaging in colloquy.

Mr. MacInnis: If I may say so, counsel has the right to object to every question, but not until it is asked.

The Court: All right; proceed. [2387]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, when did you find out that the Communist Party advocated the overthrow of our Government by force?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. In the '30's.

Q. Did you find out before you became a member?

A. No, I did not know until after I had become a member it was advocating the overthrow of the Government.

Q. So that a person who is a so-called Communist fellow-traveler or sympathizer with the Communist Party would not ordinarily know of such things until after he became a member actually?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please, on the ground he is arguing with the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I think not, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I would say this: that I cannot speak for a fellow-traveler. I am not responsible for the mental processes of a fellow-traveler, but I can speak authoritatively with regard to the mind of a Communist.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, concerning yourself you tell us that you did not know until after you were in the Communist Party that it advocated the overthrow of our Government by force?

A. That is correct.

Q. During the period in which you were an idealist, as you [2388] put it, in which you sympathized with what seemed to be the apparent ends of the Communist Party, you didn't know that there was a hidden end of the advocacy of the overthrow of our Government by force?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, on the ground there was a statement by the witness that at no time was he a fellow-traveler or at no time was he an idealist sympathizing with the aims of the Communist Party prior to the time he entered the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I think he said that was what he was: an idealist.

The Court: I said?

Mr. MacInnis: No, the witness.

The Court: Well, the objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, over what period of time did you contemplate joining the Communist Party when you first became interested in it before you actually became enrolled as a Party member?

A. Not very long; maybe a few months at the most.

Q. During that period of time your notions about the Communist Party were idealistic?

A. During that time I was given considerable literature to read by Hall and other members of the Party, and finally they said that "In order to be a good fighter against these conditions you should be a member of the Communist Party," and on [2389] the basis of that I joined.

Q. And at that time, as you said, you did not know that the Communist Party had the hidden end of overthrowing our Government by force?

A. At that time there was only one thing that I knew about the Communist Party, and that was that the Communist Party supported equal rights for Negroes, one, and the right of self-determination for the Negroes in the Black Belt; that was the right for the Negroes in the Black Belt to secede from the United States and establish an independent republic in that particular area, free, separate and apart from the rest of the United States. I did know that much.

Q. Before you joined the Communist Party?

A. That is right. That was a part of the program of the American Negro Labor Congress.

Q. Now, you learned that that was one of the ends of the Communist Party in what year?

A. In 1930.

Q. And at that time you knew that one of the ends of the Communist Party was the establishment of the right of self-determination by the Negroes in the so-called Black Belt of the South?

A. That is right.

Q. Didn't you testify under oath, Mr. Johnson, in the matter of the inquiry into the immigration of Nat Yanish that the [2390] discovery of the ends of the Communist Party concerning the establishment of the Negroes' right of self-determination and the Negro republic in the South was one of the matters that led you to get out of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I think this is the matter that we just discussed a few minutes ago.

Mr. MacInnis: I am going to——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Confront him with the record, counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: Certain I will.

A. I don't recall what I testified to with regard to the Nat Yanish case, but I know this: that the program of the American Negro Labor Congress was identical to that of the Communist Party program on that question.

The Court: Would you like to take a recess?

Mr. MacInnis: No, I have the place, your Honor. I can proceed to it now.

Q. Just as a matter of foundation, you told us a moment ago that there were made known to you these aims of the Communist Party for the establishment of the Negro republic in the South in 1930 before you joined the Party?

A. The program of the American Negro Labor Congress, I said, had that in its program and its policy. The American Negro Labor Congress was in existence in 1930. That was always a policy and program of the Communist Party, but prior to that time I was not familiar with the Communist Party program on [2391] that subject or any other subject.

Mr. MacInnis: Now I will ask the witness to take in his hand a transcript from the Nat Yanish deportation case, a hearing held here in San Francisco in February, 1948, and I will ask him, beginning with page 147, if you will make a mental note of that, at line 10, read all the way to page 149 at line 8. Then after you read that I will ask you some further questions.

Mr. Donohue: May I ask that it be marked and that I be permitted to see it?

Mr. MacInnis: The other counsel may see it, of course.

Mr. Donohue: Would you have it marked?

The Court: Shall we take the recess now?

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think, your Honor, I am required to abandon this transcript at this point to the hands of the prosecutor. Matters presented to a witness in this form do not become a part of the record in the case except in the reporter's transcript.

The Court: Have you any objection to counsel looking at what he is to read?

Mr. MacInnis: I have offered that, but he has asked to have it marked and to read it.

Mr. Donohue: I think it ought to be identified so we will know what it is he is talking to the witness about.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis referred to the Nat Yanish [2392] record in February, 1948, wherein, as I assume, deportation proceedings were taken against Nat Yanish and five or six others, as I recall.

Mr. MacInnis: I think your Honor's memory is excellent.

Mr. Donohue: Will your Honor take the recess so that we can look at it?

Mr. MacInnis: You will have to take many recesses if you are going to have that suggestion followed, because I have several matters in this transcript that I would like to refer to.

Mr. Donohue: Will your Honor indulge us that way?

The Court: The jurors have something to say about it.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. I didn't mean to intrude on the ordinary adjournment of the Court.

The Court: They have a very vital interest in the recess at three o'clock.

Ladies and gentlemen, we will take a recess. Again I admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions nor form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2393]

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, I have read the papers to which counsel said he would invite the attention of the witness, and I would like to state to Your Honor that there was nothing that I could determine from a reading of those three pages which would indicate that this was a certified or a true copy of the official transcript of the case to which ~~it refers~~. I am further advised by the Immigration Service that in these immigration matters the only true copy of the record which is made available is made available by the Immigration Service to counsel for the respondent, with the express understanding that it be returned at the completion of the case. For that reason, that we may have an opportunity to compare these pages with the official transcript, I again renew my request that these be taken out of this volume, or whatever it may be and marked for identification.

Mr. MacInnis: I am rather amazed by that statement, Your Honor. I have never heard such a suggestion made in the course of a trial. If there is any doubt as to the authenticity of these matters—I plan to read the identical language into the record after I show the matter to the witness, and if there is any doubt, this gentleman will very quickly point it out to Your Honor. If they can obtain whatever they say is the official transcript—I am informed that this is an official copy of the proceedings had. It is a copy made by the official reporters in this Court. [2394]

Mr. Donohue: I did not see any such certification, if Your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I did not show him that. I showed him the three pages I asked this witness to look at.

The Court: Let us proceed on this basis, then, if agreeable, so that we may have no delay: That Mr. MacInnis proceed in his query to this witness, question him along the lines of whatever relevant testimony he may perceive, and that over the recess, tonight until tomorrow morning, that counsel may have an opportunity to compare the subject matter with the official transcript.

Mr. Donohue: We could only compare it if he has it marked for identification.

Mr. MacInnis: It will be read into the record. He can compare it from that. I do not think I should be compelled to give up this material, tear out this transcript, and ask this gentleman to make the comparison. I never heard of such a thing.

Mr. Donohue: That does not look like an official transcript.

Mr. MacInnis: What do you think an official transcript should look like?

Mr. Donohue: It should look like an official transcript of a hearing.

Mr. MacInnis: Will you describe how it should look?

Mr. Donohue: I have made my objection. [2395]

Mr. MacInnis: I have the official title inside: "Reported by C. W. Johnson, the official reporter for the United States Department of Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service, taken at Room 1018, Appraisers Building, 630 Sansome Street, San Francisco." It is obviously a copy of the official record of the proceeding.

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, I had asked you before the prosecutor asked to look at the same material to read for yourself what appears on page 147 of the transcript, and I have marked the place with a red line where you can begin reading up to page 149, and I have marked the end with a red line (handing document to the witness).

(The witness appeared to read what was handed to him.)

Mr. MacInnis: He is now reading on page 149, is that true?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Witness: I am through.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson, I will ask you if in the proceedings had in the matter of Nat Yanish before the Department of Justice, Immigration Service here in San Francisco in February of 1948, the following questions were put to you and the following answers given by you under oath:

> "Did this decision to leave the Communist Party come on you suddenly or did it take time to develop?"
> Your answer: "It took quite a bit of time. It was an accumulation of incidents over the period of years that led [2396] me to the conclusion that the Communist Party was an unfit organization for me to be in.
> "Question: When did you begin entertaining that idea?"
> Your answer: "It began when they advocated the establishment of a negro republic in the black belt of the South."

Did you give those answers to those questions under oath? I think your Honor may advise the witness that he can answer yes or no and then explain if he wishes.

A. Yes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You say you gave such an answer, is that correct? Do you recall that?

A. Yes, I did so testify in the Yanish case.

Q. And to read further as to the time to which these questions refer, the question was put to you,

> "Date that."

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Your answer: "It started when the Communists began advocating the formation of a negro government in the black belt of the South."

Question: "I said date that."

Your answer: "Date it?"

"Question: Yes. I didn't ask you to repeat yourself. I said date it. Give me the date approximately when that occurred."

The Court: Who conducted that examination?

Mr. MacInnis: This is cross-examination by the attorney for [2397] the alien, Mr. Gladstein.

The Court: Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. MacInnis (reading): "Give me the date approximately when that occurred."

Your answer: "They were very vociferous in advocating that."

"Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken. I have asked him for a date."

"The Presiding Inspector: Give counsel approximately a date on that."

And your answer: "I am trying to recall when they really started to advocate it. It was back in 1933, if I am not mistaken, that they started. It was a little after Harry Hayward, Betty Amos and James W. Ford had completed a series of documents on the negro question in America."

And then the question:

"In 1933, is that correct?"

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Your answer: "I think it was in 1933. It might have been sooner. That is as near as I can recall.

"Q. Do I understand that you disagreed with the position of the Communist Party about the establishment of the black belt in 1933?"

Your answer: "Yes. There were a number of negroes in the party who had disagreements on it, but we were given more literature to read and there was considerable discussion. [2398]

"Question: Did you express your disagreement?

"Answer: We did.

"Question: I am talking about you.

"Answer: Yes, I expressed my disagreement.

"Question: Did you vigorously oppose it?

"Answer: I stated it at a meeting of the National Committee and I was severely criticized by James W. Ford and some of the other leading persons.".

Was that the testimony that you gave under oath?

A. Yes, that was the testimony which I gave under oath, but there is no contradiction. I have stated here under oath that the old program, the program of the American Negro Labor Congress was for the establishment of a negro republic in the black belt. The American Negro Labor Congress was a front organization of the Communist Party. It was not the Communist Party. It was not until after much discussion in the party that the real nature and the facts about this republic were brought out. And that time I was new in the movement. I did not understand like many other negro Communists the implication involved in this slogan of the right to self-determination. When we discovered later on, when the Communist Party was vociferously advocating it, that the right of self-determination meant, in our opinion, the establishment of a Jim Crow government in the South, I like many of the others, along about 1933 raised a rumpus about it in the party, and there is no contradiction there. [2399]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, I hate to suggest that you misunderstood me. Did I hear you say in the last session before three o'clock that one of the reasons that impelled you to join the Communist Party was the advocacy by this Communist front group of the right of self-determination for the Negroes in the South and the setting up of a Negro republic in the South?

A. That was the policy of the American Negro Labor Congress. I think the record will show that I stated that that was the policy of the American Negro Labor Congress, along with the question of equal rights for Negroes.

Q. You stated that that was the case in 1929 and 1930?

A. No, I said 1930, if you please.

Q. Before you joined the Party?

A. That is correct.

Q. Today you tell us that under oath you gave the following answers to the following questions in February of 1948:

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

> "Q. Did this decision to leave the Communist Party come on you suddenly, or did it take time to develop?
> "A. It took quite a bit of time."

Mr. Donohue: Just a second. Are you reading from another section, or are you reading what the witness has just read?

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, I might proceed without the necessity of explaining every move to the prosecutor. [2400] If your Honor thinks I was doing something improper——

The Court: I assume this is the same text?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. I am pointing out something to this man.

Mr. Donohue: If that is understood, he has already read this question, and the witness has said he made those answers.

The Court: He may have some other purpose, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You said in answer to when the decision to leave the Communist Party came:

> "A. It took quite a bit of time. It was an accumulation of incidents over the period of years that led me to the conclusion that the Communist Party was an unfit organization for me to be in.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

"Q. When did you start entertaining that idea?

"A. It began when they advocated the establishment of a Negro republic in the Black Belt of the South."

You still affirm that you gave those answers?

A. I state that as far as that particular testimony is concerned, in relation to what was asked me as to the reason why—one of the reasons why I left the Communist Party, and I pointed out in that testimony that back in 1933 I began to have differences with the Communist Party on the question of the right of self-determination in the Black Belt. I still say again under oath that in 1933 we had heated battles in the Communist Party around that issue where there was revolt among the Negro Communists around that question. It had been before [2401] discussed, but it hadn't reached that point until after some of the persons came back from the Lenin school, the school of the Communist Party, training school in Moscow, that there were a number of discussions revolving around this issue, and we began to seek clarification and further understanding on it. To me all of that talk about self-determination is strange; it is new. I had no such experience before that time with regard to that sort of movement. It is strictly a foreign movement. This question of self-determination, it may not have been new to those who have lived through it in the European countries. I had not lived through it. It was new to me. I had discussed generally what that slogan meant, but when the truth and meaning and the implications of that slogan became known to me, then I took a position on it. In 1933 I took a position on it and I stated my position to the National Committee at that time.

Q. Did you leave the Communist Party because you wanted to be the president of this Negro republic?

A. Oh, don't be ridiculous! I had no such dreams or no such ambitions.

Q. You did not. Let me ask you this now: When you were in training for this organization whose hidden purposes you discovered after you ascended to the hierarchy, as you put it, in the Party, did you receive any training in the use of weapons? [2402]

A. No.

Q. You never did?

A. Only the weapons of propaganda and agitation.

Q. You weren't taught to use small arms, dynamite, or anything like that, were you?

A. No, but there were others who were taught to use small arms when they were sending persons over to Spain to participate in the Spanish civil war; they were trained up in the Bronx there.

Q. Was anybody taught to use arms in the United States against the established order?

A. Were they—You mean with actual firearms?

Q. Yes. A. Not that I know of.

Q. No. Now, to return to this discussion of what a person in your situation would have known about the Communist Party before ascending into its ranks, what could one determine by reading, as you did, certain pieces of literature before joining the Communist Party?

A. I don't understand that. Will you——

Q. Now, for example, suppose one read the Communist Manifesto by Karl Marx, would he find in that document any invitation to violence against the existing government?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Do you object, Mr. Donohue? [2403]

Mr. Donohue: Yes, if your Honor please. I didn't know we were going to try the principles of the Communist Party.

Mr. MacInnis: May I state the purpose, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: This witness has testified, at the instance of the prosecutor, as to the reasons which impelled him to leave the Communist Party. Among those reasons he cites the fact that he found out latterly that the Communist Party was controlled by the Soviet government. He cites that he found out latterly again that the Communist Party advocated the use of force and violence against our Government. Now he also says that he was given certain pieces of literature to read before he entered the Party. Now, I would like to find out where the ordinary person, a sympathizer or an idealist, as this man says he was, could find out these hidden or sinister purposes that he now ascribes to the Communist Party by general reference.

The Court: The objection is overruled upon that basis, for that limited purpose.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question to me again, please?

(Question read.)

A. In the Communist Manifesto is a declaration of policy as far as the world Communist movement is concerned. That [2404] document itself actually calls for the destruction of capitalism.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): By force and violence?

A. It fairly reeks with the use of expressions that are in toto revolutionary.

Q. Now, what is meant by the term "revolution"?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please——

Mr. MacInnis: The same purpose, your Honor.

The Court: Well, for the same purpose.

Mr. Donohue: He might ask the witness what he means by the term "revolution," but his definition might differ from yours or mine.

The Court: The witness said he had certain reasons which motivated him in departing from the Communist Party.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor.

The Court: I think counsel is entitled to interrogate him.

A. We were taught and made to understand that the word "revolution" in the Communist sense means the overthrow of the Government of the United States through force and violence and the establishment of a dictatorship of the proletariat, a similar type of government to the one that exists in Russia at the present time.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Didn't you tell us before that you didn't know those things until after you joined the Communist [2405] Party? You told us before the three o'clock adjournment——

A. I thought you asked my definition of the word "revolution." That is what I understood you to say.

Q. Yes. We are speaking——

A. I answered that question. I gave you a definition as I understood it during the time I was referring to. Now you are asking me another question.

Q. No. As I told his Honor, the purpose of these questions is to probe into what you say your motives were in joining the Communist Party as well as later in departing from it. Referring to joining the Communist Party, you say you didn't know until after you were a member of the Party what you now say, that is, that the Party advocated the overthrow of the Government by force and violence.

A. I stated before in my testimony that I learned about that phase of the Communist Party after I joined.

Q. Yes.

A. I couldn't know before I joined because I had no such experiences and I had no such literature to read or to study. Therefore I couldn't know.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Let me ask you this: If one again in your situation, being sympathetic to the apparent aims of the Communist Party, were to read a publication such as the Daily Worker, which we are told is the official publication of the Communist Party, would he find in those pages an invitation to use [2406] force and violence?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In the Communist Manifesto to which you have made reference, did Marx advocate that the social revolution in the United States and in England would be accomplished by peaceful steps?

A. I haven't read the Communist Manifesto in years, and I can't say without seeing it what it really does contain. I would have to see a copy of it.

Q. Wasn't it stated that the social evolution as opposed to revolution would be accomplished peacefully both in America and in England?

A. I don't recall what the Communist Manifesto said on that subject.

Q. Well, now, in any of the things that you have studied in reference to this word "revolution," was any day set for the revolution?

A. There was no specific date set for the revolution. Lenin repudiated that. He stated that the determination of the time of the revolutionary situation in any country depends upon the relationship of forces, the strength of the Communist Party with the general staff of the working class and its ability to marshal the workers and the peasants and large sections of the middle class into a struggle against the [2407] bourgeoisie or the capitalist class in a life-and-death struggle to destroy them and to liquidate the remnants of them to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Q. By that last statement, Mr. Johnson, do you mean that it was the theory of the Communist Party that the majority of the people would have to be in favor of the so-called revolution before it would take place?

A. It doesn't necessarily say that a majority of the people have to be in favor of it. It speaks specifically of a powerful, well organized Communist Party. You must not forget that in the Russian revolution the Bolshevik Party was an infinitesimal minority of the population of Russia, yet they were able to engineer the successful revolution there; and you take in your Balkan countries today where a successful revolution has been carried through, it was done through a minority.

Q. You spoke a moment ago of the dictatorship of the proletariat. Let me ask you this: What did the Communist Party promise would take place along with the so-called dictatorship of the proletariat?

Mr. Donohue: May I object, if your Honor please? I don't know that this is testing his reasons for joining or leaving the Communist Party or for what purpose it is proper cross-examination.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: I have very little more on this subject, [2408] your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the objection, if your Honor please.

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question to me?

(Question read.)

A. The Communist Party policy is the complete destruction of the Government from top to bottom, the abolition of the—the destruction of the armed forces of the United States as they presently are constituted, and the reorganization of them; confiscation of the banks; the confiscation of the basic and mass production industries; the confiscation of industry generally; the liquidation of the owners of the big farms and ranches and plantations of the country, and the collectivization of the farms; the placing of the—the liquidation of all capitalists, that is, the complete destruction of them. Those in the intellectuals and middle class elements who do not conform with the new order are to be placed in concentration camps until they are indoctrinated and are ready to take their place under the Communist Party. This in essence is the rule of the Communist Party through the dictatorship of the majority of the people, a rule that is based upon force, a rule that is based upon violence, a rule that will continue to exist until all of the remnants of the old order are completely liquidated and the people hew to the line as laid down by the Communist Party. [2409]

Mr. MacInnis: In reference to that last answer to the last question, I am going to ask you to look at your testimony under oath in the matter of Nat Yanish in February of 1948, beginning with line 9, page 171, where I have marked with red pencil again, up to line 4 of page 172; just about one page in all.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to that question, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you show this matter to the witness, please.

Q. I will ask that you read that to yourself as you did the previous portion.

Mr. Johnson, in reference to the questions and answers put to you to read, I will ask you if at the hearing involving the matter of Nat Yanish in February of 1948 here in San Francisco, the following questions were put to you and the following answers given by you under oath:

> "Q. What did the Communist Party sincerely think, if you know, what did it sincerely think would be the condition of the American worker if the American form of government was supplanted by another form which you called the dictatorship of the proletariat?"

Your answer:

> "They taught us this way: that the overthrow of the Government of the United States, > and the establishment [2410] of the dictatorship of the proletariat would result in immeasurably lifting the living standards and improving the conditions of the American workers and farmers. They considered the industrial potential of America, through the nationalization of industry and the seizure of the land from the rich farmers, and dividing it up among the poor farmers and agricultural workers, and the control of all the agencies for disseminating information, such as the newspapers, radio, et cetera, et cetera, that there would set in an era of unprecedented happiness and prosperity for the American workers."

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Did you give that answer under oath?

A. Yes. May I explain that?

Q. Yes.

A. There is no contradiction between what you asked me before and what is stated there in the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. I think, your Honor, that the matter of whether or not there is a contradiction is for the Court and jury to determine, and just as it would be improper for me to pass a comment on that at this time, so the witness may not make such a volunteer remark. I move that it be stricken.

The Court: I assume that was a preface to what you might say.

The Witness: That is correct. What I am trying to say is [2411] precisely this: that there is a vast difference between what they promise the people that would result as a result of the dictatorship of the proletariat and the methods and the forms and the techniques that were to be used to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't doubt that at all, your Honor. We are asking, your Honor, only what a person would encounter who was sympathetic toward the ideals of what the Communist Party apparently represented, not what this man says he found out later. I am not quarreling with him on that at all, because I don't know what they held or what they should be criticized for. The point that we are making is that a person who is an idealist, as this man says he was, would see only the benign ends of the Communist Party before he joined, and that in his period of sympathy before joining he would not encounter any of the sinister things that this man says he found out latterly.

Mr. Donohue: I think the witness ought to be permitted to explain his answer without interruption, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the question went only to the motives of the man before he joined the Communist Party. Now he is giving his reasons for leaving, that we do not quarrel with at all, that those things that they promised may have been the hidden ends or may have had anything to do with the strategy that he found out about later; but we are asking him [2412] what would be the situation of a person who sympathized with what are the apparent ends of this Communist Party, who does not join, a person who is on the threshold, who attends a Communist meeting, who may have sympathy with things there said but who is not taken to the inner scenes. That is the purport of the question. Now, he answers it by telling us what he found out later. That is no part of the particular question or answer. [2413]

The Court: I think he answered the specific question some time ago.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: There is no controversy about the rule, if Your Honor please, that when a witness has been asked a question for the purpose of impeachment, that he may answer yes or no, and then he is entitled, even under the statutes of this state, to make a complete explanation of his answer. I think he should be permitted to make it.

Mr. MacInnis: Of course, Your Honor, but not an explanation on some other subject. We do not dispute with this man at all what he may say were his reasons for leaving the Communist Party. We do not make any claim to know whether he is right or wrong on that.

The Court: Do you understand Mr. MacInnis on this subject?

The Witness: I do, if he will put the question to me specifically. It is so long and so involved that before you get to the point it becomes a compound and complex question.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Would you mind rephrasing the question?

Mr. MacInnis: I see that the witness has gained from his experience in these matters by picking up the argot of us lawyers, Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I might add, if Your Honor please, it is only noting what is perfectly apparent in that type of question.

Mr. MacInnis: Compound and complex fits the last question. [2414]

The Court: If he did not gain it heretofore, he may well gain it in this proceeding.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, this should be a varied experience for him. It is for me.

The Court: All right; you might reframe the question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask if at the same time under oath there ensued the following questions and answers, continuing:

> "Question: Do you think the Communist Party was sincere in that belief?"
> Your answer: "Were they sincere in it?"
> "Question: Yes.
> "Answer: The Communist is sincere in his revolutionary objectives."

That was the answer you gave under oath, is that correct?

A. It is true that a Communist is sincere in his objectives.

Q. Now, to proceed to the matter that you talked about a moment ago, the things that you found out latterly after you had ascended into the inner circles of this conspiratorial party, you yourself began to believe personally in the destruction of our government and its overthrow by force and violence, isn't that right?

A. Yes, every Communist believes that.

Q. I am speaking of you personally.

A. Yes, we were taught to believe that in school and in all of [2415] the documents of the party.

Q. And you believed it?

A. Yes, sir. Every Communist believes it.

Q. And as a matter of fact, you personally went around to various cities and made speeches calling upon the workers to arise and use force and violence against our government, did you not?

A. Call of the Communists, were sowing the seeds of revolt throughout the nation.

Q. Pardon me. Will you answer the question?

A. I was one of them; I taught the same.

Q. You have made speeches?

A. That is right.

Q. You made such speeches in the City of Washington, did you not, your birthplace?

A. I don't recall.

Q. You made a similar speech in the City of Cleveland? A. Yes.

Q. And in New York? A. Yes.

Q. And in Chicago? A. Yes.

Q. And in Philadelphia? A. Yes.

Q. Those were speeches in which you personally, forgetting [2416] about what you say all Communists believed in, but in which you personally called upon the workers to use force and violence?

A. No, I did not call—I did not do anything personally. In the Communist Party you do not do anything personally. You only do what the Communist Party tells you. You have to hew to the line in policy of the Communist Party. When you cease to hew to that line, when you refuse to carry it out, and if in your speeches and in your talks with people you do not advocate the line of the party, brother, you are called up before the party and reprimanded, you are warned, and then if you do not adhere to the line, then you are expelled from the party.

Q. Well, who made these speeches that came out of your lips if you did not make them personally?

A. Made what speeches?

Q. The speeches that you say you made in Washington, New York, Baltimore, Cleveland, Chicago and Philadelphia.

A. Specifically, what speeches did I make in those cities?

Q. In that respect I will again refer to your testimony under oath. I will ask you if you will, for the record, to consult page 115.

The Court: Is this the Yanish transcript?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, Your Honor, of the same transcript, the Yanish transcript.

I may correct myself, Your Honor. The page is 161.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. I will ask you, beginning at the top of page 161, where I [2417] will draw a line in ink, to read from the top of the page to line 18. (Handing transcript to witness.)

Mr. MacInnis: It would appear to me, Your Honor, that the counsel who a moment ago asked that my copy of the transcript be left here for his comparison with another, seems to have that other copy before him.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, I just got it, Mr. MacInnis. I am making the comparison right now.

Mr. MacInnis: Do you find everything in good order, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: This time I do.

Mr. MacInnis: How about before?

Mr. Donohue: No.

Mr. MacInnis: What was the error?

Mr. Donohue: I am not talking about today.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, let me ask you this now: Do you find any error in this transcript as shown you on the three occasions today?

Mr. Donohue: I have found no error, if Your Honor please, today in the transcript. [2418]

The Court: You are very circumspect in that statement, aren't you?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Does Your Honor state, or does counsel state that the Yanish transcript has been produced on any other day?

The Court: Apparently he finds the Yanish transcript in order.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: As to the portions I have compared, if Your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: This unreserved praise almost baffles me, Your Honor.

Will you hand that to him, please?

No, it isn't a filibuster, Mr. Paisley. I can hear you.

The Court: Mr. Paisley, are you whispering again so that Mr. MacInnis can hear you?

Mr. Donohue: He is talking to me again.

Mr. Paisley: On Tweedledum he can hear me very well, but Tweedledee he can't hear.

Mr. Hallinan: A filibuster is a Dixiecrat maneuver, anyhow, Your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, Your Honor, this way: If he is trying to have me hear him, he should speak louder; if he is merely making a comment to Mr. Donohue, he should speak lower.

The Court: That is right. [2419]

Mr. MacInnis: That is better.

Q. Now, so that your memory may be refreshed upon the last matter, I will ask you if what I now read does not represent your answers under oath in the Nat Yanish hearing in February, 1948, here in San Francisco to questions put to you in that hearing:

> "Answer: I said that the Communist Party advocated the overthrow of the government by force and violence and I subscribed to it. I also, in speeches, have called upon the workers to overthrow the government.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

"Question: Well, where have you made a speech in which you called on the workers to overthrow the government?

"Answer: I made numerous such speeches.

"Question: Tell us where and when.

"Answer: I made speeches in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Ohio, Washington, D. C., Philadelphia.

"Question: You say that in those speeches you, as a member of the Communist Party, called on workers——"

And your answer interrupting:

"Not only myself, but others.

"Question: Just a minute, please. We are not talking about others. You say you made speeches calling upon people who were listening to you to overthrow the government.

"Answer: I had to because I was told to do so by the [2420] Communist Party and I did it."

A. That is correct. I do not deny that, and I might say further that that is a correct statement.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, may I suggest it is now 4:15?

Mr. MacInnis: Whatever Your Honor wishes.

The Court: Unless you have another question that might be immediate——

Mr. MacInnis: I can just as easily do it in the morning.

The Court: All right, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will now adjourn court until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to converse with any person on any subject of the trial, and not to form or express an opinion upon the matter until it is finally submitted to you.

You may now retire.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Wednesday, December 14, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [2421]

Wednesday, December 14, 1949—10:00 A. M.

The Clerk: The case of the United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. The witness on the stand is Manning Rudolph Johnson, heretofore sworn.

MANNING RUDOLPH JOHNSON resumed.

Cross-Examination

Mr. MacInnis: I had in mind a suggestion that might meet with your favor. The suggestion of adjourning last Friday at 12 was a very popular one with everyone. I was going to suggest that on this Friday, so that we could have that benefit and also progress in the case, we might work from ten in the morning until one and then adjourn; and if that would meet with your Honor's favor we might do the same the day on which your Honor has said we will adjourn for the Christmas holiday, which I think is next Wednesday.

The Court: I have no objection to that plan if agreeable to the counsel for the Government.

Mr. Donohue: We concur wholly, if your Honor please.

The Court: I think it is a very good suggestion.

Mr. MacInnis: You might ask the members of the jury if the one o'clock adjournment is agreeable.

The Court: I am quite satisfied it will be agreeable to [2422] the jurors. I hear no dissent.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson, over night have you checked with the representatives of the Immigration Department on the matter of the sums of money that you received for those twenty-odd cases in which you testified?

A. I haven't talked with the immigration officials concerning anything in relation to this case over the night.

Q. You haven't ascertained those amounts?

A. I said I haven't discussed anything pertaining to this case with the immigration officials over the night.

Q. There was one other matter that may have slipped my mind yesterday. You testified that you came here for your participation in this trial on November 30 of this year. Do you remember that? November 20, rather.

A. The record will speak for itself.

Q. Pardon me. That was your testimony, wasn't it, that you came here on November 20?

A. Why don't we quote from the testimony in the record? You have the subpoena.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Let me ask you now, what day did you come here?

A. The day before I was scheduled to appear here under subpoena. I think you have the date in the record.

Q. You gave a date yesterday, Mr. Johnson.

A. I didn't give you anything. I checked according to the subpoena and which you had placed in the record. [2423]

Q. Didn't you testify under oath that you came here on November 20?

A. That is the day before the time I was scheduled to appear according to the subpoena.

Q. Then we are not in any difficulty over that matter. You did come here on November 20?

A. That is the day before I was slated to be here according to the order of the Court.

Q. Yes. And do you remember that Mr. Donohue then rose to his feet and said that the delay over that period of time had been due to Messrs. Hallinan and MacInnis? Do you remember he said that?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I did make that statement, but that isn't a proper question to ask this witness.

Mr. MacInnis: I want to point this out—

Mr. Donohue: I didn't say "delay"; I said "filibuster."

Mr. MacInnis: I want to point this out, your Honor; that the first witness called by the Government in this case was still on the stand under direct examination by Mr. Donohue, not cross-examination at all by the defense, on November 30, so that Mr. Donohue is a little bit in error in attributing that passage of time to the defense.

Mr. Donohue: On what theory, if your Honor please, can this witness be questioned about the derelictions of counsel? [2424]

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I have made the inquiry. You will agree that your first witness was still on the stand being examined by you on November 30, will you not?

Mr. Donohue: I think that is the same witness you cross-examined after for four days.

Mr. MacInnis: After November 30.

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, you had told us at the close of yesterday's session that you did personally make speeches in the Eastern cities which I enumerated to you; is that right?

A. No. I stated that I concur wholeheartedly with the testimony that I gave in the Yanish case. I say it is a true copy of exactly what I stated at that particular time under cross-examination.

Q. And you did state——

A. And I do not now here at this time change that testimony.

Q. In other words, you did make those speeches?

A. I said that whatever is contained in the record I stand upon.

Q. So that there will be no doubt as to what was in that record, since you now will not repeat the answer, I will ask you if this was your testimony about which you now make reply this morning that you say you stick to.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if the Court please. Counsel yesterday by question and answer asked this witness if he was asked these questions to which he made these replies. He [2425] said yesterday that he did so testify. He says this morning he did so testify.

Mr. MacInnis: This is prefatory to another question, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): So that we will understand you, Mr. Johnson, this is what you said under oath in the Yanish case:

> "I said that the Communist Party advocated the overthrow of the Government by force and violence and I subscribed to it. I also, in speeches, have called upon the workers to overthrow the Government.
> "Q. Well, where have you made a speech in which you called on the workers to overthrow the Government?
> "A. I made numerous such speeches.
> "Q. Tell us where and when.
> "A. I made speeches in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Ohio, Washington, D. C., Philadelphia.
> "Q. You say that in those speeches you as a member of the Communist Party called on workers"——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Your answer, interrupting:

> "Not only myself, but others.
> "Q. Just a minute, please. We are not talking about others. You say you made speeches calling upon people who were listening to you to overthrow the Government?
> "A. I had to because I was told to do so by the Communist [2426] Party, and I did it."

Were those statements that you made true?

A. I reaffirm the testimony which I gave yesterday in connection with what you read from the record. I cannot add to it and I will not take from it. [2426-A]

Q. When you made those speeches calling on the workers to overthrow the Government, did you feel that you were advocating something against the law or something that was a crime?

A. I felt that I was doing what I was told as a good Communist. The question of law or moral or political right was not involved. It was just a good Communist, and I was following the orders as were given to me by the party that I was a part of. I was a good Communist in those days, and naturally as a good Communist I obediently, dutifully and faithfully executed the decisions of the leading committees based upon the principle of democratic centralization; in other words, you did not give any attention to the matter of right or wrong at that time. The Communists themselves had no scruples with regard to right or wrong.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. I am speaking of you, Mr. Johnson.

A. How can you live, sleep and eat in a cesspool without getting some of the filth on you?

Q. Have you gotten it all off yet?

A. I hope to God I do soon.

Q. You do not know yet whether you have it off?

A. I hope——

Mr. Donohue: I submit he is arguing with the witness.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): In respect to your last answer, Mr. Johnson, I will ask you to look at the questions and answers given by you under oath in the Yanish case here in San Francisco [2427] in February of 1948 in this respect: I will ask you to look at 115, beginning at the top of the page, where I draw a line, and go down to line 18, where I have also marked with a line. I will ask you whether or not at the hearing I have already mentioned you made under oath the answers which I will now read in response to the questions that I read:

> "A. Your mean by advocating the overthrow of the government of the United States, did I know——
> "Q. By force and violence,——
> "A. (Interrupting) Did I know at that time?
> "Q. (Interrupting)—Did you think you were advocating the commission of a crime?"

And your answer:

> "I didn't think so.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

"Q. Why?

"A. Because I had been so thoroughly indoctrinated in the Communist philosophy that I thought it was correct.

"Q. You mean you thought it was correct to believe in that? Is that what you mean?

"A. I thought it was correct to believe in it.

"Q. Didn't you also think, while you were so advocating, that you were advocating the commission of an act that was criminal under the laws of the United States?

"A. I didn't know it at the time.

"Q. You didn't what? [2428]

"A. I didn't know it at that time."

Are those the answers that you give under oath here in San Francisco in February of 1948?

A. I did, and may I add that I am fully in accord with what I have stated at that time, and anything I have stated here may be further enlargement upon or an extension of the basic thing which I expressed in that particular testimony. I have at no time advocated of myself and on my own anything contrary to that which was laid down in party policy. As I said before, and I say again, that I carried out strictly what the party set forth in their foreign policy, in their program in connection with labor, the farmers, the negroes, women—wherever their activities centered, I was faithful, I was loyal. I gave the best years, ten years of the formative years of my life in that movement faithfully, devotedly, and that is the way that many other Communists have done in so far as that movement is concerned. And we thought not of the question of whether it was a violaton of the laws of our Government or not.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Tell us what you thought, not what you say other people thought.

A. I will say this, that as far as I thought, and when I say, "I," I speak for those that are in the party that I am associated with.

Q. You can't speak for anybody else but yourself, Mr. Johnson?

A. I express more or less what is the party policy. [2429]

Mr. MacInnis: I ask that that be stricken, Your Honor. He is asked what he thought. He is asked what his motives were. He is not asked to tell now what he ascribes to a large party of people.

Mr. Donohue: I would object to striking it, if Your Honor please. No person forms an individual opinion without some persuasion in the opinion by the thoughts of others, particularly if he is a member of an organization where thought control is an important factor.

Mr. MacInnis: I will rephrase the question.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, is this your situation, that you can say when on the witness under oath in these twenty-odd cases, "Yes, I did these terrible things; I did them, but somebody else told me to do it"? That is your position, isn't it?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. I do not think Mr. MacInnis ought by a question to tell the witness what his situtaion is. Let the witness tell it.

Mr. MacInnis: I withdraw the question, Your Honor.

Q. Mr. Johnson, in these days when you were going to various cities which you have mentioned, calling on the workers to overthrow the Government, you were an organizer or business agent for the Cafeteria Workers Union, weren't you?

A. Not so. [2430]

Q. Not at all?

A. That is not so. That is not a correct statement. That is not a correct statement that you are making?

Q. Weren't you in that period of years a business agent for the Cafeteria Workers Union and later the Bartenders Union of some local?

A. Yes, I was, but you can't associate my affiliation with those unions with the testimony in its entirety or toto given in the Washer case.

Q. What do you mean by "toto"?

A. You are speaking of in a number of cities. The testimony in the Yanish case——

Q. Is "toto" some other person in this case? You mentioned Tito yesterday.

Mr. Donohue: We played that record yesterday, if Your Honor please. I think everybody knows what toto means.

The Court: Proceed.

The Witness: Will you read back that to me?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: You were speaking of the Yanish case. Mr. Sweeney, would you read the last answer?

(Record read.)

A. The testimony of the Yanish case does not give any specific reference to time, year, or anything of the kind. It was a general statement made, and when there is a general statement made, why, if you ask a question pertaining to it, unless [2431] you are specific, I have to give you a general answer.

Q. Yes, but what I was going to ask you is this: When you made these speeches, Mr. Johnson, in which you personally called upon the workers to overthrow the Government, did you have some kitchen utensils from the Cafeteria Workers Union or some weapons of that kind that you were going to offer the workers to use?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis) What weapons did you offer them?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. No, I didn't have any pots and pans, knives, forks and spoons.

Q. What did you have?

A. And neither did I have any potatoes, beefsteak, chop suey or anything else to offer them. But incidentally, may I say this, that Local 3 was split. They had a Communist and a right wing leadership. Half of the leaders were members of the Communist

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Party and the other half by agreement were non-Communist people. We had the majority control, but we used the non-Communist people for front people, to front for us.

Q. Let me ask you this——

A. Permit me to finish answering that.

Q. I do not think he should answer some other question. [2432]

A. You asked about the Cafeteria Union. You brought it up. I think as long as you brought it up, you ought to explain it.

Q. I asked you about the pots and pans. You said you did not offer them those weapons. Tell us what weapons you did offer them.

The Court: I think Mr. MacInnis is entitled to an answer to the question. The purport or upshot of the question was certainly not to ask for the physical presence of pots and pans.

Mr. MacInnis: That was the question I asked, Your Honor.

The Court: He might well interpret that in the light in which you submitted the question to him. I will permit the witness to answer and make any explantion he wishes.

A. The Cafeteria Employees Union, in that union, we had a Communist and we had a right wing leadership based upon the principles of the Communist policy of the United Front. The president of the union was non-Communist, a Catholic. The secretary of the union was a member of the Communist Party. A member of the State Committee, a member of the Communist Party. Well, half of the business agents in the most strategic districts were members of the Communist Party. The others were members of the right wing. The Communists controlled the majority on the Executive Council and the Executive Board of the union and consequently whatever we wanted to put over in that union, we put over, and we used our position in the union and our control of the Executive Council of the union to syphon off the [2433] funds of the union to send delegates to different conferences of front organizations of the Communist Party in different parts of the country, and to send substantial contributions of union funds to these conferences sponsored by the Communist Front organizations. It was in connection with my position as a member of the National Committee and a business agent of that union and the control that we had over the Executive Council of the union which decided on the sending of the delegates and the appropriation of monies that we were able to raid the union treasury and syphon off substantial sums of the union monies in order to support the Communist Front organizations and to support these different conferences. I was sent on a number of occasions as a delegate, and as a delegate I would speak for 3,000 members or whatever our membership was at that time, Cafeteria Workers. I did not speak for them. I only spoke for the Communist minority, but I used their name. That is the deception, the trickery, the Machiavellian tactics that the Communists use.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Pardon me. What name was that you used?

A. Machiavellian.

Q. You used that name yesterday. I thought it was some Scotchman. Machiavelli? Is he a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, may we at this time suggest that Mr. MacInnis is presumably an educated man. I do not think all of these colloquies on the use of terms which [2434] should be known to educated men have any part in this trial.

The Court: Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Will you tell us, having offered us that lengthy statement, what weapons did you ask workers to use? You said it was not pots and pans. What weapons did you tell them to use in overthrowing the Government?

A. We called upon them to unite, to organize under the banner of the Communist Party as the only political party that is capable of successfully leading them into the struggle for the changing of the existing social order. [2435]

Q. In those years how many members did the Communist Party have in the entire United States?

A. I don't recall the exact figures of the membership of the Communist Party. It was 80,000, 90,000; later it was a hundred and some thousand. I don't recall the exact number. There were—there are so many persons that are hidden members. There are hidden members and there are open members. The Communist Party engages in so much duplicity and deceit it is hard to say just exactly how many members they have.

Q. In any event, taking the testimony that you have given us, the Communist Party would comprise at best between 1/40 of 1 per cent and 1/50 of 1 per cent of the total population in America?

A. It is not a question of the numerical strength of the Communist Party. We were taught that in school and it was hammered into us in high committee meetings, it is not the numerical strength of the Communist Party; it is the composition of the Communist Party. The composition means those who faithfully, loyally devoted, steeled and tried, schooled in the art, the science of revolution, who can compose the generals who constitute the general staff of the workers. And the general staff is not a big, bulky, cumbersome body of people. It is a well-knit group, and they spoke of Bolshevizing this group, making it a steel and iron party, a party that could go through the throes and the fires [2436] of civil war and remain intact, a party capable of leading and inspiring the masses of the people to follow it to overthrow this Government.

Q. Have you come to the end of that invocation?

A. You asked me a question and I answered it.

Q. Now, you used the word "revolution" a moment ago. Does that word have an ordinary meaning?

Mr. Donohue: He asked him this yesterday and he answered.

Mr. MacInnis: This is another question entirely.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: I guess "revolution" means the same today as it did yesterday, if your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. Donohue: I objected to the question yesterday. Your Honor overruled the objection and permitted the answer. I see no reason for going over it again today.

The Court: Counsel has a different purpose today.

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question to me again, please?

(Question read.)

A. Well, I suggest that counsel should consult Webster's or Funk & Wagnall's dictionary for any meaning he can find there; that is——

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, that is good enough. Let me ask you this question: You are a voter in the State of New York, are you? [2437]

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Now, about seven weeks ago in the State of New York did you hear the speech by Senator John Foster Dulles in which he said to the people of New York that if the movement toward statism persisted, that he would call upon the people in the words of Thomas Jefferson to revolt?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, to testimony coming from the podium. I think if Mr. MacInnis wants to testify he should change places with the witness. I object to the question.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): By the way, is the notion of the class struggle one peculiarly attached to the Communist Party?

A. The question of the class struggle of which you speak is a theory developed by Karl Marx in relation to the different classes in the—different classes in capitalistic society, and of course further developed by Lenin and by Stalin.

Q. Pardon me. The question is, Is that a peculiarly Communist theory?

A. I don't—I haven't studied too much the philosophies of other great philosophers, but I know that that is the philosophy of Karl Marx. Of course, Karl Marx branded the other philosophers as idealists or inverted philosophers.

Q. You called yourself an idealist yesterday.

A. He—I resent your constant needling me, counsel, before [2438] I——

Q. Really?

A. ——before I complete a thought.

Q. I am not that interested in your comfort, Mr. Witness. I will make such remarks as I choose.

Mr. Donohue: I am, if your Honor please. So is the law. The witness is entitled to be protected from this constant baiting on the part of Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, a witness who has testified for the Government in upwards of twenty cases is hardly in the position of an inexperienced person that is so interrupted by the remarks of counsel.

Mr. Donohue: The statement made just now——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Mr. MacInnis and counsel, it makes very little difference if the man has testified once, twice or three times; the bars are not to be removed concerning the elementals of courtesy and ordinary deportment in the trial of a case.

Mr. MacInnis: Does your Honor feel I have been discourteous?

The Court: I am giving this as a generality now, Mr. MacInnis, and not pointing a remark precisely to your immediate conduct. But a witness is entitled to make his answer. You asked him general questions and he has given you general answers. Now, only recently you interrupted him. I assume that is what he meant by "needling." The colloquialism "needling" has very many connotations. Whether he regards that as needling or not, I do not know. My immediate purpose is not to determine what needling" means, but I think he [2439] should be permitted to continue. You may proceed.

The Witness: Will you kindly read the last sentence that I uttered?

(Record read.)

A. He has attempted to prove that his philosophical theories are the only correct philosophical theories. Of course, his theories are based upon the whole principle—upon the principle of materialism, the question of the relationship of forces, the relationship of man to another, et cetera, et cetera. Well, anyhow, I don't—I think that the

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Marxian philosophy is the only one that really emphasizes and raises to a high degree the relationship between labor and capital and between the peasantry or the farmers and capital, and so forth and so on. In fact, the whole philosophy of Marx is built around that.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You say that is the only philosophy that emphasizes——

A. I did not say that it is the only one. That is the only one I am familiar with to any degree.

Q. And you tell us you are a representative of the Retail Clerks Union, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that an AFL union?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is the AFL, the American Federation of Labor—— [2440] A. That is right.

Q. ——a Communist organization?

A. That is right. What? What did you say?

Mr. MacInnis: Read him the question.

(Question read.)

A. You know it is not.

Q. If I know it is not, then, Mr. Witness, do you know the constitution of the American Federation of Labor——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. Are we going to then try the Constitution of the United States or Great Britain?

Mr. MacInnis: I am only asking one question.

Mr. Donohue: It is always a prefatory question.

Mr. MacInnis: So it is.

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, don't you know that the preamble to the constitution of the American Federation of Labor sets forth the existence of the class struggle between capital and labor and discusses no other subject but the existence of a class struggle which can end only in the recognition of the worker?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please, for two reasons: One, because of its form. Mr. MacInnis has repeatedly stood before this Court and asked a witness a question, the nature of the question being a statement by Mr. MacInnis as to what something is or is not, typically illustrated by his recitation of what is the preamble of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. I object, therefore, to the form of the question. [2441]

I object also to the substance of the question, because what the preamble to the constitution of the American Federation of Labor contains is certainly no evidence as to whether or not these defendants conspired to defraud the United States by violating the immigration laws.

Mr. MacInnis: Neither are the remarks of this man upon what he says he found out about the Communist Party, your Honor. I have always understood——

Mr. Donohue: The trouble is you ask the witness a question, and then you don't like the answer.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: ——leading questions are the soul of cross-examination. All questions on cross-examination with exceptions are leading questions. Counsel now objects to the leading questions. This man tells us in one breath that the source of the idea of the class struggle is Communistic; that Karl Marx emphasizes——

Mr. Donohue: He made no such statement, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I now point out to him that the great organization to which he belongs, which he says I know is not Communistic, has in the preamble of its constitution the flat statement of the class struggle between capital and labor and discusses nothing else but the class struggle.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, the absurdity——

The Court: The objection is sustained. [2442]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, have you ever read the papers called the Federalist Papers, papers prepared by great patriots of the United States at the time when our Constitution was being ratified?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. Now we are going back to before 1781, a long way back. This indictment alleges incidents that occurred on or about the 17th of September, 1945.

Mr. MacInnis: This gentleman told us about Karl Marx and Hegel.

Mr. Donohue: Hegel I haven't heard about yet.

Mr. MacInnis: People who go back into the 1860's and 1870's, at least.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question to me, please?

(Question read.)

A. No; I have been so busy studying Communist philosophy that I have neglected American history. I will have to start now to study American history again.

Mr. MacInnis: I think that is an admonition that you could very well follow, Mr. Johnson. Let me ask you——

Mr. Donohue: Now, now, once again may I say that it is not for counsel to advise the witness as to what his future course of conduct should be. [2443]

The Court: Counsel and I have had our little discussions from time to time about this matter.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Is your Honor offended with me?

The Court: No, I am not offended, Mr. MacInnis, at anything you do, precisely offended as an individual, but I have a duty as a judge which transcends my individual provinces. I have made myself pretty clear in the past. I respectfully ask you again not to engage in these arguments constantly with the witness. You ask him the question, he will give you the answer. That is all I have to say, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, Mr. Johnson, do you know that in the year 1789 James Madison, who later became President of the United States, wrote as one of the Federalist Papers an essay on the class struggle?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I say to your Honor that the absurdity of this line of questioning is perhaps best evidenced by the fact that every great religious movement in the history of the world centered around the class struggle, and I see no purpose in examining this witness about the theories of class struggle on the part of any individual, great or small. I object to it.

Mr. MacInnis: I will accept the statement of the prosecutor, your Honor. That is exactly what I wanted to show, that the idea of class struggle, the idea of revolution— [2444] all of those things are found from Plato through Francis Bacon, down through Marx and Hegel and later philosophers, even American John Dewey and the like; that there is nothing peculiar about the notions of idealists concerning what should happen to our society. So I will withdraw the question.

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, you say that you practiced deceit while you were a member of the Communist Party?

A. I say the Communists practiced deceit.

Q. I am speaking of you.

A. I say Communists practice deceit; they teach deceit.

Q. I say, did you practice it, Mr. Johnson?

A. Every Communist practices deceit.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. I asked if you practiced deceit.

A. If I say now I practiced it, I could shorten it. I said every Communist. That includes myself.

Q. That includes you? A. Yes.

Q. Would you tell lies, Mr. Johnson?

A. Every Communist is a liar.

Q. Did you tell lies? Did you tell lies, Mr. Johnson?

A. Every Communist tells a lie.

Q. Did you? A. Everyone.

Q. Did you? A. Everyone. [2445]

Q. Did you?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, I object, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I have the right to an answer, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: You want the answer that you want from him and you don't get it.

Mr. MacInnis: The hapless cross-examiner has a few rights, your Honor. I asked him this question if he was a liar. He can tell us. He can say "I was" or "I was not."

The Court: The last statement about the hapless cross-examiner may go out of the record, because you have been anything but a hapless cross-examiner.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

The Court: You have made your speeches before the jury and I have not intruded. When you say you are a hapless cross-examiner, that isn't an apt designation.

Mr. MacInnis: I am glad your Honor doesn't feel that way.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: You are certainly not a hapless cross-examiner. You may have the answer if you specify in your question the time, place or circumstances under which he may have perjured himself. Otherwise I will sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, is this true: that you practiced duplicity and deceit from 1930 continuously until 1939?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. If that [2446] is for the purpose——

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. This man has said in one of his answers given first on direct examination and later on cross-examination that he practiced duplicity and deceit as a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Now, in reference to one of the questions put to you before the objection was sustained, I am going to ask that you consult your previous testimony given under oath. I will ask you to look at page 145 of the testimony that you gave in the matter of Nat Yanish. I ask you to read from line 2 of that page down to line 18.

(The transcript was handed to the witness.)

Mr. MacInnis: Have you read it?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I object at this time to any question asked with respect to the record just exhibited to the witness for the reason that, while I have not done so heretofore, once again I say to your Honor that there is nothing in the record which has been shown to the witness which is one small measure different——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: That would be——

Mr. Donohue (Continuing): ——from the testimony which he has given here this morning. Therefore, if it is offered for the purpose of impeachment it fails to serve that purpose, because I say to your Honor that if your Honor cares to [2447] read it your reading will confirm my statement.

The Court: While that may be true from your viewpoint, in the final analysis it is a matter for the Court and jury.

Mr. Donohue: May I ask counsel, through your Honor, if it is offered for the purpose of impeaching this witness.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, it is.

The Court: I assume it is.

Mr. MacInnis: On a remark he made not two minutes ago.

The Court: All right; proceed.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): I will ask you whether or not in the proceedings involving the Immigration Service trial of Nat Yanish, when you were brought out to San Francisco as a witness for the United States Government against Nat Yanish, if you did not give these answers under oath in response to questions put to you:

> "Q. When did you learn about this deceit and duplicity of the Communist Party?
> "A. When did I learn of it?
> "Q. Yes.

"A. You mean the exact time?

"Q. Approximately.

"A. I learned of it early in the Party.

"Q. Did you practice it yourself?

"A. To be a good Communist you have to practice duplicity and deceit. [2448]

"Q. I take it you did practice it?

"A. Yes, sure. Every Communist practices that; it is basic.

"Q. You did it?

"A. Sure. All Communists do that.

"Q. For how many years would you say you practiced deceit and duplicity?

"A. Up until the time I left the Communist Party."

Were those the answers that you gave under oath?

A. Yes, those were the answers I gave under oath, and I do not retract from anything that I have said. And I will further state that you cannot divorce me from the Communist Party, nor can you separate me from the policy that the Party advocates, because during those years I advocated what was the Party policy, and you cannot separate me from the organization. And I resent the attempt on your part, counsel, to say that it was something on my part as an individual. I was a part of an organization like I was a part of a military organization, and I carried out orders like everybody else and I did them faithfully.

Q. Pardon me. You did them voluntarily, did you not?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. Voluntarily and under pressure.

Q. You did them, didn't you?

A. Yes, as a good organization man.

Q. When did you find out that the Communist Party actually [2449] practiced deceit and duplicity?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. He just said in the record that he found out early in his experience in the Party.

The Court: He may answer.

A. I think the record speaks for itself, counsel.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Just tell us, please, when did you find out?

A. Early in my—during the early years of my Party, through studying Karl Marx, through studying Lenin, where Lenin I think in one of his writings speaks of duplicity, about their duplicity, strategy and deceit and everything else; that all of these things justify the ends. [2450]

Q. Did you find those things out in 1930 or 1931?

A. I don't know exactly the year, counsel. I have read so much on that subject over the years, I can't recall when I first read it, but it is there for the record if you want to drag in books.

Q. Did you find out by 1932 that the Communist Party advocated deceit?

A. I don't recall, counsel, when the exact year, day or month was.

Q. During the years after you entered the Communist Party you were active not only as a worker, but as an organizer, isn't that true? A. Yes.

Q. But you can't tell us now whether you made the discovery about the deceit and duplicity in the Communist Party in 1930, 1931 or 1932, is that correct?

A. I can't exactly state when, counsel.

Q. Well, by 1933, when you were in the party for four years, did you know that it practiced deceit and duplicity?

A. I still say, counsel, I don't recall the exact time.

Q. 1934, when you were in the party for five years, did you know that?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. The witness has stated several times he can not recall exactly what time during his membership in the Communist Party he learned that [2451] the policy was to practice deceit and deception. We gain nothing by asking him successively one year after the other. I object to the question.

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask in this respect that the witness look at his previous testimony under oath in the same proceeding I have already mentioned, page 146 between lines 2 and 17. I have marked the place.

Q. I will ask you if the following answers were given by you under oath in response to the questions put to you:

> "A. In 1935.
> "Q. When in 1935?
> "A. About the first part of 1935 I began to get wise to their tactics. In order to be a good Communist I had to be a good patent-medicine salesman.

"Q. I take it that you wanted to do that and that is why you stayed, is that right?

"A. I wouldn't say that that was the main reason why I stayed. I wouldn't say that.

"Q. When you got wise in 1935 that the Communist Party was an organization that practices lying and fraud, deceit and duplicity, you stayed because that is what you wanted to do, is that right?

"A. I stayed because I still had a lingering faith in the correctness of their program.

"Q. You did not practice deceit yourself?

"A. Yes, sure. Why not? To be a good Communist you have to practice it. I was a good Communist."

Are those the answers that you gave under oath?

A. Yes, I gave those answers under oath and I reaffirm those statements. I will not at this time under any circumstances take anything from them.

Q. And in ~~February of~~ 1948 in this city you stated under oath that you did not find out until 1935 that the Communist Party practiced fraud, deceipt and duplicity, correct?

A. That is not a correct statement. I think if you read the testimony you will find that it includes a number of things, not merely deceit. It includes a number of things—when you get wise to a number of things in the party. I think the record will show that. The question was not put to me just merely deceit.

Q. Let me put it very generally, then. When did you get wise to the methods of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know—early in my experience I began to develop certain doubts. Back in the early '30's I began to develop certain doubts which, of course, were strengthened and enlarged upon through the years, which culminated in my eventual break with the party. It was not a thing that happened like this (snapping fingers). It was a whole series of incidents and experiences culminating into just one thing that was sufficient to break the camel's back, in other words. [2453]

Q. When did you say you got wise to the methods of the Communist Party?

A. According to the testimony in the Yanish case, when asked me by the counsel representing the defendant at that time, I stated that which is recorded in the record that you asked me to read.

Q. Tell us when you got wise to the methods of the Communist Party.

A. Let my record speak for itself.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor. This record is not before the jury. Will Your Honor instruct the witness to answer?

The Court: Yes, you might give an answer in the light of the testimony.

A. According to the record he asked me to read, Your Honor, it states that when I got wise to a number of things which counsel asked, it says "1935" and it doesn't separate the question of deceit from the other questions, other things involved.

Q. Forgetting about the matter of deceit alone and looking just at the general things that you ultimately learned about the Communist Party, when did you get wise to the methods of the Communist Party?

A. I think I have stated before that the record speaks for itself. What methods do you mean specifically? Let us get the [2454] record clear.

Mr. MacInnis: Will you read the question?

(Question read.)

A. What methods do you mean?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): A moment ago you stated that he had questioned you about fraud, deceit and duplicity alone, and that you had committed yourself to 1935 as the time when you got wise to those things. You stated, however, there were general things additional to and independent of the fraud and duplicity that I had not questioned you about. Now, I ask you the general question, when did you get wise to the methods of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: I think, if Your Honor please, he has answered this at least once.

Mr. MacInnis: No, he has not, Your Honor. He refused to.

Mr. Donohue: Just a minute, please. He said a minute ago that he would stand on the record of what he said in the Yanish case, when that question was asked him, and he said a second later it was in 1935, and the record will sustain him.

Mr. MacInnis: This is another question, Your Honor. He said he found out about the duplicity and deceit in 1935.

The Court: The witness is now asking the examiner to define his terms.

Mr. MacInnis: I have done so.

The Court: He stands on the record. Therefore I assume [2455] 1935 is the given date. What is the present question? You asked the examiner to define terms, correct?

The Witness: Yes, sir; since he said the record is not involved, I want him to define what he means.

Mr. MacInnis: The record previously shown you is not involved.

The Witness: I don't understand.

Mr. MacInnis: Will you read my definition of methods?

(The Reporter read as follows:

("Q. 'A moment ago you stated that he had questioned you about fraud, deceit and duplicity alone, and that you had committed yourself to 1935 as the time when you got wise to those things. You stated, however, there were > general things additional to and independent of the fraud and duplicity that I had not questioned you about. Now, I ask you the general question, when did you get wise to the methods of the Communist Party?")

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: Of course, I have objected to that question, if Your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this lapse of time between the hestitation of the witness and then the rising of counsel is somewhat significant. I think the question is one that has not been answered.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. Donohue: May I humbly ask Your Honor is this witness [2456] not entitled to be told what method of the Communist Party——

Mr. MacInnis: How would I know the methods of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: How would he know? Method of doing what?

Mr. MacInnis: He is an expert on Communism.

A. I resent that. I have at no time said I was an expert. I have at no time said I was an expert. All through this hearing you have been trying to state I am an expert on this and I am an expert on that. I am just an ex-Communist who had my differences with the party, my differences basic and fundamental and I left them for that purpose when I was called upon by my Government to come out and expose these arch-conspirators. I cooperated with my Government.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

And let me say this also, since you raised it: I didn't testify personally in all of these cases that you are trying to create the impression that I testified in. I stated yesterday under oath that the majority of these cases in which I testified, my testimony was placed in the record by stipulation. The bulk of the cases were in Los Angeles, and the bulk of those cases were agreed by stipulation. I was in Los Angeles only one day. So you are trying to create the impression I am a professional, paid witness going about the country talking about Communists. I say that this is cowardly, dastardly, contemptuous and contemptible and flagitious insinuation. I was doing my job as a good American.

Q. Could you speak a little louder? I couldn't hear you very well.

The Court: We might take the recess.

Mr. MacInnis: I have one or two more matters.

The Court: Now, go ahead. If you have a break in your examination, it is all right; otherwise we will take the recess.

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask him just one question. I would like to ask the witness, in view of this last colloquy and the distinction he makes of the word "methods," to look at page 145 of the transcript already referred to, lines 19 and 20, which I have marked in red.

Pardon me. I asked you to look at one part of the transcript, sir.

Q. Mr. Johnson, I will ask you if under oath in the Anderson case, when asked about the methods of the Communist Party, having in mind that you joined that party in 1930, this question was put to you and this answer given you under oath——

Mr. Donohue: I object to the reading of the question, if Your Honor please, because it is not a fair examination of the witness. If he wants to go back——

The Court: It does not appear to be the examination of the witness?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, no, but I say it is not a fair examination of this witness by taking one question and answer out of [2458] content, which he has done before. I suggest, if Your Honor please, that in fairness to the witness that he agreed from the beginning of the pertinent colloquy on this subject matter so that this question and answer appear in context and not out of it.

Mr. MacInnis: The other colloquy is something that has already been read, the whole page up to this point.

The Court: You make take it up on redirect examination.

Mr. Donohue: I waive any objection, if Your Honor please.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): "For how many years before that?" And your answer: "I didn't get wise to their methods until about 1935."

Is that the answer that you gave under oath?

A. It is in the record I gave it.

Mr. MacInnis: We will take the recess now, Your Honor, shall we?

The Court: Yes. We will take the recess now. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the same admonition not to discuss this case under any conditions nor to form or express any opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2459]

Mr. MacInnis: Shall I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, did the deceit that you practiced while a member of the Communist Party include deceit under oath?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, can you tell us when you stopped practicing deceit?

A. I ceased to practice deceit when I left the Communist Party.

Q. Are you sure? A. Absolutely certain.

Q. In that respect I am going to ask you to look again at some testimony given by you in the matter of Yanish to which I referred to before, I think it would be page 146; I will mark the lines, 18 to 21, with a red line, and ask if you will please read them to yourself (handing transcript to witness). I will ask you if at the hearing already mentioned you made the following answer under oath to a question put to you:

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

"Q. You are sure you stopped practicing deceit in 1939?

"A. Well, I don't know. I am not trying to deceive anybody now and I haven't. Everything I have tried to do is open and aboveboard." [2460]

Was that the answer that you then gave under oath?

A. I did.

Q. Well, now, actually had you stopped practicing deceit by the time of February, 1948, when you appeared in this city as a witness in the Yanish case?

A. Practicing deceit in what respect?

Q. In all respects.

A. I don't understand exactly what you mean. Do you mean deceit as practiced by the Communist Party, or what other form of deceit do you mean?

Q. Possibly your own brand of deceit.

A. How do you know I have a brand?

Mr. Donohue: Object to that characterization by counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: He asked me for an explanation, your Honor.

Q. Had you stopped practicing deceit in all forms by February of 1948?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, isn't that like the old question, "When did you stop beating your wife?" Doesn't it presuppose that he did practice deceit after the time that he said he stopped, when he said he left the Communist Party? I object to it.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: I think the witness understands the examiner. Do you, Mr. Witness?

The Witness: Yes, I do. When that question was asked me, it was asked in relation to the deceit practiced by the Communist [2461] Party, and my answer at that particular time was in relation to the time that I was in the Party. There was no question asked me with regard to what I did after I left the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): I now ask you that question, Mr. Johnson: Had you stopped practicing deceit by 1948?

A. I had—I was not practicing deceit in any form in 1948.

Q. Very well. Now, in relation to that statement, let me come to another phase of the matter. You have been convicted of a felony, have you not, Mr. Johnson?

A. I have at no time in my life been convicted of any crime.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I assume that counsel will present a certified copy of a record which purports to show a conviction of felony on the part of this witness for the purposes of impeachment, because I am sure he wouldn't ask that question unless he had such positive proof.

Mr. MacInnis: You may well be sure of that.

Q. Mr. Johnson, you told the jury yesterday, along the line of your various occupations——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I think we ought to settle this matter.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: I am coming to this matter.

Mr. Donohue: He has asked the witness a question, which he has denied.

The Court: Yes, I think we have reached the point where—— [2462]

Mr. MacInnis: I am on that very matter, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You told the jury yesterday that you operated a restaurant and pool hall in Alliance, Nebraska, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, actually your occupation at that time was that of a bootlegger in connection with the pool hall, is that not true?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. That is highly improper. The California Code, the common law and the Federal Rules are replete with instances, which my adversary must know, that no question may be asked of a witness the answer to which may tend to degrade him. He is entitled only to ask this witness, "Have you ever on such-and-such a date been convicted of a felony?" He asked that question. The witness has denied it. I now call upon Mr. MacInnis to offer the proof of that conviction.

Mr. MacInnis: I am about to come to that.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson——

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, adverting to the record, one moment, when you asked the question concerning the witness' having been heretofore been convicted of a felony, Mr. Donohue immediately asked you whether you had a record of such conviction. You said you were coming to that point immediately. [2463]

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: I assumed you would.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Now are you coming to that point?

Mr. MacInnis: I am.

The Court: All right. The objection is sustained to the other question, and the jury is admonished to disregard the implications contained in the statement or any assertion embodied therein.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, on the 1st day of December of 1926 in Alliance, Nebraska, were you found guilty of the possession of intoxicating liquor?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. That isn't the question he asked a minute ago. He asked him a minute ago if he had been convicted of a felony.

The Court: That is right.

Mr. MacInnis: That is a felony, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I hope he is prepared to prove that possession of intoxicating liquor is a felony.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I have the certified copy on its way from Alliance, Nebraska. I have a wire from the Chief of Police of that city in my hand. I will show to the Court.

The Court: Show it to counsel.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, as the Court knows, where the possession of liquor was not a felony it [2464] was a misdemeanor.

Mr. Donohue: That is exactly the point.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, under the Federal Rules, as I have learned in the trial of cases, whereas in the State courts the differentiation between a misdemeanor and a felony rests upon the punishment meted out, in the Federal Courts the distinction rests upon the punishment susceptible of being meted out under the statute. I have many times had the office of the United States Attorney advert to that rule. Now, under the State court practice this crime would be a misdemeanor. Under the Federal Court practice it is admissible as a felony.

Mr. Donohue: We will come to that, if your Honor please, when we have such a conviction—proof of such a conviction.

Mr. MacInnis: May I pass it to your Honor, so that you will see that it is not an idle statement.

Mr. Donohue: That is the telegram which your Honor directed Mr. MacInnis to permit me to see.

Mr. MacInnis: I would like to show it to your Honor.

The Court: Counsel is entitled to see it.

Mr. MacInnis: I can't introduce a hearsay document. Your Honor does not want to see it?

The Court: I will look at it. As a courtesy to counsel we ordinarily show counsel these documents before they are presented. [2465]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: Counsel presented to you a document that you did not require him to show defense counsel. He specifically asked you not to. We made no protest. I think that that remark of your Honor's commenting upon my attitude is not called for.

Mr. Donohue: I am sorry. Have you finished? Now I ask your Honor to look at that document.

The Court: I may have a great deal more to say about the subject matter of our conference yesterday, counsel, at a later stage.

Mr. MacInnis: Very well.

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, may I make this statement: I think your Honor will recall that under the National Prohibition Act possession of intoxicating liquors provided for a fine and imprisonment of not to exceed six months. Now, under the felony practice, under the Federal practice, it is true that if the punishment exceeds one year it is a felony, although——

The Court: Counsel stated to this Court upon questioning this witness that he was in possession of a certified copy of a judgment of conviction for a felony. Now, that is what the record shows.

Mr. MacInnis: Where does the record show I said it? I have it on the way. I will have it by tomorrow morning.

The Court: Mr. Reporter, I ask you to read the statement [2466] of Mr. MacInnis to this Court as a basis for the question.

(Record read.) [2466-A]

Mr. MacInnis: Where does the record show I said it?

Mr. Donohue: May I point to where the record does show he said it, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: When the original question was asked of the witness, the record as just read indicates I objected to the question, and at the time I stated, as the record indicates, that I was sure that Mr. MacInnis must have had in his possession a certified copy of the judgment of conviction, else he would not have asked the question, to which Mr. MacInnis replied, and the record so states, "Well, you may be sure of that," and I felt that he had it, or I relied on what he said. I didn't expect he would try to produce a telegram which in no way identifies this person as the subject named in the telegram, and which in no wise indicates that he was convicted of a felony.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, may I be heard on that? The first time anyone connected with the defense in this case ever heard that Manning Johnson ever lived in Alliance, Nebraska, was yesterday when he gave that testimony on the witness stand. Acting upon suspicion, we put a telephone call through at the close of yesterday to the chief of police of that city. We received the information. We received the wire that has already been shown to Your Honor. We sent a wire in return asking that a certified copy be forwarded at once, and received word that such a copy was being prepared and was being sent on its way. [2467] Now, with the witness coming here and giving that testimony, we would be put in this position: We would either have to defer asking the question until long after he had departed, or acting upon what we certainly believe to be authentic, the telegram from the chief of police and the promise that the certified copy is on its way, and we will produce the certified copy and offer it in evidence in this case as soon as it arrives, which I expect will be tomorrow morning. I made no such assurance. The only statement I made, when Your Honor asked me the question, I said, "I have a certified copy on its way from Alliance, Nebraska," and I certainly did not pretend to make any other statement, and I would not have been able to make any other statement in view of the passage of time between yesterday and today, and if anybody wants to check the time of the telephone call, I assume the Government may do that any they will see when the first contact was made. So we could not have any information of any superior character than a telegram at this time.

Mr. Donohue: It is the first time, if your Honor please, on a plea of confession and avoidance I have ever heard a lawyer justify, on the ground of expediency and necessity, the violation of a rule which a lawyer learns the first week he is in law school.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I have had the exact point in these courts no further back in time than August of this year, [2468] when I was defending a criminal case in the department immediately upstairs from this courtroom, and at that time the attorney for the United States asked the defendant if the defendant had ever been convicted of a felony, naming the felony, the time and the place. The witness denied the situation. Two days later a certified copy was produced. No one protested. Everyone understood that the matter came to the attention of the Court in the same fashion as it came to the mind of counsel. I do not suggest I have done anything improper and I do not concede that I have, either.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, from the telegram presented to the Court, there is nothing to indicate therein that this witness on the stand, Manning Johnson, was ever convicted at any time or at all of any felonious conduct in any court, state or federal. Accordingly, until the record is produced and a determination made with respect to his alleged felonious conduct, the conviction thereon, the objections will be sustained and the jurors are entitled at this juncture to disregard the statements heretofore made in connection with any such assertions.

Mr. MacInnis: I want to assign the statements of the prosecutor as misconduct, Your Honor, as an unjustifiable interference with cross-examination in this case. I think I have done nothing that a lawyer would not be compelled to do, faced with a new witness whom I have never seen before. [2469]

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I can say to you in fairness that I believed you had a certified copy of the judgment and conviction in your possession.

Mr. MacInnis: I did not tell Your Honor that.

The Court: No.

Mr. MacInnis: The record shows Your Honor had that impression, but when the record was read back you saw that I did not say that.

The Court: The only inference I could draw from your manner of querying this witness and your representations to the Court was that you had such a certified copy. I am not going to presently reflect beyond the inference I drew.

Mr. MacInnis: I do not think you should.

The Court: Counsel, I drew that fair inference. I am not going to instruct the jury to disregard the remarks of the prosecution in connection with your representations. I think it is a matter that they can determine upon in the light of the colloquy. We will await, then, the receipt of this certified copy. The determination will then be made whether or not this witness, Manning Johnson, was involved as the defendant therein, and if so, whether the conduct resulted in a misdemeanor or conviction of a felony, because there is a wide difference, as counsel knows.

That is all on that point. The jury is admonished to disregard the statement of counsel with respect to the asserted [2470] conviction of this witness of felonious conduct at the time and place referred to in the telegram or any conduct bordering upon a crime.

The Witness: May I say one word?

The Court: You reserve your comments at this time, Mr. Witness, unless a question is presented to you.

Mr. MacInnis: On the matter of time, I will abide by Your Honor's suggestion.

The Court: This witness will be available, and I instruct the witness to remain available to the process of this court.

Mr. MacInnis: I will proceed or defer, as Your Honor suggests.

The Court: We will defer until 2:00 o'clock?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: The record now shows, Mr. MacInnis, this witness is available hereafter for such purposes in connection with the presentation of any certified copy of any asserted judgment of conviction of a felony.

Mr. MacInnis: That is fair enough.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the recess until 2:00 o'clock. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions or to converse with any person on any subject of the trial and not to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [2471]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

December 14, 1949, 2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The witness on the stand is Manning Rudolph Johnson, heretofore sworn.

The Court: Proceed, counsel.

Cross-Examination (Continued)

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Johnson, will you tell us now what was the first time and when was the first time that you ever told any official of the United States Government that you saw Harry Bridges at a meeting of the National Committee of the Communist Party?

A. I do not recall having—I do not recall when I was asked. I was asked a number of times by persons connected with the Department of Justice prior to this trial and once before—once or twice before, several years ago.

Q. About when was the first time?

A. I don't recall. Around some time in the '40's. I don't recall. The early '40's back there.

Q. In the early 1940's? A. I think so.

Q. Do you think you might have been asked that question as early as the first year in which you had left the Communist Party? [2472]

A. I don't recall exactly when. I was asked a number of questions over a span of years and I couldn't tell you exactly when it was.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. You were asked the question, you say, a number of times by the Department of Justice over the years, is that true?

A. In the last several months I have been asked that question a number of times, and I think it was in the early '40's back there, I think, I was asked a few times.

Q. Do you remember what agency of the Government asked you that question first?

A. I know it was the Justice Department. I don't recall what agency under the Justice Department, but I know the Justice Department did ask me such questions then.

Q. Do you remember whether it was the Immigration Service or the FBI?

A. I said I don't recall.

Q. You really have no memory either way on that?

A. I don't recall which one it was. I know it was a Department of Justice agent.

Q. Could that have been as early as the first year in which you left the Communist Party?

A. I don't recall what year it was.

Q. Is it possible it could have been as early as 1940?

A. I would not say definitely what year it was at this particular time. [2473]

Q. Mr. Johnson, when you left the Communist Party for the reasons that you have already given us, did you make any public announcement so that all persons would know that you had left?

A. Well, in the inter-union fights that developed after I left the party I came out openly denouncing the Communists, if you mean in that sense.

Q. In other words, you were still active in the labor movement when you left the Communist Party? A. Of course I was.

Q. Were you an organizer of some kind in some labor union? A. That is right.

Q. So that you were making announcements almost immediately to all persons who would have anything to do with you on union matters?

A. No, I began to oppose the Communists at meetings of the union publicly.

Q. Would that be as early as the year 1940?

A. I don't recall my first public announcement at this particular time, but I say it was in the early '40's, the beginning of the '40's, when I began to publicly denounce the Communists.

Q. And you were out of the Communist Party by the year 1940?

A. For all intents and purposes, I was through with the party at the Nazi-Soviet pact in 1939. I attended a number of meetings for a few months after that, but I wasn't active any more, [2474] and I gradually ceased to attend any more meetings after that.

Q. And by 1940 you possessed a state of mind which was in opposition to everything that you felt the Communist Party represented?

A. I was opposed to them. [2474-A]

Q. By 1940 you felt not only opposed to the

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Communist Party but disposed to reveal all of these matters that you say were the more sinister aspects of the Party, isn't that true?

A. I wouldn't put it just that way. I would say that when I was approached by a representative of the Government on any matter in relation to enemy aliens or anything of that kind, or Gerhardt Eisler, I was willing to give to the Government my services, because I felt it was my patriotic duty to do so.

Q. Let me ask you this: You remember, I suppose, from ordinary publicity that Harry Bridges was tried by the Department of Immigration or the Immigration Service, rather, in the year 1941 on the charge that he was a member of the Communist Party? Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I do recall the fact that he was tried in '41.

Q. Were you subpoenaed at that time as a witness on behalf of the Government? A. Yes.

Q. You were?

A. Yes, I think I was. I am not sure.

Q. Did you appear as a witness in that case?

A. No, I did not appear as a witness in that case.

Q. In other words, if you were subpoenaed in that case the Government decided not to call you as a witness actually?

A. I don't know what the Government decided, but I was never called as a witness in the case. [2475]

Q. Well, if you were subpoenaed in that case, it is fair for us to conclude that by that time you had made a statement saying that you had seen Harry Bridges at a National Committee meeting of the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. There is no basis for any such conclusion as is stated in the question asked by Mr. MacInnis.

The Court: Well, the examiner is entitled to ask the question. He might rephrase it in another form.

Mr. MacInnis: I will, your Honor.

The Court: But he is entitled to ask the question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Having in mind your answer, Mr. Johnson, that you may have been subpoenaed in 1941 as a witness for the Government, although you were not actually called as a witness and you did not actually give testimony, I want to now ask you this question: Had you prior to that deportation case brought against Harry Bridges in 1941 on the ground that he was a member of the Communist Party, had you before that time made any statement to officers of the Government in which you used the name Harry Bridges in connection with the National Committee of the Communist Party?

A. Naturally, before they served me, I think, with a subpoena, I was interviewed by a representative of the Department of Justice. I don't recall who it was at the present time, and I can't tell you exactly when it was. They had had considerable [2476] difficulty locating me, and I do recall it was a few days before the close of the '41 trial. It wasn't very long before the close of the '41 trial of Harry Bridges that they finally contacted me and served me with a subpoena, but I never was called to testify in the case.

Q. Did you give those men a written statement at the time they called on you?

A. No, I didn't give them a written statement. I was asked a number of questions, I answered them, but there was no written statement given at that time.

Q. Do you remember about how soon in matter of days before the end of the 1941 Bridges trial that contact took place?

A. I cannot remember. That is, I cannot remember the number of days. I had no occasion to put it in a diary or to memorize it.

Q. But you are quite certain that the Government having spoken with you at that time did not choose to call you as a witness in the '41 case?

A. I can't say what the Government chose to do. I only can say that they didn't do it.

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, selecting one case out of a number of cases in which you say you have testified at the instance of the Government, taking for example the Nat Yanish case, whose testimony has been shown you on several occasions this morning, before you came to court as a witness for the Government in [2477] that case had you ever met Nat Yanish?

A. As far as having met Nat Yanish is concerned, I was not asked——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me.

A. I was not asked——

Q. You can tell us whether or not you had met him and then give your explanation.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I was not asked at that time whether I had met him.

Mr. MacInnis: Will your Honor instruct him to answer the question.

The Court: Yes. Will you answer the question of Mr. MacInnis. Did you ever, prior to testifying in the Yanish proceeding, meet Mr. Yanish?

The Witness: No.

Q. (By Mr MacInnis): And with respect to the Southern California cases, I think there were ten or twelve in number, in which you were called to give testimony by the Immigration Service, had you ever met any of the ten or twelve respondents in those cases before you went to give testimony in the matters?

A. I stated before, I did not give testimony——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Will your Honor again instruct the witness that the question is whether he met those people, not as what the contests of his testimony was.

The Court: May I ask the purpose of [2478] this?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the purpose will develop.

The Court: I will allow the question to be asked. The purpose may be——

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary to a line of questions, your Honor.

The Court: All right; you may answer.

A. Did I meet——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Yes; had you met those ten or twelve persons? A. No.

Q. Did you ever meet Harry Bridges

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. I met him in New York City.

Q. When?

A. Right at the first meeting of the National Committee after the convention.

Q. Who introduced Harry Bridges to you?

A. Jack Stachel introduced him to the Committee—to the National Committee.

Q. Did you meet him personally?

A. No. He was sitting in the meeting with the rest of the members of the National Committee.

Q. Were you ever close enough to exchange any personal remarks or shake hands together, or anything like that? [2479]

A. Well, we were all in the same room together.

Q. The question is this: Did you personally meet Harry Bridges?

A. Did I personally meet him?

Q. Yes.

A. I was introduced to Harry Bridges.

Q. You say he was introduced to a group. Were you at any time brought next to this man who you say was Harry Bridges to a point where you shook his hand and exchanged the ordinary courteous remarks of introduction that people say to each other?

A. I did not shake hands with him.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. It wasn't that kind of an introduction?

A. They don't shake hands and that sort of thing in the Communist meetings.

Q. Well, did you ever meet him after that?

A. No.

Q. Was that the first time you had ever seen him?

A. That was the first time that I had seen him.

Q. And you never met him thereafter?

A. No.

Q. Did you make any written memorandum back in 1936, which is of course thirteen years ago, as to the people you met at this meeting of what you call the National Committee of the Communist Party?

The Witness: Do you mind reading that question?

(Question read.)

A. No, I didn't make any written memorandum of the persons present at that meeting. [2480-A]

Q. So that at the best the statements that you make here in court rest entirely upon what you tell us in your memory? A. Yes, on what I recall.

Q. The man that you now say was Harry Bridges was a man you had never met before? A. No.

Q. By any——

A. By saying that, I had not met him before 1936.

Q. And you never saw him since?

A. No, I haven't seen him until I saw him in the courtroom.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. In that meeting of which you have told us you were never personally, man to man, introduced to him? A. No.

Q. And yet it is upon the basis of what you have told us that you purport to identify Harry Bridges?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I will withdraw the question.

Q. Mr. Johnson, how many persons in all, according to your best memory, do you now say were present at this meeting of the National Committee of the Communist Party in 1936?

A. I said better than 50.

Q. In other words, no person was in the room except persons to whom you ascribe membership of this National Committee?

A. I stated some of the names of the persons who were present, [2481] and I said that there were others. I recall, to the best of my recollection, at that time the persons who were present at that particular meeting of the National Committee.

Q. Were there any persons present in the room at that time other than those whom you designate in your memory as members of the National Committee? A. Yes, there were others.

Q. About how many other people?

A. I imagine there were about 25 or 30 more of them.

Q. In other words, there were 25——

A. 25, I said, or 30.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. People additional to those who were members of the National Committee?

A. No, no, they were all members of the National Committee.

Q. So that there were only these 50-odd people in the room? A. That is right.

Q. Where did you say that room was?

A. I didn't state. I said that the meeting was held either in a hall or in a hotel at that time.

Q. Can you tell us where it took place?

A. I don't recall because we had a number of meetings in different halls and hotels. We used to hold meetings in the Hotel Center, we held some in the Finnish Hall on 126th Street, we held some in the hall—the two halls on the lower East Side, and sometimes we held them in the Odd Fellows Hall and at other [2482] times at St. Nicholas Palace, and at other times at the Hotel and Restaurant Club on Eighth Avenue, the Greek Communist Club on 22nd or 23rd Street at Eighth Avenue there. There were a number of places where we held meetings during those years, and it is very difficult to say specifically which one of those halls we used at that particular time.

Q. So that your encounter with this man, whom you call in this trial Harry Bridges, whom you had never seen before, and you have never met since, took place in some hall or hotel room that you can not now designate either?

A. I hadn't met him before, and I said before that as far as recalling which one of the halls or the hotel, I can not state at this time.

Q. It was a room large enough, I suppose, for 50-odd people to meet in comfortably?

A. Oh, yes, of course it was.

Q. What is your best memory? Do you recall it as a hotel or do you recall it as a hall of some kind?

A. I can not say because—I can not say because we had, as I said before, there were so many meetings during that year. There were meetings of the National Committee, meetings of the State Committee, meetings of the various trade unions commissions in different halls. It is very difficult to say with absolute certainty what particular hotel or what particular hall was used at that time, because there were so many and I didn't [2483] make a notation of it because I never thought I would be called upon to remember that.

Q. But you say now that this National Committee had other meetings?

A. Oh, yes, they had five or six meetings of the National Committee a year.

Q. But you never saw Harry Bridges thereafter?

A. No, I did not, and the reason why I didn't see him was because——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. The man can not give a reason as to why he didn't see somebody. That answer is self-evident. It requires no explanation, and I suggest that volunteer statements are not called for by any question.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: I think the witness is entitled to explain his answer.

Mr. MacInnis: Not every answer; only when an answer calls for an explanation.

The Court: I think he might explain if he did not see the defendant.

The Witness: At the National Committee meeting, at which Harry Bridges was introduced to the membership, we gave him a big ovation. He was introduced by Jack Stachel, who made brief remarks. After his remarks, Jack Stachel said to the members of the National Committee that in the future—in the future that Harry Bridges would not be brought to members of the National [2484] Committee as a security reason, that because of his strategic position in the labor movement out here on the Pacific Coast, that if it became known that he was a member of the Communist Party, he would not be able to move and work in the party interests, in high labor circles on this Coast. Furthermore, because of the fact that the Communists on the West Coast were constantly under police surveillance, and that they could not make a move without being constantly checked, that in order to safeguard the key people that the party had in the labor movement on the Pacific Coast that Bridges would not be asked to come into any more of these meetings.

Furthermore, they said that they would maintain the past contacts which they had with Bridges, that he would be kept fully informed and aware of every decision made by the National Committee of the party.

Q. In other words, Mr. Bridges occupied some super-secret position beyond that of Browder, Eisler, Stachel, Peters—any of the persons whom you have named—so that he was able to be introduced once, never seen again, but present in spirit thereafter, is that it?

A. There were a number of Communists who move and operate in circles of that kind, where they are not permitted to attend certain meetings, where their identity and membership on leading committees of the party are held absolutely secret. Not only are they kept secret, but they use different aliases in order [2485] to cover their movements and confuse the authorities, governmental authorities. That is a common and customary practice in the party.

Q. Regarding the 50-odd people who were present at this meeting in 1936, how many of those persons approximately, had you met before and how many did you see for the first time at this meeting?

A. I had met a number of them many times before at meetings of the National Committee and in connection with my work in the center.

Q. How many had you not met before?

A. Well, there were a few who came from the mine fields of Pennsylvania and some who came from the Deep South—from Alabama, Tennessee—and there were a few from the automobile industry in Detroit that I had never met before.

Q. About how many? A. I don't recall.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. As many as ten?

A. I don't recall how many, but there were some that I did not know before.

Q. Did you actually meet all the people who constituted the National Committee, as you term it, in 1936?

A. Well, all who were present at that meeting constituted the membership of the National Committee. They might have had some more there that were not present. [2486]

Q. Didn't you state under oath in the Yanish case that you did not meet all the persons who were members of the committee in 1936?

A. I don't recall making such a statement.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, rather than disturb the trend of this, I will find that statement of the transcript at the recess.

Q. Mr. Johnson, you said a moment ago that it was explained by this man named Stachel that Harry Bridges would not be able to attend openly these meetings of the National Committee. Didn't I understand you to tell the Court and jury yesterday that Harry Bridges was introduced to the National Committee under the name of Rossi?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you had never seen the man before, correct? A. No.

Q. How was it explained that this man Rossi was in such a strategic position that he could not return thereafter?

A. The name Rossi, the alias Rossi, that was given to Bridges, grew out of the 1934 general strike in San Francisco. It was on the basis of the report given to the National Committee by the district organizer at that time.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this is an answer involving hearsay, which is, of course, contradictory to what the other prosecution witnesses have said about 1934, but it also is not [2487] responsive to this question.

Mr. Donohue: I think it is responsive, if your Honor please. The witness is attempting to say he knew Rossi was Bridges.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we have the testimony of the witness Schomaker on the 1934 strike to the effect that he had never heard of this name Rossi.

Mr. Donohue: Schomaker was not a member of the National Committee, if your Honor please.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: After an enthusiastic report of Sam Darcy—Sam Darcy——

Mr. MacInnis: The question did not call for any hearsay testimony from persons not before the Court. May we have the question read?

(Question read.)

Mr. Donohue: Now he is attempting to explain his answer.

The Court: It calls for an answer, how was it explained. I do not know, but I take it the witness now is going to answer the question as to how it was explained to him.

Mr. MacInnis: At that time, your Honor.

The Court: Yes. I suppose if he leaves out the word "enthusiastic," he might preface his remarks by stating that Mr. Darcy said something. Is that right? [2488]

The Witness: That is right. I was coming to that.

The Court: Leave out the enthusiasm.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor; he has not named Mr. Darcy as one of those present, unless I am in error.

The Court: I am just trying to rule on the objection. I do not know what his answer is. The objection is overruled.

The Witness: I stated that Sam Darey, the district organizer of the Communist Party here in California, at the time of the San Francisco general strike, reported——.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Your Honor, you see this does not go to the same time at all. We are not interested in hearsay testimony about what the man called Darcy may have said to some other person.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I think a re-reading of that question will convince you, as it convinced me in ruling on the objection, that the question itself will permit this witness to give sources, either in writing or oral, as to the reasons underlying the designation of the so-called or alleged alias of Rossi.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Now, he may answer. The question is broad, it is all-inclusive, it is sweeping. Will you read the question, Mr. Reporter?

Mr. MacInnis: The question goes to that time in 1936, how was it explained.

The Court: Let us have the question. We will see how sweeping it is. [2489]

(Question read.)

The Court: You may answer.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this, your Honor? The question calls for any explanation given at that time, 1936, not for some hearsay testimony that we can't possibly probe into.

The Court: I did not ask the question, counsel. You asked it. I can only rule on the text of the question in its ordinary grammatical sense.

Mr. MacInnis: The question goes to that time in 1936. I am not asking for what unknown persons said in 1934, Your Honor

The Court: You may answer the question.

The Witness: How far had I gotten?

(Last answer of the witness read.)

The Witness: He reported to a meeting of the National Committee, which is the customary procedure of leading Communists to report on the activities in their respective districts, gave a detailed analysis of the general strike in San Francisco, and he mentioned that Comrade Bridges had wielded more power than Mayor Rossi in San Francisco and Jay Peters—Jay Peters, as a result of that, snapped his fingers like that, and he said, "That's it! Comrade Rossi. Comrade Rossi." And from that report by Sam Darcy the name Rossi was attached to Bridges, and thereafter whenever reports were given on activities in California by the leading organizers over there, he was [2490] constantly referred to frome time to time by the name of Rossi. And under the name of Rossi his name was put on the list at the 1936 convention.

Q. Was Harry Bridges present at this time when Jay Peters snapped his fingers and said, "That is it!"?

A. No, that was—I think it was not long after the close of the San Francisco general strike.

Q. Mr. Johnson, did you know that in the summer of 1936, Harry Bridges was already under surveillance by the Immigration Service for deportation?

A. I don't know that to be a fact, but I do know that the party—the reason he was given the alias in reference to him at meetings of the National Committee was in order to protect him. It was a question of security, to protect a leading force that they had. They never had a Communist in the position Bridges held out on this Coast. [2491]

Q. Harry Bridges—at least this man whom you saw for the first time and now call Harry Bridges —appeared between fifty-odd people, some of whom he had never seen before and some of whom he had never even met, according to you, and allowed himself thus to be revealed, is that right?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. That was a Party decision. He was called, and he sat in on the meeting, he listened to the reports, he listened to the discussions, and he was introduced, and the decision as to maintaining secrecy with regard to his identification with the Party was made, and it was agreed upon that the past relations which they had where Jack Stachel, Gerhardt Eisler and Earl Browder used to meet him in secret out here during the San Francisco general strike as they had that personal relation in meeting with him at that time—that that was the relationship that should be continued.

Q. How many meetings of the National Committee of the Communist Party do you say you attended in the year 1936?

A. I attended all or almost all of them in 1936.

Q. And they were how many in number?

A. Oh, I imagine about five or six.

Q. And held where? A. New York City.

Q. All held in New York?

A. That is right.

Q. And held where in New York? [2492]

A. As I said before, there were a number of halls, some of which I have mentioned, where National Committee meetings were held.

Q. And how many people approximately attended each of those five or six meetings?

A. Well, there was over fifty members of the—over fifty members of the National Committee, and of course there were district organizers and certain other leading persons who were active in trade unions and mass organizations.

Q. Pardon me. You mean by your last answer that out of the five or six meetings that you attended in the year 1936, that additional to the fifty-odd members of the National Committee there were various organizers and trade union leaders?

A. There were Communist trade union leaders and Communist organizers.

Q. They were parties not members of the National Committee who were invited to the meetings?

A. May I explain to you the procedure of the meetings—the procedure and the policy pursued at the National Committee meetings.

Q. We will come to that.

A. I would like to explain that to you.

Mr. MacInnis: I am interested, your Honor, in an answer to my question, not to a discourse at the whim of the witness.

Would you read the question to the witness, please. [2493]

(Question read.)

Mr. MacInnis: Is that correct?

The Witness: Would you mind reading that last again? I didn't get it.

(Question re-read.)

A. There were district organizers of the Communist Party and Communists who were active leaders in trade unions and Communist Front organizations who were also invited and participated in the discussion.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): About how many of such persons would be present at any of these five or six meetings of the National Committee of which you spoke?

A. I don't recall the exact number of them.

Q. Approximately?

A. Oh, at some—you might have an enlarged—you, see you might have a regular meeting of the National Committee; then you had an enlarged meeting of the National Committee. Now, an enlarged meeting of the National Committee is different from just a strict meeting of the National Committee. Now, specifically, which one do you mean?

Q. I don't know the difference between those terms. You are the one who said that those trade union leaders were also present. Now, what I would like to ask you is this: Were there five or six of them, were there ten of them, twenty of them, or what, in addition to the fifty-odd members of the National [2494] Committee?

A. I stated before that there were two types of meeting of the National Committee. There was the strictly closed session of the National Committee and there were National Committee meetings that were enlarged meetings at which other persons, Communists who were actively involved in mass work, were invited and participated in discussions. So at an enlarged National Committee meeting you would have the members of the National Committee, along with leading Communists in the trade unions, in mass organizations like the International Workers' Order, the peace organizations, the International Labor Defense, the Friends of the Soviet Union, or some of those organizations; you would have some union leaders who would come from the AFL unions who were invited to participate in the discussion. There were none present but active leaders in the Communist movement.

Q. Well, would there be any trade union leaders invited to any of those enlarged National Committee meetings who might not be technically members of the Communist Party?

A. No, no, you had to be a member of the Communist Party, an outstanding leader in the Communist movement, to be admitted to these meetings.

Q. How many of such enlarged meetings of the National Committee did you attend in the year 1936?

A. I don't recall how many enlarged meetings they had during [2495] 1936. They may have had two or three.

Q. And at those meetings would there be approximately fifty members of the National Committee plus the trade union leaders?

A. There would be fifty some-odd members of the National Committee plus these other individuals, individual Communists coming from important sections of Communist activity.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. And at most there would be how many people at such an enlarged meeting?

A. Oh, at an enlarged meeting you might have sometimes 75 or 80 people; maybe more.

Q. Now, in 1936, how closely did this meeting for the election of the National Committee follow the convention of the Communist Party?

A. The election of the—the election of the National Committee took place at the convention.

Q. At the convention? A. That's right.

Q. In other words, it was a part of the official proceedings of the convention itself?

A. That is right.

Q. In 1936, the convention of the Communist Party was openly held, was it not?

A. The convention of the Communist Party was not open—was not an open convention in the sense that everybody was invited. [2496] It was a closed convention, only to delegates of the Communist Party.

Q. Well, tell me this: Wasn't it announced in the general press the actual functions of the convention of the Communist Party in 1936?

A. There may have been a report in the press that there was a convention of the Communist Party being held.

Q. And didn't those reports that were made public state the place where the convention was held?

A. I don't recall what those reports stated. I presume they did if such reports were made.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. They would be made in all of the newspapers of general circulation?

A. I don't know whether all of the newspapers would publish notices of Communist rallies.

Q. I am not speaking of Communist rallies; I am speaking now of the national convention of the Communist Party in 1936.

A. Well, I wouldn't be able to recall whether the newspapers reported about the convention or not.

Q. Well, tell me this: Would there be any place where there would be a written record of the members elected to the National Committee in that year?

A. Well, there possibly is, and I will tell you why I say that: Because at a meeting at the convention they would have [2497] 28 or 30 women stenographers. They took down a stenographic record of every single remark made by every speaker at the convention. They would type up in copies of five on onion-skin paper. After they are typed they are given—they are given to each speaker to correct or make any changes or modifications. After that they are turned in and they are re-typed and they are—some copies are sent to—were sent to the Communist International, and others to various Party commissions in Moscow. This—so—those are the sources that I can say that you can find the actual speeches or you could possibly find the actual speeches that were made. As far as the general resolutions and parts of the summary that is finally edited, they may be published in some of the—in copies of The Communist, or some of the copies of the Daily Worker.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. By The Communist, you mean some official magazine of the Party?

A. That was for years the theoretical organ of the Communist Party.

Q. That is a published magazine called The Communist? A. The Communist.

Q. Was that published monthly?

A. That was published monthly; sometimes every two months.

Q. That was during 1936?

A. I don't know whether it was published monthly or every [2498] two months. It was supposed to come out monthly, but sometimes they would miss a month and they would combine two issues in one, if I recall correctly.

Q. Would that magazine have a list of members of the National Committee of the Communist Party?

A. No, it would not. They never published—they would never publish lists of the members of the National Committee.

Q. And the Daily Worker wouldn't publish that?

A. The Daily Worker would only mention here and there the name of an individual who was engaged in mass work as being a member of the National Committee speaking at such-and-such a meeting, but insofar as giving to the public a list of the persons members of the National Committee is concerned, that is definitely out. That is one of the most closely and guarded secrets of the Communist Party; they wouldn't dare give it to the public.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Coming back to that closely guarded secret again, you say that stenographers were present during that convention?

A. Yes, they always had them. They had them at National Committee meetings, too.

Q. There were stenographers present at this National Committee meeting, is that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. About how many?

A. Well, at the National Committee meeting they would have [2499] possibly a half-dozen stenographers, and they would have the typewriters in an anteroom, and they would take down the speeches stenographically.

Q. Now, in addition to the fifty-odd people who you say were then and there elected to the National Committee, plus the six stenographers, would there be any other persons in the room?

A. No, I didn't say six stenographers at the election of the National Committee. I stated before that they had far more than six stenographers at the convention, because at the convention you possibly have five or six hundred delegates and it is a tremendous amount of work for the stenographers. So they pulled the Communist Party members' stenographers in all the different Party offices and front organizations and bring them over to the convention, and they would do all the stenographic work there, and they would rent typewriters, or whereever they get them from, I don't know, but they bring in a whole flock of typewriters and they worked for hours throughout that entire convention getting that stuff whipped into shape.

Q. So that there would also, in addition to these fifty-odd people, be a group of stenographers in whose hands Harry Bridges may well have placed his fate?

A. No, they wouldn't know him as Harry Bridges, because in the first place, the stenographers did not get—the [2500] stenographers did not get a list of names on which the National Committee members was. In fact, Jay Peters—Jay Peters and Abe Benson very closely guarded every single copy of the list of members of the National Committee. Each copy, if I recall correctly, was numbered numerically. Jay Peters or Abe Benson would walk over to the head of each delegation and present the head of the delegation with a typewritten copy, maybe No. 1 or No. 2, depends on what the number of that delegation was, and he would look—the head of the delegation would look over this list of names; then they would pass it around to the other delegates in that delegation, they would scrutinize it. After they had finished, then Jay Peters would come over and pick up that list. He would follow that procedure in going from one delegation to the other. Abe Benson would do the same thing. After they had collected all of those lists, then the question of voting would come up. A motion would be made that the entire slate be accepted, and everybody would vote. There was never any dissension. That is the principle—that is how it was handled.

Q. These were typewritten lists?

A. Yes, on onion-skin paper.

Q. And what would be done with the notes of the stenographer who prepared those typewritten lists?

A. I don't know what stenographer typed up copies of the lists of candidates for the National Committee. I wasn't there when [2501] it was made up, and I couldn't tell you that.

Q. I don't suppose the stenographers were liquidated after they finished that task?

A. I don't know. They may have been; I couldn't tell you.

Q. But so far as you know——

A. It isn't—forget it.

Q. No. I would like to hear what you were going to say. I don't think we want to forget anything that you are telling us.

Now, Mr. Witness, let me ask you this, and tell me if this refreshes your memory: If I told you that out of the New York Times index one can gain the information that the 1936 convention of the Communist Party was held between June 24 to June 28, would you dispute that?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I can ask him if that refreshes his memory, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I haven't seen the New York Times, and even though it were here, this witness has not said that the convention did not take place——

The Court: He said it was in the warm months.

Mr. Donohue: It was in the warm months of 1936. He certainly couldn't impeach the witness.

Mr. MacInnis: We certainly have a right to bring out when this convention took place.

The Court: You might attempt to refresh his recollection [2502] thereon.

A. Well, I don't recall, as I stated before, the actual dates. I couldn't say that date as a certainty, but I still say it was during the warm months. It was my testimony.; that is all I can remember. That is the best I can recall.

Mr. MacInnis: Not having that record before me, probably I could obtain it if necessary—if you were shown that record—I don't ask you to take my word of the actual date. If you were shown such record in the New York Times Index, would you say that that was probably the date on which the convention was held?

A. That is a supposition that I don't think I am duty-bond to answer.

Mr. MacInnis: But I think, your Honor, he can answer that question without telling us——

Mr. Donohue: It is a supposition. There are several "ifs" in that question, if your Honor please. I don't know whether if, in fact, the New York Times Index were shown to the witness and the New York Times Index has said that convention of the Communist Party was held between certain dates, that would refresh the witness' recollection any more than he can say now that he knows it was in 1936, in the warm months.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me put it to you this way, Mr. Johnson: Do you recall whether or not the Daily Worker, the official Communist newspaper, published the dates of the [2503] convention of 1936?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, on the same ground. If we couldn't rely on the New York Times, I certainly couldn't rely on the Daily Worker. [2503-A]

Mr. MacInnis: I guess you can't rely on anything, Mr. Donohue. Your Honor, it certainly appears to me that if a man is charged with a matter so gross as this upon the testimony of the witness who never saw him before and never saw him since, we certainly have a right to probe into the date.

The Court: He has given an answer. However, I think you might ask him the approximate dates.

Mr. Donohue: If he hands him the New York Times, if your Honor please, in which this appears and asks him, "Does this refresh your recollection as to whether or not these were the dates," I would have no objection, but he is saying, "If I were to show you a copy of the New York Times, and if the New York Times did state this, would that refresh your recollection?"

Mr. MacInnis: Of course, I would have to get those volumes out of the public library, Your Honor, I will get them if necessary.

Q. Similarly, in 1938, if I told you that the official date ascribed to the Communist Party convention was May 28 to 31, would that refresh your memory at all?

Mr. Donohue: I object again, if Your Honor please, on the same ground. Mr. MacInnis telling him so is not any more authoritative than the Daily Worker and certainly not as authoritative as the New York Times.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean I am similar, in between?

Mr. Donohue: Somewhere, yes. [2504]

The Court: Let us assume, for this immediate purpose, Mr. MacInnis' dates are accurate. Let us assume for this particular purpose—and I hope I am not startling you, Mr. Donohue, by any statement of that sort——

Mr. Donohue: Startled, but not shocked. I think it is a fair assumption.

The Court: Let us assume that those dates are accurate.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, may I say this? Haven't we a right to assume in a case of this proportion——

The Court: Go ahead, counsel. Let us assume these dates to be accurate. I assume you have these dates somewhere.

Mr MacInnis: Yes, but I haven't the great big volume in my hand.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Let us assume that.

Q. (By Mr MacInnis): Do those dates refresh your memory in any way?

A. I have stated before, counsel, that I approximated the time. I can not say those dates are the actual dates on which the convention or conventions was held.

Q. Pending verification of the exact convention dates, you are certain that this meeting of the National Committee of the Communist Party took place during the convention?

A. What convention are you speaking of? The 1938 convention?

Q. 1936.

A. The 1936 convention? Do they always hold them? Will you [2505] read that back to me?

Mr. MacInnis: He has already answered that, Your Honor, in the affirmative, that that is when it took place. I do not see how he can now shift his position.

The Court: No, I will allow it—

Mr. MacInnis: I will guarantee that that is in the record, Judge.

The Court: So the record may not be misunderstood, the purpose of the question as to the date, whatever the date may have been, was to attempt to refresh his recollection as to a specific date.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Certainly it was not the intention of the Court to commit the witness as to any given date.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: Nor mine.

The Court: Nor could we commit him. I could not commit him, nor could you. Now, Mr. Donohue has entered an objection. He states in the absence of the record itself the question is improper. I assume you some place have such a record. I do not know.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: We can not assume to indicate to this witness a given date and commit him to a given date by and as a result of that particular process. I am sure Mr. Paisley has some comment on that, haven't you, Mr. Paisley? [2506]

Mr. Paisley: I do not know whether I was following you, Your Honor. I think the date is very important, and I think we have a right to delve into it very deeply, but he says the question has already been answered, and so it seems to me it is repetitive.

Mr. MacInnis: That is fair enough. I will proceed.

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor——

Mr. MacInnis: Don't you gentlemen get in a quarrel among yourselves.

Mr. Donohue: We are not quarreling among ourselves and we are not going to quarrel with you, either. That is not the question before Your Honor. He asked this witness, and I know he would like to forget it——

Mr. MacInnis: No——

Mr. Donohue: We asked this witness another question: Did the meeting of the National Committee which you have been discussing take place during the convention? Then the witness asked him, "Do you mean 1936 or 1938?" My friend then said, "I don't want to hear any more about that. He has already answered the question."

He has not answered the question. I submit we are entitled to have the question answered. Did the meeting take place during the 1936 convention?

Mr. MacInnis: I am going to ask that the Reporter read back the record. It goes back about ten questions and you will [2507] find this witness has already stated the election of the National Committee took place within the scope of the convention days in 1936.

Mr. McMillan: Then why do you go over it again?

Mr. Donohue: He has already answered that. He asked the question. The question remains unanswered on the record, because Mr. MacInnis interrupted the answer.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): ~~Let~~ me ask you this: Do you know where the 1938 convention of the Communist Party was held?

A. It was held in the Hotel Center and various sessions in other places.

Q. Do you know where the election of the National Committee in 1938 was held?

A. If I recall correctly, the election of the National Committee was held in the Hotel Center.

Q. Was it held during the convention?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. The election of the National Committee is always held during the convention.

Q. Always during the convention days?

A. That is right.

Q. And that was true both of 1936 and 1938?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you see Harry Bridges during the 1938 convention?

A. No, I did not. There were so many delegates there I couldn't say whether I saw him or not. I don't recall seeing [2508] him. There were about 700 to 800 delegates there.

Q. As to these numbers of delegates, how many people approximately attended the 1936 convention?

A. Oh, there were maybe—I imagine better than 400, I presume.

Q. Would that have been held in some hall where those people could assemble comfortably?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Where, if you know?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Do you know what hall?

A. Yes. The 1936 convention?

Q. Yes.

A. That was held in Manhattan Center, 34th Street and Eighth Avenue.

Q. That is a public hall, isn't it?

A. That is a big public hall. Anybody can rent it.

Q. It is in a very centrally located district, isn't it? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Right near the Pennsylvania Station?

A. Yes.

Q. There is nothing secretive about that hall?

A. No.

Q. Were there any visitors allowed to that 1936 convention, speaking of ordinary proceedings of the convention held on the floor? [2509]

A. No, there were no visitors allowed at the 1936 convention during the closed sessions. We, of course, had one open session to which the public was invited. That was a huge mass meeting we had in 1936.

Q. Where was that held?

A. I think it was held at Madison Square Garden: if I am not mistaken.

Q. And that holds about how many people?

A. Oh, about 18 or 20 thousand.

Q. Was that hall fairly well filled at the time of the mass meeting of the 1936 convention?

A. I think it was packed, I think, if I recall correctly.

Q. So far as meetings held in Manhattan Center may be concerned, did the ordinary press have any coverage at all of the convention?

A. They don't allow the so-called capitalist press in at the sessions—at conventions of the Communist Party.

Q. So it would be your recollection that there were no articles about the existence of the convention in any of the papers of the capitalist press, as you call it?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. They usually give out press releases to the press, and they are usually prepared by their own Daily Worker correspondents.

Q. So that the general public, at least by reason of these press releases, would have been conscious that a national convention of the Communist Party was in progress? [2510]

A. If they were published, they would be conscious of it.

Q. And by the same token, any investigators of the United States Government would have the same information and the same opportunity to make surveillance of persons who came and went to the convention floor?

The Court: Was that question answered?

Mr. MacInnis: I was straining my ears, but I didn't quite catch it.

The Court: I hope you will not strain your ears. That is one thing I couldn't tolerate.

Mr. MacInnis: Sometimes the sound comes out here and jumps back. Sometimes I have to lean over.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the recess, and may I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any circumstances nor to converse with any person on any subject conneted with the trial and not to form or express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2511]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, concerning the occasion when you say Harry Bridges was presented to a group of fifty-odd people in 1936, did that occasion take place during the 1936 convention of the Communist Party?

A. That meeting—that closed session of the National Committee took place right after—shortly after the election of the National Committee. It was either before the convention adjourned or a day or so following.

Q. It would be within a matter of a day or two at most? A. Correct.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, your Honor, subject to any correction, I would like to advance those dates as being the accurate dates of the convention, and if there is any disposition on the part of the Government to check those dates through what sources they may have available, I would be very happy to stand corrected if any information is in error.

Mr. Donohue: I don't think we can concede. We don't know. I don't know, if your Honor please, and I think we ought to have some record before us to show when those dates were.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, that we must assume that the prosecution, which is at least diligent in this case, must have those records and must have those dates in mind in preparing this case. And all I am trying to do is to save bringing those heavy documents here, because if I am wrong they [2512] can very quickly show it, your Honor.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

What I wanted to do, your Honor, was to offer as the dates of the 1936 convention, subject to any correction; June 24 to June 28 of 1936; and similarly as regards 1938, to offer the dates May 28 to May 31 of 1938.

Mr. Donohue: I object to the offer, your Honor. It may possibly be—I am not being specious about this matter; I do not have the information. It may subsequently be that we can both collaborate and determine when those dates were and enter into a stipulation.

The Court: That is a matter that might be authenticated over the recess period between now and tomorrow morning.

Mr. Donohue: That is possible, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I don't see why not, your Honor.

The Court: You say they appear in periodicals?

Mr. MacInnis: In the New York Times Index, which is my source.

The Court: Is that the source where you got it?

Mr. MaacInnis: Yes. It may well be that the local press in their files would have the same information.

The Court: I think between now and tomorrow morning the matter can be solved.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I think so.

The Court: This witness will be here tomorrow. He will be on call. [2513]

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Now, Mr. Johnson, in mentioning the people whom you say you now recall as those present at the meeting of the National Committee of the Communist Party, you mentioned a man named Hewitt. Is that correct? A. George Hewitt.

Q. George Hewitt? A. Yes.

Q. Was that the man you had in mind?

A. Yes, I think I did mention his name.

Q. Was George Hewitt a member of the National Negro Congress, to your knowledge?

A. George Hewitt was active in the National Negro Congress; I don't know whether he held any official position or not.

Q. Now, George Hewitt is a confessed ex-Communist at this time also, is he not?

A. He is an ex-Communist.

Q. And in the hearings before the Canwell Committee in the State of Washington, in which you appeared as a witness, George Hewitt appeared also, is that correct, along with you?

A. No, he did not appear along with me. He may have been before the committee. He did not appear when I was there.

Q. Do you say that you do not know one way or the other as to whether he was there or not?

A. Well, I understand he was there. You said along with me. [2514] George Hewitt, if I understand, testified either before I appeared or after I appeared, to make the record straight, but he was not in Seattle at the time I was there.

Q. And one of the ends of that particular hearing was an attempt on the part of the State of Washington to take away the job of a professor at the University of Washington upon the ground that he was a Communist; isn't that right?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: Object to the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this is preliminary to a very important matter.

Mr. Donohue: How would he know what the ends of that committee were?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he testified himself, as he has already told us under oath yesterday, before the same committee at the same time in the same hearing, and I am about to come to something very relevant to his credibility.

The Court: You have a transcript of the hearing of the committee?

Mr. MacInnis: Of the Canwell Committee? Oh, yes.

The Court: You have that transcript?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I have that.

The Court: Confront the witness with the transcript.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean to prove that he was there?

The Court: Are you about to lay a foundation for [2515] impeachment?

Mr. MacInnis: I am about to proceed to another matter, your Honor. If there is any doubt that he was there——

The Court: There is no doubt——

Mr. MacInnis: If there is any doubt, I have the volume; it is right here, and I will pass it to your Honor and you will see that this man——

Mr. Donohue: He said he was there, if your Honor please. He hasn't denied he was there. He is asking this witness if he knows what the ends of the Congressional committee were or the State committee.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Mr. MacInnis: In other words, this volume is the un-American Activities report of Washington State, 1948. I have the testimony of this man as well as the other man.

Well, perhaps I did word the previous question improperly, your Honor.

Q. Do you remember this, Mr. Johnson: That the subject of the inquiry at that time was the job of a professor at the University of Washington?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please. If he asks him what the subject of the inquiry as to this witness was, we may not object on the same ground.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this is preliminary.

Mr. Donohue: So what? It should be proper even if it is [2516] preliminary.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson, after that hearing at which both you and Mr. Hewitt testified, the particular professor lost his job, did he not?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I think this is an improper subject——

Mr. MacInnis: This is still preliminary.

Mr. Donohue: That does not justify you making the statement that he may or may not have lost his job.

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask him that first.

Q. Did the hearing have to do with a professor of the University of the State of Washington?

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor will perceive the point. Your Honor, I have to approach it by steps. The question would be meaningless if I came to it directly.

Q. I will ask you this, Mr. Johnson: Subsequently the State of Washington reinstated that professor upon the ground that George Hewitt had committed perjury before the committee; is that not correct?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And, Mr. Johnson, do you know as a matter of fact that a warrant for perjury was issued against [2517] George Hewitt and that extradition papers were sent to the State of New York in an attempt to bring him back for trial upon the crime of perjury in Seattle, Washington?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please, and I again say to your Honor that counsel should be cautioned that if he wants to make testimony or give testimony he ought to take the witness stand. I don't know anything about these matters he is testifying about, or whether they are true or false.

Mr. MacInnis: I dislike surprising you this way.

Mr. Donohue: You are not surprising me. Nothing you do will surprise me.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now Mr. Johnson——

The Court: Just a moment, Mr. MacInnis. The objection is sustained.

Again it appears to be a mode or manner of examination which I think——

Mr. MacInnis: Not on this occasion, your Honor. If you will bear with me for one question, I will demonstrate the connection with this witness——

The Court: By which, as a result of indirection, matters are elicited before the jury which otherwise could not be presented in any form or at all, representing incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial matters. I admonish the jury to disregard the statement of counsel in the form of a question. [2518]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, here is the question that I was approaching by this previous question.

The Court: Are these steps that you would like me to take along this blissful path?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me?

The Court: You asked me to take these various steps along this path up to this juncture. What is the next question?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: The next question is this:

Q. Mr. Johnson, you testified as a witness for George Hewitt in the extradition proceedings held against him in New York, and you testified that the matter for which Hewitt had been indicted upon in perjury was as a matter of fact a true statement, didn't you?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor pleases. I don't know that that is a question. I didn't get the interrogation point at the end.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, did you testify——

The Court: The same admonition to the jury.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Does your Honor mean to the last question or to the one I am about to ask?

The Court: To the last question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, did you testify in the State of New York in the extradition proceeding involving [2519] George Hewitt?

Mr. Donohue: Objected to, if your Honor please. Are we going to try that extradition case?

Mr. MacInnis: No, this goes to testimony of this man given under oath.

Mr. Donohue: Do you want to impeach him?

Mr. MacInnis: Will you read as far as I had gotten, please.

(Question read.)

Mr. Donohue: Object to the question.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis) Continuing): ——that the particular professor of the University of Washington was in New York and identified him yourself as being in New York when it had already been proved in the State of Washington that he was at that time in Seattle?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. Donohue: I have never seen a more objectionable question. I can only object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Objection sustained. The same admonition to the jury.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson, did you testify in the Gerhardt Eisler case? I think you already told us you did.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. Now we are going to try Gerhardt Eisler. I thought we safely put him back behind the Iron Curtain someplace. [2520]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor——.

Mr. Donohue: Or he put himself there by absconding.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, these matters concerning previous testimony of this witness certainly would be admissible to show a common plan or scheme on behalf of the production of testimony. Now, I certainly have the right——

The Court: What was that last statement? I was distracted.

Mr. MacInnis: To show a common plan or scheme in the production of testimony. We have a matter involving another man who this gentleman says is a confessed ex-Communist. We have questions put to the witnses which show that the two of them appeared before the Un-American Activities Committee in the State of Washington; that after the hearing one of them was indicted for perjury in Washington.

Mr. Donohue: Where is that testimony, if your Honor please? Are we trying Gerhardt Eisler or trying Harry Bridges?

The Court: The objection is sustained. [2521]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Let me ask you this: Did you give any false testimony in the Gerhardt Eisler case?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, will you bear with me a moment on this? This witness comes here and purports to identify one of the defendants in this case, a man whom he says he saw for the first time, never met personally, but saw him introduced before 50 people on one occasion, and whom he never saw since. Now, surely I have a right to ask him about identifications that he has made in other cases when he has been called by the Government.

The Court: As I recall the testimony with respect to and pertaining to the Gerhardt Eisler case, he testified in this matter that his testimony in that matter bore upon the several and numerous aliases on the part of or used by Gerhardt Eisler. To that extent, if you desire, if you have their records, you may lay the foundation for any possible impeachment with respect to his testimony in the Gerhardt Eisler case.

Mr. MacInnis: I have, Your Honor, I might say—so Your Honor won't think I am misrepresenting the matter here—I have the Yanish transcript, to which I have already referred several times, and in the Yanish case this man was questioned about testimony he gave in the Eisler case. So it appears from his testimony given under oath in the Nat Yanish proceeding here in [2522] San Francisco in February of 1948.

The Court: If you have any question in the Yanish transcript bearing upon his asserted credibility, that might have a bearing, you might ask the question.

Mr. MacInnis: To refresh the memory of the witness, I would like to ask him to read page 470 of the Yanish transcript, beginning with line 20, up to line 5 of page 471.

Mr. Donohue: Since I do not have that record, may I have a look at it?

(The document was first handed to Mr. Donohue and then to the witness.)

Mr. Donohue: Before the witness is questioned, if Your Honor please, only because counsel has just said this is from page 470 and we have only gone over about twenty of them, may I say to Your Honor, examination on this portion of the transcript which has been added to the witness in no possible way could serve the purpose of impeaching this witness for any purpose he has offered before this Court and for that reason I object to any question being asked him about it. I suggest if Your Honor has any doubt about it as a matter of law or fact that Your Honor read the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I did not suggest that this was an impeaching question.

Mr. Donohue: Then if it is not impeachment, it is not pertinent or material and I object [2523] to it.

Mr. MacInnis: I suggested, Your Honor, that this was to refresh his memory as to what he said. I may then impeach him if his memory is to the contrary. I showed him this particular portion to refresh his memory.

Mr. Donohue: About what he said where or when?

Mr. MacInnis: I will come to that, if I may.

Mr. Donohue: I think we ought to begin with what is first and then we won't get off on a tangent.

The Court: What is your immediate purpose?

Mr. MacInnis: I think there is no question before you now.

The Court: I can't follow you now. What is your immediate purpose.

Mr. MacInnis: My immediate purpose, Your Honor, is to question him about an identification that he purported to make in the Eisler case. I showed him the portion of the testimony in this transcript to refresh his memory on that particular subject, because I want to point out to the witness that in the Eisler case he purported to identify——

Mr. Donohue: Wait just a minute. Let us play the game according to some standard of fair play. Are you going to testify now as to what this man testified to in the Eisler case when there is an objection before the Court?

Mr. MacInnis: This is under oath in the Yanish case.

Mr. Donohue: You are not under oath but you are testifying. [2524]

Mr. MacInnis: This transcript you have stated is correct, it seems to me.

Mr. Donohue: I have stated only to His Honor that I object to your asking any questions about the transcript until the Court decides whether it is offered for the purpose of impeachment or some other purpose, wheupon counsel tells Your Honor what it says.

The Court: Specify the line.

Mr. MacInnis: It begins with a red line marking and goes on to the next page to another red line. I might say, Your Honor, the portion before you is a fragment of the subject matter, and if Your Honor wants to orient himself on the complete subject matter I would refer him to other pages of the transcript, pages 459, 464 and 466.

Mr. Donohue: That is the same fragment handed to the witness, if Your Honor please, that forms the basis of this question.

Mr. MacInnis: There is no question before the Court at this time.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: What objection, Your Honor? There is no question before you.

Mr. Donohue: I objected to the witness being asked any question concerning the subject matter.

The Court: There is no basis in the markings that you [2525] have given to me that might be the possible foundation for any asserted impeachment or contradictions with respect to the case at bar.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that?

The Court: You may be heard at 4:00 o'clock, if you wish.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean not now?

The Court: Yes, because you may have other matters that you may wish to draw to my attention in that transcript to clarify the matter. If that fragment in association with another fragment in association with possibly another fragment, if out of all these fragments I may get the general mosaic of your thinking, it may take longer than one moment of my time here. I think at 4:00 o'clock we will go into it. The witness is to be returned tomorrow morning and I should ilke to have a full and complete analysis of what you have in mind. As it appears to me now, Mr. MacInnis, from the fragmentary excerpt of the transcript I have seen, it appears to me matter which is not altogether clear in the text. Whether it bore on the Yanish case, I do not know.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to explain it now or later.

The Court: At 4:00 o'clock.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in view of the fact that we have asked this witness to return because we have other documents en route, I have no other subject matters that I wish to take up now. [2526]

The Court: We will take that up, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: All right.

The Court: We will excuse the jury then. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the jury will be excused in this matter regularly until tomorrow morning until 10:00 o'clock, in this court. Again I admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions or circumstances nor to converse on any subject of the trial, and not to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(The jury retired from the courtroom and in their absence the following took place:)

The Court: There were several other pages to which you addressed my attention.

Mr. MacInnis: I can tell Your Honor about it. Now, the general purport of the question is this: It certainly ought to be made a matter of inquiry in this matter as to the extent of the powers of observation of this witness. He comes here pretending to loom out of the past, telling us that thirteen years ago——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: Counsel, may I interrupt you momentarily? Would you address your attention to the particular subject matter at hand of excerpts concerning the two men referred to in that particular excerpt? May I have the record here and I will read it.

Mr. MacInnis: You mean the record in the Yanish case? [2527]

The Court: Yes. You said you might orient me to the problem. May I have the text here? What is the page?

Mr. MacInnis: Four hundred and sixty-four.

The Court: The last page I had.

Mr. MacInnis: I think that was 470 and 471. But I understood Your Honor was now going to allow me to tell you the purpose of the examination.

The Court: It is difficult for me to have the purpose of the examination, counsel, until I find precisely the subject matter that you intended to discuss with me. At 470 at line 20:

> "Mr. Gladstein (addressing himself to the witness): Now, Mr. Johnson, when you appeared on the witness stand in the Eisler case a second time, isn't it a fact that you then testified that Tim Buck and Carr were not at the meeting at your house in Buffalo in 1933?
> "A: I testified——" and then there was a break——

> "Q. (This is Mr. Gladstein.) Yes, or no, please.

"A. I can not answer that question yes or no. I can only state that the persons who were present at the meeting were introduced to me as Tim Buck and Carr, and I stated in my rebuttal in the same respect that Gerhardt Eisler was introduced to me as Brown and later as Edward."

Then continuing on after line 5—you mark a red mark through here, the witness continued: [2528]

"It is customary in the party for people to change their names. Some of them have six, seven, eight, nine or ten different names, and someone might go by the name of John Jones in New York and Peter Paul in San Francisco.

"Mr. Gladstein: I move that all that be stricken."

Now, you are laying or attempting to lay the foundation for the possible impeachment of the man. Mr. Gladstein moves that it be stricken. What is before the Court?

Mr. MacInnis: I clearly think Your Honor has not looked very closely at the context. May I tell you what my purpose was?

The Court: I believe I know your purpose.

Mr. MacInnis: Not when you make that remark. I say that in all due respect.

The Court: I have read it, counsel, to you.

Mr. MacInnis: May I tell you what my purpose was?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: I have read the context to you. You see, I have not looked at it closely.

Mr. MacInnis: Not if you think that motion to strike destroys the validity of the offer I was making. May I tell you what the purpose was, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The purpose is this: This witness is brought here supposedly to make an identification. I want to show that in the Gerhardt Eisler case he was put on the stand under oath, [2529] that he was asked to identify from two photographs two persons whom he said he had met once in his life, and it turned out he was in error, and that he later was brought back to the stand to say that his reason for making the erroneous declaration was that Eisler, Browder or some other person had told him that these people were members of the Communist Party, and that the United States Attorney, as appears from this transcript, entered into a stipulation that the identification by the witness Manning Johnson was in error in the Gerhardt Eisler case. Here he comes and makes that identification on an isolated occasion. I certainly think we are allowed to probe into his powers of observation, and if under oath in other cases he has been in error in identifying people whom he says he met only once as a Communist, and it turns out that those were not the people at all, that is a matter that ought to be received by the Court and jury.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Here is my point, however inartfully I try to express it, about the man called George Hewitt. George Hewitt, as this witness tells us——

The Court: Let us take up this matter before we go into Hewitt. Mr. Donohue, may I hear from you on this last matter?

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, in the first place, this witness was not brought here supposedly to make an identification. The witness was brought here to make an identification which he made and still states he made after two days of cross-examination. [2530] I do not know, if Your Honor please, anything about the matter which is in this record except what Your Honor has called to my attention by reading it. Obviously, if it was stricken from the record, it is not in the record. But beyond that, let us assume for the purpose of this discussion that he did make a wrongful identification on some other occasion. Does that mean he is not permitted to make an identification here? Has the fact that a person may have been convicted of an offense ever been admitted for the purpose of proving that he committed another offense, even of the same character? I say to Your Honor, No. 1, if the matter was stricken from the record, it can not be referred to, nor can questions be asked of the witness, because it is as though it was never in the record; No. 2, I say it doesn't make any difference whether on any occasion this witness has made a mistake in identification, but I do not concede that he did, because it is not pertinent in this issue. I most respectfully object to it, as I did before.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I cheerfully concede that part of what the prosecutor says is true, and this is the part: He says that the fact that a man has made a wrong identification under oath in the past does not stop him from making an identification in this case. That is quite true. But the jury should be allowed to see the weight of his identification, and if he has made a false identification in the past, the jury [2531] should be allowed to see how he erred at that particular time. That is the whole point. If I had no transcript at all, I would think I would be entitled to ask him if he made a false identification under oath in a criminal case in the past or in a deportation case, as the matter might be.

Mr. Donohue: I understand, if Your Honor please, the fact of the matter is a misidentification was made by this witness identifying by photograph that when a personal identification was asked of him, he made the personal identification without any error or mistake.

The Court: You see the difficulty that is immediately perceived in the analysis of a problem like this to a court: One, that we have in the Yanish case a reference by Mr. Gladstein to fragments of the case reported in the Gerhardt Eisler matter, and then this court in turn takes a fragment from the Yanish case, and in the light of that fragment assumes to lay the foundation for the possible impeachment of this man or an attack upon his credibility with respect to a transcript that is not before the Court. I think the logic of the situation is immediately apparent, that we could not under any degree of logic or reason or orderly procedure adopt a policy wherein fragmentary parts of a transcript may be taken which in truth were stricken or attempted to be stricken by Mr. Gladstein and assume to lay that as a foundation for an attempt upon the man's credibility with respect to the identification of a [2532] matter wherein he testified in New York City. I respectfully say to you, Mr. MacInnis, to produce the transcript of the Gerhardt Eisler case in New York City so the full text may be obtained. It may well be that he did make a mistake. I do not know. And that he thereafter rectified it. I do not know. You are asking me to guess.

Mr. MacInnis: From Your Honor's comments, it would appear that you think the point is rather attenuated because you have said I am asking you to piece a fragment with another fragment and then figure out what you very complimentarily said was the mosaic of my thinking. Actually, suppose I had no transcript at all. Wouldn't I be allowed to ask this witness if he did not testify in the Gerhardt Eisler case under oath and if he did not under oath make an erroneous identification of another man?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: He would be entitled to the transcript in aid of the clarification, if any there be, with respect to his statements then and there made. I can't see how you could attempt to impeach him with respect to his credibility or as to identification in the Gerhardt Eisler case by and as a result of his testimony given in the Yanish case, which is fragmentary, tenuous and quite insecure, at least from the standpoint of Mr. Gladstein. Mr. Gladstein asked that it be stricken from the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, everyone seems to be proceeding [2533] now upon the theory that I handed the witness that document as grounds for impeachment. I very carefully said to the Court that I was showing him those remarks, those fragments of the transcript to refresh his memory, because I was then going to ask him if he remembered the subject matter. I was then going to ask him if under oath he identified these two men, and then I was going to ask him if under oath he was not brought back to the stand and he did not make any correction.

The Court: Is it now possible to obtain the Eisler transcript? That is a matter of preparation, it would seem to me, that either side might have that transcript. Eisler was tried.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sure the Government has it.

The Court: I am not sure of anything. I do not know.

Mr. Donohue: I suppose it is in Washington.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Your Honor, or in New York. We did not expect to try Eisler again so we did not bring it here.

The Court: Maybe Mr. Eisler will return for another trial.

Mr. Donohue: I wish he would. I am afraid he won't. He knows better. But Mr. MacInnis certainly knew about this Yanish and Eisler matter because he has had that transcript in here for several days. If he wanted to obtain the Eisler transcript, he could have gotten it.

The Court: I am obliged to sustain the objection, Mr. MacInnis. [2534]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I am a little impressed by the last remark on what we should have anticipated. I think, Your Honor, that the secrecy attributed by the witness Manning Johnson to the Communist Party is exceeded only by the secrecy that Mr. Donohue attaches to his list of witnesses.

Mr. Donohue: That is a high compliment.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we do not learn until the witness takes the stand, apparently, as to what his identity may be, or where he comes from. We read in the papers about the great surprise we are going to get from the next witness, and those are the utterances of Mr. Donohue. So I do not know how we could be expected to have that transcript here in advance.

Mr. Donohue: I will tell you how, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Counsel, I will do this. If you ask me, I will detain this witness here under order of the Court for you to produce the Eisler transcript, if you feel you have the basis for a possible impeachment.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you. May I reserve that request until the morning?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: If it is decided that it would be of value, I will make such request. I will not do so unless I think it is of value to the Court and jury.

The Court: The witness will be retained for that purpose.

Mr. MacInnis: We certainly think that is [2535] fair.

The Court: When you have the transcript, I will rule upon it.

Mr. Donohue: May I make one observation?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Hallinan told the jury in his opening statement that we were going to call a man by the name of Manning Johnson. He knew then. That was a month ago.

Mr. MacInnis: I did not think he was going to introduce a man after 13 years.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Hallinan said we were going to call him.

Mr. Hallinan: I didn't think you would have the gall to do so.

The Court: Gentlemen, I have stated what I think is the answer.

Mr. MacInnis: That is fair enough, Your Honor. I have no criticism of that at all. That is fine

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

May I address Your Honor then on the same or a similar matter. Your Honor suggested that I wait with the explanation of the questions about that man Hewitt until we terminated our discussion of the other matter, this other identification. Here was the point. Here is what I wanted to prove by that line of examination. Hewitt and Manning Johnson were both offered as witnesses before the——

The Court: Who is Hewitt?

Mr. MacInnis: Hewitt is this man called George Hewitt, whom Manning Johnson has identified as a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party with himself, whom he has also identified as a member of the American Negro Congress with himself, and who he says is also now a confessed ex-Communist. From his lips we learn that two of them testified before the Un-American Activities Committee in the State of Washington called the Canwell Committee.

Now, I propose to show the following facts by the questions to which objections were sustained. And I confess I may not have made my purpose clear to your Honor.

One of the points of injuiry in that hearing was the charge that a professor at the University of the State of Washington ought to be relieved of his duties because he was a member of the Communist Party. Manning Johnson testified. George Hewitt testified. George Hewitt testified that he saw this professor at a certain Communist meeting in New York at a time which I did not have in mind at the moment. After the hearing the man was discharged from his job as a Communist. In a short time, however, an investigation developed that the testimony had been false, and he was reinstated to his job, a public apology was given him, and George Hewitt was indicted for perjury in the State of Washington. A warrant was then issued for his arrest. And, of course, he had by then departed, [2537] gone back to the State of New York. The ordinary processes of extradition were invoked, and the State of New York had a hearing as to whether or not the witness Hewitt should be sent back for trial on perjury in the State of Washington. So at the hearing Mr. Hewitt appeared, made a special appearance, and said that he had not committed any perjury. He was then abetted by Mr. Manning Johnson, who took the witness stand and testified under oath that he also had seen this Washington professor in the Ctiy of New York at the time in question. It had already been determined in the State of Washington that Hewitt had committed perjury, a public apology had already been made, and a finding had that the professor was at all times in Seattle.

Now, certainly that testimony would show a tendency for complicity and false identifications. It would go to the motives of such a witness who has appeared in so many cases. It would go to his powers of observation. It would go to his tendency to make false identifications. That was the purport of that testimony, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: How do we know anything this man has stated is true; except, if your Honor please, his——

The Court: You mean Mr. MacInnis?

Mr. Donohue: Yes. He has told us, if your Honor please, about a finding of fact in the State of Washington by this committee and a finding of fact in the State of New York on a [2538] removal order. The only way your Honor and this jury can ever know whether the conclusions which Mr. MacInnis draws are true or not is to adjourn this court and let us go up to Washington, call these people and try the case up there, and go on to New York and try the same issue. Obviously we can't try these issues. And what difference does it make, if your Honor please, whether the witness Hewitt committed perjury or not? The question is whether Manning Johnson committed perjury. He is the witness on trial here, or in this trial, not Mr. George Hewitt.

Mr. MacInnis: I can suggest a quicker way, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: Let's have it.

Mr. MacInnis: I would suggest your Honor ask these gentlemen at the prosecution table if they do not have memoranda showing substantially that those facts are true as I have alleged.

Mr. Donohue: I have no memoranda here at this table, if your Honor please, or any other place, none whatsoever, because I didn't expect to try Gerhardt Eisler or to try George Hewitt or some professor up in the State of Washington. We expected to try the three defendants before this bar.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: You have a situation, Mr. MacInnis, twice removed.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: There might be some plausibility to the [2539] presentation had Mr. Hewitt advanced to the stand or subjected himself to cross-examination under conditions similar to or in some wise in keeping with the matter before the Court; but the witness' relationship to Mr. Hewitt in connection with the matters you point out to the Court certainly would not be the proper subject of cross-examination nor a test as to his creditability. They are remote. They are indefinite, speculative and uncertain. Accordingly, I sustain the objection.

Mr. MacInnis: I am fairly sure that the Government will not bring Mr. Hewitt this far West.

The Court: Well, you don't know.

Mr. Donohue: He may get a great surprise one of these days, if your Honor please.

The Court: I don't know what the Government has in mind any more than you do.

We will adjourn until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Thereupon, an adjournment was taken until Thursday, December 15, 1949, at 10:00 a.m.)

December 15, 1949, 10:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in the interest of the record in this case, I want to make several motions now directed at testimony which was given here yesterday over the protest of myself as a cross-examiner, and I want to call Your Honor's attention first to page 2484 of the transcript. All of these motions will be made upon what I think to be the familiar rule that the cross-examiner may choose the subject of the examination and the witness may not enlarge upon that subject by volunteer remarks or by explanations when questions do not call for any explanation. On page 2484 I want to call the attention of the Court to the question on line 7 put by me to the witness. The question is this:

> "But you never saw Harry Bridges thereafter?"
> "The Witness: No, I did not."

And then he continues:

> "And the reason I didn't see him was because——"

and then I interrupted and said:

> "Pardon me, Your Honor. This man can not give a reason as to why he didn't see somebody."

And I continued, and Your Honor finally said:

> "I think he might explain if he didn't see the witness." [2541]

So then the witness made a long, volunteer statement not called for by that very simple question, which was:

> "But you never saw Harry Bridges thereafter?"

It did not call upon him to explain why he did not see him. And so he answered from line 20 on page 2484 down to line 11 on page 2485 giving his hearsay statements about other persons outside the scrutiny of this record, to say the least.

I move the first instance that that entire answer be stricken except that portion of the answer, "No, I did not," which was the answer to the question, and the only answer called for.

The Court: From the text of the question and the answer, I would say in response to your motion, Mr. MacInnis, that implicit in the question, "But you never saw Harry Bridges thereafter," is the right on the part of the witness to explain the reason after giving a categorical answer, and that is the reason that I permitted the answer. It may be observed I said yesterday, 2484, line 18:

> "The Court: I think he might explain if he did not see the defendant."

And then your following question addressed to the witness, after he made this answer:

> "In other words, Mr. Bridges occupied some super-secret position beyond that of Browder, Eisler, Stachel, Peters—any of the persons whom you have named—so that he was able to [2542] be introduced once, never seen again, but present in spirit thereafter, is that it?"

And then he, the witness, Mr. Johnson, made another answer.

Mr. MacInnis: I have not come to that yet. I am referring to the portion which follows the question, which seems to my mind one that calls only for a yes or no answer:

> "But you never saw Harry Bridges thereafter?"

If Your Honor's reasoning upon that could be correct, any answer could call for a speech by any witness on any subject, because I can not think of anything more simple than "But you never saw Harry Bridges thereafter?" It is another way of saying, "Did you ever see Harry Bridges again?" The witness then tells us, giving us a hearsay statement about the activities of other persons, why it was that he did not see Bridges again.

The Court: You speak of hearsay. I am not inclined to agree with that statement for the reason that the witness stated on page 2484, line 20,

> "The Witness (That was Mr. Johnson.): At the National Committee meeting, at which Harry Bridges was introduced to the membership, we gave him a big ovation. He was introduced by Jack Stachel, who made brief remarks. After his remarks Jack Stachel said to the members of the National Committee that in the future—in that future that Harry Bridges would not be brought to members of the [2543] National Committee as a security reason."

And so forth, and assigned the reasons, all part and parcel of that asserted ovation, and the consequent tribute paid to Mr. Bridges and the reason of the security, all part and parcel of the same event.

Mr. MacInnis: If Your Honor will begin with line 5 on page 2485, you will see what I mean by the hearsay statement and matters that were not possibly part of the same transaction beginning with the word "Furthermore," down to line 15. That is merely a commentary by the witness and his opinion.

The Court: For all that appears commencing with line 5 on page 2485, it may well be a part and parcel of the same conversation on the part of Mr. Stachel, because of the fact that the Communists on the West Coast were constantly under police surveillance and they would not make a move without being constantly checked, that in order to safeguard the key people that the party had in the labor movement on the Pacific Coast that Bridges would not be asked to come into any part of these meetings."

Mr. MacInnis: I just want to make the record in connection with Your Honor's ruling. [2544]

The Court: I am content with the ruling I made yesterday.

Mr. MacInnis: There wasn't any ruling yesterday, because I didn't make a motion to strike at the time. I think the rules require me to make the motion to strike after the testimony is in the record. That is what I am doing now.

The Court: All right, sir. The motion is denied.

Mr. MacInnis: Calling your attention now to page 2487, I asked a question which your Honor later characterized as "all-embracing," on line 17:

> "Q. How was it explained that this man Rossi was in such a strategic position that he could not return thereafter?"

We had some colloquy as to whether a volunteer answer could then be given going into matters allegedly taking place in 1934, all of them outside the presence of the defendant. Your Honor said that the question was all-embracing, and I added to the question on two occasions, on pages 2488 and 2489, that the question goes to that time in 1936. Your Honor, nevertheless, permitted the witness to make a detailed answer. He begins with line 7, page 2489, to line 9, and he continues again on line 15 of 2490, and he continues there to line 3 of page 2491. Now, we move to strike that answer as constituting hearsay, certainly unfair under any rule of discretion that ought to protect the defendants at bar, who are presumed to be innocent. And we move that that answer be stricken in its entirety. In other words, your Honor, conceding that [2545] your criticism of my question might be a correct one, considering and conceding that the cross-examiner may have asked too sweeping a question, if an unfair answer based upon hearsay, naming people not before the Court, discussing events into which the cross-examination can't possibly probe, comes into the record, certainly the matter ought to be stricken and these defendants not held accountable for pure hearsay.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, one correction for the record. I did not assume to criticize your question then, nor am I criticizing it now. I was asked by you to make a ruling on your question.

Mr. MacInnis: I appreciate that.

The Court: I certainly did not assume to criticize it.

Mr. MacInnis: I am not putting it that way, your Honor.

The Court: The question was at page 2487, line 17:

> "How was it explained that this man Rossi was in such a strategic position that he could not return thereafter?"

The witness then spoke of Rossi and continued over. Then you again, Mr. MacInnis, at line 10, page 2489, interrupted, and you said: "We are not interested in hearsay testimony about what the man called Darcy may have said to some other person."

Now, addressing ourselves to the question again: "How was it explained that this man Rossi was in such a strategic position that he could not return therafter?"

Mr. MacInnis: That question, if I may interrupt your Honor, had to do with the matter on which the witness was [2546] being questioned, and that was this isolated occasion in which he says he saw Harry Bridges for the first time and that was in a group of fifty people, that Bridges was introduced under the name of Rossi. It went to that transaction alone. It did not go to 1934. It did not go to what anybody else said any other time. The question was amplified at the top of page 2490. I said, "May I say this, your Honor? The question calls for any explanation given at that time, 1936, not for some hearsay testimony that we can't possibly probe into."

The Court: I said at line 14, page 2489:

> "The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I think a re-reading of that question will convince you, as it convinced me in ruling on the objection, that the question itself will permit this witness to give sources, either in writing or oral, as to the reasons underlying the designation of the so-called or alleged alias of Rossi. Now, he may answer."

I think, Mr. MacInnis, that the motion should be denied in the exercise of sound discretion. Accordingly, it is denied.

Mr. MacInnis: The final motion in this request, your Honor. We call your Honor's attention to page 2492 of the transcript in which the question appears at the top of the page:

> "Q. Harry Bridges —at least this man whom you saw for [2547] the first time and now call Harry Bridges, appeared between fifty-odd people, some of whom he had never seen before and some of whom he had never even met, according to you, and allowed himself thus to be revealed, is that right?"

Now, the answer is pure hearsay. The answer goes from line 6 down to line 15. And we move that that answer be stricken as well.

The Court: The answer was: "That was a Party decision. He was called and he sat in on the meeting, he listened to the reports, he listened to the discussions, and he was introduced, and the decision as to maintaining secrecy with regard to his identification with the Party was made,"—integrated as a part of that general meeting—"and it was agreed,"—again as part of that meeting—"upon that the past relations which they had where Jack Stachel, Gerhardt Eisler and Earl Browder used to meet him in secret out here during the San Francisco general strike, as they had that personal relation in meeting with him at that time—that that was the relationship that should be continued."

The motion is denied.

You may call the jury.

(The jury was brought into the courtroom.)

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Manning Rudolph Johnson, heretofore sworn. [2548]

MANNING RUDOLPH JOHNSON resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Now, may it please the Court, I had a stenographer make copies from the New York Times in the San Francisco Library as to the dates and reports of the 1936 convention of the Communist Party. I would like to show this memorandum to the prosecutor and see if some agreement can be reached as to the facts of these dates.

Mr. Donohue: I don't know what the purpose of asking me to read the memorandum on that paper was, if your Honor please, so——

The Court: I stated last evening that I hoped that counsel on both sides might agree upon a date or dates.

Mr. Donohue: In the first place, if your Honor please, the Government is perfectly willing to stipulate as to what, from a comparison of our records, would indicate was the date or were the dates upon which this 1936 convention was held. However, the memorandum which counsel handed me does not agree with the dates as I have them from our own records, and it seems to be more than a memorandum of dates. It seems to be excerpts from some newspaper publication. Obviously I couldn't concede either that these are excerpts from a newspaper——

Mr. MacInnis: What was the disparity between your date and ours?

Mr. Donohue: Because, your Honor,——[2549]

Mr. MacInnis: What do you say are the dates the 1936 Communist Party convention was held upon?

Mr. Donohue: I can't say, except that our records indicate, if your Honor please, that the 1936 national convention of the Communist Party opened in the Manhattan Opera House at 311 West 34th Street, New York City, on the 24th day of June.

Mr. MacInnis: We agree to that.

Mr. Donohue: The first figure here on your list was the 25th of June.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. Any newspaper item of the 25th of June would, of course, show something that happened the day before.

Mr. Donohue: I assumed that was so.

The Court: We have the date of commencement.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, our records show the final session was held at Madison Square Garden on Saturday, the 26th day of June, 1936.

Mr. MacInnis: In the first place, that was not a Sunday. Sunday was the 28th, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I think I had better put on my glasses, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: Maybe that is the 28th. The 28th day of June, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: The 28th? [2550]

Mr. MacInnis: Then we are in perfect accord, your Honor. There is no disparity at all.

Mr. Donohue: There is a disparity because——

Mr. MacInnis: Where? Show me the disparity.

Mr. Donohue: Because the first date you have on your sheet shows the 25th and the last date you have shows the 29th.

Mr. MacInnis: Of course, the 29th——

Mr. Donohue: The fact is it was the 24th and 28th.

Mr. MacInnis: The date on this page is the 29th. The article talks about that meeting of the 28th of June on the last day of the session.

The Court: Are we settled on this matter? The proceedings commenced on the 24th of June?

Mr. Donohue: So I am informed, your Honor.

The Court: And they terminated on the 28th of June?

Mr. Donohue: So I am informed, your Honor.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson, are you familiar with a publication which was called the Western Worker?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary to establishing something, your Honor.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I recall a publication called the Western Worker that was published by the Communist Party on the West Coast during the early '30's. [2551]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): It was a Communist Party publication, is that correct?

A. Yes, if I understand correctly, it was a Communist Party publication.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we have obtained last night from the defunct offices of that publication the issues of those dates, and I want to show them to the witness for another purpose. I am going to call his attention to two things (exhibiting documents to counsel).

The Court: Is there a particular article you had in mind? I notice counsel going over the whole page. Is there any particular article?

Mr. MacInnis: They are reading the whole paper. Oh, that is all right. People are naturally curious about these things.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, we are not reading the whole paper. We are reading the article to which our attention was directed. And I might say to Mr. MacInnis that we have a complete file of the Western Worker, so I do not see the publication for the first time.

Mr. MacInnis: So I was wondering after thirteen years of preparation why they would be reading each column at a time, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: You will find lots of reasons why before [2552] we finish, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in view of the last statement of Mr. Donohue, which I suppose we can take as a stipulation, I would imagine that the Government also has a complete file of the Daily Worker, the official Communist paper, which would also enlighten us as to any matters of date which might come up in this controversy.

The Court: You might ask counsel.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me?

Mr. Paisley: You didn't hear me that time.

Mr. MacInnis: No; you started in the middle of a sentence that time.

Mr. Paisley: I am one up on you this time.

Mr. MacInnis: I wanted you to finish. Every time he starts calling me a name he drops his voice, I look over, and I do not hear the rest. [2553]

Mr. MacInnis: I will ask, please, that the Clerk could display to the witness what appears here as a copy of the newspaper entitled "Western Worker," entitled "Western Organ of the Communist Party, Inc.," dated San Francisco, California, Monday, June 29, 1936. I would like to ask him to look at the date, the masthead and the headline of this first page, and then turn, if you will, to page 2 of the same paper and look at a paragraph which is in bold face, which I will mark with two red dots. I will ask you if you will look at this and I will see if these matters refresh his memory, Your Honor.

I might say, Your Honor, I have no objection to the witness reading the text, but the only matters I was going to call his attention to were two, and they were rather small.

The Court: On the succeeding page.

Mr. MacInnis: There is one paragraph, the headline and the date. Those were the only two things I called his attention to.

The Court (To the Witness): Did you follow counsel?

The Witness: No, I thought he meant for me to read——

Mr. MacInnis: He may if he wants. He may read the whole page if he wishes.

The Witness: I am only reading that which pertains to the convention. I thought that is what you called my attention to.

Mr. MacInnis: I was going to suggest that you read the masthead, the date, the headline of the paper, [2555] and then the paragraph on page 2 that I marked in red.

Q. Mr. Johnson, having established by agreement between the prosecution and the defense that the 1936 convention of the Communist Party took place in New York between the dates of June 24th and June 28th, I want to ask you now these questions: Do you recognize the paper just now shown you?

A. That is the first time I have ever seen a copy of the Western Worker. It was published in California.

Q. Was it known to you to be at least a semiofficial Communist paper?

A. I recall it as being one of the papers published by the Communist Party on the West Coast.

Q. By the Communist Party itself?

A. I understand that.

Q. Did you read the headline on the date of Monday, June 29, 1936?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. Of what probative value has the headline of a newspaper?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: I think Mr. MacInnis said he desired to refresh the witness' recollection.

Mr. Donohue: On what, if Your Honor please?

Mr. MacInnis: May we proceed to that without your assistance?

Mr. Donohue: I think we ought to know so you will proceed in the right direction. [2555]

The Court: Has the witness' recollection been refreshed?

The Witness: I accept the date as that the Government accepted or agreed upon.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Were there in fact 750 delegates at the Communist convention?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. The witness has testified, as I recall—I could be in error—there were 300, 400, 500—I don't know what. Is he seeking to impeach him by a headline?

Mr. MacInnis: Merely to refresh his recollection as to whether there were 750.

Mr. Donohue: Present——

The Court: In Madison Square Garden.

Mr. Donohue: There were 25,000 at that hearing. He said the Madison Square Garden was filled at the final day. But you can't impeach a witness by the headline of a newspaper.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the memory of the witness can be refreshed by any memorandum.

The Court: We agree on that principle.

Mr. Donohue: If I had asked him, if Your Honor

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

please, if reading the headline refreshed his recollection of the number of delegates present, I would not object, but he says to the witness in front of the jury, reading the headline, "The headline says 750 delegates. Does that refresh your recollection that there were that many there?" [2556]

Mr. MacInnis: It sounds as if he wants me to put the verb in a different place in the sentence.

Mr. Donohue: No, I think he ought to ask the question in the right form.

Mr. MacInnis: I will try to do that.

Q. Having read this headline in the paper, is your memory refreshed as to the number of delegates present at the Communist Party convention in 1936?

A. As far as I am concerned, I stand on by previous testimony, not on the statement of the headline in the Western Worker, because it has always been customary for the Communist Party to exaggerate the figures of persons present. They never put the facts about things straight in any publications. I have done it and every Communist has done it.

Q. Mr. Johnson, did I understand you to say that Madison Square Garden was filled at the final meeting of this convention?

A. I said the Madison Square Garden was packed.

Q. When that fact is repeated in this paper, does it become a lie?

A. I don't believe anything that is published in the Western Worker or the Daily Worker, either one.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. You say Madison Square Garden was filled. You say also these papers always exaggerate. If both the paper and you say that Madison Square Garden was filled at that meeting, are you both [2557] telling the truth or are you both now exaggerating?

Mr. Donohue: He is arguing with the witness, Your Honor.

The Court: It is argumentative. Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, was the final session of this convention held on Sunday at Madison Square Garden as a mass meeting?

A. There was a mass meeting held at Madison Square Garden, a public mass meeting at that particular time, and I think I so stated in my testimony.

Q. Is it the truth, Mr. Johnson, to the best of your memory now, that the election of the National Committee of the Communist Party in 1936 was held upon Sunday, the 28th day of June of that year?

A. I do not recall whether the committee was elected on Saturday, Sunday or Monday. All I know, it was elected some time during the course of the convention.

Q. Is your memory refreshed by reading the paragraph that I have marked in red on that subject?

A. I would not trust my memory as far as the Western Worker is concerned.

Q. Is it true that the National Committee of the Communist Party was elected in the open session in Madison Square Garden?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, to counsel reading from a newspaper and asking questions.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: I was not reading from a [2558] newspaper then.

Q. Is it true, Mr. Johnson,——

A. The National Committee of the Communist Party was not elected at the general mass meeting called in Madison Square Garden. The general mass meeting called in Madison Square Garden was really a mass meeting called of Communists, Communist sympathizers and fellow travelers. It had nothing to do with the business procedures of the national convention.

Q. How many persons in all did you say were present in Madison Square Garden?

A. As far as I am concerned, Madison Square Garden holds between 18 and 20 thousand people—not more than 20,000, according to my understanding of its capacity. You can check that very easily in the World Almanac with regard to capacities of halls. Whether there were more than that there, I doubt it, because there are certain fire regulations which cover that. They only allow a certain number of people in a building. So I can't say whether the figures of the Western Worker are correct or my estimate—I can only estimate on the basis of my own ability of estimating a crowd or group.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, as to the balance of the matter that we discussed, I am expecting some deliveries by mail.

The Court: Yes.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: I haven't anything in my hand.

The Court: All right, Mr. MacInnis. This witness will [2559] stand in readiness at the call or notice of the Clerk of the Court or the marshal.

Mr. Donohue: Will you remain just a moment?

The Court: You may cross-examine, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I do not want to cross-examine. I have a motion to make with respect to his testimony.

The Court: Are you finished with the witness on the stand?

Mr. Donohue: I have one question I want to ask, if I may, if Your Honor please.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Johnson, you were asked by Mr. MacInnis whether or not you had ever met Nat Yanish, about whom we have heard so much and your answer was no. A. That is right.

Q. And you were also asked whether or not you had met several of the other persons in whose deportation hearings in Los Angeles you had also testified for the United States, and in each of those instances you said again you had never met those persons.

A. That is correct.

Q. While you were testifying in the Nat Yanish case or in any one of the other cases, were you ever asked the question as to whether or not you can identify the respondent? A. No, I was not. [2560]

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think we should have the same ruling. It seems to me this colloquy has been arranged.

The Court: The answer may go out.

Mr. Donohue: What do you mean, "this colloquy has been arranged."?

Mr. MacInnis: You have gone over this matter with the witness.

Mr. Donohue: Don't you judge all persons by your own conduct.

Mr. MacInnis: I will tell you why I make that judgment. From time to time I asked a question about a transcript and this gentleman arose and said the rule was the witness had to be confronted with the transcript, but there is apparently some other rule when he wants to ask the witness about whether he was asked a question. From time to time I have made reference to another hearing and Your Honor has agreed with counsel that the mode of procedure was to present him with a transcript, and I have been barred from asking any further questions. The same man who so zealously tried to have that rule enforced now is trying to ask a blanket question without such rule. I suggest that is entirely improper in accordance with the rule he enunciates himself.

Mr. Donohue: I do not make the rules, as Your Honor well knows, but what Mr. MacInnis is trying to show to Your Honor is that where a witness is sought to be impeached by prior testimony in [2561] another proceeding, the witness is entitled to be presented with the transcript of that proceeding.

The Court: May I have the Zamora case, Mr. Mitchell?

Mr. Donohue: I am not seeking to impeach this witness, if Your Honor please. He was asked by Mr. MacInnis whether or not in these proceedings he had ever identified any one of the respondents and I think I have a right to ask the witness whether he was ever called upon to identify those respondents.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, you asked me the other day for the decision in which Judge Garrecht participated and spoke for the Circuit Court, the Circuit Court of our Circuit. That was the case of Zamora v. The United States, 122 Fed. 2d. 631, with particular reference to 634, which had to do with a comparable situation as in the art case, referred to by Mr. Hallinan, the preliminary hearing and the like, and the Court was very explicit to set forth the rule which I adopted. Now, apart from the Zamora case, you have an objection.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: I have lost sight of the question.

Mr. Donohue: The question was, if Your Honor please, whether or not in his testimony in the Yanish case or any of the other like cases in the City of Los Angeles he was ever asked to identify the respondent Nat Yanish or any one of the other respondents. And that again results from a question asked on cross examination yesterday by Mr. MacInnis of this [2562] witness, "Did you ever identify or had you ever seen Nat Yanish or any one of these other respondents before you testified in the proceeding?"

The Court: I think the record is clear without any further query about it—at least my recollection of the record is that the witness testified that he had appeared by stipulation.

Mr. Donohue: Not in the Yanish case. In that case he personally testified. I asked him only whether in so testifying he was ever called upon to identify Nat Yanish.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Donohue: Now, since the question was raised by Mr. MacInnis, if Your Honor please, I ask Your Honor's permission to ask the witness this question:

Q. Mr. Johnson, from the moment that you left that witness stand yesterday afternoon until you took the stand this morning, tell His Honor and the members of this jury whether you have ever spoken a single word to me or I to you.

A. I have not spoken a single word to you. In fact, I didn't say good morning when you were standing in the hallway.

Mr. Donohue: You may have the witness.

Recross Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Johnson, have you seen anybody connected with the prosecution in this case?

A. I have not. [2563]

Q. No one walked with you from the room yesterday?

A. One of the agents of the Immigration, who has been going with me constantly since I have been here, is the only one I have been associated with.

Q. What is his name, Mr. Johnson?

A. I really don't know his name. I think he is here.

Q. You say he has been going with you ever since you have been here, is that right?

A. Well, he has been with me most of the time. There have been two or three of them with me.

Q. Will you point out whether those men are in the room at this time?

A. I don't know. There are so many people in the room, I can't see all of them back there.

Q. Can you point out any of these two or three men who have been with you constantly, as you put it?

A. I can't see them all from here, unless Your Honor permits me to get off the stand to do so.

Q. Can you give us the names of any of these people?

A. Well, I was with Mr. Meyers. He is an immigration inspector.

Mr. MacInnis (Turning to the audience): Is Mr. Meyers in the room?

The Court: If Mr. Meyers is in the room, he might arise.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Meyers identified himself in one of the previous interviews. [2564]

The Court: There is Mr. Meyers. Is he the gentleman? The Witness: Yes.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

The Court: The witness has identified Mr. Meyers.

Q. Mr. MacInnis: Is he the man who has been with you constantly?

A. Yes, he has been with me constantly.

Q. Who are the other two men?

A. There was one other. I don't recall his name. He was introduced to me.

Q. Do you see him now?

A. I don't know. I can't see him.

Q. He was with you but he was not introduced to you?

A. He was, but I don't recall—he possibly was introduced to me.

Q. Was he introduced to you within the past few weeks while you have been here?

A. I have met him since I have been here.

Q. But you do not now remember his name?

A. No, I don't recall his name. I met so many people since I have been here. Unless I constantly associate with people for a length of time or they do something outstanding that warrants me remembering their names, there is no occasion to—you might introduce me to any person in the courtroom today, and if there is no reason for me to remember the name, I wouldn't.

Q. I understand. Do you remember the name of the [2565] third man? A. No, I do not.

Mr. MacInnis: That is all.

Mr. Donohue: I have no further questions, your Honor.

The Court: The witness may step down.

Mr. Hallinan: Particularly with regard to the testimony of this witness and other witnesses on the matter of cross examination, Your Honor, we have a motion to make. The witnesses by the rulings of the Court have been so protected, shielded from examination as to deprive the defendants of that necessary weapon, so that it has been in effect a matter that the defendants have been prevented from properly cross examining the witnesses, and particularly this last witness, were allowed to make speeches and arguments, bringing in hearsay and inadmissible matters that could not have been introduced on direct examination. The defense attorneys have been constantly assailed, quarreled with, argued with by the witnesses, assailed by the prosecution, and when we turn for relief from the bench, far from procuring it, we are assailed by the bench. We have been constantly on the defensive defending ourselves. We have had to apologize to make explanations on perfectly proper lines of cross examination we have endeavored to open. Under the criticism of the Court, we have been required to abandon whole lines of inquiry, to permit witnesses to leave the stand without being discredited by things that ordinarily tend to discredit them.

Now, we know that the jury is fair and impartial, that it wants to give a fair and impartial hearing, but the jury is influenced and always is influenced in such matters by the attitude and demeanor of the Court. They look to the Court for fairness [2566] and impartiality, and they base their own judgment to a large extent upon what the Court says and does.

Now, throughout the progress of the case, and especially the testimony of this witness, the situation has so deteriorated that it is obvious that it is no longer possible to obtain a fair and impartial decision of the case. The statements made by the Court to counsel on cross examination, the protection that has been afforded the witnesses, the permission given the witnesses to make speeches, the witness seizing upon a pretext of explaining an answer that did not call for any answer, are such as necessarily prejudice the jury against the case of the defendants.

Now, we have spent five weeks in trying the case and I dislike exceedingly to be driven into the situation that I am now required to adopt, that is, that we now move, if the Court please, that a mistrial be declared in this case, and that the case be remanded for retrial before another Court and another jury.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, may I have any response that you may offer?

Mr. Donohue: Well, it would seem to me, if Your Honor pleases, that the very words which counsel has spoken indicates the necessary answer which this Court must make. I am not at all surprised by this motion on the part of counsel. If there be any element of surprise at all, it is only because he [2567] makes it somewhat earlier than I had anticipated. His plan or his scheme is apparent. The United States has produced at least seven major witnesses in this prosecution. The testimony of these witnesses was not known and could not have been known by the defendants. They now have the advantage of knowing a major portion of the United States Government's case. They are unhappy about it, and of course, it is their hope that Your Honor would be misled by the unfair and untrue characterization of the conduct of the trial by Your Honor, as stated by Mr. MacInnis. No skilled lawyer has ever in his experience, I am certain, seen witnesses called by the United States subjected to more severe, punishing, cruel, continuous and relentless cross examination, in which we have sought, except in instances where we thought it was our duty, not to interfere and in which Your Honor in the sound exercise of his official and judicial discretion has allowed the widest possible latitude. Wouldn't the prosecution of all cases end if counsel for the defendants charged with crime can exercise their pique because evidence is produced which tends to prove the charges contained in an indictment and remove themselves and their clients from the necessary consequences of that proof by saying, "We have been criticized by the prosecution. We have been criticized by the witnesses. We have been criticized by the Court." Of course, if Your Honor pleases, in the exercise of your sound judicial discretion you will forthwith and without [2568] hesitation overrule the motion of Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, if I may be heard further: While Mr. Donohue, who is a specially appointed prosecutor in this case, is not an officer of the United States Government, he is still held to the same rules of conduct that would apply to the United States Attorney and the regularly constituted officers charged with presenting cases before jurors and any statement made by him, such as he just made, constitutes further grounds to support the motion that I made on the basis of the unfair and untrue characterizations, the plan, scheme and so forth. Now, we have been anxious to finish this case in as calm and judicial a manner as possible.

Mr. MacInnis—I will not speak for myself, although I must say that I have never come in for such criticism as I have heard in this matter—Mr. MacInnis has a high reputation for integrity, for ability, conducting his cases in a calm and dispassionate way. I think he showed it under great stress and difficulty throughout this trial, and yet there has been that same overlying menace by the Court. Questions which he asked, which if objectionable, would ordinarily be disposed of by a mere suggestion of the Court that the question was not proper or sustaining an objection, or even going to the extreme of directing the jury to disregard it, have been characterized by the Court in the presence of the jury in terms that, to say the least, were not deserved. Mr. MacInnis has not [2569] made any strong effort to defend himself from the statements. The Court has constantly, even in passing by my situation, made statements that contained very thinly veiled threats, so that the net effect, if the Court please, is that the independent presentation of the case by officers of the Court, which we are, is so hampered and has been so hampered that it is my opinion at this time that it is no longer possible to obtain a fair and impartial decision in this case. We haven't any regard for these witnesses that counsel suggests. Under ordinary circumstances we would be inclined to treat the entire case that they have presented with the greatest contempt. But under the circumstances their statements, their actions, supported and bolstered by the attitude that the Court has adopted toward us, is such as to compel us, in the interests of our clients, to make a motion that I have addressed and to move for a mistrial.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, in the light of the fact that Mr. Hallinan is not making in support of a legal motion a legal argument, that the jury be excused, if there be any more continuance of the trend of the discussion that has thus far taken place and that this matter be discussed in the absence of the jury.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan did not ask for the excusal of the jury in the first instance, and of course, I did not anticipate nor could I anticipate the nature of his motion. [2570]

Mr. Donohue: Nor could I, Your Honor.

The Court: The remarks of counsel now have been concluded. I might say that I shall not come to my own defense certainly in the trial of this case, for I feel that I need no defense nor excusal of my conduct, either in the pretrial stages of this case or in the actual trial thereof. From the impanelment of this jury to and including this very moment, now 11:08 a.m., I have attempted to conduct this trial in an orderly, dispassionate, judicial manner. I believe I have succeeded. However that may be, it is only proper for this Court to deny the motion for mistrial and at this juncture take our morning recess.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the morning recess. I admonish you not to discuss this case with any person nor suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial and not to form or express an opinion thereon until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2571]

The Court: You may proceed, Mr. Donohue. Call your next witness, please.

Mr. Donohue: We have sent for him. He will be here in half a moment, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

year. After that I went to newspaper work and was associate editor of a small monthly humorous magazine called Pearson's Paper, formerly called The Fool Killer. Then in 1923 I went to work on a daily paper, the Statesville Sentinel.

Q. Where was that paper published?

Q. Now, prior to the time in 1924 when you joined the United States Army had you become a member of or interested in any organization?

Q. Will you tell us when and what organization.

A. About the age of fourteen I became a member at large and active in the Young People's Socialistic League.

Q. And where?

A. While living in North Carolina I became a member at large, [2575] the national headquarters being located in Chicago. Later I dropped out of that organization and joined another organization of which I became a member of the national committee known as the Young Democracy. I had contact in around 1920 with members of the Communist Party and the Communist Labor Party, but did not become a member.

Q. That is, up until the time you had joined the Army in 1924 you had not become a member of the Communist Party? A. That is correct.

Q. Where did you join the United States Army?

A. I joined the United States Army at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Q. And after your enlistment where did you go?

A. To Hawaii, to Scofield Barracks.

Q. Can you tell us approximately when it was that you reached Hawaii?

A. I reached Hawaii about the 1st day of August or the last day of July of 1924.

Q. And how long did you remain in Hawaii?

A. I remained in Hawaii approximately one year, leaving in August of 1925.

Q. And when you left Hawaii in August of 1925, where did you go?

A. To the United States Army disciplinary barracks in San Francisco Bay.

Q. Was that on Alcatraz Island?

A. Yes. [2576]

Q. During the period of a year when you were in Hawaii as a member of the Army, were you a member of any organization other than that of the United States Army? A. I was.

Q. Will you tell us of what organization you were a member and in what activities you engaged.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. We object to that, if the Court please, as not the best evidence and calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I was a member of the Hawaiian Communist

League and was a member of the executive committee of that organization.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): In what activity?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. When was this, in what year?

The Witness: This was in the year of 1925 I joined, in February of 1925.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): In what activity did you engage while a member in this organization and while in Hawaii?

Mr. Hallinan: We object to that, if the Court please, as being acts done between third persons, no foundation laid, and it has not been shown to have any connection with the defendants or that they were present or knew anything about them.

The Court: The objection is overruled for the reasons heretofore indicated in the record. Will you stipulate with counsel as you have in the past?

Mr. Donohue: I shall be happy to, if your Honor please.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, will you so stipulate?

Mr. Hallinan: Then we will have the same stipulation that has applied to these other witnesses as to the res inter alios acta, and that the objection need not be repeated to each question.

Mr. Donohue: So stipulated, if your Honor please.

The Court: The jury is accordingly instructed that the matters testified by this witness with respect to his individual activities in the Hawaiian Communist League in or about 1925 and thereafter, and the internal operations of the League, if he so testifies, are not binding on the defendants or either or any of them at this juncture.

(Question read.)

A. In an effort to recruit soldiers serving in Hawaii as members of the Hawaiian Communist League, of propagating—of carrying on propaganda among them in behalf of Communism, of writing a letter to the Executive Committee of the Communist International asking for affiliations, and also writing signed letters which were published in the Honolulu Star Bulletin and the Honolulu Advertiser.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): In consequence of those activities were you tried and convicted in Hawaii by a general court-martial of the United States Army?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. I object to that as [2578] calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness and not the best evidence.

Mr. Donohue: I think he had the best evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: The reasons for the trial and conviction.

The Court: For what purpose is that shown?

Mr. Donohue: I think, if your Honor please, since the purpose or since the activities in which he was engaged in soliciting among the armed forces members of the Communist Party were the basis of the charge upon which he was tried by the general court. I think that is pertinent in order that the jury may understand, in evaluating the testimony of this witness, first, as to whether or not he is in a position to give the evidence I shall subsequently develop by him, and secondly, as to what his motives may be in this prosecution for the purpose of evaluating his testimony.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): How long did you remain in the United States disciplinary barracks in San Francisco Harbor after your first arrival there?

A. Until the 1st day of June 1927.

Q. And upon leaving that institution where did you go?

A. I went on a speaking tour of the United States, which ended in New York City.

Q. Without going into detail, generally what area of the United States did you cover on this speaking tour? [2579]

A. Beginning with California, the Northwest through Montana, Minnesota, Chicago, Ohio, North Carolina, Washington, Philadelphia and New York.

Q. Again without going into the detail, what was the general subject of your speeches and by whom were you paid, if you were paid?

A. I was paid by Communist front organizations, the Anti-Imperialist League, and in a few cases the International Labor Defense, and the subject matter of my speeches, for the most part, was charges against the American Government of imperialism, presenting the Communist point of view on the international situation, and also discussing the conditions in the Army as seen by the Communists from the Communist point of view.

Q. Up until this time which you have just narrated what schooling or literature concerning the Communist Party had you studied or read?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that, your Honor, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Donohue: I offer it on the same basis, if your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I had read the underground literature of the Communist Labor and United Communist Parties, and from the day of its first publication I had read the Daily Worker, the official organ of the Communist Party, and also various pamphlets issued by [2580] the Communist Party, most of these pamphlets being read during the—the current pamphlets being read during the first two months, June and July, after my release from the disciplinary barracks.

Q. About when was it when, at the conclusion of your tour, you reached New York City?

A. Sometime in September, to the best of my recollection.

Q. What year? A. 1927.

Q. At that time, Mr. Crouch, had you become a member of the Communist Party?

A. I had, a week or two prior to my arrival in New York City.

Q. Where and under what circumstances did you become a member of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. On my arrival in Chicago the secretariat, the National Secretariat of the Communist Party, formally approved an application for membership I had made in 1925 two years earlier, and in accepting my membership made that membership retroactive to 1925.

Q. Where were you in 1925 when you made your application for membership in the Communist Party?

A. In the Army disciplinary barracks at Alcatraz, California.

Q. After having become a member of the Communist Party under the circumstances you have stated, how long a time did you continue as a member of the Communist Party? [2581]

A. From a date—approximately seventeen years from the date of my application until the spring of 1942.

Q. During the period of your membership in the Communist Party was a membership book ever issued to you?

A. Yes, many books were issued to me, membership books.

Q. During the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you pay dues as a member of that organization? A. I did.

Q. At any time during the period of your membership in the Communist Party, Mr. Crouch, were you known by any name or names other than the name of Paul Crouch? A. I was.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Will you state the name or names under which you were so known.

A. Fred Allen and Carl Wilson are the two names under which I can recall being personally known. I have written articles under various other names, both inside and outside of the Communist Party.

Q. When you reached New York at the end of your speaking tour, were you assigned to any unit of the Communist Party? If so, when, where, and what unit was it?

A. I was assigned to a unit and section, the numbers I cannot now recall, in the upper Harlem or lower Bronx, meeting in the neighborhood of 125th Street in New York City, near where I was living at that time. I do not recall the number of [2582] the branch or unit or section.

Q. How long at this period of time did you remain in New York City?

A. New York City remained my address and my home, my basic home, until 1930. However, I was absent from New York in the Soviet Union and other countries in Europe for six months.

Q. Will you tell us when and under what circumstances you went to the Soviet Union?

A. I went to the Soviet Union in December 1927 as a representative of the Anti-Militarists Department of the Party, which I headed, and as a representative of the Young Communists League, of which I was a member, its national bureau, for the purpose of attending meetings in Moscow of the Executive

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Committee of the Communist International, the Executive Committee of the Young Communists International, the World Congress of Trade Unions in March of 1928, and for the purpose of meeting with general staff officers of the Red Army and other military and political leaders of the Soviet Union.

Q. How long were you in Europe during this trip, Mr. Crouch?

A. I left the United States in December 1927. I returned to New York, to the best of my recollection, aboard the Ile de France somewhere around the 1st of June 1928.

Q. In that period of time how long or how much thereof did you spend in Moscow?

A. I spent in Moscow and other parts of the Soviet Union from [2583] just before Christmas 1927 until the end of April of 1928, approximately four months. Not all this time was spent in Moscow. Some of it was spent in other cities, such as Nishni-Novgorod, and also spent some time with the Red Army as a representative of the Young Communists International at the Budenny Division, stationed at Tambov, where I was made an honorary regimental commander of the Red Army with a rank equal to that of colonel.

Q. Upon your return to the United States after this trip to Europe in what activity did you then engage, Mr. Crouch? [2584]

A. I engaged in full-time Communist Party and Young Communist League activities, first, as head of the anti-militarist department, as it was called, the department in charge of infiltrating the armed forces, the Army, Navy and National Guard; as a member of the editorial staff of the Daily Worker; as a National Bureau member of the Young Communist League, and later a member of its secretariat, national educational director and editor of its official publication, the Young Worker; and in late 1928 and early 1929 I was national secretary of one of the Communist front organizations, the Anti-Imperialist League.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: I think, with your Honor's permission, this might be an appropriate time to recess.

The Court: All right. Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the noon recess and resume at two o'clock. The same admonition not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion until it is submitted to you.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.) [2585]

Afternoon Session—2:00 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

PAUL CROUCH

resumed.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. You were discussing, Mr. Crouch, at the recess your activities between 1928 and 1930 while in New York City. Have you told us generally of the extent of your activities in New York at that time?

A. For the most part I have. I was also a delegate to a national convention of the Communist Party between, I believe, about March 1 and March 11 of 1929, and I was also sent——

Q. Excuse me, sir. May I ask you, where was that national convention of the Communist Party held?

A. It was held in New York City, and the meeting place was changed from one hall to another. It was held at perhaps four or five different halls. I don't recall the names of the specific halls at this time.

Q. Was that in 1929 or 1930? [2586]

A. In 1929.

Q. Would you continue.

A. I also was sent to Gastonia in the spring of 1929 as the special representative of the Young Communists League. I took part in the national convention of the Young Communists League about the middle of May of 1929, at which I was elected editor of the Young Worker and national director with Gilbert Green as my assistant. In the summer, in July, I was sent to Waukegan, Illinois, to conduct a national Communist youth training school for six weeks, and after my return to New York throughout the remainder of the year I continued activities as editor of the Young Worker and as head of the Communist Party's department for work in the armed forces directing the activities of the Communists who had joined the Army, the Navy and the National Guard, ROTC, et cetera, for Communist—for the purpose of carrying on Communist activities there. That in general is the outline of the work I did until 1930.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Did you leave New York in 1930, Mr. Crouch?

A. I did.

Q. Will you tell us where you went and when?

A. I went to the South in the winter of 1930. I had been assigned to go to Moscow for work in the Commintern, that is, the Communist International, in Moscow, and together with my wife I obtained an American passport. I had received a few months' leave of absence, but my health became worse and it [2587] was impossible for me to go. So I remained on my father's farm in Hays, Wilkes County, North Carolina, through 1931 and until January 1932, when my health had improved sufficiently to return to full-time work in the Communist Party.

Q. And where did you go, if you went anyplace, in early 1932?

A. In early 1932 I went to Norfolk, Virginia, as regional organizer of the Communist Party, remaining at Norfolk until the spring of 1933.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And what was, in brief and in general, the nature of your activities during that period of time that you were in Norfolk?

A. In Norfolk, Virginia, where there had previously been no Communist Party, I set up functioning apparatus, recruited about 100 members into the Communist Party, organized an international seamen's club and the marine workers in Norfolk, and organized the Unemployed Council, another Communist Party front organization there.

Q. Did there come a time subsequently when you left Norfolk? A. Yes.

Q. When, and to what place did you go?

A. In the spring of 1933 the Central Committee of the Communist Party assigned and directed me to go to Salt Lake City as State organizer of the Communist Party for Utah.

Q. Did you go there? A. I did.

Q. And how long did you remain there? [2588]

A. I remained in Utah from the spring of 1933, April, I believe, until June 1934.

Q. Would you briefly tell us the nature of your activities while in Salt Lake City.

A. In general, supervising the work of the Party in the State, and with special emphasis on the organizational work for the Communist Party and the National Miners Union in the mine fields. During the late summer and early fall of 1933 I was the leader of a strike of miners in Carbon County, led by the National Miners Union, which in turn was controlled by the Communist Party. At this time I served in two capacities, as State organizer of the Communist Party and as State organizer for the National Miners Union. I also directed the work of the Communists in the Ex-Servicemen's League, the Unemployed Council, and various other Communist front organizations in the State. [2589]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. During this time, Mr. Crouch, were you yourself a member of any union?

A. I was a member of the National Miners Union from May 1933 until the National Miners Union was dissolved, about the end of 1933 or early 1934.

Q. During the time that you were a member of that union, is it a fact that you were a paid functionary of the Communist Party? A. It is.

Q. During the period that you were a member of the designated union, did you do any mining? Were you actually a working miner?

A. No, I never worked in a mine in my life.

Q. Did there come a time when you left Salt Lake City? A. Yes.

Q. When and where did you go?

A. In June 1934 I left Salt Lake City and went to Charlotte, North Carolina as a district organizer of the Communist Party for the states of North and South Carolina.

Q. Did you attend any convention of the Comnist Party in 1934? A. I did.

Q. Where and when and what was the convention?

A. I attended the national convention of the

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Communist Party in April 1934. This convention was held in Cleveland, Ohio.

Q. How long did you remain in Charlotte? [2590]

A. I remained in East Charlotte or Greensboro, North Carolina, from June 1934 until December 1937.

Q. What, in general, was the nature of your activity while in either of these two cities?

A. First of all, the general routine work expected of any district organizer, such as supervising all the party activities, attending meetings and conventions of the Central Committee and of the party, of making reports on the meetings of the Central Committee and on a national convention of the Communist Party to the District Committee, of carrying on Communist activities in the trade unions, subject to the instructions I received from the Communist Party, of work among unemployed organizations—first the Unemployed League and later the Workers Alliance, of which I myself was an officer, of work among the various trade unions, that is, directing the activities of the Communist Party members who were members of the United Textile Workers and who were members of the International Longshoremen's Unions at Charleston, South Carolina, of working in cooperation with the Young Communist League in student activities, and working among professors at the University of North Carolina, and many other activities which would take great time to describe.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Did you do any teaching during this period when you were at Charlotte or Greensboro?

A. I was a teacher of a six weeks' Communist Party training [2591] school in the winter of 1936 at New Orleans, Louisiana. I also taught very short term schools and classes in the districts organized by the party on a local scale.

Q. When you speak of schools, do you refer to Communist Party schools?

A. Yes, exclusively.

Q. When did you leave Charlotte or Greensboro?

A. We left Charlotte, to which we had returned from Greensboro, in December 1937.

During the time that you were active in the neighborhood of Charlotte, did you attend any convention of the Communist Party?

A. I attended a convention of the Communist Party in June—I would say about the 24th, 23rd—the 24th until about the 28th or 29th of June of 1936, held in New York City.

Q. Was that a national convention of the Communist Party? A. It was.

Q. When you left Charlotte as you have testified, in 1937, where did you go?

A. I was given a leave of absence by the Central Committee of about three months for my health, which I spent on an island off the South Carolina Coast owned by a member of the Communist Party.

Then in the spring—I believe it was in April of 1938—I went to Birmingham, Alabama, to resume my duties assigned me there as editor of The New

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

South, the Communist publication for [2592] southern districts, as a member of the Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi District Bureau, and as chairman of the Communist Party's Control Commission for that district.

Q. How long did you remain in Birmingham, Alabama?

A. I remained in Birmingham, Alabama until September, 1939.

Q. During the period of your residence in Birmingham did you attend any convention of the Communist Party? A. I did.

Q. Will you state what convention, where and when it was held?

A. I attended a national convention of the Communist Party held in New York City about the end of May of 1938.

Q. When did you leave Birmingham, Alabama?

A. I left Birmingham, Alabama in September of 1939.

Q. Where did you go from Birmingham?

A. I went from Birmingham, Alabama to Knoxville, Tennessee to assume my duties there as district organizer of the Communist Party for the State of Tennessee.

Q. How long did you remain in Knoxville?

A. I remained in Knoxville from September, 1939, until the spring—April, I believe to the best of my recollection, 1941.

Q. What, in brief and in general, was the nature of your activity while you were in Knoxville?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. While I was in Knoxville, Tennessee my duties were general supervision of Communist Party activities throughout the state, attending meetings of the Central Committee in New York, reporting back on these meetings to the district committee, seeing that the correct line was carried out by the party in its work, supervising the work of the Communist Party members who belonged to trade unions, and in general, any other activities which might be assigned me by the Central Committee of the party.

Q. Mr. Crouch, during the period that you were active in Tennessee, did you attend any convention of the Communist Party? If so, where and when?

A. I attended a convention of the Communist Party held in the summer of 1940—I don't recall the exact date—in New York City and I attended a special convention of the Communist Party held late in 1940. I do not recall the exact date, but my impression and belief is it was about November of 1940, in New York City.

Q. When did you leave Knoxville?

A. I left Knoxville, Tennessee in the spring of 1941, to the best of my recollection and belief, in late March or in the month of April.

Q. Where did you go from Knoxville, Tennessee?

A. From Knoxville, Tennessee I went to Oakland, California.

Q. And when did you arrive in Oakland?

A. About the last day or two of April of 1941,

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

to the best of my recollection, assuming my new duties about the first of May, 1941. [2594]

Q. How long did you remain, by the way, in Alameda County in Oakland?

A. I remained in Alameda County—not all this time in the Communist Party—until January, 1945, to the best of my recollection.

Q. When you went to Alameda County, what was your function at that time with the Communist Party there?

A. My function was organizer of the Communist Party for Alameda County and also a member of the District Bureau of the California-Nevada-Hawaii District, also known as District 13 of the Communist Party.

Q. Will you briefly tell us the general nature of your activities while you were in Oakland as a member of the Communist Party?

A. My activities were general supervision of the work of the Communist Party with special emphasis on trade union work, since there was a division of work in the secretariat in the County. My chief specialty, in addition to general work, as county organizer, was the direction of the Communist Party's trade union apparatus, supervising the work of the Communists and the trade unions of which they were members, directing those fractions, also giving general supervision to the work in various national groups, working at various organizations controlled and directed by the Communist Party in the county, and also attended District Bureau meetings which were held [2595] usually once a week on Wednesdays in San Francisco.

Q. Where in San Francisco did you attend the District Bureau meetings?

A. The District Bureau meetings in San Francisco from May 1st until after June 22nd, the attack on the Soviet Union, were held in private homes, usually in one private home, on the second floor. I do not remember the name of the owner of the apartment. It was a large room in an apartment located not far from the Twin Peaks area. I usually went with Schneidermann or another member and was not given the address to memorize, meeting Schneidermann or another member in the district office.

After the 22nd of June, during the remainder of the time I served on the District Bureau until the night of December, 1941, the meetings usually were held in Schneidermann's office at the Communist Party district headquarters on Haight Street.

Q. When you say Haight Street, you mean here in the City of San Francisco?

A. In San Francisco.

Q. Mr. Crouch, have you told us essentially the nature of your activities while you remained a member of the Communist Party in the City of Oakland?

A. Well, I might add, for example, that one important part of my duties during the latter part of May and early June was to act as an instructor for a very special week-end school held on a farm just across the line in Contra Costa County, a school for members, leading members, of the Communist Party in the county, and later I lectured at another Party training school, and in various other such capacities as are usually part of the work of a Communist Party organizer.

Q. How long did you continue as Communist Party organizer for Alameda County?

A. I was released from this sometime in late December, my release officially taking effect on or about the 7th of January, 1942, this date being my best recollection, not necessarily exact.

Q. And will you tell the circumstances under which you ended your responsibilities as Alameda County organizer.

A. The circumstances were all associated—

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Object to this, if the Court please, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, the [2597] circumstances under which he left, calling for self-serving declarations, opinions and conclusions.

The Court: Overruled.

A. The circumstances date back to my first disagreements on some issues with the Communist Party in 1934, increasing differences which I felt throughout the years, becoming greater and greater until in November of 1934, I asked the District Bureau for permission to quit as a full-time organizer and go to work in private industry. My differences with the Party were such that I couldn't with a clear conscience continue the responsibilities of ar organizer, and yet I hadn't quite reached the point where I felt that my differences were great enough to cease membership entirely. I did not state this in full, of course, because that would have meant expulsion, which I did not then desire, merely asking for release, which was denied. In December I was—a meeting was called of the District Bureau to which I was not invited, a special meeting. After this I was notified that the District Bureau had decided that I should take my—that I was to be replaced as county organizer by Steve Nelson, and that I was to take my family and move to Los Angeles, and after moving to Los Angeles would be given assignments by the Communist Party there. My wife refused and declared that she wouldn't quit her wartime job in which she was employed—this was after Pearl Harbor—at the Western Die Casting Company in Oakland, [2598] or Emeryville, a suburb. And Schneidermann then sent for her. I was advised by my wife of the conversations and of her defiance of Schneidermann's order that we must take our family and move, and then I was called to a District Bureau meeting and sharply censured.

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, your Honor. This is hearsay, none of the defendants present.

Mr. Donohue: The witness is merely indicating, if your Honor please, the reasons which caused him to separate from the Communist Party, which question has been asked——

The Court: There is no contention on your part that any of this testimony relates to any particular defendant at the bar?

Mr. Donohue: Of course not.

The Court: And the purposes are such as you have had in the past, to indicate the reasons underlying his termination?

Mr. Donohue: Correct, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I was called before a meeting of the District Bureau, and at great length bitterly denounced by Schneidermann and the other members of the Bureau for failure to make my wife obey the Party decision.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): May I interrupt at this time to ask you, Mr. Crouch, if at that time, at the time you are now discussing, your wife was also a member of the Communist Party? [2599]

A. She was and had been for thirteen years.

Q. Would you continue, please.

A. The District Bureau in my presence seriously debated whether I should be expelled from the Communist Party, but Schneidermann said I should not as a matter of expediency and in the interests of the Party. The outcome was that my wife was released from all Party responsibilities, not expelled; I was severely censured for failure to make my wife obey the Party decisions, and a decision made that I was to be barred from holding any position in the Communist Party above that of a section functionary, a member of a section committee; and then the order was rescinded that my family and I were to move to Los Angeles and a decision made that I should be permitted to obtain employment in private industry, which I did.

Q. Mr. Crouch, you said, I think, that these incidents took place in December?

A. December.

Q. Of what year, sir? A. 1941.

Q. May I ask you at this time who other than Mr. Schneidermann and yourself constituted the membership of District 13, the District Bureau of the Communist Party, in December of 1941?

Mr. Hallinan: We object to that as not the best evidence, if the Court please. The records of the Party itself or some document that would give that would be the best evidence. [2600] This is calling for secondary evidence in the absence of any proof that primary evidence is not available.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please,——

The Court: Overruled.

A. The District Bureau was composed of William Schneidermann, Louise Todd, organization secretary; Steve Nelson, myself, Oleta O'Connor Yates, Walter Lambert, and Rudy Lambert.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, following the incident you have just described, did you continue thereafter as a member of the Communist Party?

A. For a brief period, until early in the spring of 1942, I continued to attend a few branch meetings and to pay dues. Early in the spring of 1942 I ceased attending meetings, ceased paying dues, and in spite of repeated visits by Steve Nelson, the county organizer, I refused to do so. I should state, to keep the record clear, that a membership book was made out for me for the year 1943 and sent to my home. This book, without any dues stamp in it, showing no dues payments, is now in possession of the House Committee on un-American Activities.

Mr. Hallinan: I didn't get that last.

Mr. Donohue: Would you read it.

(Record read.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you make any application for that book, which you say was delivered to your house? A. I did not. [2601]

Q. Was the book delivered personally to you at your house, Mr. Crouch, if you can recall?

A. I do not recall whether I was at home when the book was delivered or not.

Q. Then you are not able to tell us who delivered the book? A. No.

Q. At that time, that is, at the time you indicated you failed to attend further meetings and failed to pay your dues, did you by any official act or by any written instrument notify the Communist Party that you no longer considered yourself a member thereof? A. I did not.

Q. And to your knowledge have you ever been officially expelled from the Communist Party?

A. I have never been, to my knowledge.

Q. Now, following your withdrawal from the

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Communist Party, what then became your business or occupation, and where?

A. I obtained employment in the winter or early spring of 1942 with the United States Steel Corporation at their Boyle plant, Oak and Clement Streets in Alameda, the town of Alameda, where I continued to work until about December of 1942, when I left Alameda County and moved to Brownsville, Texas.

Q. And how long did you continue to live in Brownsville, Texas?

A. I lived in Brownsville, Texas from January, 1945, until [2602] January of 1947.

Q. What was your business or occupation in Brownsville?

A. I was an employee of the Pan-American World Airways.

Q. Doing what kind of work, sir?

A. Principally art work, that is, layout of insignia, painting of numbers on the planes and some decorative painting work, and also some general mechanical work. I had the status as a mechanic.

Q. Was your wife also employed at that time?

A. My wife was employed in Alameda County until the time I left here, first with the Western Die Casting Company, until about one year before we left, and the last year we lived here she was employed by the General Electric, also in a war industry. At Brownsville, Texas she worked only briefly as a cashier.

Q. While you were employed as you so stated at Brownsville, Texas did you become a member of a union? A. I did.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Will you tell us of what union you became a member.

A. I became a member of the Transport Workers Union of the CIO.

Q. Did there come a time when you became or held any office in that union?

A. There did. I became the secretary of my local, as a delegate from my local to a national convention, as a delegate from my local to a State convention of the CIO, where I was elected [2603] vice president of the Texas CIO.

Q. Of what national convention or to what national convention were you a delegate at this time?

A. I was a delegate to a national convention of the Transport Workers, CIO, in New York City in September, 1946.

Q. When you left your employment at Brownsville, Texas, where then did you go to live?

A. I moved to Miami, Florida in January, 1947.

Q. And what was your first occupation in Miami?

A. As editor of the Union Record, official newspaper of the CIO for the State of Florida, and also at the same time as State public relations and publicity director of the CIO for Florida of the State CIO Council.

Q. You have continued to live in Florida since 1947? A. I have.

Q. And what other occupation or occupations have you followed since your arrival in Florida in 1947 up to the present time?

A. I continued this work I mentioned during the first year, 1947. Then I worked briefly as editor on a weekly newspaper, the Dade County News. I worked for a few months as sales representative for Funk and Wagnall books, and then I was employed in the summer of 1948 by the Miami Herald, a morning daily, working there until January of this year, at which time I was employed in a supervisory capacity by the Miami Daily [2604] News.

Q. The Miami Daily News is your present employer? A. Yes.

Q. When was it, Mr. Crouch, that you first publicly declared yourself as a former member of the Communist Party?

A. The first public declaration to this effect was in an article in Plain Talk magazine of March, 1949, which article was subsequently reprinted in the Congressional Record.

Q. And you were the author of that article?

A. I was.

Q. And may I ask you to tell his Honor and the members of the jury, why did you write that article?

Mr. Hallinan: Object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, if the Court please, calling for the opinion and conclusion, not binding on the defendants, why he wrote the article.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: It is not binding on the defendants and there is no purport or purpose of showing in that respect.

Mr. Donohue: No, your Honor, it is merely to show, in conjunction with his already stated testimony as to why he left the Communist Party and when he declared that he had left the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: I think the fact that he gave the reason for leaving the Communist Party is bad enough; then to give why he wrote some article, then why he did this or why he did that—we will be tracing the gentleman's mental processes [2605] down to everything he has done, why is he out here, why did he take forty jobs, why did he go to Brownsville, Texas.

Mr. Donohue: In the light of the fact, if your Honor please, that I am quite sure that Mr. MacInnis, or Mr. Hallinan will ask the same question, I withdraw the question.

Q. Mr. Crouch, do you know the defendant J. R. Robertson in this proceeding? A. I do not.

Q. Mr. Crouch, do you know the defendant Henry Schmidt? A. I do.

Q. Will you indicate where he is, if he is in the courtroom.

A. He is seated next to Mr. Bridges at the far end of that table.

Q. Then I take it that you also know Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Object to that as leading and suggestive.

Mr. Donohue: I think not. He has already stated about Mr. Bridges being seated at the table.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't care about that. I don't want counsel to get back in the bad habit he had at the commencement of the trial, which your Honor sort of broke him of.

Mr. Donohue: Perhaps you have given me a lesson Hallinan on Procedure.

Mr. Hallinan: I wouldn't waste my time.

The Court: You might identify him if you can. Do you [2606] see Mr. Bridges?

The Witness: Mr. Bridges is seated next to Mr. Schmidt and is the third man at this table, seated at the corner of the table.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Crouch, how long have you known the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. Is the meaning of the question when I first saw and heard Mr. Bridges speak, or is it when I first met him personally and talked to him?

The Court: No, the question is clear, Mr. Witness. Will you read the question, Mr. Reporter.

Mr. Donohue: May I withdraw the question and make it more specific, if your Honor please.

Q. May I ask you, where did you first see Mr. Bridges?

A. To the best of my recollection, I first saw Mr. Bridges sometime around '34, late '34 or 1935, but I am not certain of the date I first saw him or the place I first saw him. [2607]

Q. Mr. Crouch, when do you recollect definitely a time and a place where you first saw or did see Mr. Bridges?

A. I remember having seen Mr. Bridges at a number of places, but the exact date and the exact place I cannot name without any possible doubt until about May and June of 1941.

Q. Where and when, with as much preciseness as you can testify, did you see Mr. Harry Bridges, that you can so testify without any doubt?

A. One place I saw him was in the State CIO office at some meeting about early June. That was in 1941. I also saw him at some meeting connected with the USO during the latter part of June, at which time Mr. Bridges was present when some inquiry was being made regarding the functions and objectives of the USO. That occasion was impressed on my memory at the time by some publicity connected with it of an unusual nature.

Q. On how many occasions would you say you saw, that you can recall, Mr. Bridges?

A. I saw Mr. Bridges, to the best of my recollection, probably a half dozen times during 1941 and at various conferences, public meetings and the most outstanding occasion which I can recall most specifically was his speech at a CIO convention in the Hotel Oakland.

Q. At what convention?

A. The State CIO convention in the Hotel Oakland, between the 2nd and the 5th of October of 1941, when Mr. Bridges—when I [2608] heard part of his speech, not all,—but part of the speech made by Mr. Bridges and heard the reading of resolution which Mr. Bridges presented in the course of that speech.

Q. Is that your last recollection of having seen Mr. Bridges before you saw him today?

A. No, I recall having seen him at perhaps two or three meetings, trade union meetings and public meetings in San Francisco during, after and subsequent to this, during the latter part of 1941, but I can only recall that I saw him two or three times at least at such public meetings, but I can not recall the time or the place of these meetings since the one in October, 1941. Since 1941 I have heard Mr. Bridges speak on the radio, but I have not seen him face to face from the end of 1941 until today.

Q. Mr. Crouch, you have stated that you were a delegate at the 1936 convention of the national convention of the Communist Party.

A. I have.

Q. What position did you occupy in the Communist Party at the time you were in attendance at the national convention of that party in 1936?

A. I was district organizer of the Communist Party of the states of North and South Carolina, and at the convention itself I was head of that delegation and a member of the Presidium or Presidium Committee of the convention. [2609]

Q. Will you tell us the nature and purpose of the Presidium or Presidium Committee of the convention?

A. This committee was to exercise general supervision over the mechanism of the convention as a whole, supervising the work of the various commissions and seeing that the reports were properly organized and presented to the convention, and it also was in charge of making nominations for chairmen of various sessions, and in general, seeing that the convention ran smoothly.

Q. At any time prior, during or subsequent to the 1936 national convention of the Communist Party, did you ever attend a meeting of the Central Committee of that party?

A. I attended—I had attended perhaps 20 meetings, just at a rough estimate, of the Central Committee of the Communist Party prior to the 1936 convention.

Q. Mr. Crouch, were you a member at that time of the Central Committee of the Communist Party?

A. Not as such. As a district organizer I was more or less in the status of an ex officio member and was always called in to Central Committee meetings.

Q. On any such occasion when you were in attendance at a meeting of the Central Committee of the Communist Party prior or during the 1936 national convention, did you participate in any way in this nomination of candidates for election to the Central Committee at that convention? [2610]

A. I did.

Mr. Donohue: Might this be an opportune time for a recess?

The Court: All right. We might take the recess.

—It is a little early, however. It is getting rather close.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, it is, your Honor.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen, we will take the mid-afternoon recess. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions or to form or express an opinion thereon until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2611]

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, if your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Reporter, did you record the last question?

The Reporter: No, I wasn't here.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): I believe I asked you as we terminated whether you had attended a meeting of the Presidium Committee at which something was done with respect to the selection of candidates for election at the 1936 national convention of the Communist Party to the Central Committee of the party. You said that you were in attendance at such a meeting, am I correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will you tell us, to the best of your recollection, whether that meeting was held prior, during or subsequent to the 1936 national convention?

A. The committee or presidium had several meetings during the course of the convention, at one of which the nominating committee presented us with a list of the nominees to the Central Committee it was recommending for the new Central Committee.

Q. In what form was that list of candidates presented?

A. In the form of a written memoranda. The names were written and read.

Q. Were the persons whose names appeared on that list designated by state or in any other method? [2612]

A. Not by states. To make the answer clear, I should explain that prior to this time the various state delegations had held caucuses where the—for example, our southern delegation of the Carolinas had met—since we were a small district, had met together with the other southern districts, at a meeting presided over, I recall, by Nat Ross, the Alabama organizer. We discussed in this meeting whom we thought should from the South go on the Central Committee. I recall a couple of names. There was the name of Al Murphy, a Negro from the sharecropping area we thought should go on; there was W. G. Binkley, who was then in Louisiana, that we thought should go on the Central Committee. We also as a matter of a gesture nominated a few national figures like Foster, Browder, Stachel, Krumbein, and then we submitted people from the district or the territory that we thought should go on, and these names were turned over to the chairman or some other of the nominations commission, where, presumably, they were examined, but where

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

I knew as a result of years of practice the final decision was made by the Politburo of the party as to who went on. Then in the presidium before the election session of the convention these names were read to us in the presiding committee, together with the reports of other commissions of which we formally approved. Later the same list of names which had been submitted to us and briefly discussed went before the convention as a whole and the regular election took place. [2613]

Q. Then did you vote for this slate of names on two occasions on two occasions during the convention?

A. I did on two occasions, in the presiding committee and in the final election.

Q. Were some of the persons who were elected in the 1936 convention persons who were already members of the Central Committee and had been for perhaps some time before then?

A. Yes, a number such as Foster, Ford, Browder, Krumbein, Jack Stachel and various others.

Q. And were there some persons nominated and elected to membership at this convention who had not theretofore been so nominated and so elected?

[illegible] Yes, there were a number. For example, from our southern delegation there was one name only added. That was the name of W. G. Binkley of New Orleans. And there were new names from various other districts added to the list, that is, to go on the new Central Committee, who had not been on previous Central Committees.

Q. And were these names discussed at the meeting of the presidium or presidium committee?

A. Yes, at not too great length, but they were discussed.

Q. Can you tell us any other persons whose names were discussed and who were subsequently balloted upon at the presidium committee meeting?

A. There was the—there was the name, for example, of Harry [2614] Bridges, or, as he went on the records, Rossi, was one of those names that was discussed from California.

Q. Was that name on the list of candidates which was approved by the presidium committee?

A. Under the name of Rossi, yes.

Q. Did you subsequently attend a session of the convention of the 1936 convention at which delegates were called upon to vote for the slate of candidates which had been predetermined?

A. I was.

Q. Did you at that time on the floor of the convention vote for a candidate under the name of Harry Rossi whom you know to be Harry Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Object to that, if the Court please; leading and suggestive; calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Donohue: He already said he did.

Mr. Hallinan: He can testify as to whom he voted for.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question, if Your Honor please.

Q. Let me ask you this question: Did any incident occur during the voting on the floor of the convention which you can now recall having to do with the naming of any one of the candidates for election at that convention?

A. Yes. Following each name as it was read there was applause throughout the convention hall. When the name Rossi was read, [2615] the California delegation rose to its feet applauding more enthusiastically than ever. And at this time I recall turning to my wife and making this statement, "I'll bet the mayor of San Francisco will sure be furious if he knew Harry Bridges was using his name in this convention."

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that that be stricken out as being hearsay.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to it.

The Court: The latter part of the answer may be stricken out, commencing with the assertion that the witness turned to his wife and thereafter to and including the last word in that sentence. All of that is stricken from the record and the jury instructed to disregard it.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Did you attend the 1938 national convention of the Communist Party?

A. I did.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As the editor of The New South, the Communist Party organ for the southern districts, and as the delegates from the Alabama-Mississippi-Georgia district of the Communist Party.

Q. Were you a member of the Presidium Committee at this convention?

A. The procedure was quite different at this convention from the '36. There was a meeting called by the Central Committee of district organizers, the editors and a few top leaders of the [2616] Communist Party to discuss procedure and administration at the convention and to discuss the nominations, which were made in a procedure quite different from '36. [2616-A]

Q. Did you attend the meeting which you have just described? A. I did.

Q. Can you tell us when that meeting was held with relation to the time of the convention itself?

A. It was held during an evening, to the best of my recollection, during the course of the convention and prior to the final election session.

Q. Was a slate of candidates determined at that meeting? A. It was.

Q. Can you tell us whether or not the defendant Harry Bridges was nominated at that meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute, if the Court please. I object to that as calling for hearsay and not binding on the defendants.

Mr. Donohue: He was there, if your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: There is no such testimony.

Mr. Donohue: He said he was present at the meeting, not Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Hallinan: That is what I mean.

The Court: The witness testified he was present at that meeting.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: What is the question? [2617]

(Question read.)

A. He was.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you state your recollection of the circumstances.

Mr. Hallinan: The same objection, if the Court please: not binding on the defendant. He was not present. It is calling for hearsay.

The Court: Will you fix the time on this? This was the same meeting?

Mr. Donohue: This is the 1938 convention, if your Honor please, and I understood the witness to say that this meeting took place on some evening during the course of the convention.

Q. Am I correct? A. Correct.

Mr. Donohue: A meeting at which he was present.

Q. (By the Court): Who were the others present?

A. The others present were District Organizers Browder, Stachel, Peters and several of the top leaders of the Communist Party.

Q. Were the results of that meeting recorded?

A. I don't know. They were recorded at the time by Earl Browder, who was taking the minutes of that meeting, and the results of it were subsequently read to the convention.

The Court: The objection is overruled. You may answer.

The Witness: What is the question? [2618]

(Question read.)

A. When it came the turn of the California delegation to suggest names of people who should be on the Central Committee, the name of Anita Whitney was first proposed by William Schneidermann, District Organizer, and then he stated he believed that Harry Bridges should be on. He stated that there was criticism of his work, he was temperamental, and so on, but that he had made an important contribution and he thought he would contribute more on than off the Central Committee. Both Foster and Jack Stachel—excuse me—both Earl Browder and Jack Stachel took part in the discussion and both expressed sentiments agreeing with those expressed by Schneidermann, and at the end Foster—I beg your pardon—Earl Browder stated that, "We will put Comrade"—and used the name of Derkin or Dargan or a name like that, which I hadn't heard previously, on the Central Committee. This was while we were discussing the matter in reference to Harry Bridges.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Subsequent to this meeting were you in attendance upon the floor of the convention when the names which had been approved by the committee were offered for approval on the floor of the convention?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I was.

Q. At that time did you vote for the defendant Harry Bridges, and, if so, under what name?

A. I was present and voted for the defendant Harry Bridges. [2619] To the best of my recollection, in reading down the list of names, the speaker paused and then made a remark, "The next person to go on the Central Committee is a well known West Coast labor leader," but without stating his name, and at that moment the entire convention burst into stormy applause.

Q. Are you able to tell us, Mr. Crouch, whether at any time during the 1936 or 1938 national conventions of the Communist Party you saw the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. To the best of my recollection, I did not see him in '38, but to the best of my recollection I saw him very briefly in 1936 during the course of the convention and at a meeting of the new Central Committee which followed for the purpose of electing the Politbüro of the Party.

Q. Mr. Crouch, shortly ago you testified that you heard Mr. Bridges read a resolution at a CIO convention. Am I correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Would you tell us where and when this resolution was read by Mr. Bridges.

A. This resolution was read by Mr. Bridges during the course of his address before the California State CIO convention between the 3rd and 5th of October, 1941, in the main room, in the main meeting room on the first floor of the Hotel Oakland, in Oakland, California.

Q. Did you have any particular assignment with respect to the State CIO convention being held at the time and place you have [2620] just indicated?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was your assignment?

A. My assignment by the California District Bureau was to supervise the work of the Communist fraction at that convention and to see that all the decisions of the California District Bureau were carried through at that convention, and also to see that Harry Bridges carried out certain specific decisions made in the District Bureau.

Q. Had you ever seen the resolution which you subsequently heard Mr. Bridges read on the floor of the convention? A. I had.

Q. Will you tell his Honor and the jury where, when and under what circumstances you saw that resolution.

Mr. Hallinan: I object to this as calling for hearsay, if the Court please, unless the defendant Harry Bridges was present at the time he saw the resolution.

Mr. Donohue: He certainly was present at the time he read the resolution, if the Court please, and I think we have a right to show if this witness can tell us how the resolution got in the hands of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Hallinan: That is different, if your Honor please, from the question he asked.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Will you reframe the question so there is no objection? [2621]

Mr. Donohue: Yes.

Q. Mr. Crouch, with reference to the resolution which you heard Harry Bridges read, did you personally have anything to do with the preparation of that resolution?

A. I had considerable to do with having it printed in final form as it was delivered by Harry Bridges.

Q. Under whose instructions did you put this resolution in final form?

Mr. Hallinan: Same objection: calling for hearsay.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you tell us, Mr. Crouch, as you best recollect it, the substance of that resolution.

A. The substance of the resolution——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. Have you the resolution itself? I submit this may not be the best evidence. If the resolution is available, we should have it.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Bridges read it. Maybe he will produce it.

Mr. Hallinan: It should be explained if it is available or not.

Q. (By the Court): Mr. Witness, do you have any independent recollection of the text of that resolution?

A. I do, of its substance, yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Do you have the resolution?

A. I don't have the resolution. I have read it since I have [2622] been in San Francisco.

Q. Where is the resolution?

A. I don't know. I read it in the immigration office.

The Court: (To Mr. Donohue) Do you have it?

Mr. Donohue: No, your Honor, I do not have it.

Mr. Hallinan: I think they should produce it.

Mr. Donohue: I may be able to produce it.

The Court: I suggest that you produce it.

Mr. Donohue: I do not have the resolution.

Mr. Hallinan: I think he may call on one of his colleagues now, your Honor.

The Court: If the resolution is available there is no purpose in having this man resort to his independent recollection after these events transpired. Let us have the resolution.

Mr. Donohue: What I mean to say is I obviously do not have the resolution. I undoubtedly can procure a copy of the minutes of the convention at which that resolution was read.

Mr. Hallinan: May we inquire whether the resolution is present in the courtroom right now?

Mr. Donohue: I would like to find out myself.

The Court: Yes. Is it here now? We could save time if it is.

Mr. Hallinan: One of the boys in the front row is getting it out of his briefcase. [2623]

The Court: What is this? The text of the convention?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: This seems to be, if your Honor please, the Fourth Annual Convention, California State Industrial Union Council, Oakland, October 3, 4 and 5, 1941.

The Court: Will you show it to Mr. Hallinan, please?

(The document referred to was shown to Mr. Hallinan.)

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, may I have this marked for identification?

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. Donohue: And since it does not appear to be the property of the United States, may I later substitute either a certified copy of it or a photostat of it?

The Court: So ordered.

Mr. Hallinan: Whose property is it, may I ask?

Mr. Donohue: As I read the stamp, it is the property of the Library of Economic Research of the University of California.

The Court: A photostatic copy may be received in lieu of that document and the document returned to the archives where it belongs.

Mr. Donohue: May the document be marked Government's 8 for identification?

The Court: So ordered.

(The document was marked U. S. Exhibit 8 for identification.)

Mr. Donohue: Would you be good enough to hand it to the [2624] witness?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Would you look at the page and see if that is the resolution.

A. This is the resolution.

Mr. Donohue: I offer it in evidence, if your Honor please.

The Court: What is the purport or purposes of this document, counsel?

Mr. Hallinan: We have no objection, your Honor.

The Court: May I have some descriptive context so we will know what it is?

Mr. Donohue: I have never seen it, if your Honor please.

The Court: You might look at it.

Mr. Donohue: Would you procure it for me, Mr. Mitchell.

The Court: What is the nature of the resolution?

Mr. Donohue: I do not know, sir. I have never seen it. Would your Honor care to read the resolution?

Mr. Hallinan: No, we stipulate it may be read. You have offered it in evidence. We will stipulate to it.

Mr. Donohue: I introduce it in evidence, if your Honor please.

The Court: It may be received. I am still in a quandary. What is the nature of the resolution?

Mr. Hallinan: He will read it in a moment, Judge, and we will all get it. It is a very villainous thing. Mr. [2625] Bridges might well be ashamed of it, but we will let it be read.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: I am rather inquisitive. It is late in the day for me to be inquisitive. After the events of the day I haven't so much energy.

Mr. Donohue: If counsel would like to read it, I will be happy to read it.

The Court: You are in good voice today.

Mr. Donohue (reading):

> "Whereas, Fascism has enslaved most of Continental Europe and will engulf the entire world unless destroyed, and
> "Whereas, democracies can only succeed in defeating Fascism by throwing their entire resources into the bitter struggle, which step must be taken at once because further delay can serve but to strengthen our common foes, and
> "Whereas, this supreme effort can only be achieved by unity of action and purpose by all freedom-loving peoples,
> "Therefore Be It Resolved, that we pledge allegiance to our country, our President, and wholehearted support to his program, and that we take this step with full knowledge of the sacrifices we must make before victory is ours.
> "And Be It Further Resolved, that in making this [2626] pledge we (1) endorse the Murray Plan of industry councils because we know that adoption of the plan will result in greater unity of government, labor and capital and will sharply increase production, in our national defense industries and industries related to them; (2) oppose the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a continuation of which is detrimental to the welfare of our nation, its full productivity and effort; (3) request the removal from positions of authority of individuals of Fascist leaning, whose retention in important governmental posts raises questions of doubt in the minds of the worker and undermines the army of industrial workers and morale of the people; (4) pledge our loyalty and support to the vigorous leadership of President Philip Murray and urge him to retain leadership of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and lead that great organization along the lines laid down in this resolution; (5) and last, request President Murray to make our position on these vital questions known to our President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

(The resolution was marked U. S. Exhibit 8 in evidence.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now I ask the witness if that is the resolution which he prepared.

A. It is. [2627]

Q. Can you recall or tell us the date upon which this resolution was prepared by you?

A. This resolution was prepared during the two weeks preceding the convention and the final work of it was done after the actual formal opening of the convention in the Hotel Oakland in my hotel room at the Hotel Harrison.

Q. Having prepared this resolution, Mr. Crouch,

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

can you tell us whether it was prepared before or after the attack on Russia by Germany?

A. After the attack by Germany on Russia.

Q. At the time you prepared this resolution, by whom were you employed?

A. By the Communist Party.

Q. And what did you do with the resolution after you prepared it?

A. I gave it to my wife who was the courier between my room in the Hotel Harrison and the secretary and assistant secretary of the party fraction on the floor. I gave her this resolution and told her to give it——

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. Just a minute, sir. Object to this, if the Court please, again as hearsay.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): With what instructions?

Mr. Hallinan: Did Your Honor overrule it?

The Court: I sustained it. [2628]

Mr. Donohue: I am not asking for the conversation; I am asking what instructions he gave.

Mr. Hallinan: That the the same thing, Your Honor. That is calling for hearsay, what instructions he gave. It is the same thing.

The Court: I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question.

Q. Is that the resolution which you subsequently heard read by Mr. Bridges on the floor of the convention? A. It is.

Q. I ask you now under whose instructions you prepared that resolution?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. The same objection. It is calling for hearsay, if the Court please.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if Your Honor pleases, it is pertinent.

Mr. Hallinan: Mr. Bridges was not present, I take it; no foundation laid.

Mr. Donohue: It is competent in the light of the picture——

The Court: Overruled. It goes to the causative relationship between the original source and the person who ultimately received it. Allegedly, according to this witness, Mr. Bridges received it and sponsored it on the floor.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: You are now seeking the causative relationship? [2629]

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: What is the question?

(Last question read.)

A. The instructions of the District Bureau of the California-Nevada-Hawaii District.

The Court: What was that last answer?

(Last answer read.)

The Court: District what?

A. Of the Communist Party, also known as District 13 of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you tell us at this time who were the members of the District Bureau of District 13 of the Communist Party at the time you received these instructions?

Mr. Hallinan: That has been asked and answered already.

Mr. Donohue: No; I am not certain it was at the same time, if Your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. William Schneidermann, Steve Nelson, Louise Todd, myself, Paul Crouch, Oleta O'Connor Yates, Walter Lambert and Rudy Lambert.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And when, can you tell us, with relation to the time when you prepared this resolution was it that you received instructions concerning its preparation?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute. The same objection, Your [2630] Honor, again calling for hearsay.

Mr. Donohue: I am simply trying to fix the time.

Mr. Hallinan: Having gone far afield in tracing its genesis, he is now expanding and enlarging upon that. I submit that is improper.

The Court: Would you read the question, please?

(Question read.)

The Court: You are asking for the time?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Solely the time?

Mr. Donohue: Solely the time.

The Court: He may answer.

A. In the period—I don't remember the exact date—but it was not more than two weeks before the second of October when the convention began.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Crouch, was there a change in the policy of the Communist Party which took place after the invasion of Russia by the German army?

Mr. Hallinan: Just a minute now. Your Honor, this is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Under a number of cases involving the criminal syndicalism act in California, it has been held reversible error to permit questions of this kind. The policies of an organization can be proved by its books and its records and not by statements of a member as to what he conceived it to be, or statements as to whether their officers in [2631] it told him they were.

The Court: If the witness alleged or asserted herein that books and records are not maintained, I suppose it would rest in the matter of the testimony.

Mr. Hallinan: I know of no evidence that books and records are not maintained.

Mr. Donohue: We have in proof already, if Your Honor please, that they haven't any record of their membership.

Mr. Hallinan: Not that such records are not maintained; only that they do not still have the books of membership.

Mr. Donohue: They said that not only they did not have them, but it was the policy of the Communist Party not to maintain such books.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Well, however difficult it may be, it still is the law that the policy of a party or organization can not be proved by putting members on the stand and asking them what the policy was. It is calling for their opinions and conclusions. Object to that.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if Your Honor please, the record is replete with instances wherein it is the apparent practice in the Communist Party when the line or policy of the party has been determined at the top, as was testified to in particularity by the witness Schomaker, it is then passed down from the Politburo to the Central Committee to the district organizer to the section organizer and the unit organizer, and the cell and the individual Communist member. [2632]

Mr. Hallinan: We haven't heard of the cells before, but they should come sooner or later. However, if Mr. Schomaker was permitted erroneously to testify to that, which he was not—I remember no such testimony—that doesn't render this testimony competent. Now, I make that objection, Your Honor, and, as I say, there are a number of cases of the California Supreme Court that hold directly that in a Criminal Syndicalism case testimony of this kind is not permissible.

Mr. Donohue: I think, perhaps, if Your Honor please, that I should make, as a premise to this question and others, an offer of proof to the Court in the absence of the jury, and for that reason may this matter stand over until tomorrow morning and may I do so at the beginning of the period?

The Court: Yes, we have reached the 4:00 o'clock recess period, and we might take the recess or adjournment until tomorrow morning. I might say that I have given some thought to——

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. There is one thing that I failed to mention. The document will be retained by the Clerk, of course—that is, the entire document.

The Court: I have given some thought to our proposed adjournment tomorrow and I think under the circumstances, we have had a long week, a trying week, and under the conditions that we will regularly adjourn at 12:00 o'clock, thus to allow the jurors an additional interval to attend to their Christmastide [2633] duties and obligations and enjoyments. And then we may resume again Monday at 10:00 or 11:00 o'clock.

The Clerk: 10:00, Your Honor.

The Court: 10:00 o'clock Monday and run over until Wednesday, the 21st, at noon, rather than 1:00 o'clock, so that we might take advantage of that interval.

We will adjourn until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. The same admonition to you not to converse on any subject of this trial, not to suffer any person to converse with you on any matter affecting or pertaining to it, and not to form or express an opinion until the matter is finally submitted to you. You may now retire.

(Thereupon, an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Friday, December 16, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [2634]

Friday, December 16, 1949—10:00 A.M.

(Proceedings out of the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: The United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Donohue: I wonder if counsel has received as yet the copy of the conviction. I ask the question, if your Honor please, because I am informed that the witness Manning Johnson's wife is ill—not seriously ill, but ill in New York, and we would like not to hold him longer than is necessary. I wonder if counsel have yet received from Nebraska——

Mr. MacInnis: We have not. Your Honor, I have sent another wire for that document. Also at your Honor's suggestion we sent a wire to New York for the testimony which you suggested might be proper if we had the supporting transcript.

Mr. Donohue: I think that disposes of that matter, if your Honor please.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, perhaps it might be well in the light of the offer of proof I expect to make, having excluded the jury, that we also exclude the witness, so that perhaps he might not be influenced by what we may say.

Mr. Hallinan: You don't have to bother. He probably knows what it is. Let him stay here; we don't care.

(The witness Paul Crouch was excused from the courtroom.) [2635]

Mr. Donohue: If I may disregard that remark, if your Honor please, and invite your Honor's attention to the fact that a reading of the record of yesterday will indicate that the last question asked of the witness, with respect to which an objection was made, appears on page 2631 of the record at line 16:

> "Q. Mr. Crouch, was there a change in the policy of the Communist Party which took place after the invasion of Russia by the German army?"

Having in mind, if your Honor pleases, that heretofore in the record of yesterday it would appear that the witness had testified that during the October '41 CIO convention at Oakland he, as a member of the District Bureau of the Communist Party, had been instructed by the Bureau to make certain that the Communist fraction at that convention carry out the policy set forth by the District Bureau, and that pursuant thereto he had prepared a certain resolution, and that subsequent thereto he appeared in the hall at which the convention was being held and heard that resolution offered and read by the defendant Harry Bridges, the purpose of the question asked of the witness to which objection was made, as to whether or not there was a change in the Communist Party line which followed the attack on Russia by Germany—the purpose of that question and the offer of proof which I now make to your Honor is to show that the defendant Harry Bridges was a member of the [2636] Communist Party, over and above for the reasons already testified to in this proceeding, for the additional reason that he was subjected to and did in fact follow the direction of the Communist Party.

We therefore offer to prove by this witness that at a meeting of the District Bureau the defection of the defendant Harry Bridges from the Communist line which changed after the invasion of Russia by the German army was discussed, in consequence of which——

The Court: Discussed where and when?

Mr. Donohue: Within the District Bureau, if your Honor pleases.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: And that a determination was made either that the defendant Bridges would accept the new Communist Party line or that he would be expelled from the Party, and that the evidence——

The Court: Was Mr. Bridges in attendance at any of these meetings?

Mr. Donohue: No, your Honor.

The Court: Was he invited to attend?

Mr. Donohue: No, your Honor, he was not at the meeting of the District Bureau in question.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Donohue: We offer to show, however, that the [2637] intermediaries between the District Bureau and Mr. Bridges——

The Court: So-called couriers.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir—were Mr. Walter Lambert and Mr. William Schneidermann, and that reports were brought back to the District Bureau from Mr. Bridges by these two men and that the directions of the Bureau were carried to Mr. Bridges by these two men.

We therefore offer to show that the resolution which was prepared by Paul Crouch, the witness, and was read by the defendant Harry Bridges was the evidence that the District Bureau insisted upon and received that Mr. Bridges had agreed, after the invasion of Russia by the German army, that he would abandon the old Communist Party line that the Yanks were not coming, and that he would advocate, and that by this resolution he did advocate, an all-out effort in production in this country in aid of the then existing war. [2638]

Mr. Donohue: May I at this time in conformity with your Honor's statement yesterday——

Mr. Hallinan: We will save you that trouble. We have a copy of the document. You may have your other document back.

Mr. Donohue: I would rather not, if your Honor please.

The Court: You have a copy of the resolution?

Mr. Donohue: We have a copy of the resolution.

The Court: We will have both documents received as one and marked appropriately as one, so that if Mr. Hallinan desires to refer to any part of the document, he may.

Mr. Donohue, in the light of this offer there are one or two questions I would like to ask before Mr. Hallinan makes comment or Mr. MacInnis:

One, do you represent to this Court that you through witnesses will bring home or allegedly or assertedly bring home to the defendant Bridges or any of the co-defendants knowledge and notice of the alleged intended change of party line?

Mr. Donohue: I can only do it by the testimony of this witness in the preparation of this resolution, which he said he prepared, and the fact that he was present at the meeting during the period of the convention at which Mr. Bridges read and presented the resolution which he prepared.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, do you have any comments?

Mr. Hallinan: I do not know anything that permits hearsay testimony in, or any change in the rule. There was a meeting [2639] that Mr. Bridges was not present at. If they want to introduce that in evidence, I can only make the objection that it is hearsay.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, I think at this stage of the trial I shall sustain the objection.

Mr. Donohue: I shall not urge it.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Mr. Hallinan: And I also assign as misconduct the statement of the special prosecutor made obviously for the purpose of having this transmitted to the general public through the newspapers, with the probability it will reach the jury. He must know a statement of that kind is inadmissible, that such evidence is not proper, and it seems to me to be a mere device to unjustly injure the defendants, and I assign it as misconduct, if the Court please: I renew my motion for a new trial upon this offer.

The Court: The motion is denied for very obvious reasons, Mr. Hallinan. You might call the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: I would like to know now the status of the document counsel introduced yesterday. He wants his copy back. You are giving him his copy back, is that correct? Is there any question that the copy I substituted is an authentic copy? You might look at it, if so.

Mr. Donohue: There is only this question: The document was not even marked for identification or offered in evidence, [2640] only that portion of it which contained the resolutions which were submitted for identification.

The Court: Do you want any other part of it?

Mr. Hallinan: I want the whole thing.

Mr. Donohue: I have to object to it.

Mr. Hallinan: It is in now.

Mr. Donohue: You may think it is.

Mr. Hallinan: Move your head and it will fall off.

Mr. Donohue: You move yours. If Your Honor pleases, the document in question was handed to the witness for the purpose of identifying on page 31 that portion thereof which contained the resolution in question.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: We asked Your Honor to permit it to be identified, and we asked Your Honor then to submit it in evidence. At that time we were given by Your Honor permission to substitute a photostatic copy of that portion of the document.

The Court: That is true. I am not foreclosing Mr. Hallinan from referring to any other part of the document in the examination of the witness and he may offer all or any other part of the document which appears to be material.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection to that, but I do not want Mr. Hallinan to state, as he stated a minute ago, that the document is in evidence.

The Court: The document is in evidence in so far as a [2641] resolution embodied therein is concerned. I am not foreclosing counsel for the defendants referring to any other part of the document if it be material in the examination of this witness or any other witness.

Bring in the jury.

(Thereupon the jury were brought into the courtroom, and after they had assembled in the jury box, the following occurred:)

PAUL CROUCH

resumed the stand on behalf of the United States; previously sworn.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

Mr. Donohue: I have no further questions of this witness, Your Honor.

The Court: Cross-examine.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Mr. Crouch, you say that Mr. Schneidermann on some occasion complained or quarreled with you because you could not get your wife to do something she did not want to do, is that right?

A. In his capacity——

Q. Can't you answer that yes or no?

A. The question is misleading.

Q. I just wanted to confirm the supposition I made from your testimony that Mr. Sceneidermann was not a married man, is that [2642] right?

A: What?

Q. I said obviously Mr. Schneidermann was not a married man?

A. Mr. Schneidermann is a married man, or was.

Q. You still thought you could persuade your wife to do something she didn't want to do, is that right? Your experience with wives has been different from the experience I have had with mine, I will assure you. Without committing you unalterably to dates, but in order to try to fix one or two of these matters as well as it may be, Mr. Crouch, I would like to see if we can get with a little more particularity the dates of these conventions that were testified to. I have here a newspaper called The Western Worker, which a previous witness has said was edited by the Communist Party on the West Coast, and questions were addressed to him touching the dates of the meeting in New York, and he was unable to refresh his recollection from them. I want to show you the same paper and ask you if you can help us determine exactly what the dates of that convention were.

Is it all right if I point out the part without transgressing the Court's order?

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. Hallinan (Indicating to the witness): This is the portion that I want to get now. Does that relate to that convention? That is it, that line. Let me see. We will turn a [2643] page back and see if that describes the convention. Here, I think this is it. Maybe I can find the exact language here:

> "The nomination of the candidates will take place at a monster mass meeting in Madison Square Garden in New York."

This is the paper of Thursday, June 25th, see?

Mr. Donohue: May I ask Your Honor whether the question is asked of the witness, as I was told at first, by Mr. Hallinan to refresh his recollection as to the time.

The Court: I assume it is.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: Or is it as to the substance and truth of the statement?

The Court: I assume it is as to time.

Mr. Hallinan: It is not for the purpose of impeachment. It is just to fix these dates a little more specific.

Mr. Donohue: I thought we agreed yesterday on the dates of the convention——

The Court: It will do no harm.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Will you read that language, "The nomination of the candidates will take place at a monster mass meeting in Madison Square Garden in New York City," and then it states something about broadcasts and now if we skip over to the next page, we have here, "Historic Convention." And then what I want to get here is the agenda of the party. The main points of the agenda of the convention it gives as follows. [2644] I notice in here the name of one or two people who were friends of yours: "Gil Green"?

A. Correct.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, is this newspaper in evidence?

Mr. Hallinan: No.

Mr. Donohue: Why read from it?

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Can you tell us by refreshing your recollection from that paper, what the agenda of the convention was, Mr. Crouch? Is the light too dim for you?

A. The paper shown me reads, "Main points on agenda of the convention are as follows: one, to fight against reaction, Fascism, war, United Fronts, the presidential elections—"——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Pardon me. Could you speak a little louder and slower, please?

The Witness: "The presidential elections, and the farmer-labor party."

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Are you reading this off in separate lots?

A. Yes. This is under "1." To resume, "one, the fight against reaction, Fascism, war, United Fronts, the presidential elections and the farmer-labor party." Reporter, Earl Browder, general secretary.

"Two: Party organization, Reporter, F. Brown. Problems of forces. Reporter, Charles Krumbein." [2645]

"Three: Organizing the toiling youth. Reporter, Gil Green."

"Four: The circle for peace and the peace policy of the Soviet Union. Reporter, Robert Miner."

"Five: Election of Central Committee."

"Six: Nominations of presidential ticket."

Turn it over a page or two to see if the agenda was carried out——

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please, obviously this paper is not a special report of the incidents or happenings of this convention.

Mr. Hallinan: That is correct.

Mr. Donohue: And for that reason could not be introduced in evidence. It could only be used by the witness, as Mr. Hallinan said it was going to be used, to refresh his recollection about the date.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all.

Mr. Donohue: He certainly can not use this paper as a standard to determine——

The Court: That is apparently the purpose.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all I want to do, because these things should not be so much in doubt. There must be some record to confirm these.

Now, if you will look at this part, which says "Open by Foster," and then coming down to here, can you tell us the order [2646] in which this agenda was carried out and the dates or the days on which these separate matters on the agenda were in fact discussed or performed.

Mr. Donohue: May I suggest, if your Honor please, that the witness be instructed to read from the newspaper himself?

The Court: That is what he is doing.

Mr. Donohue: Not to the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: He can do whichever he wishes.

Mr. Donohue: The paper is not in evidence, if your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: He can use the same language if he wishes. I do not think there is any doubt about that. It is just to fix the dates. What is the question about it?

Mr. Donohue: No, it is not to fix the dates.

Mr. Halilnan: What is it for?

Mr. Donohue: You just said it a moment ago. Counsel said there must be some record to show what occurred, what the agenda was, and when it was carried out. He purports that this is such a record. It is not.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I do not. All I want to do is see if we can get the dates on which the separate things were done, when the convention opened. That is all I want.

The Court: I so understand.

Mr. Hallinan: And I will say this, your Honor: It is subject to any modification. If they want to bring in any kind [2647] of document or other witness, we have stated we won't hold the witness bound by it. I would like to see if we can fix the time with some degree of definiteness. That is our only purpose.

Mr. Donohue: I merely ask the witness that he read from this newspaper to himself.

Mr. Hallinan: I might say to the jury there is nothing in any statement that is in there different from what he just read. There is nothing inflammatory, no conclusions. They are merely news items that give the name of the person and the subject of the discussion. [2648]

The Court: As far as the record is concerned, he may read it either aloud or to himself. I think I understand the purpose at this time. If there be any other purpose, it will be disclosed hereafter.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: Have you read it, Mr. Witness?

The Witness: I have.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, now, could you tell us, then, what was the—the dates, as I understand it, were the 24th to the 28th inclusive, isn't that correct?

A. The newspaper indicates it ended on Sunday, and to the best of my recollection the convention ended with a meeting at Madison Square Garden where nominations were made for president and vice president on Sunday, June 28. The convention was of five days' duration, opening on the previous Wednesday, and without a calendar I couldn't say offhand what day of the month it would be.

Q. Well, that would be the 24th. So those are the dates that we have had already, but as I say, we wanted to get now the first day, that would be Monday the 24th, what do you find was the matter disposed of on the agenda?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. He can't prove what hapepned on the 24th by what the Western Worker——

Mr. Hallinan: No, he has stated it himself.

The Court: It may be in the nature of refreshment of his [2649] recollection.

Mr. Donohue: To that we have no objection.

The Court: He may state independently if he recalls.

Mr. Donohue: If he cannot, if his recollection can be refreshed by this Communist paper, I have no objection.

Mr. Hallinan: Do you know of any reason they should misrepresent the dates of their convention?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: We agreed by stipulation yesterday to the dates of the convention.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, we have agreed that they were the 24th to the 28th inclusive. That was agreed upon. There is no dispute about that, but what I want to get is, What were the items of the agenda disposed of on each separate day?

Q. If you can remember without refreshing your recollection, Mr. Crouch, tell us; if you can't, refresh your recollection.

A. My recollection is that on the opening day of the convention there was a report by Earl Browder, the General Secretary of the Party; and without refreshing my memory from this, because I do not know whether this order is accurate or not, my recollection is there was a report, either immediately or shortly thereafter, by Gilbert Green on the organization of the working class youth and the Young Communists League. There was——

Q. Wait a moment now. Are you trying now to confine yourself to Wednesday, June 24? [2650]

A. I am unable to distinguish as to what happened any specific day.

Q. Can't you refresh your recollection as to that?

A. I can't tell whether this is an accurate account or not.

Q. Do you know of any reason—and what days do you find there that these matters occurred on? What days?

A. This reports that the Wednesday afternoon

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

session heard the report of the Central Committee delivered by Earl Browder; that Gil Green, secretary of the Young Communists League, reported Wednesday on the plight of the youth, and then a report followed, also on Wednesday apparently, from this, by Charles Krumbein on the—which dealt with the—not quoting from this, but as I recall Krumbein's report, he reported on the cadres or organization of the forces in the Party, how to use personnel. Thursday, this states, was devoted to discussion and to reports—incidentally, in connection with this, I was a speaker in that discussion, I might add—of Negro sharecroppers from the South, farmers from the Middle West, the farmer-labor party questions; and Friday also was devoted to discussion, and Saturday to a report——

Q. What about Friday? Was that the same subjects that were discussed on Thursday?

A. Yes, general discussion of the delegates.

Q. Then Friday what?

A. Then Friday was also devoted to fullest discussion. As [2651] stated in this paper, the highlight of Saturday's session was to be a report by Robert Miner on the fight for peace. There is no mention in this article of the date, of the point on the agenda dealing with the election of the Central Committee.

Q. Let me show you something that is there on that subject, Mr. Crouch.

Mr. Donohue: Are we subsequently going to introduce this volume in evidence, if your Honor please, from which testimony is being so freely given?

Mr. Hallinan: Take a look at this part in red. We will supply a copy if there is any question.

Q. What is your recollection now as to the date, or the day, rather, upon which the election of the Central Committee was held?

A. Saturday, to the best of my recollection. I am not positive; I am speaking to the best of my recollection.

Q. The Central Committee was elected then on Saturday where? A. What do you mean?

Q. Where was the convention held at which the Central Committee was elected?

A. It was held in a private hall rented by the Party. I do not recall the name or the address.

Q. By that you mean the selection of the committee in the manner that you indicated but not their election by the entire [2652] convention, is that right?

A. It was elected by the entire convention of accredited delegates so far as the formal vote was taken, but not at the public meetings which are referred to and spoken of in this newspaper.

Q. That is what I want to find out. When was that public meeting held?

A. The public meeting took place on Sunday, June 28, in Madison Square Garden for the purpose of nominating Earl Browder for president and James W. Ford for vice president of the United States, and was a public meeting not limited to delegates and not limited to members of the Communist Party and not strictly a Party meeting but a public meeting.

Q. We are not concerned with that so much. It is asked as far as the time. A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the nomination of these gentlemen as candidates for presidential election was at the Madison Square Garden on Sunday?

A. The nomination of Browder and Ford was at the Madison Square Garden on Sunday, June 28.

Q. And then was the election by the convention of the Central Committee held at the same time?

A. No.

Q. When was that held? [2653]

A. At a prior date, and to the best of my recollection was on the previous day, Saturday, June 27, to the best of my recollection.

Q. So that the names of the nominees on this Central Committee were never presented to the general convention, is that correct?

A. Only—the actual people that were on this slate, the actual members of the Central Committee, was never presented at any public meeting.

Q. So that the convention as a whole never voted upon the Central Committee, is that correct?

A. Oh, you are misquoting what I said.

Q. No, I don't intend to. I thought you said that they weren't——

A. Elected at a public meeting. I did not say they were not elected by the convention.

Q. And were the names ever submitted on the floor of the convention to the—I don't know what the number is—that paper says 750?

A. Correct.

Q. But one of the other witnesses said he thought there were three or four hundred. What is your estimate?

A. There were about 300 to 350 regular delegates and an equal number of alternate delegates who would have had the right of vote if the regular delegate was absent, making a total of approximately 700 regular and alternate delegates.

Q. What I mean now is, Was this list of candidates for the [2654] Central Committee ever elected by that 700 or 750 people? A. Yes, they were.

Q. And when?

A. I have stated that to the best of my recollection they were elected on Saturday, the 27th.

Q. I see.

A. I cannot be positive on the date, but my best recollection is they were elected on Saturday.

Q. Was that list ever submitted to the people in the Madison Square Garden meeting?

A. No, not the names that were voted on on the actual Central Committee weren't submitted at Madison Square Garden.

Q. So then we may take it as a reasonable resume of the proposition that an election of delegates to the Central Committee was held Saturday, June 27?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. And can you tell us where that was held?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. In a private hall with the address given only to the delegates. The address of that hall, I do not now recall, since so many years have elapsed and since I have attended so many Party conventions.

Q. Was it a different place from where the meetings were being held, the Manhattan Opera House?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was. I cannot be positive on that, but to the best of my recollection there were [2655] various meetings, some of which were held in the Manhattan Opera House, some were held at other places, commission meetings, meetings of the presidium, commissions——

Q. I mean the convention itself, Mr. Crouch. Did the members of the convention themselves meet at any place other than in the Manhattan Opera House?

A. To the best of my recollection, we went to another hall for the purpose of electing the Central Committee.

Q. That is, the whole 750 people went there?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And they received some sort of a notation or some sort of an address that caused them to go there, is that it?

A. Through the heads of their delegations, yes.

Q. In other words, at some place during the session in the Manhattan Opera House the heads of the delegations were notified that a special meeting would be held in another and different place for the occasion of electing this Central Committee, is that correct?

A. That was the procedure in practically all Party conventions, and to the best of my recollection, it was used in this particular case.

Q. Because we don't want to get it confused now with the ordinary procedure. If you don't remember, it is all right; you are not supposed to remember everything; but some place, then, as far as this convention itself is concerned, the convention [2656] adjourned from the place where it had been meeting and went to a different hall where the nominations for the members of the Central Committee were presented to them, is that correct?

A. To the best of my recollection, it is.

Q. You don't remember now where that hall was? A. No, I don't.

Q. Well, how did you get there?

A. We traveled to these halls by subways.

Q. And was the hall where this special meeting took place very far distant from the Manhattan Opera House?

A. I do not now recall these things since I went to all the meetings from downtown where I was staying.

Q. The Manhattan Opera House was the place, I take it, where all these addresses were given by Mr. Browder, Mr. Brown, Mr. Green, Mr. Miner, yourself and the others, and all those things that you have identified from the agenda, except as to the election of the Central Committee, occurred in the Manhattan Opera House?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. Where is the Manhattan Opera House located?

A. I do not recall the street address in New York City now. It has been many years since I left there.

Q. I wouldn't expect you to, but can you tell us where it is, do you know around what street or in what neighborhood?

A. No, I am sorry, I can't. [2657]

Q. You said that you were staying downtown?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you living in New York at that time?

A. To the best of my recollection I was—I stayed at the St. George Hotel during this convention. That is my belief.

Q. Where is that?

A. That is down around 12th Street. It isn't—near, only within a block from the national office of the Communist Party.

Q. Then can you give us any approximation as to the location of that Manhattan Opera House?

A. I cannot now recall, because so many years have gone by and since the Manhattan Opera House was only one of dozens of halls to which I have gone during Party conventions.

Q. I am not criticizing; I have a purpose in wanting to find out, because I do not know myself, and I do not know where the St. George Hotel is, or where Madison Square Garden is. I must confess, when I go to New York we generally run out to the Bronx

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Zoo and spend the whole time there looking at the animals and then we go home.

The streets in New York, as I remember, start in way down at the bottom of the grade, 1, 2, 3, then they run up to 150, 160, 180, up to the 200's. Do you know where with regard to those streets roughly the St. George Hotel is?

A. The St. George Hotel is roughly around 12th.

Q. Now, can you tell us then roughly where the Manhattan Opera House is? [2658]

A. I do not recall.

Q. Well, I mean, could you tell us within, oh, forty or fifty blocks?

A. I am afraid I can't even do that.

Q. What is that section called that is out where the Bronx Zoo is? Is that called the Bronx?

A. That is called the Bronx.

Q. What streets does that involve?

A. The section as you approach the zoo runs somewhere, to the best of my recollection, from around 170 to 200, somewhere around there; I don't know exactly now.

Q. What I want to get, Is the Manhattan Opera House in that neighborhood?

A. Oh, no, not that far up; somewhere in Manhattan is all I can definitely recall.

Q. And then the streets that cut across these numbered streets on the Island are not very numerous, the avenues that run at right angles to the streets. Do you know what avenue it is on?

A. I do not recall.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Do you know which side of Broadway it is on? A. No, I do not.

Q. Have you ever attended any other convention there?

A. I have attended several meetings at the Manhattan Opera House, but I cannot recall the address of the Manhattan Opera House. [2659]

Q. Was it used pretty much by the Communist Party for conventions?

A. Not too frequently; only on rare occasions.

Q. Where is Madison Square Garden?

A. Madison Square Garden, again very—this is only to the best of my recollection—is somewhere between 50th and 60th, a little to the west of Broadway, but this is only my recollection.

Q. Now, can you tell us, having gone to the Manhattan Opera House, how did you get to the other place to which the convention adjourned on Saturday?

A. To the best of my recollection, we didn't go directly to the meeting from there. Some of us went to dinners at various places. My impression—my best recollection is that there was a noon or an adjournment sometime in the course of the afternoon; Robert Miner's address report was completed; that there was an adjournment, and we had dinner, and then we went from wherever we were to the address which were handed out by the heads of the district delegations, for the purpose of electing the Central Committee.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Were you the head of your district delegation? A. I was.

Q. And was the communication given to you in writing or orally?

A. I was handed slips of paper at all of these conventions [2660] when changes of addresses were made.

Q. Let's see if we can get away from the general custom. If you don't remember, as I say, it is all right; but do you remember whether you were given a written document or only told orally?

A. No, we were never told orally. To the best of my recollection—I am speaking for the best of my recollection in this case because there are no specific incidents to make this precise—that I was given, in the usual way, slips which I passed out to the members of my delegation giving the address, nothing but the address.

Q. How many people in your delegation?

A. About six.

Q. So then you would be given six slips of paper giving the address to which they were to resort, is that correct?

A. That is correct. That is the procedure.

Q. Then you handed them to the people in your delegation? A. That is the procedure.

Q. The meeting at which this Central Committee was elected, do you remember, was it held in the daytime or in the evening?

A. I cannot specifically recall the hour. My impression—this is only an impression—is that it was held in the late afternoon, but I cannot be precise and absolutely state that it was not held before dark, but my belief is it was held in the late afternoon. [2661]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And how long did that meeting last?

A. There are no notes or anything to refresh my recollection. I would estimate from my best recollection that the meeting perhaps lasted an hour and a half, but there is absolutely nothing to refresh my memory and no specific incidents to enable me to say how long any of the convention election sessions lasted in terms of exact hours or exact minutes.

Q. Well, it would be difficult. Now, the building—did you have anything to do with renting any of the premises or obtaining the facilities of either the opera house or Madison Square Garden or the other building?

A. I had nothing whatever to do with that.

Q. This building in which the meeting was held on Saturday afternoon or evening for the election of the Central Committee, could you describe generally what type of building it was? [2662]

A. The only thing impressing itself on my mind that I could describe is that the approximate length, as compared to the width, was about the same as this courtroom, or perhaps a little longer in proportion, and with a platform perhaps three feet high, to my best recollection, a rather long platform, because I recall quite a number of party leaders who were seated across the platform, some of whom I could name if you wish, who were present at the reading of the list of nominees.

Q. I do not care about this now because I want to see about locating that place a little more accurately. You say a platform. Was it a stage or was it a specially constructed platform or what?

A. A regular stage or platform, extending practically, if not entirely, the full width across. It might not have been the full width, but it was quite wide, at least as wide, I would say, as 30 feet or more.

Q. Did it have a curtain in front of the platform, a stage curtain?

A. If there was a stage curtain, it was not raised or lowered. There might have been. I do not recall.

Q. Were you seated on a platform or in the audience?

A. I was seated in the audience, very near the front, only perhaps three or four rows removed from the front.

Q. And then about how many people did you say were seated on the platform? [2663]

A. I can recall about 15, and there were others, I believe. I can recall roughly, to the best of my recollection, about 25.

Q. With relation to the size of the room in which the meeting was held, how would it compare with this courtroom? Bigger, smaller or what?

A. Considerably larger, twice the size of this courtroom.

Q. I would imagine that would be true, because

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

750 people were seated in there in addition to the people seated on the platform, 700 or 750 people. What was the nature of the type of chairs, do you remember that?

A. I don't recall specifically the type of chairs.

Q. Do you know whether they were the type of chairs that could be moved away or were they fastened to the floor or what?

A. That I cannot recall.

Q. Here is what I am trying to get at: Were the seats permanently affixed? Was there, for instance, a sloped floor as there would be in a theater, or was it a flat floor?

A. It was a flat floor, but whether the seats were fixed or not I cannot recall.

Q. You can't tell us, you stated already, what time this was, so it is futile to ask what time you got there or anything of that kind or what time you left. But do you remember after that meeting adjourned, where did it reconvene again? Did the members return to the Manhattan Opera House or did they disperse to their respective homes or what took place? [2664]

A. To the best of my recollection, this was the last meeting of the convention as such. It was the last meeting at which the 700 delegates met as delegates before the formal session in Madison Square Garden. In other words, the election of the new Central Committee was the last official act of the delegates as delegates, and the following day they took part in the formal public nomination, which had already been previously decided, of Foster and Ford.

Q. And that took place at Madison Square Garden? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, the convention sessions had been held prior to that at the Manhattan Opera House, did they start in the morning or in the afternoon or in the evening, that is, the prior meetings, starting on Wednesday, June 24th?

A. They started in the mornings.

Q. About what time?

A. To the best of my recollection, about 9:30.

Q. And I am not trying to pin you down in hours. I just want to get the general picture. Around 9:30, and then would there be another meeting in the afternoon, another session in the afternoon? A. Yes.

Q. What time would that customarily start?

A. I do not recall that each day followed the same pattern. It was a question of how long a time was required to complete [2665] reports and complete certain points in the agenda before lunch adjournments were made and, as I can recall, the length of the adjournments was not always the same, because sometimes there would be meetings of commissions and meetings of the presidium between. As I remember, the schedule about hours varied very much from day to day.

Q. But there would be a session every afternoon at any rate, I suppose?

A. Yes. There were sessions to the best of my recollection, every morning and every afternoon of varying length.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Then were there sessions in the evening?

A. To the best of my recollection, there were sessions one or two evenings, but not all evenings. There were commission meetings, delegation meetings and presiding committee meetings and things of this kind going on sometimes when the convention was in session, and at other times during the adjournment, and most of the time I was tied up on various commissions on the presiding committee of which I was a member, and sometimes my work on the presiding committee or on those commissions carried me away from the floor of the convention when it was actually in session.

Q. Where would those committee meetings be held? In the Presidium—is that what you call it?

A. Presiding Committee, Presidium.

Q. Where would that be held? [2666]

A. Some of those meetings, most of those meetings, to the best of my recollection, were held in surrounding or adjoining halls to the main meeting hall, or sometimes the corners of the meeting hall during recesses. Sometimes we had meetings in hotel rooms or meeting places nearby, or elsewhere in the city.

Q. I suppose that where there was a considerable number of people, then they would hold a meeting in one of the adjoining halls, and where there were only a few people, they might hold them in a hotel room, but I do not suppose a great many people assembled in hotel rooms in those matters?

A. I mean the hotels which had regular meeting rooms.

Q. How many people were on your Presidium?

A. Oh, perhaps 25 to 30. I don't recall the exact number.

Q. Is it the fact, do you state that there were in addition to the main hall in the Manhattan Opera House some smaller or subsidiary adjoining halls that were also available to the convention?

A. There were places around—I do not recall halls as such, but there were places where they could meet in waiting rooms or in the lobby, like, and so on, and other meetings, as I said, took place elsewhere.

Q. From the name I gather that this building was a theater building. Was it, the Manhattan Opera House?

A. A large public hall, and I am not sure, after so many years, about its exact geographical details as I would on a meeting [2667] hall I visited yesterday. But I think it had supplementary meeting rooms, too.

Q. Did that have fixed chairs like a theater or were they movable chairs in that building?

A. That I cannot recall.

Q. What about the stage there? Was there a stage or a platform?

A. A platform—it could be called a stage or a platform, which differed only slightly, to the best of my recollection, from the platform of the hall where the election took place. As I can recall now, after all these years, there was no great or material difference. But my impression is that the hall in which these reports were made was wide in proportion to its length than was the hall where the nominations took place.

Q. In this Manhattan Opera House, did that have a floor sloping down to the stage or was it a flat floor?

A. To the best of my recollection, flat.

Q. And the chairs, were they affixed to the floor?

A. I stated in answer to a previous question that I didn't recall.

Q. Were the chairs simply wooden chairs or were they the plush covered theater chairs? Do you remember that?

A. Those physical details I cannot recall after the lapse of these number of years.

Q. You attended every session of the convention, I take it, at [2668] some time or other, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Although sometimes you had to depart for the Presidium or committee meetings that you discussed and went to another part of the building or to an adjoining hotel room or something, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. Did the Manhattan Opera House have a gallery, boxes?

A. I cannot specifically recall.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Were the public admitted to the convention meetings in the Manhattan Opera House?

A. Emphatically no, they were not.

Q. None of the public were admitted at all?

A. No, non-party persons were not admitted at all, or anyone except accredited delegates.

Q. Then when you came to the door, I suppose you had to present such credentials as you possessed in order to gain admission?

A. That is correct. We had ribbons which we wore, one color for regular, one color for alternate, to the best of my recollection, and we had printed admission tickets.

Q. And then I suppose a space was assigned to each delegation where they sat and they had banners, and so forth, like ordinary legitimate political parties, is that right?

A. Only at Madison Square Garden were there any conspicuous [2669] banners that I can recall, where there were specific sections assigned to our delegation. We were seated together as groups. The Carolina delegation was seated in one place, the California delegation was seated in another place, and to the rear of where I was seated.

Q. Then did they have some standard or banner that indicated the state name where the delegation was supposed to sit?

A. I don't recall any banners. There might have been, but I don't recall.

Q. How did you know where to locate your section where you would go?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. As—to the best of my recollection—I cannot be specific on this since there is nothing specific to call this to my attention—we were seated more or less by assignment from the men who were—from Benson and Peters, who handled all the mechanical details of the convention.

Q. Then what was your convention called? The South Carolina convention or was it called the convention of which you were head?

A. You mean delegation of which I was the head?

Q. I mean the delegation.

A. The delegation was called the Carolina delegation or District 16 delegation.

Q. So far as you know, did the Communist Party have any meeting hall of its own in New York of any size that would accommodate [2670] any reasonably large number of people?

A. The Communist Party had a large number of meeting halls in its national office, which would have accommodated anything short of the full convention. I do not think there were meeting halls sufficient to accommodate the 700 delegates in full, but it would have accommodated any of the smaller commissions. But the Communist Party never used its own halls for any meetings in connection with secretly held conventions.

The Court: Have we reached a point when we can recess?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: We might take the morning recess, ladies and gentlemen. The same admonition not to discuss the case under any conditions nor to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2671]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Mr. Crouch, there were a couple of terms that you used that I am somewhat confused on. Is there any distinction between the National Committee, the Central Committee and the Politburo?

A. The term "Central Committee" was the term officially used by the Communist Party to describe its leading committee during the '30's, and today, and since around 1940, somewhere around that period, it has been known as the National Committee, with the same meaning. Back in the '20's the term generally used was "Central Executive Committee" or "CEC"; then about 1930 the Central Committee—for instance, Browder's reports always used the term "Central Committee."

Q. The reason is unimportant. I just want to know. Then the Central Executive Committee, the Central Committee and the National Committee would mean the same body? A. Yes.

Q. What about the Politburo, was that the same body, too?

A. No, the Central Committee, or later the National Committee, or earlier CEC, elected a small committee which ranged, to my recollection, anywhere from a minimum of five members to a maximum of about eleven members at various periods.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

which was known as the Political Bureau. It was referred to in short in the '20's as the Polcom—P-o-l-c-o-m.

Q. At any rate, it is not the Central Committee or the National Committee? [2672]

A. It is a small committee of the Central Committee.

Q. What I mean, the terms are not synonymous?

A. No.

Q. But Central Committee and National Committee are?

A. That is correct.

Q. You say you have attended a great many of those meetings. In the ordinary course of business of a convention is the election of committees the last order of business? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Now, I want to show you in this same paper that we used, as I said before, only to refresh your memory again, Mr. Crouch——

Mr. Donohue: Again may I ask your Honor to instruct the witness to read the article to himself for the purpose of refreshing his recollection.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hallinan: Just this last paragraph, that particular last sentence.

Q. Now, does that have any effect upon your recollection of the day upon which the Central Committee was elected?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Now, you testified to certain matters refreshing your recollection from this article.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Correct.

Q. And the article states this——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, to counsel [2673] reading the article. It isn't in evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: No, but he has refreshed his recollection from it.

Mr. Donohue: He said having read the article, it in no way refreshes his recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: It is still only to refresh his recollection.

The Court: For the limited purpose of refreshing his recollection, I can see no harm.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all it is.

Mr. Donohue: Except, practically, the witness has read the article to himself, and he said having read the article, it in no way refreshes his recollection. Obviously he cannot impeach him by reading this article to him. Obviously an article in the Western Worker is not admissible in evidence. It has no probative value. And I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: That may be.

Mr. Hallinan: I just want to see what distinction there may be between the refreshing of his recollection on other dates and this one small item which, as I say, isn't a very important matter anyhow.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hallinan: The article, or, rather, the paragraph that I had in mind, read:

"The final session of the 9th Convention Sun> day was [2674] to be held at Madison Square Garden as a great mass meeting."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

We agreed that that was the fact. That refreshed your recollection, that was so.

> "At this session the Party's election platform is to be adopted and the candidates for president and vice president nominated."

And you agreed that that refreshed your recollection; that that was so, is that correct?

A. That is not correct, because I already recollected the full facts before I read that. It added nothing to my recollection.

Q. Well, at least it doesn't break your recollection or contradict your recollection?

A. No, it corresponds to the facts in so far as you have read.

Q. Then this last sentence, "A new National Committee of the Party was to be democratically elected." That is contained in the same paragraph describing what took place at the ninth convention on Sunday at the Madison Square Garden. Doesn't that change your recollection or refresh it to the extent of now recalling that this new National Committee of the Party was to be democratically elected on Sunday at the Madison Square Garden?

A. In no way, because that is exceptionally cleverly and trickily written, intended to deceive the public. If you will note, while it is in the same paragraph, it does not say there [2675] "to be democratically elected on Sunday"; he merely places the sentence in the same paragraph to give the reader that impression without saying so. And in the second place, he intends to give the public the impression that Communist Central Committees are democratically elected, which is far from the facts.

Q. I see. In other words, it is for popular consumption and worded in such a way as to make it look as though the Central Committee was to be elected in Madison Square Garden, whereas in fact it was not? A. That is correct.

Q. So that your recollection then of the election of that committee on the day before the Madison Square Garden meeting is not affected by reading this article?

A. No. I would like to add there were some officials elected as an election committee or something in that connection, but it was not the National Committee, it had nothing to do with the National Committee, but was a kind of popular committee for the purpose of carrying on the election campaign. It was not the Central Committee, had nothing to do with making Party policies, and was in no way associated with the Committee which had been elected before the Madison Square Garden meeting.

Q. Now, I notice in skipping over some of your testimony of yesterday that you spoke of a meeting, you said, "during the [2676] course of the convention and at a meeting of the new Central Committee which followed for the purpose of electing the Politburo of the Party." Now, was this Politburo then elected by the Central Committee?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. By the new Central Committee.

Q. I see. The new Central Committee elected the Politburo? A. Correct.

Q. And how did they do that? What was the procedure for electing that Politburo?

A. The procedure in general—and as I recall, it applied in this case—was that at the Central Committee meeting Browder announced that "The election of a Politburo is in order," and someone, usually Stachel—I think Stachel on this occasion—got up and read a proposed slate, and a motion was made, and another seconded it, that this be the Politburo of the Party. There were no further nominations, no one declined, and this went through like a perfect steamroller.

Q. So, Mr. Crouch, while it is perfectly all right, when we know what you are doing, to use the general practice, I would like to confine ourselves to what you remember of these particular instances. So if you don't remember them, you can tell us that, then we can go into the general practice; but for the present moment if you will stay with your recollection of this matter. Now, the convention that you spoke about which [2677] elected the Central Committee, then, I suppose, having done that as its last order of business, the next procedure was the mass meeting at Madison Square Garden at which the presidential and vice presidential candidates were nominated. Is that approximately correct, or did the convention, having completed its work of nominating the Central Committee, have any, further business?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. The convention, after its election of the new Central Committee, had no further business except to also act as delegates at the public meeting at Madison Square Garden.

Q. And do you know what time of day that public meeting was held? Was it in the afternoon or in the morning? A. It wasn't in the morning.

Q. Was it in the evening?

A. It was afternoon or evening, to the best of my recollection, but I cannot recall the hour.

Q. Well, I have a reason that I would like to get the time of the day a little closer if I could. You can't remember whether it was the afternoon or evening. Now, remembering that it was a Sunday, would that help you to arrive at any conclusion? Do you remember what you did—let us say the meeting was in the evening, how did you consume the morning and the afternoon?

A. I don't recall the details of what I did during the day on the twenty—I do not recall the details or I do not [2678] recall what I ate, what shows I might have gone to, or any other of my mechanical routine details on the 28th, except that I recall attending and participating in the nomination of Earl Browder for president and James W. Ford for vice president and of hearing their nomination speeches, their acceptance speeches, which, incidentally, I recall were broadcasted by radio, and I recall Weinstone standing on the platform and waving his hands.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

to the audience to stop their applause because of the timing of the radio broadcast, but——

Q. Well, you can't tell us, though, whether it was morning, afternoon or evening?

A. I am quite certain it was not in the morning, but whether it was afternoon or evening I cannot recall.

Q. Then of course you don't remember what time it commenced or what time it ended?

A. I don't remember the number of hours.

Q. Now, was the Central Committee, its personnel, the fact of its election, discussed at all at the Madison Square Garden meeting?

A. The composition was not discussed, and I do not recall any reference to the Central Committee.

Q. You are sure, however, that the names of the persons were not given?

A. Definitely sure.

Q. Now, when did the Central Committee meet to elect the [2679] Politburo?

A. I cannot specifically recall whether the meeting was held the night—Saturday night or Sunday morning, but my best belief and my best recollection is that it was held Saturday night.

Q. Are you sure that it was held before the final ending of the convention itself? A. No.

Q. I suppose that it wouldn't be reasonable that the committee members would stay in New York for any very long period of time after the convention ended, is that right?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. To the best of my recollection, it was held prior to the Madison Square Garden meeting, to the best of my belief and recollection.

Q. So then it would have to be either Saturday night or Sunday morning?

A. To the best of my recollection, although I stayed in New York, the best I can recall, for a couple of days after the 28th for the purpose of a series of conferences on various fields of Party work, and I cannot be too specific, but my best recollection is it was held prior to it. I might—it is humanly possible that I might be mistaken, because I remained in New York for at least two days after June 28.

Q. When you say "at least two days," now, could it have been eight or ten days?

A. No, it couldn't have been over two or three days. [2680]

Q. Do you know whether or not you had meetings with the Central Committee within that two or three days? A. Oh, yes.

Q. How many?

A. One, only one of the full Central Committee.

Q. And that was after the convention had been closed?

A. That was after the final nominating session; that is after all the closed meetings of the convention had closed. I do not mean necessarily—not necessarily after the Madison Square Garden meeting.

Q. I am talking about the Madison Square

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Garden meeting as the ending of the convention. Let us say that Madison Square Garden ended the convention.

A. The meeting of the Central Committee would then have been prior to the ending of the convention, from that technical application, from that technical point of view.

Q. Are you sure whether it was prior to the ending of the convention?

A. I am not positive. I have already answered that question.

Q. You stayed in New York a couple of days, and during that couple of days you had at least one meeting with the Central Committee?

A. I said during those two days I had a series of conferences, various party meetings, trade union work in various other fields, and I stated while I was in New York, not necessarily [2681] the two days after—in fact, to my best belief and recollection, it was prior to the Madison Square Garden that we elected the new Politburo. I am almost—I am nearly certain. There is a human element. It could have been later, but my best belief and best recollection is that it was after the—of course, it was after the election started, which I believe we elected the new Central Committee, and prior to the Madison Square meeting.

Q. Then it would have to be on Sunday morning? A. Saturday night or——

Q. Saturday night or Sunday morning?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. To my best belief and recollection.

Q. After the Madison Square Garden, did you have any meeting with the Central Committee, after the Madison Square meeting?

A. Not unless there is the element of possibility that I could—that I might have been mistaken. I might have been mistaken—I don't think I was—on the date when we elected the Politburo, but aside from the date on which we elected the Politburo, I didn't have any meeting with the full Central Committee while I was in New York. I had one meeting—I attended one meeting of the full Central Committee after the convention was called to order, before I returned to North Carolina.

Q. You say that you saw Mr. Bridges during the course of the convention as well as at this meeting that you testified to?

A. I said my best recollection was that I saw him briefly. [2682]

Q. When?

A. My best recollection is that I saw him during the rather early stages of the convention in the anteroom or at the back of the hall, and my best recollection is of hearing Stachel, or one of the other top leaders of the party in making a remark that he had to go away for some kind of trade union work in which he was engaged and would miss most of the convention.

Q. And that was in the early part of the convention? A. To the best of my recollection.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Could you remember how soon after the convention started? A. No.

Q. It started on Wednesday. Was it on Wednesday?

A. It could have been. I don't recall specifically, and I stated that my impression, my best recollection on this question, I remember remarks about his being called away by members, leading members of the party, and at no time did he speak on the floor of the convention, but my best recollection is I saw him very briefly either in the anteroom or at the very back of the hall briefly.

Q. Did you know Mr. Stachel and these other people whose names you mentioned?

A. Very well indeed.

Q. Was their conversation addressed to you about Mr. Bridges being called away? [2683]

A. Partly to me and partly to other party leaders with whom I was in company.

Q. I mean you were close enough and it was addressed sufficiently to you that you would not be mistaken on the context of the thing?

A. I don't think so.

Q. The statement was made that he would be called away to do certain trade union matters and would hence miss a large part of the convention; is that correct?

A. That is as I can recall it, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Where were the trade union matters to be handled, do you know? Where would he be called to?

A. He could have been called to Washington or he could have been called to California. I don't recall. There is nothing now that I can recall to indicate where it would have been.

Q. Was anything said about the length of time that he would be away?

A. I don't recall that it was.

Q. Or how soon he would have to leave?

A. I got the impression, as I can recall now, I got the impression that he was leaving immediately.

Q. And you think to either Washington or California?

A. There was nothing said that I remember about it, and my knowledge—it is only from my knowledge of Mr. Bridges' work that I would draw that inference. [2684]

Q. We agreed you would not do that, Mr. Crouch, that you would try to tell us first what your recollection was, and then if necessary we would fill it in with what the customary matters were, but your recollection——

A. I don't recall any mention of where he was going.

Q. Just that Mr. Bridges was mentioned, that he was there, but that he was going to be called away on some trade union work and would miss the greater part of the convention?

A. As I recall.

Q. And then you saw him again on Saturday afternoon or evening?

A. If my memory serves me correct—if my memory is correct on the date on which we elected the new Politburo, it would have been Saturday evening or Sunday morning. I stated there is a human element. I kept no notes. I made no memorandum. And that was about thirteen years ago.

Q. Yes, I understand. I am not criticizing. Your memory is very good. You said that some place during this convention attention was called to the fact that Communists on the West Coast were under surveillance. Surveillance by whom?

A. I didn't say anything of the kind in my examination, as I can recall.

Q. I thought you said that the reason that Mr. Bridges was designated under the name of Rossi was that Communists on the West Coast were under surveillance or under espionage or some such word, under observation. [2685]

A. If you will reread the transcript of my testimony; I do not think you will find I said anything of the kind.

Q. Have you read the transcript yourself?

A. I have not. I have not seen it. But I don't recall using those words, that terminology. I don't recall being asked such questions. I would probably have added something along those lines if I had been asked or had an opportunity, but I don't recall having been asked.

Q. Go ahead. What was it?

A. What is the question?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. I wanted to ask you what was said about West Coast Communists being under surveillance.

A. I said where and when?

Q. Tell us. You said something was said about Mr. Bridges being called Mr. Rossi and the reason was—and now you were going to tell us what was said about him or other West Coast Communists or other West Coast Communists being under surveillance. What was said?

A. I don't recall having testified that any specific reason was given why the name of Rossi was used.

Q. No, but just this morning, just a moment ago, you said that if you had been asked you could have told us something about that. What could you have told us?

A. I could only tell you the facts known by Communist leaders at that time, but I never told you anything that was said at [2686] that convention, but I don't recall a thing.

Q. What was known by Communist leaders about that subject of surveillance of West Coast people?

A. I think that the surveillance is perhaps not an exact term——

Q. Don't adopt my phraseology. Use your own.

A. All right. In connection with the West Coast, the outstanding party's leader was Harry Bridges at that time, and it happened that Harry Bridges was known by the national officers of the Communist Party not to be a citizen of the United States, and therefore liable to deportation if his party membership was discovered, for this reason: ~~The~~ name of Rossi had been used for some time prior to this convention in references to him and to his work. For example, when Jack Stachel would be reporting to the Central Committee on the work——

Q. Wait a minute, if you will. I want to get now such parts of these statements as relate to those people being under surveillance. You told us this one part that Harry Bridges, being an alien, was subject to deportation. Those facts were known to the officers of the Communist Party. When did you first hear that subject discussed?

A. The first time I can recall hearing that subject discussed was in April, 1934, in a car between Denver, Colorado, and Cleveland, Ohio, at the time I first learned that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party. [2687]

Q. By a car do you mean a railroad car?

A. An automobile driven by John Harvey, a seaman and member, a former member of the Politburo, a member of the Central Committee, a leader in the maritime work, who was driving the car with me as a passenger, en route to the national convention of the Communist Party in April, 1934, in Cleveland, Ohio.

Q. That is the first time you heard the discussion about Harry Bridges being subject to deportation as an alien if he were a member of the Communist Party, or if his membership in the Communist Party were discovered? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And at that time was your information that he already was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Yes.

Q. And then Mr. Hardy who was driving the car——

A. Harvey, John Harvey.

Q. John Hardy then told you about the peril that Mr. Bridges was under?

A. He stated that due—after discussing the value of Mr. Bridges as an asset, as a leader in the waterfront out here in California, that the party would not be able to bring him forward as a member of the party, because he was not native-born, that—and his party membership would have to be kept in the background and not known, but with this limitation, that he was a very promising source, and that George Mink in particular [2688] regarded him as a potential future leader for the party.

Q. Did Mr. Hardy know Mr. Bridges, did you say?

A. He presumably did. He spoke to me as though he did, and discussed this work.

Q. Was he from the West Coast?

A. He was a seaman, and I think seamen are from about all coasts.

Q. They sail around the Seven Seas. Then when did you next hear any discussion by any party leader on the subject of the deportation of Mr. Bridges, if it were discovered he were a Communist?

A. The next discussions mentioned were in connection with general reports on his work and the necessity of exercising great precautions, and at first—for example, I think that Jack Stachel——

Q. Wait. We are getting a little ahead. I will come into that discussion presently. I said when.

A. To the best of my recollection, during the latter part of 1934.

Q. What part of 1934?

A. During the fall.

Q. The fall of 1934, and I am going into the conversations presently, but now I want to find out who were the persons with whom you had the discussion in the fall of 1934 relating to the necessity of Mr. Bridges concealing his Communist [2689] Party membership so that he would not be deported as an alien. Who was present?

A. Jack Stachel.

Q. Where did that conversation take place?

A. In a meeting of the Central Committee in New York and in subsequent meetings of the trade union commissions connected with the Central Committee.

Q. When did you next hear that same subject discussed? Now, I mean the probability or possibility of deportation if his membership in the Communist Party should be discovered.

A. After this I heard it mentioned so frequently that I cannot recall the persons or the places where it was talked about.

Q. Or the sequence in time, I suppose?

A. Pardon me?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Or the sequence in time.

A. Increasing discussion in 1935 and 1936 and to a greater degree after 1936.

Q. Increasing discussions in 1935 and 1936 and to a greater degree after 1936?

A. Yes.

Q. Into 1937, for instance?

A. Continuous from that time on, as long as I was in the party.

Q. By increasing discussions in 1935 and 1936, do you mean that the danger to Mr. Bridges seemed to be increasing? Was that the general context of the conversations, or is it that you heard [2690] it mentioned by more people and more frequently? Which?

A. I heard it mentioned by more people and more frequently, due to the increasing prominence of Bridges as a trade union leader and as a Communist Party trade unionist.

Q. Give us during 1934 and 1935 and 1936 as accurately as you can, the names of persons with whom you had a discussion on that subject or any persons who discussed that subject in your presence. Who were some of them?

A. Jack Johnstone.

Q. Jack Johnstone, yes.

A. Earl Browder on one or two occasions, Jack Stachel very frequently.

Q. Jack Stachel, all right.

A. Rob Hall on a number of occasions, Rob F. Hall.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Yes? A. And others——

Q. Who? Give us names, if you will, please.

A. Aside from these——

Q. Can't you dig around in your memory a bit now and tell us a few more names, Mr. Crouch? I do not want to press you on it, but see if you can remember a few more names, now, of those who discussed it. You mentioned Jack Johnstone, Earl Browder, Jack Stachel, Rob Hall, John Hardy——

A. Harvey.

Q. Harvey? [2691]

A. Harvey—H-a-r-v-e-y.

Q. That is the name under which Mr. Bridges was first supposed to be a Communist himself. Did you know that? A. I didn't know that.

Q. Are you sure it was not he you were riding in that automobile with?

A. I am quite sure.

Q. Take a good look. Are you certain? Was the man's name Jack Harvey or Harold Harvey?

A. His name was John Harvey, J-o-h-n.

Q. Did he look like the gentleman that you see here?

A. He was heavier built, and I believe he lives in San Francisco at the present time.

Q. When you have been chased by the Federal Government for 15 years, brother, you lose weight. Are you sure this is not the man himself? Take a good look. Do you mind standing up, Mr. Bridges? Take a good look, Mr. Crouch, will you please?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Aside from all the pleasantries and wisecracks that seem out of place, I am positively certain that this was not the John Harvey who traveled with me in a car.

Q. Where had you known this John Harvey from? Had you known him prior to the trip?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him since?

A. Yes. [2692]

Q. When did you last see him?

A. I last saw him here in San Francisco in the late fall of 1941, just before I left the Communist Party.

Q. That disposes of any possibility that this gentleman might be the same one, I would say, wouldn't you think so?

A. There is no possibility that John Harvey, a former member of the Politburo, a former student of the Lenin School in Moscow in 1941, Communist Party leader in charge of trade union work in Alameda County, representing the district, could be Harry Bridges.

Q. I am glad to hear you say that because, to tell you the truth, Mr. Crouch, yesterday we were sure you were going to put him in the Red Army. Can you give us the names of a few more people in addition to these five that you mentioned that discussed this subject in 1934, 1935 and 1936 that Harry Bridges must conceal, and that the Communist Party, must conceal his membership in the Communist Party because if it is discovered, he is going to be extradited from the United States, and that he would be banished from the United States as an alien? Can you dig down in your memory——

A. Yes, one additional name, at a much later date, with whom I discussed this in 1941 was Paul Schlipf.

Q. We are five years too far in advance of our time. We have 1934, 1935 and 1936. Could you confine your recollections to that time? [2693]

A. I do not recall specifically with certainty. I recall that a number of party members discussed this, but which party members said so, at which time, I cannot after these years specifically recall, because there was nothing—the remarks were general, not specific enough, and tied up with enough other events for me to specifically recall.

Q. I did not ask you to narrate them in sequence, just the names of the people. I do not care whether this one was in 1934 and that one was in 1936. You can transpose them around like shuffling cards, so long as we get them in those three years. Can you give us the names of these party members who discussed that subject with you in those three years? I do not want to tie you down. If you think a man discussed it in December, 1936, whereas in truth he discussed it in the spring of 1934, we will overlook that. We won't hold you to it. Can you give us names again?

A. I do not recall with sufficient accuracy and remembering approximately what was said to add any additional names to those cited.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. All right. Then can you tell me this: Within those three years, how many different persons in the Communist Party did you discuss that subject with? Now, that is a fair question.

A. To the best of my recollection and belief, I have heard perhaps a dozen top leaders of the Communist Party during those years discuss it. [2694]

Q. About twelve persons during that three years?

A. This is an approximation, from the best of my recollection, after the lapse of time.

Q. And those twelve persons, approximately—we are not being specific on it—those twelve persons during those three years discussed that subject with you?

A. Some with me and some in my presence and some at meetings of the Central Committee.

Q. That is just what I was getting at. About how many times during that three years did you hear that subject discussed among groups of persons?

A. During that time I heard the work of Harry Bridges as a Communist Party member——

Q. No, please. We are coming to that afterwards. All we are talking about now, I want to know how many times in that three years by any of these twelve persons more or less you heard discuss in front of groups, large or small, the subject that this Harry Bridges, who was a member of the Communist Party, was an alien, and that if the United States Government found that out, they would deport him? How many times did you hear that in groups, meetings?

A. Let me make it clear that the discussion along this line was by no means always in the words in which you have spoken now.

Q. I do not assume that, and I will not say even—I do not mean [2695] even where the conversation was confined to that, but I mean where that subject was involved or discussed. Now you have told us in this time, in addition to the people you have named, there were about twelve—or did the twelve include the people you named?

A. About a dozen additional.

Q. All right, that about twelve additional people discussed the subject that Harry Bridges was a Communist, he was also an alien, and if the United States Government found out he was a Communist, they would deport him? You say that in the three years you have heard twelve different people, in addition to the ones you named, discuss that and many times in front of groups or committees. How many times did you hear it discussed in front of groups or committees? [2696]

A. To the best of my recollection and belief, I heard it discussed four or five times at meetings of the Central Committee or smaller meetings connected with trade union policy work in the national office of the Communist Party. To the best of my recollection and belief, I have heard it discussed on four or five separate occasions, not always in the entirety, as you have placed it, but some aspect of the question relating to his possible deportation and the necessity of protecting him.

Mr. Hallinan: Shall we take the recess at this time?

The Court: Yes, if agreeable, we will take an adjournment until next Monday, the 19th of December, at 10:00 o'clock. Next Monday at 10:00 o'clock.

Ladies and gentlemen, the same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any circumstances and not to permit any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, and not to form or express an opinion thereon until the matter is finally submitted to you. I need not repeat to you the admonition given to you earlier in the case, that particularly over week-end periods, when you are relaxed, not to engage in any conversation at all concerning this matter at your home or elsewhere, socially or otherwise. May I again admonish you not to discuss the case and not to read any newspapers bearing upon this trial or any periodicals. We will now adjourn until next Monday at ten o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Monday, December 19, 1949, at 10:00 [2697] a.m.)

Monday, December 19, 1949, 10:00 A.M.

(The following proceedings were had out of the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: The case of the United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, I don't know whether counsel has as yet received the certified copy of conviction from Alliance, Nebraska, but in the event he hasn't, I have.

Mr. MacInnis: I received mine at 9:30 this morning.

Mr. Donohue: And I think we ought to dispose of the matter at this time, if your Honor please.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis has advanced this matter to the Court, and I take it he is the proper one to present it.

Mr. MacInnis: I received my copy, I don't know whether at the same time, but I received mine at 9:30 this morning. The certified copy does not identify the statute, and I am having the statutes of Nebraska checked so that I can produce it before the Court so that we may compare it with the Federal statute on whether the matter is a misdemeanor or a felony.

Mr. Donohue: It might help, if your Honor pleases. I have a telegram in response to an inquiry made with respect to the statute——

The Court: Pardon me; you will have to speak a little [2698] louder.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor. I have a telegram in response to an inquiry which we made, from James H. Anderson, Attorney General of the State of Nebraska, on the question as to what in 1926 when this offense was committeed the nature of the offense was.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I will have the volumes, possibly supplemented by this information, but I think the volumes of the Nebraska statutes might be of assistance to the Court.

Now, we have also made a request, pursuant to one of the discussions had with your Honor, for the Eisler transcript to be forwarded here. That I had expected this morning, but it didn't arrive.

Mr. Donohue: I was not concerned with that at the minute, if your Honor please.

The Court: We might take this matter up during the day when Mr. MacInnis is prepared to proceed.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, yes, I will be prepared to do that, your Honor.

The Court: Unless you have some further ideas in the matter.

Mr. Donohue: No, I am perfectly willing; we have waited this long; I have no desire not to afford Mr. MacInnis an opportunity to read the record.

Mr. MacInnis: I have read the record. The record is two [2699] pages, and that isn't difficult to read. It is only the correlation of the statute involved.

The Court: It is a matter requiring interpretation of the statute?

Mr. MacInnis: I believe it does, your Honor, I don't think the Court would be inconvenienced too much waiting until late today.

The Court: All right; late today or tomorrow morning. Let us put it down for tomorrow morning.

Mr. MacInnis: We will definitely be prepared completely by tomorrow morning, your Honor.

The Court: All right.

(Thereupon the jury was brought into the courtroom.)

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

PAUL CROUCH

resumed.

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Now, Mr. Crouch, at the time we adjourned on the last occasion we had been talking about the persons who discussed with you in the years '34, '35 and '36 the facts of Mr. Bridges' peril, if it were discovered that he was a member of the Communist Party, and we had gotten to the place where this had been discussed in certain committees, I think, and did you answer about how many people were in each [2700] of these committees before whom the discussions took place?

A. No, I wasn't asked.

Q. About how many? What would be the smallest extent and the largest extent?

A. The smallest extent, to the best of my recollection, were five or six. The largest meetings to which reference was made to his Party membership, and so on, was in—before meetings of the Central Committee; about thirty-five or so I believe was the maximum I remember.

Q. Now, the committees, I suppose, would be different sets of people; in other words, this was not repeated to the same committee fifteen or twenty times? The committees, I suppose, kept changing in personnel, is that correct?

A. Very slight change in personnel.

Q. I see.

A. For example, Stachel was present, I think, at all the meetings to which I have reference; J. Peters was present at all the meetings to which I refer, and there was a very small turnover in personnel.

Q. Now, for instance, in '34 there was a different Central Committee from what there was in '36, isn't that right?

A. Slightly. Just a few members were dropped and just a few members were added.

Q. Now, coming up to '37, you heard it, I suppose, discussed then, the same subject, that Harry Bridges, being an alien, was [2701] subject to deportation if it were discovered that he was a member of the Communist Party? You heard that subject again discussed, of course, during the year 1937, is that right?

A. Yes, I heard Jack Stachel say that the name Rossi was becoming too well known and that greater care should be used in reference to Comrade Rossi.

Q. He said that the name Rossi was becoming too well known? A. Yes.

Q. And did he indicate that the name Rossi was being used for Mr. Bridges?

A. He indicated the name Rossi was being used to identify Mr. Bridges.

Q. And that more care would have to be taken now; that this practice be discontinued, I take it?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when did he say that, now? You say in the year 1937, is that right?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. In what part of the year?

A. To the best of my recollection, during the winter or very early spring of 1937.

Q. You mean during the winter of 1936 or early spring of 1937? Is that what you mean?

A. It was after the first of the year.

Q. That would be the early part of 1937. Now, to whom did he [2702] say it, to some committee or gathering or convention?

A. At a trade union conference of Communist trade union leaders.

Q. How many people were there?

A. To the best of my recollection, about twenty, most of them members of the Central Committee.

Q. About how many were members of the Central Committee? A. About fifteen.

Q. And the other five, who were they?

A. Myself and another district organizer or two.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And then Stachel said that the name Rossi was becoming, I take it, too closely identified and too widely known as identifying Harry Bridges and that because of the danger of his being detected and deported as an alien, this would have to stop, is that right, something to that effect?

A. Essentially.

Q. And then was any conclusion arrived at as to what safeguard would now be thrown around Mr. Bridges to protect him from the knowledge that Rossi was the name being applied to him? What determination was arrived at?

A. There was no official determination. We all accepted Stachel's word and ceased talking about Comrade Rossi.

Q. Didn't mention him at all any more?

A. We had far less reference after that to Bridges in connection with the Party in general.

Q. Well, in other words, the committee, this fifteen or twenty [2703] people, stopped right away then speaking about Comrade Rossi, and then I suppose, having gone forth from the hall, they, each individual, also ceased talking about Comrade Rossi at all? Would that be about substantially a resume of the situation?

A. I cannot speak for the others. I know I personally was more careful in reference to Bridges in relation to the Party than I had been.

Q. So then nobody, so far as you knew, was going around any more saying, "Oh, look, we have got a very important labor leader named Rossi in the Party," or "We have got a very important labor leader" with no mention of the name Rossi, "in the Party," or anything like that? They stopped saying things like that?

A. They didn't stop saying things like that, because none of the Communist leaders were naive and foolish enough to use the words as you phrase them.

Q. You say they were?

A. They were not foolish enough to use the exact kind of language that you just employed.

Q. Well, the leaders were really sort of naive people, weren't they?

A. I don't think that is quite the proper adjective to describe most of the Communist Party leaders. They were blinded by fanaticism and so on, but I don't think they could be called naive. [2704]

Q. Well, I understand from what you have been telling us that you were all terrible rascals, I mean led lives of perjury and treason and violence, and so forth; but I mean as between yourselves you seem to have had a kind of innocent relationship.

Mr. Donohue: Object to the question, if the Court please.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Would you say that about describes the situation?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Please restate the question.

(Question read.) [2705]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. McMillan: May it please Your Honor, is that a question or an assertion?

The Court: It is hardly a question. The first part is to some extent argumentative. I overruled the objection in the interest——

Mr. Hallinan: I asked the question, Would that about describe the relationship?

The Witness: That is both a very compound and a complex question.

Mr. Hallinan: If you can't answer it, we will change it. Now, please. I have had about all the criticism I can stand in this court without getting a nervous breakdown myself, so if you will be kind enough not to characterize my questions——

Mr. McMillan: Is that a question, if it please Your Honor, or an assertion or declaration of counsel?

Mr. Hallinan: That is an impasse. Don't take it too gravely, Mr. McMillan. Here is what I am trying to get at:

Q. You were friendly, I suppose, with a great number of people who were high up in the Communist Party, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Good friends? A. Yes.

Q. Close friends? A. Some.

Q. Intimate friends? [2706]

A. With a few.

Q. Trusting friends? A. With a few.

Q. How many?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. The average Communist leader has relatively few who can be classed as intimate friends. I think a definition of the term would require a great length of time to answer that question satisfactorily.

Q. We will just take it in its ordinary acceptation. We won't hold out to precise definitions. Then among these people who would assemble, say the Central Committee, were there 54 people on the Central Committee? Was that my understanding?

A. I didn't say anything about 54 people.

Q. Someone said it. You said it now here: A meeting of the Central Committee had about 35 people, that Jack Stachel made a statement, but there is some testimony that the Central Committee had 50 or 54 people. How many did it have?

A. I don't remember the exact number. The number has changed in various conventions. I would estimate, to the best of my recollection, the Central Committee elected in 1934 at Cleveland had about 27 members.

Q. Let us take, say, 35. How many of those 35 people would you say were intimate friends of yours?

A. There are varying degrees of being intimate friends. Perhaps half a dozen might be described as being not far in error. [2707]

Q. Then that half dozen, there was a mutual trust that existed between them, I take it, is that correct? A. Not necessarily.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Didn't you and this half dozen trust each other, rely on each other, pretty friendly?

A. Because I had been intimate friends with two different individuals does not necessarily imply that those two individuals were intimate friends of each other.

Q. I know, I know. And then of the remaining 30, let us say, there being, oh, shall we say, 10 more that you had a kind of strong friendship for but not as intimate as those five or six, but you knew them well enough to call them by their first names, knew what they did and had a friendly feeling toward them, is that about right?

A. That would call for generalization and an indefinite answer.

Q. Would we say that maybe half of this committee, your relations with them were not very close at all? Let us put it this way: Some of them I suppose you never met before they got on the Central Committee, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. A great many, I take it, a large percentage you never met?

A. No, only a very few. I was quite well acquainted with the overwhelming majority of the Central Committee members, knew their personal lives, knew the history of the great majority of the members. [2708]

Q. Would that be true of the other members of the Committee, that they seemed to know each other pretty closely?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes, most members knew the background of the others.

Q. Then we take the 700 or 750 people who were delegates to the convention; I take it you would only know a small percentage of them, would that be right?

A. Of the 700 delegates at the 1936 convention, I probably knew about 200 personally.

Q. And then outside of the delegates there was a substantial number of persons who were members of the Communist Party whom you never met at all, of course, is that right?

A. Throughout the United States?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. This was a document that was shown to all of the other witnesses as containing excerpts from the New York Times of that convention of 1936, and I want to show it to you and see if it refreshes your recollection only as to some of the statements made, and I notice that it confirms your statement that you were one of the speakers in one of the discussions, if you will just look at the first one or two, Mr. Crouch. There was some discussion at that 1936 convention in the speech that you identified as having been made by Mr. Browder as to the number of persons in the United States then members of the Communist Party. Now, do you think the figure given by him was a little [2709] braggy, or in your opinion, were there that many people in the party?

A. The figure I see that is quoted appears to me to be the approximate membership of the Communist Party to my knowledge at that time.

Q. That would be around how many people?

A. Roughly around 50,000.

Q. Do you think there were that many in the Communist Party then?

A. I personally did not check the figures. It might have been as low as 40,000. I couldn't say positively. The only figure that I can recall definitely of membership was in 1938. I definitely recall announcing then that the Communist Party's membership was 75,000. I can not specifically recall the figure I gave in 1936.

Q. I noticed here some short time ago—maybe you saw it in the paper—a statement by the then Attorney General Tom Clark that there were 70,000 Communists in the United States. That would be a couple of years ago. Do you think it ever ran up to that figure or did it exceed that?

A. To the best of my personal knowledge, the highest dues paying membership reached by the Communist Party in the United States was about 92,000 in 1936.

Q. You had charge of organizing the Communist Party in Alameda County or recruiting people for it some time around 1941, [2710] is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And I have some figures here that are taken from the records of the Registrar of Voters of the counties of Alameda and San Francisco for the period from 1936 up to 1942 or 1943, and I want to see if you can tell us whether these are approximately correct. Now, in 1940 the registration in Alameda County showed the following: Republicans, 136,624; Democrats, 179,066; Socialists, 350; Communists, 60. Would that be approximately correct?

A. I presume those figures are correct, so far as the voting registration, but that is no index to membership.

Q. The same year in San Francisco County: Republicans, 128,858; Democrats, 249,036; Socialists, 331; Communists, 141. Would that be about correct?

A. I don't know whether it is correct or not regarding voting registration. It is not correct or not even approximately correct so far as the party's dues-paying membership is concerned.

Q. Here is what I am getting at, about the attitude of the members: According to—and I assure you that I know nothing about it except what I have heard in this court from you and another gentleman named Johnson—do you know a man named Manning Johnson?

A. I knew Mr. Manning Johnson very well in the Communist Party [2711] from about 1933 until about 1939. I met him in the witness room the other day while I was waiting to come on the stand myself.

Q. Was he an intimate friend of yours?

A. We were fairly good friends.

Q. Trusted each other pretty closely?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Mr. Crouch, Mr. Johnson said that these Communists, the members of the Communist Party, the members of the Central Committee, officers, and so forth, led lives of fraud and deception and were terrible people. You sort of agree with that, don't you? A. Please restate the question.

Q. I say that he said the Communist Party leaders led lives of fraud and deception and were really terrible people, wanting to overthrow the United States Government by force and things like that.

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if the Court please. If he wants to quote Mr. Johnson accurately, I have no objection.

Mr. Hallinan: It was approximately that. Do you say that he said they were better than that or worse?

Mr. Donohue: I would not attempt to quote him. I would read the record, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: Approximately that. [2712]

Q. Is that your own statement as to what sort of people they were?

Mr. McMillan: I object to the question, if Your Honor please. He is not bound by somebody else's conclusion.

The Court: The witness may understand the question in the light of the fact that purports to be on Mr. Hallinan's part a summation of certain testimony of Mr. Johnson. Having that in mind generally, you might answer.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I have no knowledge whatsoever, Mr. Hallinan, of what Mr. Johnson testified to in this court. Therefore, without seeing the transcript, I can hardly comment on it.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Of your own knowledge, would you say that is a fair description of what sort of people were leading the Communist Party?

A. It is a rather complex question, which, if you like, I would be glad to answer, but it may require a little length.

Q. Go ahead.

A. The great majority of the leaders of the Communist Party, and especially those who made the policies, such as men like Peters, Stachel, and so on, continually resorted to perjury and deceit and to intimidation and to all kinds of revolting and shocking practices in connection with the Communist Party actively. On the other hand, there were individuals in the Communist Party—somewhat prominent, if not in making policies, at least were prominent as faces of the party before [2713] the public, who still retained feelings of ordinary human decency, and they refused on many occasions to go along with such things. I was one, for example.

Q. Wait a minute. One of the good ones or one of the bad ones?

A. Under Communist Party direction I did many things of which I have no reason to feel proud of to talk about without being ashamed of. On the other hand, I never resorted to perjury while a member of the Communist Party, although I was repeatedly requested and advised to do so, and once defied an order by Peters to swear I was the father of a girl for whom they wished to obtain a passport fraudulently.

Q. You claimed you were the father of a girl?

A. I was instructed by Peters and Brown, F. Brown, alias Alpi, to go down to the passport office and swear I was the father of a young girl for whom they wished to obtain a passport.

Q. Mr. Crouch, I have no intention, if you anticipate that I did, to inquire into any little personal scandals of your life, so you need not anticipate things of that kind. I have no intention of bringing that matter up at all.

Mr. McMillan: If it please the Court, he is not testifying to any scandal.

Mr. Hallinan: I say we do not want any of that sort of thing. [2714]

Mr. McMillan: He has testified they wanted him to do something; it is not a scandal.

Mr. Hallinan: He is anticipating, but he doesn't have to.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Crouch: All those people in that Communist Party, those leaders and so forth, being subject to arrest, imprisonment, if they actually practiced the things that you are saying, that is, supporting perjury, treason, sedition and everything——

Mr. McMillan: He has not testified, if it please the Court, to any sedition or treason.

Mr. Hallinan: He said overthrowing the government by force and violence, treason, sedition and everything——

Mr. McMillan: He has not testified, if it please the Court, to any sedition or treason.

Mr. Hallinan: He said overthrowing the government by force and violence.

Mr. McMillan: He has not used that expression at all.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, whatever they were, all these deviltries, as those people trusted each other with their safety, their freedom.

Q. Don't you think that was very naive? For instance, here is what I am getting at. I want to ask you this: This Mr. Johnson, by his own description, was a terrible man. Nobody would trust him with a nickel. But did you trust him? Did you trust this Johnson with your safety and your liberty so that he could [2715] come in and testify against you in a court that you wanted to overthrow the government by force and you were practicing fraud and perjury? Did you put that man in that position that he could do that?

Mr. McMillan: That is objected to, if it please the Court. This witness is not familiar with the testimony of Johnson. Counsel is characterizing that testimony, drawing his own conclusions, and this witness, so far as the matter of trust is concerned, he can not look into the minds of other persons and reveal these matters. He can testify as to what is in his mind, but can not certainly reveal the mind of others to trust.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Mr. Hallinan apparently is trying to paraphrase the question, and although the question is argumentative, I think the witness understands the general text of the question. Do you?

The Witness: I do.

The Court: Of course, the question is argumentative. I assume that the witness under the circumstances may explain his answer in the form in which the question is put.

Mr. McMillan: It goes beyond the question. It declares and asserts.

A. In answer to this question, I would like to make it clear that the Communist Party in 1936 would trust a meeting of 700 people more than they would trust a meeting of five or six leaders today, because they had not yet had any number of [2716] members repudiate the party and cooperate with the government agencies in exposing it. When people have left the party, the Trotskyites, the supporters of Lovestone and so on, they still maintained loyalty to the ideals of Communism and refused to cooperate with the government, and in the course of those years in which there have been very few, exceptionally few members who left the party and who ever cooperated with a government agency, the party felt quite secure. To the point, for example, in 1929 of having representatives of the Communist International in this country illegally with forged passports to appear and speak before a full convention. The members felt they could trust each other to that extent.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Today, of course, with so many former Communist leaders cooperating with the government agencies, they would never dare do that now in 1949, I am sure.

Q. That is another question: In an estimate of that, would you say about 50 per cent of the Communists now are trying to put the other 50 per cent in jail? Is that about the percentage?

Mr. McMillan: I object to that, if it please the Court. That is argumentative.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): What is the percentage of people who are testifying for the government, leaders, and so forth? A. Please state——

Q. Withdraw it. Let us get this. You said at this meeting at [2717] which Mr. Bridges was nominated to the Central Committee that you, as a district organizer, was an ex officio member and was called into the Central Committee meetings and participated in the nominations, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Then about how many other persons beside yourself who were not members of the Central Committee had that same privilege?

A. About a dozen.

Q. So that in addition to the committee itself, there would be about a dozen district organizers, and so forth, who were members, who were participating in this? A. Correct.

Q. You also said that the committee or the presidium was presented with a list of the nominees by the nominating committee, that is, the names for the new Central Committee. Now, this nominating committee got out, as I understand it, written lists of the new candidates they were proposing, is that correct?

A. They prepared it in writing on a sheet of paper.

Q. Was it only one list or several lists?

A. To avoid confusion, let me explain that, first of all, there were meetings of delegations——

Q. Pardon me. Let us get this straight. This is the testimony as I remember it:

> "The committee or presidium had several meetings during the [2718] course of the convention, at one of which the nominating committee presented us with a list of the nominees to the Central Committee, that it was recommending for the new Central Committee."

Then you were asked, "In what form was the list of candidates presented?"

You said, "In the form of a written memorandum." The names were written and read. Now, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Then you said, "Then we submitted people from the district or the territory that we thought should go on, and these names were turned over to the chairman or some other nominations committee where presumably they were examined, but where I knew as a result of years of practice, the final decision was made by the Politburo of the party as to who went on. Then in the Presidium before the election session of the convention, these names were read to us in the Presiding Committee, together with the reports of other commissions, of which we formally approved. Later the same list of names which had been submitted to us and briefly discussed went before the convention as a whole and the regular election took place."

Is that correct?

A. That is correct, although you are reading a little out of context, which gives a different impression of the order in which things were done. [2719]

Q. No, I suggested now, Mr. Crouch, the criticism is invalid. I just read this portion as you testified to it. First you said the committee of the Presidium had a list of candidates presented to it, and then after some questions as to whether it was by states and so forth, you said you people submitted for the district or the territory certain names which were turned over to the nominations committee, where they were examined. I suppose such names were included or not included in the list, and then the list was brought back and read off to the Presidium and briefly discussed.

> "Later the same list of names which had been submitted to us and briefly discussed went before the convention as a whole."

That is correct, isn't it?

A. The way in which the comments are inserted, and so on, tends to give a mistaken picture of the whole procedure, which I will be very glad to summarize if you like.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. No, I do not want to go into it again. You have gone into it before completely. All I want to know now is this: Apparently you people submitted lists of names of candidates to the Central Committee, is that right?

A. No, the delegations first met by districts, discussed who should go on from their district, and submitted those to the chairman or the secretary of the nominations committee, which in turn considered those and prepared a slate, to which in turn [2720] I submitted to the Presidium. Of course, knowing the party background, I actually knew, although I was not told, that this was really done by the Politburo.

Q. We do not care about that. What I want to get is this, that that list of names, having been canvassed by the nominations committee or selected by the Politburo, whatever it was, was that read off to this Presidium? A. That is correct.

Q. And the Presidium was not the Central Committee itself. It consisted of the organizers and persons like yourself who were not members of the Central Committee, is that right?

A. Correct. [2721]

Q. And then having been read off and discussed by the Presidium and voted on—was it voted on by the Presidium?

A. I do not recall whether there is an Aye-No vote, or what the procedure was, but at any rate, we accepted it. In effect, yes.

Q. Did they vote on it?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I don't recall whether they said, "Is there anyone opposed?" or anything like that; but in effect we did, yes.

Q. Again you state here, just to refresh your recollection, "Didn't you vote for this slate of names on two occasions before the convention?" Answer: "I did on two occasions, in the presiding committee and in the final election." You remember that that was what took place? A. Yes.

Q. So then that Presidium voted on this list of names? A. Yes.

Q. And then this list of names, which included Mr. Rossi, must have been explained to the Presidium as meaning Harry Bridges?

A. There was discussion in connection with it in which the names both Rossi and Bridges were used in the Presidium.

Q. You were told that Rossi was Bridges, isn't that right?

A. There was reference to it which made it clear. I already knew, so it wasn't necessary to explain to me.

Q. But the other people had to know it [2722] too? A. It was made clear to everyone.

Q. Then you went in before the convention and you voted on it again in the convention, didn't you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Again it was disclosed to the convention that this Rossi was actually Harry Bridges?

A. I do not recall that it was disclosed to the convention as a whole. As I pointed out, the California delegation rose to its feet and began applauding. I think most of the delegates knew what it was all about, but I don't—I know that the explanation was not given from the platform in the words that Rossi was Harry Bridges.

Q. You were asked this:

"Were these names discussed at the meeting of the Presidium or presiding committee?

"A. Yes, at not too great length, but they were discussed.

"Q. Can you tell us any other persons whose names were discussed and who were subsequently balloted upon at the Presidium Committee meeting?

"A. There was the—there was the name, for example, of Harry Bridges, or, as he went on the records, Rossi, was one of those names that was discussed from California."

That is true, isn't it?

A. In the Presidium meeting, yes.

"Q. Let me ask you this question: Did any incident occur [2723] during the voting on the floor of the convention which you can now recall having to do with the naming of any one of the candidates for election at that convention?

"A. Yes. Following each name as it was read there was applause throughout the convention hall. When the name Rossi was read, > the California delegation rose to its feet applauding more enthusiastically than ever."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Do you remember that? A. Yes.

Q. Now to skip up a page. You were then asked about the 1938 convention. You testified there was a meeting at which somebody came in and made suggestions—oh, Browder came in with Stachel and Peters, and there was a meeting of this Presidium.

> "Q. Were the results of that meeting recorded?
> "A. I don't know. They were recorded at the time by Earl Browder, who was taking minutes of that meeting, and the results of it were subsequently read to the convention."

You remember that, don't you? A. Yes.

Q. All right. So Earl Browder now took minutes of the meeting in which the list of candidates for 1938 was discussed and those minutes were read to the convention, is that right?

A. The names were read.

Q. Now, the name, apparently, of Rossi was dropped around this [2724] time, because you said: "'We will put Comrade'—and used the name of Derkin or Dargan or a name like that, which I hadn't heard previously, on the Central Committee. This was while we were discussing the matter in reference to Harry Bridges." You remember that, don't you? A. I do.

Q. Then Mr. Donohue asked:

> "Subsequent to this meeting were you in at> tendance upon the floor of the convention when the names which had been approved by the committee were offered for approval on the floor of the convention?"

And you answered, "I was." So the names of the people that were approved by the committee were offered for approval on the floor of the convention, isn't that so?

A. The persons nominated were also nominated on the floor of the convention.

Q. Yes.

A. I am not positive whether that name Derkin or Dargan—whether they read that name or whether they just paused. I remember him saying that, "This next number"——

Q. We are coming to that in a few minutes. I just asked you this: You have testified, just to refresh your recollection, that the names which had been approved by the committee were offered for approval on the floor of the convention. That was true, wasn't it? [2725] A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, you say:

> "To the best of my recollection, in reading down the list of names, the speaker paused and then made a remark, 'The next person to go on the Central Committee is a well known West Coast labor leader,' but without stating his name, and at that moment the entire convention burst into stormy applause."

Do you remember that? A. I do.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. So now the entire convention consisting of this 700 or 750 persons, when the man reading down the list said, "The next person is a well known labor leader," the whole convention burst into stormy applause, is that right?

A. In fact, it was far more than 750; it was over a thousand.

Q. So then obviously stormy applause would indicate that the entire convention knew who was being referred to, isn't that right?

A. Unquestionably.

Q. So that this whole thousand people there knew at the time that the entire convention burst into stormy applause that the person who was named as a nominee on the Central Committee was Harry Bridges, is that right?

A. I don't think there was a half of one per cent of the delegates who didn't know that that was Harry Bridges. Practically [2726] all knew.

Q. You all knew that. That was in May of 1938? A. Correct.

Q. Now, the tumultuous applause, the stormy applause, was it in any way increased or augmented by the declaration of the chairman that, "This man whose name is now being put up for admission to this Central Committee before you thousand people is now under detention or has been arrested on a warrant issued by the Department of Immigration two months ago to deport him out of the country?"

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Honor please. Mr. Hallinan suggests that that was the declaration of the chairman.

Mr. Hallinan: No. I asked him: He did say that, didn't he? A. He did not.

Q. Oh, Mr. Crouch, now think. Didn't anybody say that? A. Say what?

Q. Didn't anybody say to that convention, "Now the remarkable thing about this West Coast labor leader, whom you all know to be Harry Bridges, is this: that two months ago, in March, a warrant for his deportation as an alien because he is a member of the Communist Party has been issued by the Department of Immigration and a trial set for next January on that question." Didn't he say [2727] that?

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. I think that the time for argument will probably be next spring or summer. It certainly isn't this morning.

Mr. Hallinan: I am asking him if he said that.

Mr. McMillan: He has already answered the question.

Mr. Hallinan: As part of the cross-examination I am entitled to ask leading questions.

The Court: Overruled.

A. He didn't say it or anything even remotely resembling the quotes.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Nobody said it?

A. Not anything ~~like~~ you said, no.

Q. But you knew that, didn't you?

A. I don't know what I knew regarding any deportation proceedings at that time so far as dates or anything like that is concerned.

Q. Oh, Mr. Crouch, away back in April, 1934, leaders of the Communist Party had had discussion with you, had they not, in which they discussed the danger that Harry Bridges would be under of being deported as an alien if it were discovered that he was a member of the Communist Party? Don't you remember those conversations?

Mr. McMillan: That has been asked the witness already. Now, the next question is going to be purely argumentative if it is answered. [2728]

The Court: Overruled.

A. I stated previously in answer to a question that this was discussed from the spring of 1934 on.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Yes, right along, 1934, '35, '36, '37, and right up into '38. It was discussed, wasn't it, in '39?

A. The question of the necessity of preventing legal proof of Bridges' membership from falling into the hands of the Department of Justice was discussed.

Q. Oh, now, did you ever know a man named Joe Yuba? A. I don't recall the name.

Q. Do you remember a man named Joe Yuba?

The Court: How do you spell tha last name?

Mr. Hallinan: Y-u-b-a, an FBI agent who testified that he was an undercover agent planted in the Communist Party, who testified before the Un-American Activities Committee some time ago. Do you know that man?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: I object to that question, if your Honor please. That is putting into the record a statement by Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, sorry, no; it is H-u-b-e-r, Huber; do you know that man?

Mr. Donohue: I still object to the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: The fact of his acquaintanceship and knowledge may be answered Yes or No. [2729]

A. No.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Was it discussed in any of these conventions or committees during that period from 1934 to 1938 that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had agents planted in the Communist Party? A. The Communist Party——

Q. No. Can you answer that Yes or No, whether that was discussed?

A. I cannot give a correct Yes or No answer to that question.

Q. Can't you give us a Yes or No answer and then explain it?

A. My answer is No, with this explanation: that the leaders of the Communist Party considered it possible that the Department of Justice would attempt to get its representatives into the Communist Party, but in those days they felt very confident of their ability to recognize them and prevent them from joining the Party.

Q. Now, was it rather that they thought they had nothing to conceal, Mr. Crouch, between us?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. No, it emphatically was not, because they thought they had nothing to conceal.

Q. Now, when these committees, central committees, were made up, were lists of them prepared of members who were on the committees?

A. At least one list was prepared for the purpose of reading off at the convention, and I presume the secretary, general [2730] secretary, or some responsible official kept this list in a safe place thereafter.

Q. And kept it indefinitely, I take it, is that right? A. Not unless it was in code.

Q. Whether in code or out of code, the names of the persons who comprised the Central Committee, the officers of the Communist Party, weren't they kept year after year?

A. Not having worked in Earl Browder's private office, I cannot answer that question.

Q. Well, for instance, let us say that you were a close and intimate member of the criminal corps—we will put you in the criminal corps of the Communist Party—and you wanted to find out who were the members of the convention delegation five or six years before, or the Central Committee, couldn't you find out?

Mr. McMillan: That assumes a fact not in evidence, assuming that he was a member of the criminal corps.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I assume that that is what he was describing or what has been described here as being this corps. If you object to it, I don't want to improperly characterize your witnesses, if you say they are not. I gather they said they were. It is all right with me. They may be very different from the members of the criminal corps. Let us knock out "criminal" and let us say Johnson and these people were not criminal at all, but you were in this secret corps of the [2731] Communist Party, a little group of forty or fifty, or whatever they were, couldn't you go and find out who had been members of the Central Committee six or eight years prior to that time?

A. I guess if I had asked any questions of that kind I would have got my head chopped off, politically speaking.

Q. Who would do the chopping?

A. I would be asked what my motives were in asking such a question.

Q. Let's say that you had a proper motive; let's say that you were one of the people in the "know" of the matter; you wanted to find out for a perfectly legitimate reason the name of some member of the convention or the committee eight or ten years before, surely you could go somewhere and find out, couldn't you?

A. I think I could find out if it were important by asking the Control Commission to get this record from the Soviet secret police.

Q. Do you think that the lists were taken and turned over to the Soviet secret police?

A. Definitely.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. In other words, now, for instance, members of the convention who were elected in the year 1934, that list would be taken and transported to the Soviet secret police, is that right?

A. I have no doubt that that full list reached Moscow in less [2732] than thirty days after the convention and is today on file in the archives of the MVD in Moscow.

The Court: Spell that.

The Witness: MVD. That is Russian for Russian secret police.

The Court: What is the Russian for MVD?

The Witness: They are initials of Russian words which stand for—which mean Russian secret police. I can't recall the Russian words.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Then there would be no list left in the United States, is that right?

A. I don't believe so. I don't believe there is a list in existence today of all the members of the Central Committee that were elected at that time.

Q. Let us take it at that time. Now, at that time in 1936 were any lists of these people preserved in the United States at all?

A. I have no knowledge of the preservation of any list after the day of election.

Q. You have no actual knowledge; you just have the belief that they were transmitted to the Russian secret police, is that right?

A. Based on my seventeen years' membership in the Communist Party, yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Were the lists prepared by secretaries or stenographers? [2733]

A. The lists were prepared with pen and ink or pencil by a top leader of the Party, and in case of '38, by Earl Browder.

Q. In disappearing ink?

A. Not to my knowledge.

The Court: Would you like to take the morning recess now, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the morning recess. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions and not to form or express an opinion until it is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2734]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Mr. Crouch, if it became expedient to communicate with members of the Central Committee, there would be no list of names, addresses or telephone numbers that could be employed without going to the Russian secret police, is that correct?

A. The district organizers of the Communist Party were responsible for passing on to Central Committee members in their district the minutes of the Politburo meetings or the edited minutes, and such other communications as necessary, and important communications to the district organizers were sent in code.

Q. What I am getting at now—I think you misunderstood the question—suppose the president or the head man of the Central Committee wanted to communicate to his fellow members. He couldn't do it, is that right?

A. He would reach him through the district organizer of the district in which he lived.

Q. But the district organizer would not know who the Central Committee man was, would he?

A. All district organizers knew who were the members of the Central Committee living in their districts.

Q. I understand that; the district organizers were changing, being replaced, moving to other districts and going all over the country quite a bit, isn't that right?

A. Not very often. I think California has had only two district organizers since about 1930. [2735]

Q. Take yourself: How many different places were you a different organizer? A. In——

Q. Run them off. What was the first place in which you were district organizer?

A. State organizer in Utah, the Carolinas and Tennessee.

Q. Utah? A. The State of Utah.

Q. Were you first in Utah? Utah, the Carolinas and Tennessee were not one district?

A. No, these were separate districts.

Q. So you were a district organizer in Utah, is that right? A. State organizer for Utah.

Q. The whole state? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And then you were state organizer for Tennessee? A. Next the Carolinas.

Q. Both Carolinas? A. Yes, both.

Q. Then you were district organizer for the State of Tennessee? A. Correct.

Q. And before you they had organizers in that state?

A. They had had one organizer before me in Tennessee.

Q. And after you they had organizers, is that right?

A. They had one organizer, but it was discontinued as a [2736] district, and I understand, I have heard, made part of the Alabama district.

Q. Then in addition to the state districts, you were organizer for smaller portions of the states, were you?

A. I was regional organizer for Norfolk, Virginia, which incidentally was the only place where the party organizer in the state in effect was state organizer. And I was Alameda County organizer —I mean Alameda, California.

Q. Any place else?

A. Not that I recall, as a local organizer, no.

Q. You being organizer in this district, who would provide you with the names of Central Committeemen in your district?

A. In Utah, there was no member of the Central Committee from the State. There was no member of the Central Committee from the Carolinas, only one from the entire South.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Let us forget about you on it personally then. Here is what I am trying to get: Suppose, we say, the chairman or the president of the Central Committee wanted to communicate with the members of his committee. Then you say the way he would do it was the district organizer knew who the Central Committee member was. So then he would get in touch with the district organizer and he would be notified who the Central Committee organizer was, is that correct? A. Correct.

Q. How would he know who the district organizer was? Wouldn't [2737] it be easier for him to have the list of the Central Committee than the list of the district organizers? What was the purpose of that?

A. When Central Committee members were in the district, unless they were people who were going into the district as a very special representative, who would be provided with special means of communication, the Central Committee transacted all of its business through the district organizer of that district, and that was the easiest.

Q. But you told us originally the Central Committee had three or four meetings each year?

A. That is correct.

Q. How did they know where to go and when the meetings were to be held?

A. The notices of the time and the place of the meetings were sent to the district organizer in code, and he was responsible for notifying all members of the Central Committee from his district. For example, Schneidermann would be responsible for notifying such Central Committee members as Anita Whitney and Harry Bridges from California.

Q. Let us say you or Schneidermann were a district committeeman for a certain number of years, a year or two; then you had some kind of a code, did you?

A. We had two types of codes, and the code words or the code books were changed at frequent intervals. [2738]

Q. Then the chairman of the Central Committee would notify you in code and notify the Central Committeeman of the time and place of the meeting, is that right?

A. That is not correct. I received all my notices of the Central Committee meetings from J. Peters, the head of the underground apparatus of the party.

Q. In code? A. In code, yes.

Q. Is that oral code or written code?

A. Written code.

Q. It is not what they call pig Latin, double Dutch or any of those things we used to use in school?

A. The Communist Party didn't usually engage in the wisecracks and frivolity in its work.

Q. You will foregive me if I have a little lighter spirit than the Communists have in this case. Now, the members of the Central Committee, you say, were selected by their state delegation to the national convention, is that right?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I didn't——

Q. Tell us.

A. No. In effect, they were nominated by the delegations—that was in 1936; it was a different procedure in 1938—the actual selection, I know, was done by the Politburo. The form of it was nominations from delegations, cleared through formally for the record, through a nominations committee and then [2739] formally voted upon, very much like an election in Bulgaria or the Soviet Union today.

Q. I do not know a great deal about those, so let us take the elections in the Communist Party in the United States as of that period. Now, for instance, a delegation would be sent from the Carolinas, let us say. It would take its place in the convention, is that right? Let us say 1936 now.

A. Correct.

Q. How many people would be in that delegation?

A. I testified to the best of my recollection about six from the Carolinas in the 1936 convention.

Q. And you also testified, I think, that the delegation from the Carolinas nominated a colored man named Murphy, of all names, as its delegate, is that correct? A. Not quite.

Q. Let us drop that. Then the delegation from Carolina, if it wanted to put a man on the Central Committee, it would select some name and offer it to the nominating committee, is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. How would the delegation from Carolina arrive at the name that they wanted to transmit to the nominating committee?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Caucuses were held of the delegations, except the caucuses of the larger delegations like California, and in the case of the South, the Carolina delegation met jointly with the delegations [2740] from Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and other southern states; in 1936 with Nat Ross as chairman of our conference, and in this conference the members or delegates got up and proposed names that they thought should be on the new Central Committee.

Q. Then would they discuss who the person was and why he should be on it? A. Yes.

Q. Would the person always be one of the delegates or would they also include persons who were not delegates?

A. Very frequently people who were not delegates were considered.

Q. Then would they select this person who was to go to the nominating committee by vote?

A. Majority vote of the delegation as to whether he went on their recommended slate for submission to the nominations committee.

Q. When you got there—let's say your delegation arrived at the place of convention: Had they already been instructed by anybody, by their constituents or whatever you might call them, as to who the person was they should nominate for the committee?

A. I have never heard of such a practice anywhere in the Communist Party. It never occurred to my knowledge or in my experience that names of the Central Committee were ever discussed by what you term the constituents, the state committees which elected delegates to the national convention.

Q. So that when you got to the convention, then; at that time, when you arrived there, you had no person to whom you were committed to try to get on the Central Committee, is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And then your delegation in this caucus would either by itself, if it were a large enough delegation, as I understand it, or in combination with others, if it were a smaller delegation, decide between themselves who they would nominate for the Central Committee, and they would vote upon that name, is that right? A. Essentially.

Q. What kind of vote was necessary? A majority vote merely or a larger percentage? What was it?

A. The majority of members of the delegation voted that that name should be submitted.

Q. Then the majority of this delegation, having voted upon a name that should be submitted, that name, as I understand it, was then transmitted to the nominating committee with the statement that this name was being selected and had been voted upon by the delegation for nomination of the Central Committee, is that right?

A. That is true of the 1936 convention. It was not true of many other conventions. [2742]

Q. After the nominating committee had received

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

these names, it canvassed them and then it came back with a list of names that it said it was recommending for the committee, is that approximately correct?

A. Formally, as a matter of formality, yes.

Q. But in reality the list of the names did not reflect the wishes of these various delegations that had been selected by some interior group which I think you called the Politburo? A. Correct.

Q. In other words, the Politburo apparently had made up its mind in advance whom it wanted on the Central Committee, is that irght?

A. Only partially. The Politburo, of course, reviewed all the names submitted to it from the delegations, and I doubt if the Politburo had decided before the convention was called on every name to go on the new committee.

Q. I understand what you mean. In other words, while the Politburo finally made that selection, it might have made it out of names nominated by the various delegations, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you say that in 1938 the proceeding was different. In what respect was it different from what we have detailed for 1936?

A. In that there was not the balloting of individual delegations, to my knowledge. There might have been in some cases, but I [2743] have no knowledge of it. I know our delegation had no balloting about who should go on. And the leaders, the district organizers, a few top leaders were picked out and called to a secret meeting not announced on the convention floor where a number of political problems were discussed by Browder, very confidential reports made by Browder to us, and where we discussed the question of the composition of the new Central Committee.

Q. If I remember correctly, you were sent to the disciplinary barracks at Alcatraz before you ever became a member of the Communist Party, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. And as I remember, you were sentenced first to a 40 year term at hard labor, is that right?

A. I do not think it is in the record, but it is correct.

Q. And then that was afterward commuted to three years, is that so?

A. That is correct.

Q. And at the time you were sentenced you were a soldier in the United States Army, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And as I say, you were not and had never been up to that time a member of the Communist Party? A. Correct.

Q. After your release from Alcatraz Island, you said that you [2744] made certain speeches throughout the Middle West or the northern part of the Middle West, is that correct?

A. Yes, along with many other parts of the country I named.

Q. At that time you were not a member of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Not until I reached Chicago.

Q. Then when you did join the Communist Party, as I understand it, your application was dated back a couple of years and your membership predated to 1925, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Although you did not actually join until 1927?

A. Technically correct.

Q. When were you sentenced to imprisonment?

A. April, 1925. [2745]

Q. Well, then, you didn't serve three years, did you?

A. Less good time; ten months' good time reduction.

Q. When did you first start testifying for the Government in anti-Communists or alleged anti-Communist cases, cases in which people were claimed to be Communists?

A. My first testimony regarding the Communist Party and its program was before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on May 6, 1949. in executive session, part of the proceedings subsequently being published.

Q. May 6, 1949? A. That is correct.

Q. This present year? A. That is correct.

Q. And that was your first appearance in a matter of this kind, you say?

A. That is correct.

Q. At that time were you working for the newspaper you testified concerning? A. I was.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And did you get a leave of absence or anything at that time? A. I did.

Q. And did you then return to the newspaper?

A. I did.

Q. Who owns that newspaper?

A. I understand that former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio is [2746] the principal stockholder in the paper.

Q. It isn't a Hearst publication?

A. It is not.

Q. Now, then, when did you next testify in any proceeding?

A. I next testified, to the best of my recollection, before the Senate Sub-Committee on Immigration and Naturalization somewhere around the—perhaps the 18th of May; I don't recall the exact date.

Q. And then where next?

A. Before the House Committee on Un-American Activities again.

Q. And then where next?

A. I testified on a number of occasions, I don't recall how many, before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Q. Let us take the first time that you testified where some person was going to be deported or sent to prison. When was the first time you testified in that?

A. The first time I testified in any deportation case was in the case of Betty Gannett.

Q. What was the name?

A. Betty Gannett.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Betty Gannett. Was she a lady who used to be a reporter on one of the San Francisco newspapers?

A. I didn't—she may have been on the People's World; I don't know.

Q. No. There was a Betty Gannett, if I remember, years ago, [2747] a rather pretty blonde, a little girl, who was a reporter on the Daily News. Is that the girl?

A. Not unless the Betty Gannett I know had her hair bleached at the time.

Q. Was this a deportation proceeding against Betty Gannett? A. Yes.

Q. What was the next? Where did that take place? A. New York City.

Q. Then who was the next victim—pardon me—next person that you testified against?

A. My next testimony was in the case of an individual whose name escapes me, whom I do not know personally, with a stipulation that it be applied in other cases in Portland, Oregon.

Q. An individual in Portland, Oregon. When was that, sir?

A. This was about around the 15th of October, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Around the 15th of October, 1949?

A. Yes. I do not recall the exact date.

Q. And I take it that was not his name, "individual"; you mean that it was a person whose name you do not recall, is that correct?

A. Correct.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Can you tell us what his name was?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Did you hear it? [2748]

A. I heard it and I do not remember it.

Q. Did you see him in the courtroom?

A. I did.

Q. How long did the hearing last?

A. Oh, a couple of days.

Q. Were you on the witness stand for most of that time? A. I was.

Q. And there were recesses in which you went back and forth as you have been going back and forth here, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. But you can't tell us his name?

A. I do not remember his name.

Q. Were you served with a subpoena to appear in that proceeding?

A. No, I was requested by the Immigration Department to appear.

Q. In writing or orally? A. Orally.

Q. Was the name of the individual given to you then? A. No.

Q. You did hear it, I take it, during the proceeding? A. During the proceeding.

Q. Heard it several times? A. A few.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. A few times, not often; once or twice. [2749]

Q. And then it was stipulated that your testimony taken on the individual might be read upon proceedings against other individuals, is that right?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I wasn't testifying regarding the individual; I was testifying regarding the Communist Party and its program.

Q. Now, who were the other individuals concerning whom it was stipulated your testimony might be employed? A. I do not know.

Q. How many of them were there?

A. I believe there were three cases, if I remember the stipulation correctly.

Q. Three cases including the individual?

A. Yes. Incidentally, I might add to the record that my testimony in that case is not completed and I am to return for cross-examination in this case.

Q. When do you expect to return, Mr. Crouch?

A. As soon as notified by the Department of Justice to do so.

Q. Now, who else—whom else, rather, have you testified against?

A. A case of a Mr. Blakefield.

Q. How do you spell that?

A. I don't know.

Q. A Mr. Blakefield?

A. Mr. Blakefield or Blakefeld.

Q. B-l-a-k-e-f-i-e-l-d or B-l-i-c-k-f-e-l-t? [2750]

A. Perhaps. It is a Scandinavian name; I don't know the spelling.

Q. And where did Mr. Blakefield have the fortune to encounter you?

A. Will you please restate the question.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Do you remember Mr. Blakefield's first name? A. I do not.

Q. Did you hear it? A. I did.

Q. Was it a man or a woman?

A. A man.

Q. How old a man? A. Middle aged.

Q. What do you call "middle aged"?

A. Perhaps fifty.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. Perhaps fifty. I didn't know his age. I am a very poor judge of ages.

Q. And the individual, what age did he appear to be? A. Pardon me?

Q. The individual, what age did he appear to be?

A. The individual in whose case I was testifying?

Q. No, in the case in Portland, Oregon.

A. Perhaps fifty-five. Again, I am a very poor judge of ages. [2751]

Q. And Betty Gannett, about how old did she appear to be?

A. About my age, perhaps one year younger.

Q. What is your age?

A. My age is forty-six.

Q. Where was the hearing on Mr. Blakefield?

A. In Seattle, Washington.

Q. When?

A. Near the end of October.

Q. And then who was the next?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. The next case in which I testified was the secretary of attorney Coughlan in Seattle, Washington.

Q. The secretary of attorney Coughlan. How do you spell that?

A. C-o-u-g-h-l-a-n, I believe.

Q. And when was that?

A. Late in October.

Q. Last October, 1949? A. Correct.

Q. And what sort of proceeding?

A. Deportation proceedings.

Q. And did the person involved have no more definite designation than the secretary to attorney Coughlan?

A. I do not remember her name.

Q. Was it a woman? A. It was.

Q. What was her age, approximately, as you make it out? [2752]

A. Perhaps forty; I do not know.

Q. Did you hear her name? A. I did.

Q. Did you hear both her first name and her last name? A. I did.

Q. Can you tell us either of them?

A. Not at this moment. I can't tell you right now.

Q. Who was the next person against whom you offered your services?

A. I didn't offer my services. My services were requested.

Q. Yes. And against whom was the next person?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I testified in the—in a case, in a suit brought by a Mr. Chandra to compel the United States Government to grant him citizenship, at Sacramento, California.

Q. And in this case you testified for Mr. Chandra, is that right?

A. I testified for the United States Government in this case.

Q. Oh, is that true as to all the cases in which you testified? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mr. Chandra—when was that hearing?

A. The 1st of November, I believe.

Q. And where was that? You say in Sacramento? A. In Sacramento.

Q. That was in what, the Superior Court or the Federal Court [2753] or what?

A. It was in the Federal Court. At this moment I would like to correct my testimony regarding the secretary of attorney Coughlan. My testimony in her case instead of the last of October was around the 5th of November, 1949.

Q. November 5?

A. Approximately. It was after my testimony in the Chandra case.

Q. I see. And then how long were you testifying in the Chandra case?

A. Only long enough to complete my direct examination. There was no cross-examination. The suit was immediately withdrawn following my testimony.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Then who else have you testified concerning?

A. No other cases.

Q. No others. Now, do you know the name of the man or the men involved in this case?

A. I do.

Q. How much do you receive as compensation for your services in testifying in these cases?

A. The compensation I received while testifying for the Government has ranged from zero minimum to a maximum of $25 fee per day. My per diem in various testimonies before Government agencies has ranged from a minimum of $3 to a maximum of $9 per day, and I would say that I have lost from work in salary [2754] three or four hundred dollars more than the total I have received from the Government during the year 1949.

Q. It has turned out to be a bad investment, has it?

Mr. McMillan: I object to that, may it please your Honor.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You say it ranged from zero to $25 a day. Is the $25 over and above the per diem? A. In addition, yes.

Q. So on a good day you get $34, is that right?

Mr. Donohue: I think, if your Honor pleases, counsel ought to be told at this time that this is not the place for a performance. This is a criminal matter.

Mr. Hallinan: If your Honor pleases, I ask that the jury be instructed to ignore that remark; that is misconduct.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: I did not hear the remark.

Mr. Hallinan: He said that I should be told that this is not the place for a performance. I am cross-examining this witness in a proper fashion. I am entitled to learn these matters, and counsel has no right to characterize it as a performance. As I said before, the mere fact that a person is not an official of the Government does not give him the right when he is a specially appointed prosecuter to ignore the rights of defendants by making remarks like that.

The Court: I see no occasion to instruct the jury at this juncture, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: I will have to enter an exception to your Honor's ruling on that. I regret to do so.

The Court: You may have it, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, in your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee you named some 76 persons as members of the Communist Party; do you remember that?

A. I never counted the list of names.

Q. Do you carry a copy of your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee when you go on your various pilgrimages to Seattle, San Francisco and so forth?

A. Sometimes I do and sometimes I don't.

Q. You brought one along, though, when you came to San Francisco, did you not?

A. I think I had a copy.

Q. You have it with you, don't you?

A. I do not have it with me.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Counsel here has it, hasn't he? Did you turn it over to Mr. Boyd?

A. It is possible that some member of the counsel has it.

Q. Now, in these matters that you have testified to in Seattle, Sacramento, and so forth, who was the person who directly employed you to do the work? Was it Mr. Boyd or Mr. Barber?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Was it Mr. Boyd or Mr. Barber?

Mr. McMillan: I don't believe, may it please your Honor, that there is any testimony here by this man that he was employed. He appeared as a witness. [2756]

Mr. Hallinan: For this $35 a day or $34 a day.

Mr. McMillan: May it please the Court, it isn't employment.

Mr. Hallinan: Huh! Counsel can argue the point. We are entitled to argue the consideration which the witness receives.

Mr. McMillan: That is just exactly what I am objecting to.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

Mr. McMillan: He is arguing now. He has characterized it as employment.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, and then we intend to argue that they are just hired professional witnesses. That is the position we have taken all along and the position we take now.

Mr. McMillan: That is argumentative.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: I think you are entitled to go into the nature of any compensation the witness receives without any particular characterization. You may argue it hereafter, as to any inferences that may be drawn. What was the last question?

Mr. Hallinan: As a matter of fact, I didn't intend to use the word in that sense. I asked him who directly employed him to testify in this case.

The Court: I understand.

Mr. Hallinan: I will knock out the word "employed" if you want. [2757]

The Court: I understand.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Who directly requested you to testify here in this case? Was it Mr. Boyd or Mr. Barber? A. No.

Q. Who?

A. The Immigration office representative in Miami, Florida.

Q. What was his name?

A. Mr. McCluskey.

Q. What is his first name?

A. I don't know.

Q. How do you spell his name?

A. M-c-C-l-u-s-k-e-y, I believe.

Q. When you came to Seattle—let's take Portland first—did you talk to either Mr. Boyd or Mr. Barber?

A. I had never met Mr. Barber in my life. I talked with Mr. Boyd for possibly thirty minutes in Seattle after I arrived there. [2758]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And then who was the person with whom you talked in New York City when you testified against Betty Gannett?

A. With the examining inspector, whose name I can not at the moment recall, and very briefly with several other investigators of the department.

Q. How long did you talk with the examining director or whatever you call him?

A. In New York?

Q. Yes.

A. I discussed the—I was questioned about my knowledge of Betty Gannett personally and also——

Q. No. I asked you how long you talked with that man.

A. Altogether about two hours, I would estimate.

Q. With the man whose name you can't remember? A. Yes.

Q. And then with relation to the Blakefield case, whom did you talk to in that connection?

A. I talked with the examining inspector in the case.

Q. What is his name?

A. His first name is John and his last name is something like Zumler; it starts with Z; I don't remember the spelling.

Q. All right. Then in the case of the secretary of Attorney Coughlin, whom did you talk to?

A. The same.

Q. That same man? [2759] A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any connection with Mr. Boyd in either of those two cases?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I did not discuss either of those two cases with Mr. Boyd.

Q. Was he present at any discussions?

A. He was not present at the discussions I had on those matters.

Q. What about the Chandra matter?

A. I discussed the Chandra matter, answering questions regarding my knowledge of the IWO at considerable length, being questioned by Mr. Mario Noto of the Immigration Office, Department of Justice of Washington, D. C.

Q. Whom did you talk to in Sacramento?

A. This was while I was in Sacramento.

Q. Did Mr. Noto come to Sacramento?

A. Mr. Noto came to Sacramento and personally conducted the examination in the case.

Q. Whom did you talk to in connection with the present case?

A. In connection with the present case, I first talked with—I was first asked a very few routine questions by an inspector Myers in Miami, Florida, late in May very briefly and over perhaps twenty minutes. I did not discuss——

Q. Let me ask you—that was after your testimony before the House Un-American Activities Committee? A. That is correct. [2760]

Q. What is the inspector's first name?

A. Myers, M-y-e-r-s.

Q. Myers? A. Inspector Myers.

Q. Do you know his first name?

A. I do not.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. You say you spoke to him briefly about this case in late May. A. In late May.

Q. You didn't testify before the grand jury in this case? A. I did not.

Q. And how long did your conversation with Inspector Myers take place?

A. I just stated it lasted 20 minutes, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Did you give him a written statement?

A. He had a stenographer take it down and I signed the notes.

Q. And how many pages of notes?

A. One page, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Well, by one page, you mean one page of stenographer's notebook?

A. No; I was later shown a copy of it transcribed which occupied a page.

Q. How big a page?

A. 8½ by 11 inch ordinary typewriting size paper. [2761]

Q. How many lines?

A. Oh, about 50 perhaps, I would say, to the best of my recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: Could we see that document?

Mr. Donohue: We do not have the document. He knows he wouldn't be entitled to see it even if we had it.

Mr. Hallinan. I don't know why.

Mr. Donohue: Show us some authority for it and we will discuss it.

Mr. Hallinan: All right.

Shall we take the recess?

The Court: We will take a recess, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition, not to discuss the case under any conditions, and not to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [2762]

Monday, December 19, 1949, 2:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Did you ever meet Harry Bridges personally? A. Yes, I have.

Q. When?

A. One occasion I recall was, to the best of my recollection, the 24th day of June, 1941.

Q. Any other time?

A. To the best of my recollection, I just exchanged a remark or two in passing, was all.

Q. When?

A. I believe one occasion, to the best of my recollection, was at some kind of a union meeting in the Seattle office where I was visiting together with a delegation from Alameda County around June, just a little before the 24th, early in the month.

Q. And the next?

A. I can not recall. It is my impression I have exchanged remarks with him on a number of occasions, but it has been so many years back there is an element of human doubt that I can not be precise on time or place. [2763]

Q. You remember once on June 24th, 1941, at the CIO convention—I take it that is the one in Oakland that you already spoke about?

A. No, no. At the time I saw him on the platform delivering the address, reading the resolution I had written, I did not personally speak to him on that occasion. That was between the 2nd—between the 3rd and the 5th of October of 1941, but the occasion I am referring to was the occasion when my recollection was impressed by two factors: one, the publicity connected with his being kissed by Gypsy Rose Lee, a prominent burlesque, had been, and the fact that it was my birthday.

Q. She should have kissed you. Did she kiss you?

A. She seemed to have her eyes on Mr. Bridges on that occasion.

Q. That was in public, I take it?

A. It was.

Q. And I take it Gypsy Rose Lee was not in costume, or without costume, whichever you want to call it, of her professional art?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. She was in street costume at that time.

Q. That was June 24th, 1941, and what was your conversation with him then?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was something like this: One of the delegates present, a CIO official who was present with me from Alameda County, made a statement something like, "Mr. Crouch, have you met Mr. Bridges?" or something like this. [2764] My impression is I said something to the effect, "Yes, I have," and merely shook hands —"How do you do?"—that is all I recall.

Q. And then you say you think you also exchanged greetings with him at a union meeting of the CIO a few days before that?

A. Some time in June.

Q. What was that on that occasion?

A. I don't recall. Just casual remarks, nothing important enough to impress itself on my memory.

Q. You just said hello.

A. Something like that.

Q. And then you did not talk to him at all during the convention in October?

A. In October, 1941, I did not speak to him at that convention.

Q. So then would June 24th, 1941, be the last time that you spoke to him?

A. I can not specifically recall whether I have or not.

Q. Prior to June, 1941, had you ever spoken to him?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. To the best of my recollection, I had.

Q. When?

A. My impression—and there is an element of —there is an element of possible doubt of time and place—my impression is that I had spoken to him two or three times at top union Communist meetings in New York.

Q. Where were those? When? [2765]

A. Some of those meetings were in the national office of the Communist Party, but most of them were held in privately rented small halls or hotels outside.

Q. Give us the dates.

A. I have stated already I could not.

Q. Give us the year.

A. I could only place my impression of this since I met so many trade union people and so on — I can only place my impression, since you are asking for impressions, or my best recollection is it was between 1934 and 1936. [2766]

Q. Between 1934 and 1936. And all these meetings were in New York City, is that right?

A. Yes, they were all in New York City.

Q. And you say were top trade union meetings of the Communist Party.

A. Of the Communist Party.

Q. Nobody there but Communists, I take it?

A. Nobody but Communists.

Q. And you were there, is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. You saw Harry Bridges there?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I stated that to the best of my recollection—you are asking for recollections——

Q. In other words, you have the impression that you saw him at such meetings, is that right?

A. I am quite certain that I have.

Q. You are quite certain that you saw him at such affairs? A. Yes.

Q. You can't tell us where the places were nor what was said or done, is that right?

A. No, other than that the work of the Communist Party and trade unions was discussed at all of these meetings.

Q. When you appeared before the Un-American Activities Committee on May 6, 1949, you identified certain persons as Communists. You mentioned the following people: Earl Browder, J. Louis [2767] Engdahl, William Z. Foster, Sam Darcy, J. Peters. Do you remember that?

A. Not in sequence. At various points of my testimony.

Q. I am not calling for in sequence; just that you do remember having so testified; do you remember?

A. I can not recall whether I testified regarding each one of those or not. The record speaks for itself.

Q. We want to try out your memory on some of these matters because you pointed out certain fallibilities of memory such as to cast some doubt upon matters. This is in May, 1942. Did you mention William J. Heywood?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I don't recall whether I mentioned Heywood or not.

Q. Did you mention George Mink?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you mention a man named Nassonov?

A. The name, the correct pronunciation is Nassonov.

Q. Did you mention a man named Taylor?

A. In connection with the Communist infiltration into the army, yes.

Q. Walter Trumbull? A. I believe so.

Q. Emanuel Levine? A. I believe so.

Q. George Pershing?

A. I may have been asked about him. [2768]

Q. A Howard Lee?

A. Howard Lee, I remember testifying; I don't remember whether my testimony on him has been published or not.

Q. I notice in reading over your testimony that there are two places where it says "Name deleted." Did you notice that in going through your testimony? A. I did.

Q. What were those, names of people you mentioned and for some reason this Un-American Activities Committee did not put them in their record?

A. They were deleted for national security reasons.

Q. Then there are two other names, Mr. Crouch, mentioned there, then Mrs. Wilson. Did you mention her?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes, I did, of Camden, South Carolina.

Q. Rob Hall?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. Donald Burke, Emmett Gowen, Jack Strong, Jack Sapphire, Ben Davis, Jr., R. F. Hall, Ted Wellman, James Ford, Bart Logan, Henry Winston—do you remember those?

A. I remember most of them.

Q. Joseph S. Gelders? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Nixon, Judge Louise Charlton, James A. Dombrowski, Clark Howell Foreman—do you remember them? A. Most of them. [2769]

Q. Virginia Durr? A. Yes.

Q. John P. Davis? A. Yes.

Q. Don West? A. Yes.

Q. Therese Cantor? A. Yes.

Q. Leo Sheiner? A. Yes.

Q. Alton Lawrence? A. Yes.

Q. Then there is another name deleted. Paul Crobie? A. Yes.

Q. Francis Martin? A. Yes.

Q. Laurent Brown Franx, James Speed, Andy Brown—do you remember them? A. Yes.

Q. Edwin McCrea? A. Yes.

Q. Esther Cooper?

A. I do not recall whether it is in the published version or not. I mentioned her.

Q. David Sherman? [2770]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes, I was asked about him. I don't remember my reply.

Q. Clarence Francis Hiskey? A. Yes.

Q. Kenneth May? A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Rudy Lambert?

A. I remember him very well.

Q. Lena Davis? A. Yes.

The Court: One moment, Mr. Hallinan. You say you remember him very well. Now, so there will be no question hereafter in the record, when you say you remember him very well, do you remember testifying about him? A. Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Wilhelmina Lowrey?

A. I think so.

Q. Don't you remember?

A. I mentioned her in testimony of the hearings; I am not sure whether I mentioned her in the hearing you refer to, but I did mention her then.

Q. Paul Schliff? A. Yes.

Q. George Gray? A. Yes.

Q. Mauris Travis? [2771] A. Yes.

Q. Rudolph Sohn?

A. S-h-o-h-a-n, it should be.

Q. Max Bedacht?

A. I don't recall whether I was asked about him or not.

Q. Grace Maul?

A. I testified regarding her.

Q. Betty Gannett? A. Yes.

Q. John Steiben? A. John who?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Maybe you pronounce it Steuben.

A. Steuben?

Q. Do you remember him?

A. I gave some testimony regarding him.

Q. Rudy Baker? A. Yes.

Q. Rudolph Sohn? A. We mentioned him.

Q. Alexander Trachtenberg, did you mention him?

A. I mentioned him in some of my testimony.

Q. George Kaufman? A. Yes.

Q. Pettis Perry? A. Yes.

Q. Paul Cline? [2772] A. I think so.

Q. Paul Green? A. Yes.

Q. Fred Beahl? A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Helen Kay? A. Yes.

Q. Florence Plotnick, Mary K. Bell?

A. I testified regarding her. I don't know whether it is in the published proceedings.

Q. M. L. Edwards? A. Yes.

Q. Phil Scheffsky? A. Yes.

Q. Edward Waller? A. Yes.

Q. M. L. Edwards?

A. I think you just mentioned his name. Yes.

Q. Now, with regard to these people, many of whom are only mentioned as being members of the Communist Party, but then with regard to certain persons, do you remember giving this testimony:

"On the same ship with me goin——"

Mr. McMillan: May it please Your Honor, may we have, if he is going to read——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Page 183. Have you got the document there? [2773]

Mr. McMillan: I think the witness should be shown the document.

Mr. Hallinan: Let the witness have an extra copy if you want. This is partly to test his recollection.

Mr. McMillan: I think, Your Honor, it isn't necessary to read it; he can show it to him first.

Mr. Hallinan: That is not necessary.

The Court: Let's hear what the question is first.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you remember on May 9, 1949, testifying regarding George Mink:

> "On the same ship with me going to Moscow was George Mink who became and was well known later as international agent of the OGPU," and then down at the bottom of the page:

> "Mink told me he had been a taxi driver on the waterfront in Philadelphia and that he had been spending his time on the waterfront, in which he was chiefly interested; his main interest was among seamen, and in his conversations with me he expressed very ambitious aims of having Communist organizations among seamen which would control the industry throughout the world.
> "In his personal habits, Mink was anything > but an attractive person. He was a very heavy drinker, very promiscuous in his relations with girls, and it was quite a shock to me, with my idealistic conceptions of the [2774] movement, to find one of gangster characteristics like Mink rising to such top leadership."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Do you remember so testifying?

A. Yes, and the George Mink to whom I referred is the same George Mink to whom I referred in my direct testimony as recommending the promotion of Harry Bridges.

Q. Yes. When you stayed with Gilbert Parks on Cat Island, that was a nudist colony, was it not?

A. It was not.

Q. He is the man you stayed with, wasn't he, on the vacation you testified to here on the island in the harbor?

A. Gilbert Parks owned the island on which I stayed, but there wasn't a camp of any kind where I stayed.

Q. It was on Cat Island, wasn't it?

A. It was.

Q. It is run as a nudist colony, isn't it?

A. Not to my knowledge. He had leased the island in previous years for the operation of a nudist colony. It had been discontinued and was just a farm when we lived on the island.

Q. All right. Now, you speak—this is on page 186, of Nassonov:

> "Mr. Crouch: He was a representative of > the Young Communist International to the Young Communist League of the United States at that time. He was armed with full powers from Moscow to decide problems of the Communist Youth [2775] movement in America."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Do you remember so testifying?

A. I do.

Q. Then speaking of Taylor:

> "I do not remember his first name. He was from the mining fields of Pennsylvania, from Wilkes-Barre, if I remember correctly. He enlisted in 1929 for service in Panama and established civilian contacts in Panama, maintained correspondence through the underground channels which we established, served his enlistment without detection, and returned to the United States."

Do you remember giving that thumbnail sketch of Taylor?

A. I do, very distinctly. [2776]

> "Mr. Crouch: Yes. He is also on this card (Exhibit 3). He succeeded me in January, 1930, as the head of this department for the armed forces, and along with him at that time Max Bedacht of the Central Committee of the Party was assigned to work with Trumbull and to give general directions to his work.
>
> "Another Party leader who worked with Bedacht and with Trumbull was Emmanuel Le> vine. Trumbull told me on my visits to Washington that a large number of additional soldiers had been sent to Panama, and at the time of the Osman affair I recall conversations with the Party leaders in New York, and with Trumbull, and Osman was mentioned as one of those who had been sent to Panama."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Do you remember that?

Mr. McMillan: If it please the Court, we object to this. It is not proper cross-examination.

Mr. Hallinan: This is leading up to another matter. It is preliminary.

Mr. McMillan: It is collateral and a time-consuming inquiry.

Mr. Hallinan: I object to the designation of counsel and I assign it as misconduct and ask that the jury be instructed to disregard it. He has no right to make remarks of that kind to the jury, that it is a time-consuming inquiry. I do not propose to waste my time, the Court's time or the jury's time. This is all pertinent and I have a reason for inquiring [2777] into it. You will see it will take some time to run off these thumbnail sketches, but then you will see the purpose of it.

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, it would be different if he were proceeding to lay the foundation for impeachment, but if it is not time-consuming to read and continue to read everything that was testified to in that hearing back there, we will never get through.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: We are not in a hurry. If Mr. McMillan wants to be excused, we will consent. I think the Court might stagger along without him. We can't for the sake of saving time, your Honor, pass up evidence which is material to this inquiry.

Mr. McMillan: That is just my objection. It has no relevancy. It is immaterial, collateral, and, I repeat, time-consuming. Some limitation must be placed on cross-examination, which is in the sound discretion of the Court.

Mr. Hallinan: Objections of this kind, of course, are always made for the purpose of smoking out what the cross-examination has in mind and thereby apprising the witness, and I do not intend to do that unless I am compelled to.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I have been asked to admonish you concerning the statement made by Mr. McMillan. Likewise I assume Mr. McMillan might ask me to admonish you concerning the statements made by Mr. Hallinan. I think I have already given to you the Court's notion and legal position on the matters with respect to the admissibility of [2778] testimony. Very often counsel, or counsel on either side make a statement. That statement is not to be regarded by you as evidence in the matter nor is it to sway you in your consideration of the evidence. I think we all understand that. Do we? I will rule on this matter, Mr. McMillan. I will reserve any objection you may have, but I think Mr. Hallinan is allowed more latitude in this particular inquiry than he has already had. He assures me he will connect it up.

Mr. Hallinan: I think you will see the force of it when I make it.

> "Among Negro representatives at the first conference was John P. Davis, whom I had known in the Communist Party since 1934."

And then with regard to Don West:

> "I knew him very well, for many years, as Don West and as Jim Weaver. He was District director of the Communist Party of North Carolina while I was District Organizer in the fall of 1934 or early 1935. He then left the Carolinas and went to Kentucky as District Organizer of the Communist Party through most of 1935, and then was released from that post and returned to the South, where he has spent most of his time as a writer. The latest news I have was that he was a professor at Oglethorpe University in Georgia and recently published a book of poems." [2779]

Do you remember that testimony?

A. I do.

Q. Then on page 193:

> "And I personally know that the leading officers of the Southern Conference, Theresa Kantor——
> "Mr. Mandel: Of what city?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> "Mr. Crouch: Miami Beach; and Leo Sheiner, chairman of the Southern Conference in the Miami area, are active members of the Communist Party. I would like to add more about Mr. Sheiner and Mrs. Kantor under other headings."

But that not being requested, and the question skipping on, you said:

> "I would like to introduce this photograph of Mrs. Kantor in the Miami Daily News of February 18, 1948, calling attention that pictures of Smolikoff appear on the same page."

Do you remember that testimony?

A. I remember most of it.

Q. So you had brought to this conference, in addition to other material which you had provided, a copy of the Miami Daily News of February 18, 1948, in which this Mrs. Kantor's picture appeared, is that right?

A. That is possible. I remember considerable material. I do not recall the particular picture which you cite. I brought quite a lot of material with me. I do not recall this particular point, but I am not disputing that at all. I remember most of the testimony regarding Theresa Kantor. [2780]

Mr. Hallinan: What I am getting at, this material which you brought was not material which you were subpoenaed to bring, but material which you voluntarily and of your own accord brought and tendered to the committee, is that correct?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. That is correct, for the purpose of exposing Soviet agents in America, voluntarily.

Q. Mr. Crouch, the benignity of your motives is no longer in doubt!

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, may I have that question read? I didn't hear the last question.

The Court: It was an observation, not a question.

Mr. McMillan: That is what I want.

Mr. Hallinan: I said the benignity of his motives is no longer in doubt.

Mr. McMillan: Is that a question, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: I wanted to give him some consolation or assurance that he was a benign man.

Mr. McMillan: He is usurping the province of the jury, may it please your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, he is their witness. If they want me to call him—what do you want me to say? He is a rascal? I tried to be nice to him.

Mr. McMillan: I do not want you to make any statement of that type.

Mr. Hallinan: The observation is withdrawn.

Q. Now, on page 198, speaking of another named, name deleted, "Mr. Crouch: He was a member of the District Bureau of the Communist Party when I was district organizer of the Carolinas. He was in Chattanooga, Tennessee, where preliminary arrangements were made for the southern conference with Earl Browder. He was not registered as a Communist but was one of the Communists most active in the southern conference. I remember an article by Harvard Law School in which they spoke of five or six Communist delegates as being a very small percentage of the total. However, only the district organizers functionaries registered as delegates."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Do you remember that testimony?

A. I do.

Q. That was some man whose name was deleted for some purpose, is that right?

A. For security reasons.

Q. Then Paul Crosby:

> "He is a member of the Communist Party of New York, a businessman who contributes financially to work in the South. I have personally known Mr. Crosby for many years."

And further:

> "Francis Martin was section organizer of Knoxville throughout the time I was in Tennessee. His brother, an artist, David Martin, remained a Party member for about six months after my arrival, and he was very critical of the international situation and it was very difficult to get dues from him or to get his attendance at meetings because of his political disagreements over the international lines of the Party."

Do you remember that?

A. I do.

Q. Then speaking of Lawrence Brown France:

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"I knew him at Birmingham, Alabama, throughout 1938, 1939, and also saw him at various times throughout 1940. He was an active member of the Communist Party of Alabama and frequently attended the District Bureau meetings, although he was not officially a member of the Bureau. He was even called in for consultation on various subjects."

Do you remember that?

A. I do.

Q. Page 200:

"I met Edwin McCrae in September, 1939, when I arrived in Tennessee as district organizer. At that time and throughout the time I was in Tennessee he was section or actual organizer of the Communist Party in Nashville and a member of the Tennessee District Bureau of the Communist Party. When I left Tennessee in March of 1941 Edwin McCrae succeeded me as district organizer of the Communist Party. Later I heard that he had gone to North Carolina as an organizer of the Food and Tobacco Workers Union of the CIO."

Do you remember that?

A. I do.

Q. At 202:

"Kenneth May was a member of the Communist Party and a member of the County Committee and County Secretariat."

Do you remember that testimony?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes.

Q. On the same page, speaking of Lena Davies:

> "She is former District Organizer in New Jersey of the Communist Party, and at one time a member of the Politburo."

Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. And on the next page:

> "Do you know Paul Schlitz?
> "A. (Mr. Crouch): I knew Paul Schlitz very well. He was head of the Alameda County CIO Council and chairman of the Communist Party branch of the CIO leaders."

Do you remember that?

A. I do, very distinctly.

Q. Then on the next page, 204:

> "Maurice Travis was National Secretary-Treasurer of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union. He was an active member of the Young Communists League in Oakland when I [2784] was organizer and became full-time organizer in the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union and later became International President."

Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Those answers that you gave, Mr. Crouch, were volunteered by you, were they not? In other words, you were asked if you knew such a person and you gave a thumbnail sketch of his activities with the Communist Party, and sometimes without, is that correct?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please. The record does not sustain it. On the top of page 204, to which he just made reference, he was asked by the Committee, "I will show you a photograph and ask you if you can identify the individual shown in the photograph."

Mr. Hallinan: That is right, and then he volunteers this information to him. All right. We will let that go.

Now, the question I have in mind, and that this is leading up to—will you listen to this question: "Did you know Harry Bridges, directly or indirectly?"

Answer: "I know Harry Bridges, having met him at public meetings."

Did you say that?

A. I did.

Q. "I knew him through constant reports given by Bill [2785] Schneidermann, District Organizer.

> "Mr. Mandell: What was the nature of the report?
> "Mr. Crouch: Schneidermann's reports were on the conference with Bridges regarding policies, tactics, and organization steps to be carried through. Schneidermann conveyed to Bridges the decisions of the District Bureau and reported to us Bridges' reactions to them.

In some cases Bridges did not always agree, and if it was a minor matter the Bureau usually gave in."

That was your testimony, wasn't it?

A. It was.

Q. And it was all your testimony about Harry Bridges at that hearing, wasn't it?

A. I was asked no further questions.

Q. You knew or you claimed to know at that time that he had been twice elected a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. Just answer yes or no, whether you knew it at that time. A. Yes.

Q. Had you forgotten it? A. No.

Q. And you never mentioned, you did not mention to the Committee at that time this statement of yours that he had been elected in 1936 as a member of the National Committee, did you? [2786]

A. I told the investigators privately that he had been, and they didn't ask me for the record.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that it be stricken out, your Honor. I asked him his testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee.

Mr. Donohue: I think it is responsive to the question.

The Court: Read the question and answer.

(Record read.)

A. They didn't ask me for the record.

Mr. Hallinan: I move that the answer be stricken out. I am asking him concerning his testimony before the Committee. We will go into the investigators later.

The Court: One moment. Was that reference made to the investigator part of this Committee hearing, or was it apart from the Committee hearing?

A. Preliminary to it and in connection with it. I was interviewed privately by the investigators in laying a basis for these proceedings for the record.

Q. One further question, Mr. Hallinan, before I rule on your motion: In the course of your examination by Mr. Hallinan you referred to a public version and another version. Did you have another version? Was it a public version?

A. To make this clear, your Honor——

Q. Did you testify you had a public version or there was a public version? [2787]

A. This is the public version that is being read now.

Q. Was there another version?

A. There were considerable additional versions which were taken in executive session, some under oath and some not, in consultation with the investigators and based on the information obtained through these conferences they decided what questions they wanted to ask me for the benefit of the record, which I was content to make public.

Mr. Hallinan: Those are things, your Honor, that we have no way of impeaching.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: I was attempting to rule on your motion, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: I know. I want to question him on his statement under oath that we have in print. We can't go behind that to discuss whether he had these secret conferences with other people. I wanted to show that when a name was mentioned he gave a complete a thumbnail sketch as he could of the activities, his relationship with the person, what the person's activities were in the Communist Party. When he was asked about Harry Bridges he said, "I knew Harry Bridges slightly, having met him at public meetings." That is his testimony under oath, and your Honor will later see in a further inquiry I am going to present to you the force and importance of this answer.

The Court: I think, Mr. Hallinan, under the circumstances [2788] of the so-called public version from which you are reading and the non-public version, to which he testified himself in response to my questions, the witness may make some explanatory note with respect to the specific answer he gave you in connection with your specific question. I will strike out the latter part of the answer.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well. That is what I want.

Q. When you were brought before the Un-American Activities Committee you were placed under oath, weren't you?

A. Part of the time. When I was formerly before——

Q. No, when you were in before the United States House of Representatives Subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, on Friday, May 6, 1949, you were sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. And when you were asked the question, "Did you know Harry Bridges directly or indirectly?" you answered, "I knew Harry Bridges slightly, having met him at public meetings." Wasn't that your answer? A. That was part of it.

Q. Here is the rest of it: "I knew him through constant reports given by Bill Schneidermann, District Organizer." Was that your answer?

A. That was part of it. [2789]

Q. That is the entire answer to that question. Do you want to see the record, or do you remember it very well?

A. I remember the general essence of the testimony.

Q. Let me ask you this: You have gone over this answer with these gentlemen representing the prosecution, haven't you?

A. I haven't gone over that answer with any of the gentlemen representing the prosecution here today.

Q. You went over it with Mr. Boyd, didn't you?

A. I did not.

Q. Who was the gentleman who was not here today that you went over it with?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. No one of the attorneys connected with this case.

Q. What investigator? What agent?

A. I mentioned the fact that I had testified previously regarding Harry Bridge to a George Zamlich.

Q. How do you spell that?

A. Z-a-m-l-i-c-h, I believe.

Q. Who is he? Where is he?

A. I believe he is here in the courtroom.

Mr. Hallinan: Might we see Mr. Zamlich? Could we ask the gentleman to stand up?

The Court: Certainly.

(A gentleman arose in the courtroom.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Is that the man you mentioned it to? A. It is. [2790]

Q. When did you mention it to Mr. Zamlich?

A. When he was questioning me about my—asking me about my knowledge of Bridges and asking me about where I had testified, on what subject I had testified, where I had been employed, what positions I had held in the Communist Party, and similar related questions.

Q. When? A. A few weeks ago.

Q. How many weeks ago?

A. Oh, two weeks ago, I believe.

Q. Where?

A. In the offices of the Immigration office.

Q. Where is that?

A. On Sansome Street, I believe, in San Francisco.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. At that time you told Mr. Zamlich, you say, that you had testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee, is that right?

A. To the best of my recollection. I don't remember the exact words, but to the best of my recollection I mentioned that I had testified regarding Bridges before the House Committee.

Q. And then did you produce your copy of the testimony?

A. Not to the best of my recollection.

Q. Well, you had it?

A. I don't remember, but to the best of my recollection I did not. I don't recall. [2791]

Q. You carried that along with you when you came out here, didn't you?

A. I might have had a copy in my brief case.

Q. You told us already this morning that you brought a copy out with you. Don't you remember that?

A. I said, as near as I can recall, I said I usually have a copy when I am traveling.

Q. When you gave the answer there a few minutes ago that you did not say this to any of the gentlemen trying this case here, what you wanted to do was to deceive the Court and jury that you had not discussed the subject at all with anyone connected with the prosecution, is that right?

A. Not at all. I want to make it clear I had not discussed my testimony before the House Committee or in connection with any attorneys who were participating in the case. I discussed other aspects with one of the attorneys participating in the case, Mr. Boyd.

Q. Let us get this a little bit better. About two weeks ago—and by "two weeks ago," can you pin it down a littl more closely, just what day it was that you had the conversation with Mr. Zamlich?

A. I don't recall the exact day, no.

Q. Today being Monday, was it two weeks ago today or what?

A. Approximately. There were no particular circumstances to cause me to remember the particular day. [2792]

Q. When did you come to San Francisco in this case?

A. I came to San Francisco on the 11th of November.

Q. The 11th of November?

A. That is correct, to be ready for testimony when this case opened on the 14th of November.

Q. And you have been here ever since?

A. Unfortunately, yes.

Q. Continuously? A. Correct.

Q. Where have you been living?

A. I have been living at the Sutter Hotel, San Francisco.

Q. What is the name of it?

A. Sutter, S-u-t-t-e-r, Hotel on Sutter and Keeny, I believe was the street, in San Francisco.

Q. What room have you, Mr. Crouch?

A. I have Room 727 at the Hotel Sutter.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Have you been paying your own way at the Hotel Sutter, or has the Government been paying it?

A. I have been paying my way at the hotel, partly from my own funds, which I had brought with me, and partly from per diem advances from the Government.

Q. How much are you paying at the Hotel Sutter? A. I am paying $30 a week.

Q. Is that just for a room?

A. Yes. [2793]

Q. And then your meals—is the Government paying for your meals over and above the per diem?

A. No.

Q. You are paying that out of the per diem you received?

A. Out of my own pocket. I have spent over a couple of hundred dollars of my own money since I have been here.

Q. You mean that you have not gotten back yet? A. Actual loss.

Q. Now, you know Mr. Manning Johnson, don't you?

A. I have testified previously I was quite well acquainted with Mr. Manning Johnson from 1932 or 1933, somewhere in that period, up to about 1939, and that—— [2794]

Q. Referring to the present time.

A. At the present time I met him for the first time since he left the party, the other day just before I came on the witness stand. I met him in the witness room and shook hands.

Q. He is staying at the Hotel Sutter, isn't he?

A. I have no personal knowledge. I saw him walk through the hotel lobby one day, and my impression was it was Manning Johnson. He walked through rapidly. I didn't ask him any questions. I have no personal knowledge, and I haven't seen him in the Hotel Sutter except seeing him walk through the lobby one day. If he is in the Hotel Sutter, I have no knowledge what his room number is, and I don't know whether he is there or not.

Q. Did you go to the Hotel Sutter on November 11th as soon as you came to San Francisco? Is that the first place you lived?

A. I think so, to the best of my—yes, it is.

Q. And by arrangement, with whom did you go to that hotel?

A. I had requested, before I arrived in San Francisco, I had had a wire sent from Seattle by the Immigration officers asking the immigration office here to arrange reservations for me at a hotel in San Francisco and they arranged, in response to this request from me, reservations in the Hotel Sutter.

Q. Now, when you came to San Francisco on November 11th, who is the first person that you talked to, or whom is the first person you talked to relating to your appearance in this case? [2795]

A. Mr. Zamlich.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. How long after arriving in San Francisco, did you first see him?

A. He met me at the airport and drove me to the hotel.

Q. Was he alone?

A. My best recollection is he was alone.

Q. And when you went to the hotel, did Mr. Zamlich go in with you?

A. I believe he stayed with me as I registered, and I believe he walked up with me to the room and asked me how I liked it and then left.

Q. And then when did you next see him?

A. The next morning, I believe.

Q. Where?

A. He called for me. I came down and met him in the lobby and drove down to the immigration office.

Q. When you got down there, whom did you talk to? A. Mr. Zamlich.

Q. Nobody else?

A. I think I said hello to a stenographer.

Q. At that time did you talk to Mr. Zamlich about your testimony? A. I did.

Q. And was it then that you told him about your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee? [2796]

A. No.

Q. Now, how long were you with Mr. Zamlich at the immigration office on that occasion?

A. I do not recall the exact time, perhaps an hour.

Q. Had you ever met him before?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I had.

Q. When?

A. About the first of November.

Q. Where?

A. In the immigration office in San Francisco.

Q. You had been here on November 1st and then returned up to Portland or Seattle or wherever you had come from, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when you came to San Francisco on November 1st, under what circumstances did you come or what arrangement?

A. I came to testify for the government in a civil suit, or in a suit brought in the federal court in Sacramento by Mr. Chandra to compel the United States Government to grant him citizenship.

Q. That is the case you mentioned this morning. Have you forgotten that you mentioned it this morning?

A. No, you asked me the case; you asked me about it a second time, and I told you about it a second time.

Q. All right. Then when you came here on November 1st you met [2797] Mr. Zamlich. How did you happen to meet Mr. Zamlich? Did you have an arrangement to meet him or what was your——

A. No, I did not. As I recall, Mr. Noto who was conducting—who was questioning me regarding the Chandra case and who was conducting the government's case in Sacramento at that time—we was here in San Francisco before we went to Sacramento—told me that Mr. Zamlich wished to see me on the third floor, and I went down and had talked to him and I was—and he had asked me questions on another case which does not pertain to this in any way, and I gave him answers to my best knowledge of the matter on that case on that occasion.

Q. And then did he ask you to testify in the Bridges case?

A. I do not recall whether the Bridges case was mentioned on that occasion or not. I do not remember.

Q. Did you discuss with him at that time any testimony relating to Harry Bridges?

A. I do not now recall any discussion; I might have, but I can not recall it.

Q. What was the nature of the case that he spoke to you about? Who was the person there involved?

A. It was the case of a Mr. Al Richmond, circulation manager of the People's World, I believe.

Q. Al Richmond. When did you next see Mr. Zamlich then?

A. When he came out to the airport.

Q. You only saw him for a short time on November 1st; then [2798] you saw him next when he met you at the airport? A. Yes.

Q. When you went down to the immigration office and talked to him for about an hour, was there a statement taken from you then?

A. Yes, on the Al Richmond case.

Q. Oh, no, about the Bridges case.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Not to the best of my recollection.

Q. That is November 11th and 12th?

A. November 1st; somewhere around November 1st; I don't recall the exact date.

Q. We have passed by that and come to the occasion on which you returned to San Francisco on November 11th and Mr. Zamlich picked you up on the following morning and took you down to the immigration office. A. Yes.

Q. Did he take a written statement at that time?

A. He began taking written notes with a stenographer taking down my answers.

Q. Then was that reduced to writing?

A. I believe so.

Q. Was it signed by you?

A. Some of it was.

Q. How many pages were there in the transcript you saw?

A. This transcription was supplemented by additional ones, and [2799] I would estimate roughly that the total amounted to about a hundred pages.

Q. On the first day, this is the 12th, how long were you in the immigration office then? You told us about an hour, didn't you?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. And how many pages were taken then?

A. Perhaps 10 pages.

Q. Perhaps 10 pages?

A. Perhaps. I do not recall exactly.

Q. And then when did you return to the immigration office?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. About two or three days later.

Q. And under what circumstances did you go then?

A. The same. He phoned at the hotel and then came by and picked me up at the lobby and drove me down to the immigration office and again questioned me at great length as to whether I had ever been arrested and all the circumstances in connection with my Communist Party activities.

Q. Did he ask you——

A. About where I had worked.

Q. Did he ask you about your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee on that occasion? A. I think so.

Q. What is that? A. I believe he did.

Q. Did you volunteer it or did he tell you that he had the information?

A. To the best of my recollection, he asked me.

Q. In other words——

A. He asked me if—he asked me to name the places where I had testified, and I named those, other places I had testified.

Q. Did he have at that time a copy of your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee?

A. To the best of my recollection, no. I am not positive, but I don't think so.

Q. Did you have one with you?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Was anybody else present at that time besides the stenographer?

A. Yes, there was one or—I think there was one or two other agents or employees of the Immigration Department whose names I do not remember, and who took no part in the conversation.

Q. Were you introduced to them?

A. I was introduced to, I think, one of them; I believe another came in without even an introduction taking place.

Q. Have you met that other man since, the one to whom you were introduced?

A. I have passed him in the lobby around there, but I don't know his name or his position.

Q. In the lobby of the Immigration Department? [2801] A. That is correct.

Q. When did you next see anybody connected with the Immigration Department? And here we have got it now that you saw a man on the 1st, then the 11th, then three or four days afterward, which would bring it to the 14th or 15th. When did you next see anybody?

A. I think the next time I saw him was the following day.

Q. Where?

A. He picked me up at the hotel and drove me over to Oakland, California, for the purpose of identifying the room in which I had stayed from the 2nd to the 5th of October, '41, under the name of Carl Wilson, and he had previously asked me to describe the interior of the—of the hotel, the position where Harry Bridges had stood, and so on, and where I had stood. And then he took me—and then after asking these questions in advance, he took me inside and asked me to point out these places to him and he also asked me to identify the room in which I had registered with my wife as Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson at the Hotel Harrison.

Q. Your wife?

A. The room where my wife and I in October, 1941, had registered as Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson in the Hotel Harrison during the course of this convention so I would be able to see that the party bureau decisions were carried through by the convention.

Q. And you registered there under the name of Carl Wilson, is [2802] that right?

A. On October 2nd, 1941, I registered at the hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson, and was assigned Room 708 in the Harrison Hotel.

Q. It was your wife who was with you, is that right? A. She was with me.

Q. When did you next see Mr. Zamlich?

A. I believe the following week.

Q. And where?

A. I was picked up and brought down again to the—to the immigration office, and questioned further about the case in Hawaii, and about my Communist activities.

Q. What case in Hawaii?

A. The case to which you have already referred.

Q. The one on which you were sent to the penitentiary?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. The case that you objected to under direct examination.

Q. No, I did not object to it; I objected to the characterization of it. You were sentenced to 40 years at hard labor for a felony, isn't that right?

A. It isn't a felony, that is not correct.

Q. This would bring it up to around November 20th or 21st; you were taken by Mr. Zamlich down to the immigration office, is that right?

A. For further details along the lines I have indicated.

Q. Was anybody else there at that time besides a stenographer?

A. I think Mr. Kaiser came in for a few minutes, possibly [2803] three or four minutes.

Q. Anyone else?

A. They changed stenographers, I believe. I think there were two stenographers and there were two or three people coming and going, staying in the room for a few minutes and then leaving.

Q. Nobody whom you met subsequently connected with the case? A. No.

Q. Then when did you next see Mr. Zamlich?

A. I believe, as near as I can recall, the next time I saw Mr. Zamlich was when he picked me up to bring me down to the witness room.

Q. And when was that?

A. The day I went on the stand.

Q. Just here a couple of days ago?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, from about the 20th or 21st of November until you appeared on the witness stand, you had not seen Mr. Zamlich again, is that right?

A. I do not recall specifically whether I saw him during that time or not.

Q. Did you see any other agents in the interim?

A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. Agents who had been assigned to have rooms next to me for my physical protection. [2804]

Q. Who were they?

A. I don't remember their names. There was one was given a room on one side, another on the other side, another across the hall.

Q. What were their names?

A. I do not remember their names.

Q. How long have they lived there in the hotel with you?

A. They lived there almost continuously since I have been there.

Q. From November 11th? A. Yes.

Q. And have you gone out to lunch with them or anything like that?

A. I have never gone out to lunch with any of them.

Q. Have you spoken to them in the room or in the lobby?

A. I would say how do you do when I met them.

Q. Were you introduced to them?

A. I was introduced to one. I would know the name if you would mention it, since he is from Seattle. He had the room adjoining; I can't recall his name; I would know his name is I heard it.

Q. How many times had you met him?

A. I have met him half a dozen times when I was in Seattle. Here I only meet passing in the lobby.

Q. Then the other men in the room adjoining you, do you know [2805] their names?

A. No.

Q. Have they come down with you in the hall, too?

A. They are not with me. I have met them in the elevator; I met them in the lobby, but I just merely said, "How do you do?" and walked on.

Q. When you come out from the Hotel Sutter to this court and back again, how do you get there?

A. Pardon me?

Q. When you come out here to court from the Hotel Sutter on the occasions that you have been testifying and when you leave the court to go back to the Hotel Sutter, by what means have you been transported there? A. By car.

Q. A car driven by one of these agents?

A. By Mr. Zamlich.

Q. And when you go to lunch or when you go to dinner, do one of those people accompany you also?

A. Mr. Zamlich on two occasions, yes.

Q. Has he had dinner with you at night?

A. No.

Q. Who does? A. My wife.

Q. Anybody else? A. No. [2806]

Q. None of these agents? A. None.

Q. Where have you been eating?

A. I have been eating most of the time at the—I believe it is called the Powell Cafe at Powell and Sutter Streets. I usually have breakfast in a small coffee shop up Sutter one block, about a block from the hotel. I sometimes eat at a place on Market Street in the same block as the Paramount Theater, I don't remember the name of that; and I eat sometimes at a grill about half a block from the Palace Hotel; and I believe it is called Hoffman's Grill. Those places are my favorite eating places since I have been here.

Q. Have one of these men eaten with you on each occasion?

A. No one has ever eaten with me on any occasion except during recess since this—since I began my testimony when Mr. Zamlich had lunch with me.

Q. How many times? A. Once.

Q. Now, have any of them accompanied you to shows or moving pictures or anything of that kind?

A. No one, never.

Q. Have you gone to any? A. I have.

Q. How many times?

A. About three times since I have been here in San Francisco. [2807]

Q. Accompanied by your wife? A. Yes.

Q. Have you gone out to Golden Gate Park or anything of that sort?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, isn't this getting too far afield?

The Court: Overruled.

A. I went to the——

Mr. Hallinan: Do you want to take the recess?

The Court: You may answer this last question.

A. I went to the Golden Gate Park. I went one day to Golden Gate Park and walked through the museum, through the Chinese Tea Garden, the African Hall, the Aquarium, the Museum of Natural Science, and on another occasion I visited the San Francisco Zoo.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Any of those agents with you on that occasion? A. None.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the afternoon recess, with the same admonition not to discuss the case nor form or express an opinion until it is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2808]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, having had the discussion with Mr. Zamlich relating to your testimony before the un-American Activities Committee, no other person connected with the prosecution spoke to you on that subject at all, is that right?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Have you ever talked to Mr. Donohue?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Have you ever talked to Mr. Donohue?

A. I met Mr. Donohue in the corridors of the Immigration office and he said, "How do you do; Mr. Crouch, I presume?"

I said, "Yes."

He replied, "I am very glad to meet you. I will be seeing you later."

I next met him in the corridor just before I went on the stand and he said, "How do you do, Mr. Crouch."

That is the total amount of the conversation I have had in my life with Mr. Donohue.

Q. Have you had any conversation about your testimony with Mr. Paisley?

A. I think Mr. Paisley was with Mr. Donohue in the corridor and he said, "My name is Paisley. Glad to meet you." And that is the total sum of the conversation I have had with Mr. Paisley on any and all subjects.

Q. Well, if you will confine yourself now to discussions about [2809] your testimony. Have you had any conversation with Mr. McMillan on that subject? A. None whatsoever.

Q. Mr. Gallagher? A. Mr. Who?

Q. Any of the other agents connected with the case?

A. With Mr. Boyd in Seattle, before he came down here.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Boyd in Seattle about your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee in which Harry Bridges was mentioned? A. No.

Q. So the only person, then, that you have discussed that phase of your testimony with before the

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Un-American Activities Committee is Mr. Zamlich, is that right? A. That is correct.

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, I have here an affidavit and an order for a praecipe for the issuance of a subpoena duces tecum. It may not be necessary that we go to the extent of having it issued. I want to ask the witness concerning another item in the New York Times at about the time that this matter occurred, and it may be if counsel are willing to allow me to have it called to the witness' recollection—it only relates to one of the incidents in the Communist Party convention of June, 1936—we may not have to do that. Any objection to [2810] that?

Mr. Donohue: I do not know what you are trying to produce.

Mr. Hallinan: On page 11, column 1, of the New York Times for the 25th of June, 1936, is this statement——

Mr. Donohue: I object to reading the statement.

The Court: You might glance at it. It may be the subject of some discussion.

Mr. Hallinan: It is not a matter of great moment.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, by what rule could any statement in the newspaper be admitted in this trial?

Mr. Hallinan: I didn't want it admitted in evidence. I want to ask the witness if it refreshes his recollection that such is the fact. If he says No, that finishes it.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: If you hand him such a statement and ask him to look at it and ask him if it refreshes his recollection ~~about any~~ fact, I have no objection.

Mr. Hallinan: He would probably say he doesn't know whether it was in the paper or not, so I am going to ask the clerk, if he will, please, to take my affidavit on that and ask the Court for the issuance of of subpoena on the Librarian, the Public Library of the City and County of San Francisco, where these documents are, to bring in that one issue of the Times.

Q. I notice also, Mr. Witness, that this testimony concerning Harry Bridges is on page 205 of testimony that commenced on [2811] page 181, and you say now that you have not spoken to anybody but Mr. Zamlich in relation to the question and answer conveyed in that testimony: "Mr. Mandel: Did you know Harry Bridges directly or indirectly?

> "Mr. Crouch: I knew Harry Bridges slightly, having met him in public meetings. I knew him through constant reports given by Bill Schneidermann, District Organizer."

That is a fact——

A. Is that all—pardon me.

Q. That is the only person you discussed that matter with in the prosecution of this case, is that right?

A. I have no recollection of any discussion with anyone but Mr. Zamlich. I may have mentioned it irrelevantly to a stenographer or something like that, but I have no recollection of it. I don't recall having mentioned it to anyone except Mr. Zamlich, ~~to the best of my recollection.~~

Q. You testified on November 9, 1949, in a deportation proceeding relating to Elizabeth E. Holm—no, this is relating to Hazel Anna Wolf, is that right?

A. That is right. That is the secretary to Attorney General Coughlan, whose name I couldn't think of.

Q. Where did that testimony take place?

A. In the Immigration offices in Seattle.

Q. And it took place in November, 1949, isn't that right?

A. Correct, to the best of my recollection. [2812]

Q. It started on November 9, and I notice you were testifying here on November 10. Do you remember that?

A. I don't remember the exact days of the month.

Q. At that time you were under oath, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. Sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth? A. Correct.

Q. I want to ask you whether on that occasion, in response to the following questions, you gave the following answers (this is on page 69):

> "Q. Do you recall testifying before the election board in the city of Nashville, Tennessee?
> "A. I do.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"Q. And approximately when was that?

"A. Approximately in the early fall of 1940.

"Q. And at that time and place you testified as follows, did you not, that the program of the Communist Party with respect to the use of force and violence is that we of the Communist Party never did and never will hold to a program of forcible establishment of socialism against the will of the people; you did testify to that, did you not?

"A. I testified essentially as follows——

"Q. Will you answer my question as to whether you [2813] testified in the manner in which I have just read?

"A. (By you) Not in the number which you have just read.

"Q. Did you testify that the position and program of the Communist Party was that the Communist Party never did and never will hold to a program of forcible establishment of socialism against the will of the people?

"A. I introduced that into the record, but I don't recall testifying to that in my own words.

"Q. Well, now, did you under oath introduce what I have just read into the record stating that it did constitute the program of the Communist Party on the subject of force and violence?

"A. Not in the words which you have stated.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"Q. What were the words that you used in introducing that into the record?

"A. Essentially the following: 'In answer to the argument that the Communist Party advocates the overthrow of the Government by force and violence I wish to state the following: "From" '—and then to the best of my recollection I have read the quotation you have just cited.

"Q. Now, at that time and place I have just mentioned you also, while under oath, read the following, did you not, quoting from the constitution of the Communist Party, on page 4 of the constitution, unanimously adopted at the 10th National Convention, May 27, 1938: 'The Communist [2814] Party upholds the achievements of democracy, the right of life, liberty and the pursuing of happiness, to defend the United States Constitution against its reactionary enemies, who would destroy democracy and all popular liberties'?

"A. (By you) I read that into the record, to the best of my recollection.

"Q. And you also read the following into the record, did you not, further quoting from Article X, Section 5, of the same constitution and by-laws, appearing on page 20, also marked Government's Exhibit 15 in this case: 'Party members found to be advocates of terrorism and violence as a method of Party procedure shall be summarily dismissed from position of responsibility, expelled from the Party and exposed before the general public'?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"A. (By you) I believe I read that.

"Q. Now, at the time of your testifying there under oath it was your intent and purpose, was it not, that your testimony and the statements which you made to the election board should be and were intended by you to be taken as meaning that the Communist Party did not advocate the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence; can you answer that question Yes or No?

"A. I cannot truthfully directly answer it with a Yes or No answer. [2815]

"Q. Why are your unable to answer Yes or No?

"A. Because it was my hope by presenting the documents to halt further study which would show the fact that the Party really did advocate overthrow of the Government by force and violence.

"Q. Is this a question, the one I have just asked you, is this one which required at this time an evasive answer on your part?

"A. It is not an evasive answer.

"Q. Was it your intention that the election board should understand your testimony in such a way as, in order that the election board would believe the Communist Party at that time did not advocate the overthrow of the Government by force and violence?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"A. (By you) I hoped they would get that inference from the documents I submitted.

"Q. My question is, Was it your intention in appearing there to so lead the election board to believe? A. (By you) Yes.

"Q. And the purpose and intent of your testimony was to lead the election board to believe that the Communist Party did not advocate the overthrow of the Government by force and violence? A. (By you) Yes."

Was that your testimony? [2816]

A. That is my testimony——

Q. Will you please answer it Yes or No first?

A. Yes.

Q. And you gave that testimony under oath, didn't you?

A. I gave my answers to all questions under oath.

Q. I notice in there that you refer to the convention of the Communist Party that was held in 1938 as the tenth convention of the Communist Party. Do you remember if that is what it was?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was, 1938, the tenth convention.

Q. Does the Communist Party have letterheads?

A. Letterheads? Yes.

Q. Printed letterheads? A. Yes.

Q. With the name of the Party and the address upon it? A. Yes.

Q. Did they print lists of the Central Committee? A. Not in 1938.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. When did they start printing them?

A. Not while I was a member.

Q. Have you seen them since you left the membership of the Communist Party?

A. I have not.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the first convention of the Communist [2817] Party to which the public and press were admitted was the convention that was held in New York in June, 1936?

A. The press was admitted to a few restricted sessions, to the best of my recollection, but they were not present at the entire convention by any means.

Q. Was the public also admitted to some of the meetings?

A. At the Madison Square Garden meeting, where Browder and Foster were nominated for president and vice president, the public was admitted, provided they paid the admission fees.

Q. No, I mean prior to that. I mean at the convention in the Manhattan Opera House.

A. No.

Q. You say the public was not admitted?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Since I showed you the document giving citations of news reports from the New York Times have you consulted the files of the New York Times to verify those statements? A. I have not.

Q. Have you seen any statement in any paper or was any paper shown to you in which the statement was contained that the convention, which opened the day before, was the first one of the Communist Party to which the press and public were admitted? Have you seen that any place?

A. No.

Q. That was not shown to you by any of these gentlemen connected [2818] with the prosecution?

A. It was not.

Q. Nor read by you in any newspaper?

A. No.

Q. If you saw that statement in a copy of the New York Times would it refresh your recollection if the public were admitted?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if the Court please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. I don't think so, because I was there. I am not sure about other alleged reporters.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): I want to show you an exhibit here which was gotten from the United States Printing Office (handing document to counsel for the Government). [2819]

Mr. Hallinan: I might, in identifying that document for you gentlemen, tell you that it was an exhibit in one of the hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Mr. Donohue: That is very interesting. I just don't see any indication on here what it is. If your Honor please, this document has not been identified.

Mr. Hallinan: I am trying to identify it.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: It has been described by Mr. Hallinan. I don't know what it is. I have no proof of what he stated.

Mr. Hallinan: Counsel can check it up without the slightest difficulty. It is a series of documents that were presented to the Committee on Un-American Activities on November 27, 1939, by Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party of the United States of America, in response to a subpoena requiring him to present the list of the National Committee of the Communist Party elected at the Tenth Convention, and it contains a list, and it also contains a list of the districts of the Communist Party of the United States of America and their addresses and a copy of the front of the printed folder of proceedings of the Twelfth Convention of the Communist Political Association held in New York May 20th, 1924, and a printed list of the National Committee of the Communist Political Association which was selected at that convention as late as 1944. Now, it appears as Exhibits 15 and 16 with relation to a man named Nelson in a report of the Un-American Activities [2820] Committee.

Mr. Donohue: I don't know whether that is true or not.

Mr. Hallinan: If you will check that, you will see that that is.

Mr. Donohue: I think that the first rule before a document is asked to be admitted in a court is to authenticate it.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: I do not offer it now. That isn't my purpose.

Mr. Donohue: I just don't know what the purpose it, if your Honor please. I must say to your Honor I have read this document, and except for what Mr. Hallinan says as to where it came from, I have no information.

Mr. Hallinan: Let me ask you this, Mr. Donohue: Was Reed Whitely, counsel for the Committee on Un-American Activities, was he counsel on November 27, 1939?

Mr. Donohue: I wouldn't know.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I think that the easiest way to solve the matter is, as these gentlemen undoubtedly have all the reports of this committee, that you simply check and see whether this isn't contained as an exhibit.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, I will ask the witness to refresh his recollection from the document; and I will give him first the——

The Court: Was he confronted with this document at that hearing? [2821]

Mr. Hallinan: No.

Mr. Donohue: This was a hearing that happened ten years ago, in 1939, if what Mr. Hallinan says is true.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't know about that, but I imagine that is probably true.

(Document was handed to the witness.)

Mr. Hallinan: While the witness is looking it over, I think, if there is any question on the matter of whence this document is derived, an order to save the necessity of subpoenaing the secretary of that Un-American Activities Committee, that counsel for the Government be requested by the Court to check and see if they will not agree that this document is contained as an exhibit in the minutes of the Congressional inquiry.

Mr. McMillan: Mr. Hallinan, you do not contend that this contains any authentication or certification, do you?

Your Honor, may I inquire through the Court whether that document——

The Court: The letter is dated November 27, 1939. It bears the letterhead of the Communist Party of the United States of America, U.S.A. Now what is your point, counsel?

Mr. McMillan: I am asking through the Court whether that document is in any way authenticated or certified.

The Court: No, there is no certification on it.

Mr. Hallinan: I will just ask him—I won't offer the document—I will ask him this, now: [2822]

Q. Having read this document, sir,—withdraw that. The National Committee of the Communist Party, which was elected in 1938, was elected for a period of two years, is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Just as the one that was elected for 1936 was elected for two years, so that in November, 1939, the same National Committee that was elected in 1938 at the convention would be the committee operating, isn't that correct? A. Correct.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Now, I ask you this: If you can remember that these were the names of the members of the National Committee of the Communist Party of the United States of America elected at the Tenth Convention.

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please, to reading a list of names on a document allegedly signed by Earl Browder which is in no way authenticated, certified or identified. To permit counsel to read from such a document is in fact to admit that document in evidence, and I most respectfully say, if your Honor please, it is improper.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, I could ask this from my own memory if I prepared the list myself. I am simply asking about these persons to see whether or not these people that he said were elected were in fact elected as shown upon the list.

The Court: The objection is well taken with respect to the authenticity of the document. [2823]

Mr. Hallinan: That is, if I offered it in evidence, that is true. There couldn't be as far as asking from the list of whether or not the list refreshes his recollection of the people who were elected.

The Court: By the asking you impart integrity.

Mr. Donohue: Why, of course, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: I think counsel for the Government should have an opportunity to determine whether or not the list is authentic.

Mr. Hallinan: I have no objection to that.

Mr. Donohue: May I state it this way, if your Honor please——

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: I think there is a duty on counsel on both sides, who seek to offer a document before this Court to follow the rule and have that document documented, certified and authenticated.

Mr. Hallinan: You can't authenticate a document like this.

Mr. Donohue: Of course you can.

Mr. Hallinan: Where could it be done?

Mr. Donohue: I don't know where, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: I told you it reached me yesterday.

Mr. Donohue: If as he states, it is part of the file of the House Un-American Activities Committee, he could have had that document so authenticated and certified. If it were our [2824] purpose to offer it, we would do the same. That is in Washington, D. C., and a document ten years ago, of course we do not have it here. I can't authenticate it because I never saw it before. This document purports to be from Earl Browder, with his name signed to it, and I doubt it.

Mr. Hallinan: You are producing the Communists. Why don't you check up on your information? We don't know them.

Your Honor, the Un-American Activities Committee put out printed documents such as the one from which we examined the witness; as they examine certain persons, they affix certain exhibits. Now this is an exhibit that was affixed to an inquiry relating to one Nelson. I can probably get the exact date on which it was affixed, but all I have is this letter and this list. Now, he says,——

The Court: May I ask you your source of that, sir?

Mr. Hallinan: It is taken from the—we have frantically dug up Un-American Activities proceedings where this witness would take the stand. And may I point out to Your Honor that counsel has several times suggested—I don't know what he thinks the morality of it is, but that we were going to be surprised and caught by surprise, but that we were going to be surprised on a motion for mistrial, we weren't going to get the chance to now be able to check up on their witnesses and find out if they were telling the truth. So when a witness like Crouch takes the stand, we have to as quickly as we can then [2825] make an effort, so we consulted the Un-American Activities Committee to find if he has testified there. We produce a document from that committee. We have no time to hire people to go and get authenticated copies. I don't know what an authenticated copy would be. I suppose that the secretary of the Un-American Activities Committee could certify that the documents which you inclosed here were as a matter of fact introduced or affixed as exhibits before a hearing of this committee. What would that add to it?

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, without any reflection on you, mind you, that the document is anything except what you represent it to be, if we did not have documents authenticated, spurious documents, all sorts of documents might be presented to a court.

Mr. Hallinan: I grant that.

The Court: I think with the processes of the court, you could see that this document is transmitted for proper certification. If it be such a document as you say which was admitted and received in evidence, it may be authenticated and received as such. [2826]

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we will do that if we have to, but I suggest——

The Court: Can't you check with Mr. Donohue on it?

Mr. Donohue: I would have to do the same thing he would do.

Mr. Hallinan: No, you don't. Just get the record of the Un-American Activities Committee and find out if it is in there. Then if it is in there——

Mr. Donohue: You said you got it.

Mr. Hallinan: They have put out thousands of copies. We have a copy of it. He has a copy.

Mr. Donohue: I have no copy of this letter. I never say it in my life. The only thing I could do would be to send this or a copy of it to the Committee and ask them to authenticate it. He can do that.

Mr. Hallinan: Has the prosecution all the reports of the Un-American Activities Committee?

The Court: Do you have such report?

Mr. Donohue: I don't know, if your Honor please. I will be glad to see.

Mr. Hallinan: Maybe Mr. McMillan can tell us. Have you?

Mr. McMillan: I have no knowledge of it. We all know the House Un-American Activities Committee has been holding hearings for more than ten years and they ran into thousands of pages. [2827]

Mr. Hallinan: If we are able to find them, they should be able to find them.

Mr. McMillan: We found those that we think are pertinent.

The Court: I will not foreclose Mr. Hallinan from the inquiry upon that. If at a later stage it be authenticated in some proper form, if necessary this witness will return for any purpose you may have.

Mr. Hallinan: Suppose I do this: Would it be violating the spirit of the rule to simply ask if certain persons whose names I read off were on the committee—were on the National Committee?

The Court: You relate to a period of time in 1939?

Mr. Hallinan: 1939, yes. That is just what he testified. He testified to the Committee in 1939; that Harry Bridges under the name of Derkin or Dargan was elected a member of that National Committee. I want to first verify from him whether or not certain names were members of the National Committee and then to proceed to prove that it contained no such name as Bridges, Rossi, Derkin, Dorgan, Harvey or Canfield.

The Court: Of course, the Government may we argue in opposition that the Government is not bound by any representation made by Mr. Browder.

Mr. Hallinan: That is correct, and that is why I want to ask this witness.

Mr. Donohue: And that is why I asked the question as to [2828] the purpose of this unauthenticated document as proof to the contrary, and it is not admissible.

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, what we are trying to do is to disprove the testimony he put in.

Mr. Donohue: I will pass that remark, if your Honor please, and rely on the rule of law.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Let me ask you this, Mr. Witness: In the proceeding in which you appeared against Betty Gannett in New York on September 30, 1949, and reading from page 18, in answer to the following questions, did you give the following answers: Question, by Mr. Darfman, who represented the Government:

> "Mr. Crouch, have you ever used or been known by any other name?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"A. (By you): Once, by the name of Fred Allen."

Did you so testify?

A. I did.

Q. Now you tell us that when you registered, as you say, with your wife, at the hotel in Oakland in the 1941 convention of the CIO, you registered there under the name of Carl Wilson, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I have the resolution that was introduced at the CIO convention?

The Clerk: Defendants' Exhibit W for identification, that [2829] exhibit (handing document to counsel).

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you went to the hotel in Oakland and you stayed there, and you tell us on some sort of obligation or task of seeing that certain things were done at the CIO convention being held in Oakland around that time, is that so?

A. That is correct.

Q. And as I understand it, one of your chief duties was to see that Harry Bridges introduced a certain resolution, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Oh, parenthetically, in your testimony given in this case yesterday or today—yesterday—will you state whether you were asked the following questions and gave the following answers: This is at page 2582.

"During the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you pay your dues as a member of that organization?

"A. I did."

These were the questions by whoever examined you for the prosecution.

"Q. At any time during the period of your membership in the Communist Party, Mr. Crouch, were you known by any name or names other than the name of Paul Crouch?

"A. I was.

"Q. Will you state the name or names under which you were so [2830) known?

"A. Fred Allen and Carl Wilson are the two names under which I can recall being personally known. I have written articles under various names, both inside and outside of the Communist Party."

Did you so testify? A. I did.

Q. With relation to the writing of articles, are you engaged now in writing certain articles for newspapers or periodicals concerning Communist activities or Communist Party activities?

A. I do some writing on the subject, yes.

Q. And have you now any undertaking to write some of those for certain newspapers?

A. I have not. I would like—to avoid any possible misinterpretation, I would like to say that last July I sold a series of articles to the Honolulu Star Bulletin, which have not—which were accepted but have not yet appeared; but I have no obligations to write any series of articles at the present time.

Q. That was at a time that the Longshore and Warehousemen's Union were fighting a strike in Honolulu, isn't that correct?

A. There was a strike in Honolulu, yes.

Q. And you were employed by the employers of Honolulu to smear that strike with the Red banner, weren't you?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, for obvious [2831] reasons.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't know what the obvious reasons are. If that was his purpose and if he makes a profit from those articles, we are entitled to it.

Mr. Donohue: He stated a moment ago that he had made an agreement with a newspaper to write a series of articles, which were not published. The characterization of this newspaper—and I never heard of it before—as an employers' organ, and the characterization of his purpose in writing those articles is so patently unfair and not supported by any facts——

The Court: Mr. Donohue, if the witness understands the question and the colloquialism and the terminology employed, he can answer that. Do you understand that?

The Witness: I do. May I answer it fully?

The Court: Yes, sir.

A. I wrote the articles not for the employers of Hawaii, not to serve their interests in any way or to help them in any way. I wrote the articles expecting them to be published after the conclusion of the strike then in progress, which was expected to end at any time then. My purpose was to present facts about the Communist movement, why, that I as a first Communist in Hawaii had broken with the movement, so that the laboring classes in Hawaii shall be able to free themselves from Communist control and would be able to recognize a Communist when they see him. My sympathies were entirely with the [2832] workers in Hawaii, whose condtions I know only too well from personal experience over there, and I have not at any time, in any way cooperated with any employers' organization against the interests of the workers and the union.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you know who owned the newspaper for whom you wrote those articles?

A. Representative Farrington, Congressman from Hawaii, who in his editorial policy has leaned over backward to give the unions at least an even break, and who, incidentally, according to my best information, was endorsed for election by the ILWU, and I know he was endorsed for election by the Political Action Committee of the CIO in the last election in Hawaii.

Q. And while the strike was in progress you wrote a series of articles for this newspaper on Communist infiltration of labor unions in the Islands, didn't you?

A. Not primarily, no. I explained that the Communists were trying to capture control of the trade unions in the Islands and why they were trying to capture control of the democratic party politically in Hawaii.

Q. And the gentleman who is leaning over backwards to be fair to the unions wanted these articles from you so as to smear the striker and the longshore workers and the Warehousemen's Union by claiming that they were Communist-dominated, isn't that right? [2833]

A. If he had wanted them for that purpose, he would obviously have published them during the strike, but he has not yet published the articles.

Q. And the reason he didn't publish the articles, sir, was that before the occasion for publishing them arose, the strike was settled and there was no longer any profit in smearing the longshore workers' leaders, isn't that right?

A. The editor of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, Mr. Riley Allen, had those articles in his drawer for many weeks before the end of the strike and he could have published them at any time.

Q. But he was afraid to do so because he dared not risk a libel suit by the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's leaders, isn't that right?

A. That is contrary to the fact. He told me so, and there is nothing of the kind libelous of the ILWU in them.

Mr. Hallinan: I think that we might take the recess, if the Court please.

The Court: We will take the afternoon recess, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition about not discussing the case under any conditions, nor suffering any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, and not to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you. You may retire. 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Tuesday, December 20, 1949, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [2834]

Tuesday, December 20, 1949—10:00 A.M.

(The following proceedings were had out of the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: The case of the United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Donohue: Shall we dispose of the matter of that conviction, if your Honor please, which your Honor set for this morning?

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, we would prefer to let that matter go. We have some other matters concerning that witness, your Honor. We can take them all up at the same time, probably at the noon recess. There is no insistence——

Mr. MacInnis: We would just as soon. We have our material, but we would just as soon defer it, merely because we have a witness on the stand. We are prepared, though.

Mr. Donohue: We may still have a witness on the stand at noon, if your Honor please.

The Court: We will proceed at the noon recess. I have no objection if that is agreeable to you.

Mr. Donohue: Very well, your Honor.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn. [2835]

(Thereupon the jury was brought into the courtroom.)

PAUL CROUCH

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Mr. Crouch, you spoke of having a supervisory job on a newspaper. What is the nature of the job you have?

A. In connection with—in connection with copy production, seeing that certain copy makes certain deadlines, and so on.

Q. Supervisory job, you call it? A. Yes.

Q. Now, with relation to the presence of your wife at the Hotel Sutter, is your wife receiving witness fees also in this case?

A. I think that question——

Q. Well, Yes or No? A. I presume she is.

Q. $34 a day? A. No, indeed.

Q. How much?

A. So far as—to the best of my knowledge her expense—her allowance, she is receiving expenses the same as mine, I believe. I do not know the amount exactly. I believe it is $9 a day.

Q. How much over and above $25 a day—what are you receiving [2836] now on this case over and above the $9 a day?

A. Nothing that I know of now.

Q. You haven't got the $25 a day since you have been here? A. I have not.

Q. Have you any arrangement or understanding with the Government or with these attorneys or agents how much you are being paid for your testimony here? A. I have no arrangement.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. What is that?

A. I have no arrangement whatever.

Q. When you testify in these cases are you paid at the same rate on Saturdays and Sundays when there is no court in session?

A. This is a different case; this is a criminal case.

Q. I say, on these cases that you have testified in, have you been paid on Saturdays and Sundays while you are standing by?

A. Which case do you refer to?

Q. Any case.

A. Usually the procedure—there are varying contracts. Usually I receive $10 a day when I am not in attendance at trial status.

Q. In other words, from the time you leave your home until you appear on the witness stand you get $10 a day?

A. Except for the days that are connected with the case, during which I receive 25; that is, providing the contract in that specific case calls for 25. It should be clear that much [2837] of my appearance before Government agencies has involved no fees whatever. For example, when I was testifying before the Senate Committee the total per diem, the total I received while I was away from home on that case was, to the best of my recollection, $10 a day. When I was testifying before the House Committee my total allowance for everything inclusive all expenses was $6 a day.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. You have now an indefinite number of Government cases that you are contracted for to appear in, is that right?

A. The only contracts or anything of the kind is that in two cases, the Betty Gannett case and a case in Portland, at the request of the defendants my cross-examination was postponed until later and therefore it will be necessary to send me back on these cases.

Q. In the testimony that I cited to you yesterday you said that you had an indefinite number of cases that you were engaged to appear for the Government in. Do you remember that? Do you remember so testifying without finding it directly? You were asked about taking a leave of absence. You said you took a leave of absence for six months because you have an indefinite number of cases that you are to testify for the Government in. Do you remember that?

A. I have an indefinite leave, not to exceed six months, to complete the testimony, and I presume I would have completed all of this testimony before this time if I had not been [2838] called here. I was scheduled to appear in a number of cases in New York City following the Betty Gannett case, but those cases were postponed, and so far as—other expert witnesses may have been called; I have no knowledge on that.

Q. On page 64 you were asked this:

"Q. How long is your present employment schedule to continue?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> "A. Until I complete the testimony in an indefinite number of cases, I don't know how many. I have a leave of absence from the Miami Daily News not to exceed six months. That was over a month ago."

This testimony was given on November 10, 1949. Do you remember that testimony? A. I do.

Q. Now, did your wife arrive in San Francisco at the same time you did, November 11?

A. She arrived here some hours later, also November 11.

Q. November 11. Have you any agreement now as to the amount of money you are to receive for your services in this case?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. How much money have you already received?

A. To the best of my recollection, a little over $200.

Q. When did you get that?

A. I got the first—I got some about the first day of the month, and I got some about a week [2839] later.

Q. Some on December 1 and some on December 8, about? A. Yes, about.

Q. How much did you get December 8?

A. I don't remember the number of dollars; the total amounts to a little over $200.

Q. How much has your wife received?

A. The same, so far as I know.

Q. $200 also at the same time, is that right?

A. Correct.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Now, as I understand it, you say that your wife delivered a message from you while you were living under the name of George Wilson in the Harrison Hotel to Mr. Bridges at the CIO convention?

A. What I said is that I gave my wife a resolution which I had drafted with instructions to take it over to the secretary or assistant secretary of the Communist Party fraction in the convention with instructions that it be delivered to Harry [2840] Bridges.

Q. Is that the only testimony she has for this case so far as you know?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, what he may think his wife knows and what we think she knows are two different conclusions.

Mr. Hallinan: This is in relation to the compensation.

The Court: The objection is overruled. The witness may testify as to his particular knowledge. As to any knowledge he may have, he may testify.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): So far as you know, is that all your wife is to testify in this case?

A. When I came here, I had no direct knowledge—I was not told what questions I would be asked, and if my wife has been told what questions she is going to be asked, she has not informed me of that, about what she may or may not know. I doubt it. I certainly have no idea what questions the Government intends to ask her or any other witness in this case.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. You have had no discussion about what her testimony will be?

A. No, indeed, because she does not know, to the best of my knowledge, and I certainly do not know. So how could I discuss what she is going to testify to?

Mr. Hallinan: Is the gentleman here with the New York cards?

(A gentleman stepped forward with a large volume of newspapers.) [2841]

Mr. Hallinan: Have you got marked off the 25th of June, 1936?

(The gentleman referred to indicated a page.)

(The volume referred to was thereupon handed to the witness.)

Mr. Hallinan: That paragraph (indicating).

Mr. Donohue: May I ask for what purpose——.

Mr. Hallinan: To refresh the witness' recollection on the question I asked him yesterday. He was not sure.

The Court: This question was asked at the close of the testimony yesterday?

Mr. Hallinan: That is right.

The Court: He said in response to your question it would not refresh his recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: He said he was not sure but he thought it would not.

Q. Looking at that, Mr. Crouch, does that refresh your recollection?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. In no way whatsoever.

Q. It does not refresh your recollection that that was the first convention of the Communist Party to which the public and press were admitted?

A. It does not refresh my recollection on any point.

Mr. Hallianan: Now, with regard, Your Honor, to the document that I showed the witness yesterday, I have with me [2842] today an issue of the United States Government Printing Office, the hearings before the Committee on Un-American Activities, House of Representatives, 81st Congress, First Session, June 8, 1949, printed for the use of the Committee on Un-American Activities, and giving the names of the officers, the table of contents, and so forth. This is a government publication and the Court can take judicial notice of it. With regard to the document that I propose here, the volume which I have has several other exhibits all relating to a passport of the man named Steve Nelson, and testimony in the hearing has nothing to do with any matter that is concerned here. Bridges or no one else is mentioned. But with regard to these letters, the first which I will call Your Honor's attention to is marked at the bottom, "Exhibit Nelson 15, page 1." It is on the heading of the Communist Party of the U.S.A. and is a letter dated November 27, 1939, to Rhea Whitley, counsel of the Committee on Un-American Activities, Washington, D. C., and signed by Earl Browder.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Now, as authenticating that matter, here is the putting of it in evidence:

> "Mr. Tavenner: I hand you now a photostatic copy of a letter over the signature of Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party, U.S.A., bearing date November 27, 1939, directed to Rhea Whitley, counsel, Committee on Un-American Activities, Washington, D. C., [2843] furnishing a list of the names of the National Committee of the Communist Party of the United States and a list of the National Committee of the Communist Party elected at the Tenth Convention, from which there appears on page 3 William Z. Foster, Chairman, Earl Browder, Secretary, and under the heading of members, among others, appears the name Steve Nelson. Is that statement by Mr. Browder correct or is it false in so far as it refers to you as a member of the National Committee?"

Nelson refused to answer.

> "Mr. Tavenner: I offer the letter in evidence and ask that it be marked Nelson Exhibit 15."

And then it says, "See Appendix, page 154, Nelson Exhibit 15," and in that exhibit it states it is a photostat of a letter dated November 27th, 1939, from Earl Browder to Rhea Whitley, counsel, Committee on Un-American Activities.

The second exhibit, No. 16, the exhibit we have here, is entitled "Proceedings of the Constitutional Convention of the Communist Political Association, New York, May 20th-22nd, 1944," and a printed list of the National Committee of the Communist Political Association.

Now, here is a statement:

> "Mr. Tavenner: I hand you a photostatic copy of proceedings of the constitutional convention of the Communist Political Association, May 20th to 22nd, 1944, giving a list of [2844] the National Committee of the Communist Political Association."

The Court: What is that date? May 20th——

Mr. Hallinan: May 20th-22nd.

The Court: 1944?

Mr. Hallinan: 1944, "giving a list of the National Committee of the Communist Political Association, and under the title 'members of the National Committee,' among other names appears the name of Steve Nelson. Will you examine that document and state whether or not it states the same with reference to you?

> "Mr. Nelson: Same answer, same grounds.
> "Mr. Tavenner: I desire to offer this document in evidence and have it marked Nelson Exhibit 16.
> "Mr. Wood: It will be so admitted."

And in the appendix, "Exhibits taken in connection with the testimony of Steve Nelson and filed with the committee are as follows:

> "Nelson, Exhibit 16, photostat of proceedings > of the constitutional convention of the Communist Political Association, May 20-22, 1944."

Now, these are the identical documents, Your Honor, and were affixed as exhibits to this matter, and as I say, the Court should take judicial notice of this publication, and I think that is all the authentication that is required to use. [2845]

The Court: Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: I make no question at this time to the authentication of these documents, which is not to say they are admissible in evidence. They are obviously self-serving declarations over the signature of the secretary general of the Communist Party.

Mr. Hallinan: I do not care about that. I want to ask the witness about them and ask if his recollection is refreshed that these were the people.

Mr. Donohue: For the purpose of refreshing his recollection, I have no objection to the witness reading these documents, not aloud, and unless and until they are offered in evidence, my objection is not timely.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You were shown yesterday that letter dated November 27, 1939, signed by Earl Browder. Are you familiar with Earl Browder's signature? A. Fairly well.

Q. Would you say that this is the signature of the Earl Browder whom you testified concerning?

A. Without being able to positively identify it, I would say it appears to be.

Q. Would you state whether or not the National Committee of the Communist Party of the United States of America elected at the Tenth Convention, that is, the convention that was held in June—this committee was elected in June of 1938—if these were [2846] the persons who composed it: ——

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if the Court please.

The Court: The basis of the objection?

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Hallinan would, by reading these names, put these names in evidence, give some imaginary value to the fact that the names appear on this letter signed by Earl Browder. Having exhibited the letter to the witness, and having asked him if it refreshed his recollection, I think he might well ask the witness if these are the persons who were nominated and elected at that convention, but obviously he has no right to read from the document which was not in evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: You read from all sorts of documents that are not in evidence. We have dozens of documents that are not in evidence. It is just a matter of reading off the names.

Mr Donohue: I know that is counsel's practice, if Your Honor please, but that is not the law.

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court pleases, I assign that statement as misconduct. Counsel has no right to make that statement in the presence of the jury, that I am doing something that is my practice but is not the law. I have tried very closely to adhere to the legitimate practices of introducing evidence and asking questions. I have heard no criticism from the Court of anything I have done in that respect, at least in the cross-examination of witnesses although the Court took [2847] some exception to statements I made in an opening statement and questions to the first witness. But counsel has no right to make criticism of that kind. I do not know whether he does it from malice or from ignorance, but on either ground it is unjustified, and I ask Your Honor to instruct the jury to ignore that statement, that that is my practice but is not the law.

Mr. Donohue: I direct Your Honor's attention to the fact that just a minute ago on a question which was asked of this witness by Mr. Hallinan, he asked the witness whether or not in reading a copy of the New York Times he did not refresh his recollection, and then he quoted from the article of the New York Times to the effect that the convention was the first convention of the Communist Party open to the public, and that document was not in evidence, and neither is this one.

Mr. Hallinan: And still is not in evidence.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, on the document in question before the Court you raise no particular point as to its authentication?

Mr. Donohue: No, sir.

The Court: And without waiving the point at the present time, you raise no point?

Mr. Donohue: I submit, if Your Honor please, this document is not in evidence. If these documents were in evidence, it would be proper for Mr. Hallinan to read all of it to the [2848] jury.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan. Do you want me to put it in evidence? I will put it in if you wish.

Mr. Donohue: It is not admissible in evidence, if Your Honor please. It is a self-serving declaration over the signature of the secretary general of the Communist Party.

The Court: I think the witness may be asked concerning, and for the purpose of, refreshing his recollection, the name or identity of any asserted members reflected by any particular document that may serve to refresh his recollection. It is true, Mr. Donohue, that the Government certainly may not be bound by any such assertion on the part of Mr. Hallinan that John Doe, William Roe, or Mary Roe comprised members of the particular organization at the time and place in question, but I think that the witness' recollection may be refreshed, if it needs refreshing, on that particular point.

Mr. Donohue: Then I would ask Your Honor to instruct the jury that the mere reading of these names by Mr. Hallinan from a document signed by Earl Browder is no evidence of the fact that those names are in fact the true names of those who were members of the Communist Party.

The Court: At an appropriate time I may undertake to do so, but I think he is entitled to proceed at this time.

Mr. Hallinan: I have another thought on it, Your Honor. These documents are procured in effect from the files of the [2849] United States Government, which is a party to this proceeding. Now, the United States Government puts out as a public declaration a statement including these documents, and I am not a bit certain that from that alone, from the possession of it by the Government, these may not be admissible in evidence in and of itself. I have not urged that point yet, though I may later.

Mr. Donohue: I may say to characterize this document——

The Court: I may state at this juncture in connection with the Steve Nelson hearing, it appears to the Court in that instance positive proof was being asserted as against Steve Nelson.

Mr. Donohue: Correct.

The Court: With respect to the inclusion of his name.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, yes.

The Court: In the case at bar, you proceed in the negative form to prove a negative.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I am extremely doubtful as to the admissibility of the document in evidence. Be that as it may, you may proceed for the instant purpose and the avowed purpose of refreshing this man's recollection to query him about the names. I will instruct the jury at the proper time.

Mr. Donohue: The mere fact that Mr. Hallinan just a minute ago, if Your Honor pleases, said to Your Honor in front of this jury that this is a document which came from the [2850] official files of the United States Government is again for the purpose of giving sanctity——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, so that there may be no misunderstanding in your minds, the letter from which Mr. Hallinan assumes to read purports to be signed by Mr. Browder. The authenticity of the document is not immediately before either the Court or the jury. The fact that it may have been included in a hearing or offered or proffered in the Steve Nelson hearing is not to be regarded by you as having any particular sanctity in the document with respect to its original truth or integrity inherent in the document itself. Does that satisfy you, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Will you tell me this, sir? Will you tell me whether or not the following persons were members of the National Committee of the Communist Party of the United States of America elected at the Tenth Convention, that is to say, the convention in May, 1938:——

A. I am afraid I said June, 1936, but as I remember now,——

Q. This is the 1938 convention, the tenth convention, is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Tell me if these were the names of the Central Committee elected at that time: [2851]

Israel Amter. Do you remember him?

A. He was elected on the Central Committee.

Q. Max Bedacht. A. He was.

Q. Alex Bittelman. A. Yes.

Q. A. W. Berry. A. I don't believe so.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: A. W. Berry?

The Witness: I know A. W. Berry very well, but I am not able to say positively, but my best recollection is he was not elected.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Ella R. Bloor.

A. Reeves Bloor was elected.

Q. Ella R., it says here. Louis Budenz.

A. I don't recall his election at that convention.

Q. Peter V. Cacchione. A. Yes, he was.

Q. Morris Childs? A. He was. [2852]

Q. Gene Dennis? A. He was elected.

Q. Sam Don? A. I don't think so.

Q. Elizabeth G. Flynn? A. She was.

Q. James W. Ford? A. He was elected.

Q. Harrison George? A. I don't think so.

Q. Ben Gold? A. I believe so.

Q. Gil Green? A. He was elected.

Q. Fay or Ray Hansboro—Ray Hansboro, do you know him?

A. In my opinion, that name is a purely fictitious one, a pure fraud intended to defraud the Government, and the character is non-existent, not elected, does not exist.

Q. In other words, it is a fictitious name of some person; there is no such person in existence?

A. There may be a person by that name, but not a member of the Communist Party or elected.

The Court: Pardon me. How do you spell that name?

Mr. Hallinan: H-a-n-s-b-o-r-o, Hansboro.

A. I know no such person, and I don't think such a person was [2853] elected to the Central Committee.

Q. Clarence Hathway? A. Yes, he was.

Q. Jasper Haaland?

A. I think that is another phony name.

Q. Angelo Herndon?

A. I do not specifically recall whether he was elected or not; he might have been.

Q. Ray Hudson? A. He was elected.

Q. Jack Johnstone? A. He was elected.

Q. Charles Krumbein? A. He was elected.

Q. Robert Minor? A. He was elected.

Q. Steve Nelson? A. Yes.

Q. William Schneidermann?

A. I am not certain that Schneidermann himself was elected on that Central Committee.

Q. Jack Stachel? A. He was elected.

Q. Pat Toohey? A. I believe so [2854]

Q. Alex Trachtenberg? A. Probably.

Q. William Wiener?

A. Weiner alias Blake.

Q. Wiener.

A. William Weiner, alias Blake.

Q. No, it says "William Wiener."

A. W-e-i——

Q. W-i-e-n-e-r, William Wiener.

A. I don't think his name was on the list of those elected.

Q. Anita Whitney? A. Yes.

Q. John Williamson? A. Yes.

Q. Henry Winston? A. I believe so.

Q. Rose Wortis? A. Yes.

Q. Now, of that list of 33 people you say you do not know if five of them were elected, that is, A. W. Berry, Louis Budenz——

A. You didn't ask me about Louis Budenz.

Q. Well, it was just a slip of mine.

A. He was elected.

Q. He was what?

A. Louis Budenz was elected at that convention, although you [2855] didn't ask me in reading that list.

Q. Well, that was an oversight of mine.

A. I might remark, if the Court will permit, that I saw a number of names on that list yesterday which have not been read to me today.

The Court: What was that again?

The Witness: I might remark, your Honor, that I saw a number of names on that list yesterday which have not been read to me today.

The Court: What are they? What are the names on the list which have not been read?

Mr. Hallinan: I will show them in a minute.

The Court: Will you read them into the record.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes. The list is headed "National Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A., elected at the 10th Convention. William Z. Foster, Chairman; Earl Browder, General Secretary." Then under the heading, "Members," I read off all the names that are under the heading of "Members." There are other names that I am coming to presently that are not members.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Show it to the witness.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): See if you can find in these names on the list the name of any member that I omitted to ask you about except Louis Budenz, whom you will have to forgive me, because it was an oversight on my part.

Mr. MacInnis is concerned that I did ask about Mr. Budenz. [2856] I know that as well as Mr. MacInnis does.

A. The names which you have not yet read were the list of candidates, who incidentally include some who were elected on that Central Committee.

Q. Have I read you off the names of all under the head of "Members"?

A. As published on that list.

Q. I wasn't there. You are the man that was there. I read that off. Now, opposite that is a further list of names with the heading "Candidates." What was the difference between members and candidates?

A. "Candidates" is a term applied to alternates, that is, an alternate member.

Q. Do they elect then a slate of regular members and a slate of alternates?

A. Yes, elected together.

Q. So that if the regular member did not officiate then the alternate member took his place, is that it? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, under the heading of "Candidates" I will ask you if these people were elected candidates: John Ballam?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I don't think so. I know John Ballam very well, but I don't believe at that convention he was elected a candidate.

Q. Herbert Benjamin?

A. I believe so. [2857]

Q. W. G. Binkley?

A. W. G. Binkley was elected a member of the regular Central Committee, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Don Burke?

A. I do not—I know Don Burke, but I don't recall him being elected.

Q. Rose Biltmore?

A. That is a name with which I am not at all familiar; never heard of her.

Q. You say she was or was not elected?

A. I believe that is another phony name. That is my belief.

Q. Isidor Begun? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Ann Burlak? A. Yes.

Q. Margaret Cowl? A. Yes.

Q. Sam Darcy?

A. Sam Darcy, to the best of my recollection, was elected a member of the Central Committee. That is my belief and recollection.

Q. Phil Frankfeld? A. Yes.

Q. Harry Gwynn?

A. Unless Harry Gwynn there refers—is a substitution for [2858] Rossi, I think it is another fictitious name.

Q. You think Harry Gwynn might be a substitution for Rossi?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. It is conveivable, or it is quite likely. There are so many fictitious names, utterly fictitious names.

Q. I don't question that it is quite likely. At this stage anything is quite likely.

Mr. McMillan: Well, now, that isn't a proper observation.

Mr. Hallinan: All right, withdraw the observation.

Q. This Harry Gwynn was a name that you think was used instead of Rossi?

A. It might or it might not have been. If it wasn't, it was wholly fictitious. If it was a substitution it was half—only half fictitious, half of the name being fictitious and half genuine.

Q. In other words, the "Harry" part of it suggests that it might have been Mr. Bridges?

A. Yes, the first name suggests that possibility. I have no evidence beyond that possibility.

Q. And do you think that that is what actually happened?

A. I do not know. I don't know what motives Earl Browder had in drawing up that list to fool Congress.

Q. Robert Hall?

A. I don't recall his being a candidate. I know him very well.

Q. Robert Lamon?

A. How do you spell his name? [2859]

Q. L-a-m-o-n.

A. Another fictitious name, I believe.

Q. All right. Andrew Onda?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I don't recall whether Onda was elected as a candidate or not.

Q. William Patterson? A. I think so.

Q. Pettis Perry? A. Possibly.

Q. Morris Raport?

A. Morris Rappaport.

Q. No. A. How do you spell that?

Q. R-a-p-o-r-t.

A. The name under which he was known in the Communist Party was Morris Rappaport. I don't know that that is his true name, but this evidently refers to him.

Q. Earl Reno? A. How do you spell it?

Q. R-e-n-o.

A. I think there was a minor Communist functionary who used that name, but I don't think he was elected as an alternate to the Central Committee.

Q. Carl Rose?

A. Another assumed or fictitious name. [2860]

Q. No, it is Carl Ross.

A. Carl Ross, yes; he was elected as an alternate.

Q. What is that?

A. Yes, Carl Ross was elected as an alternate.

Q. Then Matt Ross or Nat Ross.

A. Nat Ross?

Q. Yes. A. Possibly.

Q. Otto Wangerin?

A. Possibly; I don't recall.

Q. Maude White? A. I believe so.

Q. William Weinstone?

A. To my best recollection and belief, William

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Weinstone was elected as a regular member of the Central Committee.

Q. Robert Woods?

A. To the best of my recollection, he was elected a regular member of the Central Committee.

Q. Then it gives the members of the Secretariat, Executive Committee of the Communist International, elected at the Seventh World Congress, 1935, George Dimitroff, General Secretary?

A. I wasn't at the Fifth World Congress. I know from published reports that Dimitroff was elected.

Q. M. Ercoli?

A. He is known to me as a prominent—that was an assumed [2861] name. I think that refers to——

Q. Harry Bridges?

A. Another—a prominent Italian leader under another name, but he was under that name prominent in the Communist International.

Q. D. Z. Manuilsky?

A. D. Z. Manuilsky, present USSR representative——

Q. Just tell us Yes or No, do you remember if they were on that list.

A. I wasn't at the Fifth Congress. I had nothing to do with preparing the list. I know nothing about it.

Q. Wilhelm Pieck? A. I wasn't——

Q. You don't know anything about this?

A. I know about Wilhelm Pieck, the president of East Germany, but I wasn't present at his election by the Comintern.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Let's go up to this list of members of the National Committee of the Communist Party. We read off all these names here, and the name Derkin or Dorgan does not appear in it?

A. I didn't see it on this list submitted by Earl Browder.

Q. And the name Rossi doesn't appear on it?

A. I wouldn't have expected to find it there.

Q. And isn't it a fact that the name that you say Harry Bridges masqueraded under was Angelo Rossi. Didn't you say that?

A. I didn't say that. I said Rossi; I didn't attach any [2862] handles to it.

Q. Was there any first name at all, so far as you remember, attached to it?

A. Yes. Comrade—Comrade Rossi.

Q. Comrade Rossi, but no first name at all?

A. No, I never heard any. I don't recall hearing any. I wouldn't say there wasn't, but I don't recall hearing any.

Q. I notice here Harry Gwynn. That is the only Harry on the list, so you suggest that that was probably Mr. Bridges?

A. Knowing Mr. Browder and his dry sense of humor, I think it is quite likely that that is what he had in mind.

Q. In other words, he put somebody on under the name of Harry Gwynn; we have him as Harry Derkin or Harry Dorgan, Angelo Rossi, and now we are putting him on as Harry Gwynn?

Mr. McMillan: We haven't got any Angelo Rossi.

Mr. Hallinan: There was somebody who said "Angelo," that his name was Angelo Rossi. There is no doubt that somebody said it.

The Witness: It wasn't me who said it.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Was it your predecessor?

A. I don't know what my predecessor or someone said.

Q. I want to show you the next exhibit; it is 16, and it is a printed program of the National Committee of the Communist Political Association, and I think you looked at it already.

(Document handed to witness.)

Now, I will ask you if you know these people, refreshing [2863] your recollection from this. These are persons on the National Committee elected in 1944, and it is a printed list.

Mr. Donohue: I object to this, if your Honor please. There is no testimony here by this or any other witness with respect to the components of the National Committee of the Communist Party in 1944.

Mr. Hallinan: No, I am just going to ask him if he knows these people. I am not going to ask him if these were on the National Committee. I want to know if he knows them.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Israel Amter?

A. I know him.

Q. He was on the 1938 committee, do you remember that?

A. Yes. One of the genuine names.

Q. Ella Reeve Bloor?

A. I have known her since 1927.

Q. No, I asked, do you know her name? Do you know that woman?

A. Yes, I know her. I have known her for many years.

Q. She was on the 1938 committee, is that right?

A. She was. She has been on all of the central committees of the Communist Party, to my knowledge.

Q. Earl Browder?

A. I met Earl Browder in Moscow in 1928. I have—I knew him as long as I was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Pardon me. I just asked you this—you can explain it [2864] afterwards if the necessity arises, but we will take your word for whether you knew these people. I asked you if you knew these people under these names. If you will say Yes or No, and tell us those names you do not recognize or who you say are fictitious, if you will indicate that to us, we will save a great deal of time. Alice Burke?

A. I know her.

Q. Ann Burlak? A. I know her.

Q. Peter Cacchione?

A. I knew him. He is dead.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Morris Childs? A. I knew him.

Q. Benjamin Davis? A. I knew him.

Q. David Davis? A. I didn't know him.

Q. Eugene Dennis? A. I knew him.

Q. Bella Dodd? A. I knew of her.

Q. Samuel Donchin?

A. I knew of Donchin.

Q. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn? [2865]

A. I knew of her.

Q. James Ford? A. I knew him.

Q. William Z. Foster? A. I knew him.

Q. Nat Ganley? A. I did not.

Q. John Gates? A. I knew him.

Q. Ben Gold? A. I knew him.

Q. Gilbert Green? A. I knew him.

Q. Rob Hall? A. I knew him very well.

Q. Ray Hansbrough? A. I did not.

Q. That is the same name that was mentioned in the other list, you remember, that you said you didn't remember? A. Yes.

Q. And you thought it was a fictitious name, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. Roy Hudson? A. I knew him.

Q. Henry Huff? [2866] A. I knew of him.

Q. Arnold Johnson?

A. Very well indeed. I helped recruit him for the Party.

Q. Charles Krumbein? A. Very well.

Q. Robert Minor? A. Very well.

Q. Steve Nelson? A. Very well.

Q. Pettis Perry? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. William Schneidermann? A. Yes.

Q. Robert Thompson?

A. I knew of him; I didn't know him personally.

Q. Louise Todd? A. I knew her.

Q. Pat Toohey? A. Very well.

Q. Louis Weinstock? A. Very well.

Q. Max Weiss? A. Very well.

Q. Anita Whitney? A. Very well. [2867]

Q. Doxey Wilkerson?

A. I knew of that name; I didn't know that party personally.

Q. John Williamson? A. Very well.

Q. Henry Winston? A. Very well.

Q. Carl Winter? A. Very well.

Q. Rose Wortis? A. Very well.

Q. So of those people the only two you do not know or you do not remember—or three, rather, are David Davis, Samuel Donchin and Ray Hansbrough, is that right?

A. Yes, and I had not personally met but I knew of a couple of others.

Q. And did you know if there was a man named Ray Hansbrough? A. No.

Q. You didn't know him? A. No, sir.

Q. How about David Davis?

A. I had no knowledge of the existence of David Davis.

Q. Sam Donchin?

A. I had no knowledge of his existence, but I was not a member of that Political Association and would have had no reason to know anything about them. [2868]

Q. Tell me if you recognize any of the following names. These are put down sl aaternate members of the National Committee: Phil Bart?

A. Yes.

Q. Louis Budenz? A. Yes.

Q. Frank Cestare?

A. How do you spell that?

Q. C-e-s-t-a-r-e. A. Never heard of him.

Q. Rose Gaulden?

A. I never heard of her.

Q. Gus Hall?

A. I have heard of that name; I don't know him.

Q. Otis Hood? A. I have heard that name.

Q. Al Lannon? A. I have heard of him.

Q. William Lawrence?

A. I knew him very well.

Q. Meridel Lesuer?

A. Never heard that name.

Q. Martin Mackie?

A. Never heard the name.

Q. Audley Moore? [2869]

A. Pardon me?

Q. Audley Moore?

A. I never heard that name.

Q. William Norman?

A. I have heard of that name, but I don't know him.

Q. Joe North? A. I knew him slightly.

Q. Paul Novik?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I have heard of that name.

Q. Andy Onda? A. Yes.

Q. William Patterson?

A. I knew him very well.

Q. Carl Ross? A. Yes.

Q. Net Sparks? A. Yes.

Q. Alexander Trachtenberg? A. Yes.

Q. And Oleta O'Connor Yates?

A. I knew her very well. [2870]

Q. All of those people whose names you know appear on this list under their own proper names, don't they?

A. Those had no reason to conceal their proper names any more than I had to conceal my proper name or Earl Browder had.

Q. That is right, but you concealed your proper name, according to your own testimony, didn't you?

A. When it was in the interests of the Communist Party I did so. Most of those have concealed their proper names, practically all of them, at various occasions.

Q. But they appear on this list under their own proper names, don't they?

A. Yes. My name even appeared under its proper name, so did Earl Browder, but I used fictitious names if it suited the Party's interests, so did Earl Browder, so did most of the Party leaders.

Q. When the Communist Party put out lists of their National Committee, almost all of them appeared under their own names, didn't they?

A. Those people would obviously—those people would obviously have appeared because the Party had something to gain.

Q. You can give the explanation later. The answer is Yes: When the Communist Party put out this list of members of the National Committee most of them were listed under their own proper names?

A. I have no knowledge of the Communist Party ever putting out [2871] a bona fide list of its Central Committee, not to my knowledge.

Q. Here is a list of the National Committee or Central Committee turned over to Congress.

A. I don't believe that is a list of the National Committee or Central Committee. I believe it is a rank forgery intended to defraud the Committee and fool the public.

Q. Of this list of 40 or more people, you picked out three names that you say were fictitious, and then there were five more people that you did not know or you had not heard of and didn't know if they were on the Committee or not, isn't that right?

A. That is correct. It also leaves off quite a number of people who were on the Central Committee, unless—which is quite likely—those fraudulent names are substitutions for genuine names of people that the Communist Party wanted to conceal their identity.

Q. So instead of just leaving the name off altogether they just put in a fictitious name?

A. It is quite likely, although I wasn't in the office when Earl Browder decided on that strategy.

Mr. Hallinan: I am going to offer this document in evidence, if the Court please, the letter and the papers, as the defendants' exhibit next in order.

Mr. Donohue: I have to object, if your Honor please. It obviously has no probative value in this case, a self-serving [2872] letter over the signature of the Secretary General of the Communist Party, introduced in a proceeding before a committee of Congress for the purpose of establishing the identity of a name which appears on that list. Obviously it has no probative value here to prove a fact by the non-existence or non-appearance of a name on that list. I object to it.

The Court: Your objection is sustained. It may be marked, and the several documents therein contained may be marked appropriately as defendants' exhibit next in order for identification only.

The Clerk: Defendants' Y for identification.

> (Letter of Earl Browder and attached documents was marked Defendants' Exhibit Y for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you say that in the matter of your attendance or your activity in connection with the California State Industrial Union Council fourth annual convention in Oakland in 1941, that your assignment was to see that Harry Bridges carried out certain resolutions of the District Bureau, is that right?

A. That was just a part of my assignment. My assignment was much broader, much more inclusive than that one assignment.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. So far as Harry Bridges was concerned, was that the limit of your assignment?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Now, you say that you prepared a resolution and drew that [2873] up yourself, the resolution that was introduced here which you read, is that right?

A. With the general outline decided first in the District Bureau and in consultation with Walter Lambert on some points, but the finished product was my own work.

Q. Your own work; you drew that. And then I suppose the activity of your wife was that you gave it to her and she took it over and gave it to Mr. Bridges, is that right?

A. She reported back to me that she had given it to either the secretary or the assistant secretary of the Party fraction on the convention floor.

Q. Who was that?

A. Paul Schliff was the secretary of the Communist Party fraction in that convention, and John L. Child, better known as Jack Childs, was assistant secretary of the Communist Party fraction in that convention.

Q. So then this document, this resolution, was first gone over and prepared by the Central Committee or District Committee, or whatever it was, then transmitted to you, and you transmitted it to your wife, and she transmitted it to Mr. Schliff or to Mr. Childs, and they transmitted it, so far as you know, to Mr. Bridges, is that right?

A. I merely made notes during the District Bureau meeting of the political points to be included in the document. I did some of the work at my home, but I did most of the work on that [2874] document on the 2nd of October in my—in the evening, in my room in that hotel, in Room 708 of the Harrison Hotel.

Q. Now, all of that that you testified to was for the purpose of drawing up and submitting this resolution:

> "Whereas, Fascism has enslaved most of Continental Europe and will engulf the entire world unless destroyed, and
> "Whereas, democracies can only succeed in defeating Fascism by throwing their entire resources into the bitter struggle, which step must be taken at once because further delay can serve but to strengthen our common foes, and
> "Whereas, this supreme effort can only be achieved by unity of action and purpose by all freedom-loving peoples,
> "Therefore Be It Resolved, that we pledge allegiance to our country, our President, and wholehearted support to his program, and that we take this step with full knowledge of the sacrifices we must make before victory is ours.
> "And Be It Further Resolved, that in making this pledge we (1) endorse the Murray plan of industry councils because we know that adoption of the plan will result in greater unity of government, labor and capital and will sharply increase production in our national defense industries and industries related to them; (2) oppose the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a continuation of which is detrimental to the [2875] welfare of our nation, its full productivity and effort; (3) request the removal from positions of authority of individuals of Fascist leanings, whose retention in important governmental posts raises questions of doubt in the minds of the worker and undermines the army of industrial workers and morale of the people; (4) pledge our loyalty and support to the vigorous leadership of President Philip Murray and urge him to retain leadership of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and lead that great organization along the lines laid down in this resolution; (5) and last, request President Murray to make our position on these vital questions known to our President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Did you take any further steps yourself to see that he was carrying out the mandate? [2876]

A. I did. I talked with—a few days before the convention I talked with Paul Schliff, secretary of the fraction. I told him—I pointed out to Schliff that we had already, on the 9th of July, discussed in the district bureau the expulsion of Harry Bridges from the Communist Party if he failed to carry the party line and continued to find it as we were informed he was doing or that he was very unwilling to comply with the party line. I told Schliff that this was a definite decision, that either Bridges was going to carry out party discipline, as a disciplined member or we were going to take sharp action in the district committee. We wasn't going to fool around any longer. We had already built up through resolutions, one resolution which I had written and which was passed by the Alameda County CIO Council, going along the same lines as this resolution. The party through other resolutions passed in Los Angeles Council and in the San Francisco Council. We had organized a net, a round net——

Q. Just a minute. You are going away from this. You had a talk with Paul Schliff?

A. I pointed these things out.

Q. I get you. You had this talk with Paul Schliff. What did you do with regard to seeing Mr. Bridges yourself? Anything?

A. It was not necessary.

Q. You did not see him. You did not talk to him about it?

A. We operate through the secretaries of fractions in the [2877] Communist Party—we did.

Q. You never went to Mr. Bridges and said any of these things to him, did you?

A. Schneidermann was given that assignment.

Q. Did you?

A. I did not. I did not have that assignment.

Q. Did you go to the meeting to see if this great resolution was in fact read? A. I did.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Did you hear it read out? A. I did.

Q. How did you happen to get there at the opportune time? Did you have some arrangement to get there or what? Or were you attending the CIO convention as a spectator?

A. No, my wife was moving constantly from my room to the convention floor and was bringing reports to me from the secretary or the assistant secretary of the fraction. So I was informed at all times as to what was going on on that convention floor, and I knew in advance of the moment that Bridges was taking the floor.

Q. And then did you arrange to get there?

A. I walked over.

Q. And you heard him make a speech?

A. Part of the speech, and I heard that resolution read.

Q. How much of the speech did you [2878] hear?

A. I would assume I heard perhaps ten minutes of it before he got to that resolution.

Q. Did you wait then until he finished his speech?

A. No, I did not. I wanted to see if he complied with the party decision, and then I returned to my hotel room.

Q. Did you know before Mr. Bridges mentioned these subjects at all practically that same resolution had been urged or the same statement had been made by President Connelly, the president of the CIO Council?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes, on orders from the Communist Party Connelly did so.

Q. He did it also under orders of the Communist Party? A. He did.

Q. Was he a member of the Communist Party? Was he?

A. You are referring to the president of the CIO Council here?

Q. That is right. You just said under the orders of the Communist Party he introduced this himself. What was his first name?

A. Philip Connelly.

Q. Philip Connelly. Do you know him?

A. I know him by sight.

Q. Was he a member of the Communist Party?

A. I was never in a Communist Party meeting with him, but I participated in making decisions for him to carry out.

Q. Did he carry them out?

A. He did. [2879]

Q. Did he have the reputation among your gang of being a member of the Communist Party?

A. Yes.

Q. Philip Connelly, the president of the CIO Council then, was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I do not personally know, but I know the decisions that were made were carried out by him. I didn't ask any unnecessary questions.

Q. Did you ever see him at any Communist Party meeting? A. I did not.

Mr. Donohue: He just said he had not. I object to the question.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you discuss his membership with Mr. Schneidermann or any of these other people? A. I did not.

Q. Where did you get the belief that Mr. Connelly was a member of the Communist Party?

A. From the fact that he introduced many resolutions and carried through many policies which were first initiated in our district bureau.

Q. In other words, if a person introduced a resolution or supported some program that the Communist Party was interested in, you figured that person was necessarily a Communist, is that right?

A. Not necessarily; he might be surrounded in some cases. In [2880] the case of Connelly, I am not saying he was a member of the Communist Party; I am merely expressing my belief on the basis of the fact that he carried through resolutions drafted by the Communist Party. He might have been surrounded by Communists and carried these out without being a technical member. I don't know.

Q. Philip Connelly, you know, had already introduced a resolution practically in the language that this resolution bears; you knew that, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. Who told you so?

A. We were advised—we were given detailed reports on all of these resolutions by Walter Lambert, the district trade union director.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Do you remember any substantial difference between the resolution that Mr. Connelly proposed and the resolution that you say you drew and sent over to Harry Bridges?

A. There were a number of resolutions——

Q. No, this one I want to know about.

A. I do not recall the details of the Connelly resolution at this time. I have occasion to recall the Bridges resolution but I have not occasion to recall the details of the Connelly resolution.

Q. As a matter of fact, the Connelly resolution was in almost the exact language that the Bridges resolution was in, wasn't [2881] it?

A. It could very well have been because——

Q. Never mind the because. Did you draw the Connelly resolution?

A. The Connelly resolution was based upon resolutions that had been drafted by the Communist Party and first passed under the initiative of the Communist Party in the Los Angeles CIO County Council, the San Francisco Council and the Alameda County Council. The wording of all these resolutions, if you were to check them closely and compare them closely, was very much identical and very closely resembled this resolution which I wrote, all because they came from the same source, the District Bureau of the Communist Party.

Q. Mr. Paul Heide also spoke on the Connelly resolution and used almost the same language that is used in your resolution, didn't he?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Certainly, because Paul Heide is a member of the Communist Party.

Q. All right. Governor Olson also spoke on it, didn't he? A. Who?

Q. Governor Culbert Olson of the State of California spoke on it?

A. His phraseology was quite different.

Q. His phraseology was quite different, was it? Did you hear his statement? [2882]

A. I did not. I read a speech or a part of it in the press. I didn't hear it.

Q. When did you read the speech?

A. I read it in the press in 1941. I haven't read it since.

Q. Let us see about it. I will ask you if this refreshes your recollection that this was Governor Culbert C. Olson's statement on this subject at this CIO convention.

Mr. Donohue: I think he ought to be allowed to see it, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: If he remembers it——

The Court: Have we reached a point at which we might take our recess?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: If agreeable. Otherwise we will pursue this matter of Governor Olson.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the morning recess. The same admonition that you are not to discuss the case under any conditions with any person or to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [2883]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Now, you read them this statement, Mr. Witness, of Governor Culbert L. Olson, who spoke at this convention:

> "In the international emergency which faces us, the rights of labor have been crushed under the heel of military dictatorship. We are faced with that situation not only elsewhere in the world, but we are faced with the possible danger to our own national security and our own cherished rights in our own American democracy, to the rights of labor, to the rights of workers to a position of control and direction and voice and leadership in our American democracy. I take the position of supporting preparedness to defend the Western Hemisphere against the invasion of the totalitarian dictators, against the possibility of their being able to put us in a position to keep fighting the war forever or to destroy all that has been accomplished in the name of freedom and civil liberties. I am a supporter of the international policies of President Roosevelt all the way through.
> "I mean the steps that have been taken by him and by the Congress in so far as it has yet supported him,—preparedness for our own protection and in aiding those fighting against the Hitler Axis powers. It is a proper stand for this, the greatest nation on the face of the earth, to take in the name of humanity, human liberties [2884] and human rights. We are a part of > this world and we are a part of the humanity of this world. We cannot isolate ourselves from the developments in the world. It is for labor to take this cause; more than for their own protection it is for the protection of the ideals of American labor. We should protect America's rights and give aid to those who are fighting similar battles elesewhere in the world, to Russia, England and China."

Q. Now, you knew that Governor Olson had given that statement on the opening day of the convetion? A. Correct.

Q. Now, Governor Olson was not a Communist, was he?

A. No, and he had been saying the same things before June 22 that he said after June 22; he didn't make any flipflop on that day.

Q. As a matter of fact, he was anti-Communist, wasn't he?

A. I don't recall. I don't think he was favorable to the Communists. I know that the Communist District Bureau did not like some of the things he did, and brought pressure through high channels to try to change them.

Q. And he there continued right on with this talk that he gave; you remember that he said, or you were informed he said this:

> "I believe all workers were glad when the Revolution took place in Russia. At that time, in another [2885] legislature, I introduced a resolution to recognize the revolutionary government of Russia. We know that the Revolution brought a better life and more equitable distribution of goods. But we cannot have their ways in America. We do things in a different way. One thing done by Russia which was a great shock was the alliance that was made with Hitler. We know we have the right under our Constitution to have any kind of government or order of economy that a majority of the people want for the good of the whole, and if there are constitutional provisions that stand in the way of changing the entire order, there is a way democratically to remedy this.

"It is inconsistent with the welfare of progress to have any alien power or government or agency attempting to undermine, to subvert the American labor movement. I believe that units of organized labor are suffering more setbacks and suffering more interference with successful progress through the following of some of a party dictatorial line, dictated by an alien country, centered on the idea that we should have dictatorship of the proletariat, in the United States as well as in Russia. That has done more than any one thing to injure the labor movement in the United States. The Gestapo of Hitler is working in the midst of America. We are ready to say it is an alien activity which must be stopped. There has been a line of [2886] action dictated by the Commun> ist Party which would dominate every labor union if it could and dominate every American life. Now, is there and difference? We cannot have in American life a line of action, underground for the most part, which is inconsistent with American civil liberties and has behind it the policy of waiting for chaotic conditions to develop in the United States in order to seize control.

> "California outlawed the Communist Party. I signed that bill. I would not sign any bill outlawing any American party which had as its aim to abolish capitalism and set up socialism through democratic processes."

You knew that Culbert Olson had made that statement, didn't you?

A. I presume I did at the time. I don't recall all those words, since I only read it once in 1941.

Q. And yet just a few moments before that he had made the statement that all protection and all help should be given to those who are fighting the battles against Hitler throughout the world, to Russia, England and China, hadn't he?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. So that the determination to fight Fascism and the determination to resist Hitlerism and support the countries that were fighting him were by no means restricted to the Communists, were [2887] they?

A. Will you please restate the question?

Mr. Hallinan: No, I will withdraw it. Let me

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

ask you this—well, we will leave that out too. I was going to say, this little group of Communists of which you say you were a member seemed to pretend that they are the only ones that put in any efforts that were of any value in fighting pellagra, fighting oppression of the lettuce strikers, fighting Fascism. Is it your concept that your little gang originated all these things?

A. That is a very complex question. I will be glad to answer that. [2888]

Q. To go on here, as you were watching these matters, you know that a man named Ciccone, delegate Ciccone of the United Auto Workers, asked if the resolution—this resolution implied that labor is in favor of sending its members to war. He said he believed labor is opposed to Fascism because Fascism is out to destroy labor. At the same time he believes labor should not go to war in a foreign country and leave Fascism free at home to destroy us. That is what happened in 1917.

> "We are opposed to Hitler but we should also oppose the American Fascists. We must fight Fascism in this country before we attempt to fight Fascism in other countries."

Did you instruct Mr. Ciccone to say that?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know who he was?

A. No, I don't know Mr. Ciccone.

Q. "Brother Stern, warehouseman, said he had seen Fascism and how it works and had > seen its manifestations in the 1934 waterfront strike. He said all Fascists are scabs and all scabs, Fascists and must be fought to protect trade unionism."

Did you tell Mr. Stern that?

A. I personally did not.

Q. Did you send him a message by your wife?

A. I don't recall any messages to Mr. Stern.

Q. Now, "Brother Jack Child said his local had gone on record [2889] for unstinted aid for nations fighting Hitler. The delegate pointed out that we were already losing men, ships are being sunk and seamen killed. We are already involved. We should prepare our men with adequate arms."

Did you instruct Brother Child to say that?

A. I gave him instructions to take that position in the convention personally in my room in the Harrison Hotel during the course of that convention, having had several conversations with him in Room 708 personally, and I had also instructed him to fight aid to Great Britain and told him how to fight it in his local, and his local did so until the 22nd of June, 1941.

Q. Now, "Delegate Ciccone said he wanted to qualify his vote that he was willing to fight Fascism but felt that fighting it abroad would bring Fascism at home."

Did you tell Delegate Ciccone to say that?

A. No.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. He made a pretty good guess, didn't he?

A. I don't know what contacts he may have had with Child and with Schliff, who read the party communication on the floor and who gave the instructions to the individual Communist delegates there.

Q. You know that those resolutions that were presented to the convention had to be first presented to a resolutions committee, isn't that right?

A. That is correct. [2890]

Q. In other words, before any resolution could be offered on the floor of the convention, it had to be first passed upon by the resolutions commitee, isn't that true? A. Correct.

> Q. "Resolution No. 39, which was adopted with an amendment, that lease-lend aid include China and other countries fighting Fascism."

Did you have anything to do with putting in that resolution then? A. May I see the resolution?

Q. All right. Now, there was a statement by Mr. Thomas of the Auto Workers, R. J. Thomas, international president of the United Automobile Workers and vice president of the CIO, who said:

> "The main thing to do is see that the Murray plan is instituted. The daily newspapers say that there is a shortage of steel and of aluminum. Steel and aluminum workers have announced plans for obtaining additional supplies but received no recognition. That is a case for the Murray Plan. Yesterday you made a fine > demonstration of what you were willing to do to beat Hitlerism. Today we must support everyone and every country willing to fight Hitler. There is no labor movement in the country under the control of Hitler. While we are fighting Hitler, we must not forget democracy at home, as there are serious [2891] infringements on our rights. Through decisions entirely contrary to the spirit of the Wagner Act, the NLRB has been nullifying that Act. Recognition has been given to deals with the A. F. of L. and hearings refused. Col. Lindbergh definitely lined himself up with the Fascist forces in his attacks on a minority group. These are dangerous trends, and we can not stand idly by and see our rights taken away."

Now, do you know R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers of America?

A. I have seen him and heard him speak on a number of occasions.

Q. Was he a member of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know. I have no knowledge whatsoever of his membership or non-membership in the Communist Party.

Q. Did you send him any resolution for him to support or any instructions by your wife as to what he was to do?

A. I sent no instructions to Mr. Thomas.

Q. With regard to the statements that you say Mr. Bridges made, the only part of the speech that you prepared was this resolution; that is correct, isn't it? A. That is correct.

Q. I want you to listen and see whether there is anything different in the other things he said from what is summed up in this resolution. I want you to point out for me what else in here, if anything, he said under directions from you or your [2892] district committee:

> "Mr. Chairman and Brother Delegates: Once again I feel honored to address the officers and delegates assembled at this Fourth Annual Convention of the California State Industrial Union Council. The report of the officers of the State Council presents in detail the tremendous advances made during the past year. It is unnecessary for me to review again that progress. It is sufficient to say that since the third annual convention and the national convention of the CIO organization has been pushed on every front. Many millions of dollars in wage increases have been won by the unions affiliated with the Council. The outstanding victories in basic industries, such as steel, auto, aircraft, rubber, packing house, oil and others, furnish proof of the ability of the California CIO to do things, and should instill in every member of the CIO in this state the determination to make even greater gains in the coming year.
> "I can say without hesitation that the State Council's program for the past year, coupled with the initiative and energy of officers and > members, has resulted in a record of achievement that can not be surpassed by any State Council in the entire CIO. The Council officers deserve highest praise for their activities and accomplishments, and the affiliates of the Council that have [2893] contributed to the Council's success in the past years, with their cooperation and support, may well be proud of the record of the California CIO for getting things done.

"Much more remains for us to do in the organizational field. We have the instrumentalities to work with: the State CIO Council, the National Regional officers and organizers, and the determination to improve the living standards of the American working people have an added incentive now. One that is paramount to all others, the organization of workers into the very backbone of the anti-Fascist front, our free and democratic trade unions, in order that every ounce of energy and effort can properly be put forward in the fight to destroy Fascism. To win this fight is the main issue today. We must realize now that our unions, our economic and political security, our freedom and democracy are periled by the Fascist arms of Hitler. I read they have enslaved most of continental Europe and will spread and control the entire world unless stopped. Nation after nation has been overpowered, millions of lives sacrificed. Free-thinking and free organizations have been destroyed in the march of the New Order. It is not my intention to review the changing situations of policies in the past year with regard to international affairs. I have read the report of the president and the secretary and your Council dealing with [2894] this question, and that subject matter is covered concretely in their report. I subscribe to and support their analysis and conclusions wholeheartedly, and I deem it entirely sufficient concerning our past policies.

"The question before us now is what to do and what is the best way to do it and how quickly and effectively we can move into high gear against Hitler and his allies. If one reads President Roosevelt's papers that he has published reviewing his actions and the policies of his administration during the term of his office as president of the United States, we note that he deals specifically in one part with his position on matters of neutrality, his attitude at the time concerning the invasion of Ethiopia by Mussolini, the embargo against arms for the Spanish Loyalists. The President points out that although he acted at that time for what he believed to be was the well being of the nation, and in an effort to avoid war, he believes now that the net result of the neutrality policy followed at that time hastened war, and as he expresses it himself, "I now regret my actions.' That is good enough for me and it should be good enough for anyone who wants to enlist in this fight against Hitler from now until victory. If the President of the United States is big enough and man enough to say that somewhere along the line results might have been better if the job had been done [2895] differently, all of us, including the most severe critics of the President's past actions, can not fail to try to be equally as big and say, 'Well, that's past and done with. We always agreed that Hitler's Fascism should be destroyed. We just couldn't get together on the best way to do it. But let's go from here and do the job right.'

"If anybody wants to sit around and pat themselves on the back and say, 'I told you so,' let them. They will be doing the very same thing in a slave labor battalion if Hitler ever marches to victory in his present attack.

"Right here, as far as I am concerned, I am dismissing and forgetting what has happened and is past in this connection. I know enough to tell me where I stand and what I must do as a member and officer of the CIO and as one who always has been and is now more than ever opposed to Fascism and everything inherent in it.

"The President, the Armies of Soviet Russia, Great Britain and China are wasting no time these days looking at what is past, nor should we waste any time. We know what our record in the anti-Fascist side is. In many respects we were the pioneers—pioneers not only with words, but with deeds—and now we not only need more words, but they must be backed up with every sort and form of action that we can think of.

"As one opposed to Fascism, I pledge myself to do [2896] anything and everything within my power and ability to support the President in delivering all aid to Great Britain, Russia and China in the fight to defeat Fascism, and I urge upon the delegates here and the membership they represent to do likewise without any equivocation.

"It is not a question any more of when Hitler will be stopped, but how soon and at how great a sacrifice. Every day that the war goes on, every statement from the German high command claiming further gains, strengthens Hitler's hand by strengthening his fifth column of appeasers here and elsewhere. They are able to elaborate and enlarge on their arguments that this is not our fight.

"They are able to sponsor and press for Fascist legislation and to spur to greater effort their various elements operating in the departments of government and industry.

"It is only by uniting all people that want to fight Fascism, regardless of race, creed, color, religion or political philosophy, into one anti-Fascist productive and fighting machine, that we will do the job quickly, effectively and once and for all.

"We of the CIO must demonstrate by positive action that we are willing to do our part, and, yes, sacrifice, but let us make it perfectly clear that any sacrifices we are required to make as workers shall be met by equal [2897] sacrifices by corporate interests.

"I mean this: We will follow and support the President in the all-out program of aid to defeat Fascism. We pledge ourselves to work toward the attainment of the highest productivity of labor in producing machines and the materials to wage the fight against Hitler. We pledge our determination to do all to see that production continues in order that the effort may not be marred or blocked by strikes or stoppages of work, and we pledge our determination to oppose those who would appease Hitler and Fascism. [2898]

"There are no strings attached to such declarations. They mean anything and everything that might be necessary to fight and win. There are no qualifications such as 'making America an arsenal of democracy,' or 'All aid short of war,' nor should we bother with trying to ferret the good or bad things in the nations or the governments who are at present being attacked by Hitler. They are fighting Hitler and they are fighting Fascism, and in the case of the Soviet Union and its army, navy and air force, they are doing an excellent, all-out job.

"Great Britain has geared her entire Empire to the fight, and if any criticism may be attached to her efforts so far, the way to intensify those efforts and to broaden Britain's contribution is to declare ourselves in and demonstrate that we are ready to go just as far as she is.

"These countries are fighting Fascism with everything they've got. That's good enough for us, or should be. They deserve our support, and we should state here and now, without any equivocation, that they are going to get it in every way we can give it to them. They are going to get our loyalty behind our national leaders in government and the CIO who expressed their determination to destroy Hitler and his new order.

"What do we ask in return? Of course, we ask and insist first that there be no let-up and that Hitler be [2899] defeated and Fascism erased for all time. We next ask and insist that our contribution to the fight be recognized and given due respect. We insist that those officials in high places in Government and industry, more concerned with their desire for profit and individual benefits, be exposed so that they may take their place where they really belong, in the ranks of Hitler's fifth column and appeasers.

"While we pledge ourselves to do all possible to insure smooth production of the materials needed, we insist at the same time that the right to strike remain inviolate and that an end be put to the attempts of selfish employers and business corporations who would seize this opportunity to destroy this fundamental right of labor, not because of their sincere desire to defeat Hitler, but because of their determination to weaken labor organization and to rob the workers of the organized power and right to protect their security.

"On this matter of strikes and stoppages, especially in defense industries, I urge you to reaffirm the position taken at the enlarged Executive Board meeting of this State Council in June of this year: That we will utilize the various governmental agencies established to handle labor disputes, specifically in defense industries, while work continues, and to work with the national officers and [2900] councils of the CIO to settle our labor disputes with full and just recognition of our demands in order to avoid strikes wherever possible.

"In no sense does this mean relinquishing the right to strike, but it does mean that we can recognize the seriousness of strikes in defense industries now more than ever, and we recognize that such stoppages indirectly aid Hitler and retard our efforts to defeat his aims.

"I might mention here that this is not a new position for us by any means. My own International Union as far back as a year ago signed a two-year, no strike contract, recognizing that national defense called for the necessity of greater use of governmental agencies in handling labor disputes, especially when a union had been long established and had secured the fundamentals necessary for its continued well-being.

"We again recognized this situation in a more intense period during the North American strike. No question in that strike that the demands of the workers were reasonable in every respect. No question as to the fact that the employers in that particular instance so maneuvered the situation as to force the strike, not because they were concerned with the fight against Hitler but to preserve their already swollen profits. No question that it was absolutely improper for the Government to [2901] lend the armed forces to the North American employers to break the strike. But at the same time, there is no question either at that time or now that all concerned did not have the proper perspective and realization of the necessity of utilizing to the utmost the machinery of the established Government agencies and the influence of CIO leaders to secure the full demands of the workers.

"It is not my intention to try to lay the blame in any one particular place, if any blame is to attach. Certainly the major reason that the strike took place was because of the pressure the North American Corporation in this instance was able to exercise against the workers and to stall the Mediation Board. What does stand out, however, is that victory was won. The workers' demands were granted, and it was essentially because of their organized strength that this was accomplished, together with the aid of the national leaders of the CIO working through the established governmental machinery. The use of troops contributed nothing except the breaking of the strike, and the action delighted the anti-labor interests of the nation.

"It is my judgment that no more situations of a similar type will develop within the CIO, or that the President and his administration will seize it to repeat the use of troops in a like manner again. This, however, [2902] is predicated on the fact and the necessitry that we do our part, and in the case of a recalcitrant employer who is stubborn and determined to put profits before the main question of fighting Fascism, it shall be our purpose to use our organized strength and power, backed by our pledges of loyalty, to insist that the national Government deal firmly and vigorously with such employers, even to the extent of taking over and opearting their plant or factory."

Shall we adjourn now?

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will take the recess and resume at two o'clock this afternoon. The same admonition not to discuss the case under any conditions, and not to form or express an opinion on the matter until it is submitted to you. You may go now.

(Thereupon the jury was excused until 2:00 p.m.) [2903]

(The following proceedings were had out of the presence of the jury:)

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, in the matter of Manning Johnson, if we can again impose upon your patience, we have some other matter that is presenting iteslf, and we expect to have it during the day. I would like to have the matter deferred. Your Honor will see the purpose as soon as we produce the material we have.

Mr. Donohue: May I say to your Honor, as I read the record of the matter at issue, Mr. MacInnis said yesterday that he asked for an extension of time for the purpose of establishing by the statutes of the State of Nebraska that the offense——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. If it is going to be argued, then I won't participate. What I want to do, I have some other material relating to Mr. Johnson that I want to present to the Court. I expect to get it in this afternoon. That is the only purpose. We can take up the whole thing after the conclusion of that.

Mr. Donohue: I am interested, if your Honor please, in the matter of Manning Johnson with respect to the alleged conviction, and I am interested, if your Honor please, for the reason that on page 2469 of the record Mr. MacInnis stated:

> "I want to assign the statements of the prosecutor as misconduct, your Honor, as an unjustifiable interference with cross-examination in this case." [2904]

For that reason, if your Honor please, this matter, which was initiated on the 14th of December is still pending, and I was about to say to your Honor, only yesterday Mr. MacInnis asked for more time in order to procure the statutes of the State of Nebraska for the purpose of proving, if possible, that under the Nebraska statute, the offense alleged was a felony.

Referring to page 2465 of the record, Mr. MacInnis said on the 14th day of December:

> "Now, under the State court practice this crime would be a misdemeanor. Under the Federal Court practice it is admissible as a felony."

I am prepared at this time, if your Honor please,

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

to cite from the United States Code to prove beyond doubt that the offense of possession of intoxicating liquor in 1926 was a misdemeanor under the Federal Code.

I call your Honor's attention to a telegram from the Attorney General of the State of Nebraska, James H. Anderson, addressed to Bruce G. Barber.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. I think, your Honor, that there was some objection the other day to my offering the Court a telegram as proof of anything. I don't see how this counsel, whether it be by support of some legal argument or some factual argument, can now read your Honor a telegram, on which he bases the law.

Mr. Donohue: I am only controverting Mr. MacInnis' [2905] opinion and conclusion when he stated on the 14th day of this month in court——

Mr. MacInnis: I have brought the law books. I don't read any telegram from the Attorney General of Nebraska, and I don't think he can any more than I can.

Mr. Donohue: I think he should have had the law books on the 14th of December, because on the 14th of December he said, "Now, under the State court practice this crime would be a misdemeanor." I think Mr. MacInnis, in the light of the fact that it was a misdemeanor, knew that it was highly improper for him to ask the question. So I say to your Honor that I have a telegram from the Attorney General of the State of Nebraska addressed to Bruce G. Barber, District Director,

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Immigration and Naturalization Service, reading as follows:

> "In 1926 Conviction for First or Second Offenses Possession of Intoxicating Liquor Was Punishable as a Misdemeanor. For Third and Subsequent Offenses Punishable as a Felony."

Now, if your Honor pleases, I think if there is any reluctance on the part of counsel to introduce the so-called record of conviction, that I should be permitted to state to your Honor and to introduce to your Honor, for the purpose of determining to strike the question and answer is good and my motion that the jury be instructed that the question ought not to have been asked, I think I should be permited to say to your Honor [2906] that historically, it would appear that on the 13th of December, 1949, first of all, a phone call was made to the Chief of Police of the Police Department of Alliance, Nebraska, by Mr. Norman Leonard of this city and by——

The Court: By whom?

Mr. Donohue: By Mr. Norman Leonard, if your Honor please, who identified himself, according to a letter from the Chief of Police, as an attorney in San Francisco. Pursuant thereto and on the same day a telegram was sent to Chief Thomas of Alliance, Nebraska, in this language:

> "Please Send One Wire Confirming Information Given Me by Phone. Re Johnson Arrest

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> November 29, 1926. Send 2 Airmail Certified Copies of Police and Court Records. Send Bill for Charges. Norman Leonard, 150 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California."

And the Chief of Police on the following day, December 14, send this telegram addressed to Norman Leonard, 150 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California:

> "Mann Johnson, Negro, Arrested November 29, 1926, Charged With Possession Intoxicating Liquor. Arraigned December 1, 1926, Pleaded Not Guilty, Found Guilty, Fined $100 and $8.95 Costs. Signed, D. A. Thomas, Chief of Police, Alliance, Nebraska."

I have, if your Honor pleases, under the certification of a name which I cannot make out—I notice it in print; it [2907] appears to be Harold E. Wingstad, Police Magistrate of the City of Alliance, Box Butte County, Nebraska, who certifies that the "foregoing is a true and correct transcript of the case wherein the State of Nebraska was plaintiff and Mann Johnson defendant, as recorded on pages 195 and 196, Docket #180 of the Police Court docket of the City of Alliance, Box Butte County, Nebraska," in witness whereof he sets his hand and seal.

This purports to be an amended complaint.

> "Before T. D. Roberts, Police Magistrate of the City of Alliance, Box Butte, Nebraska. For unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"The complaint and information of L. M. Horton of Box Butte County aforesaid made in the name of the State of Nebraska before T. D. Roberts, Police Magistrate in and for the City of Allance, Box Butte County, Nebraska, this 1st day of December, 1926, who, being first duly sworn on his oath says that Mann Johnson on the 29th day of November, 1926, in the City of Alliance, Box Butte County, then and there being did then and there have in his possession in a place other than his private dwelling house intoxicating liquor consisting of one pint bottle of raw whisky commonly called moonshine for the purpose of unlawful use or disposition in violation of law contrary to the form of statutes in such cases made and provided and against the peace and dignity of the People of [2908] the State of Nebraska.

"Signed, M. L. Horton, Police.

"Subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me this 1st day of December. T. D. Roberts, Police Magistrate.

"Warrant issued for the arrest of said Mann Johnson and the same was delivered to Chief of Police L. M. Horton, who made return as follows: Received this writ December 1st, 1926, and I have arrested the within-named defendant and have his body now before the court. L. M. Horton, Chief of Police.

"The complaint was then read to defendant and he plead not guilty as charged in the com> plaint. The following proceedings were then had, to-wit: Attorney R. O. Reddish appeared for the State and Attorney E. H. Boyd for the defense. Harold Jeffryes was sworn and testified for the State, cross-examined by Boyd. L. M. Horton was sworn and testified for the State cross-examined by Boyd."

There there appears a list of costs, which total $8.95.

> "Defendant sworn and testified in his own behalf, cross-examined by Reddish. Mrs. Johnson sworn and testified for the defense. Case submitted to the court for consideration of the evidence. Submitted. I find defendant guilty as charged in complaint. It is therefore considered and adjudged by me that defendant pay a fine of $100 and costs taxed at $8.95, in default of payment of [2909] fine and costs defendant is committed to jail to work for the city until such fine and costs are paid or to be otherwise lawfull discharged."

A notation then shows that the fine was paid, $106 on December 11—apparently it was paid in installments—with $2.95 balance paid on January 7, 1927.

I offer that, if your Honor pleases, for the purpose of establishing that the offense alleged was a misdemeanor.

Now, with your Honor's permission, I would like to offer proof of the fact that the Mann Johnson who was convicted of that misdemeanor, of the possession of liquor, was the same Mann Johnson who subsequently, on the 2nd of April, 1934, was shot and killed in the City of Alliance, Nebraska, by a woman who was exonerated by a coroner's jury on the ground that the killing was justifiable in self-defense.

I would like to prove, if your Honor pleases, also by the records of the State of Nebraska, Box Butte County, that Manning R. Johnson, the witness on this stand, was arrested in the City of Alliance, Nebraska, on the 23rd day of December, 1929; that he was then and there charged with the offense of fighting, which charge was dismissed on the same day by the court on the ground that he was acting in his own self-defense. I offer it for the purpose of showing, if your Honor please, by this record that on the 23rd day of December, 1929, when Manning R. Johnson, the witness here, was so arrested and released [2910] his age was 22, which is supported by his own sworn statement that he was born in the year 1907, which would make him 22 in the year 1929. [2910-A]

I offer the record of the State of Nebraska, Box Butte County, over the certificate of its chief of police, on the record of arrests of James Johnson in Alliance, Nebraska, this arrest having taken place on the 21st day of June, 1933, showing that James Johnson was aged 40, indicating, if Your Honor please, that if Manning R. Johnson, the witness, was 22 in 1929, he was obviously 26 in 1933, and that the James Johnson, whose arrest record I have in front of me was at the time when the witness Manning Johnson was 26, was 40 years old, so that there is a difference of 14 years in the two persons.

I have also, if Your Honor please, two affidavits over the seal of the Clerk of the County Court of Box Butte County, Nebraska, briefly stated as follows:

> "Daniel O. Hoppes, being first duly sworn, upon his oath states that he is of lawful age and that he is now and has been for approximately ten years last past sheriff of Box Butte County, Nebraska; that he knows of his own personal knowledge that Man Johnson was arrested in November of 1926 in the City of Allaince, Box Butte County, Nebraska, upon the charge of possession of intoxicating liquor, and that on April 2nd, 1934, James Man Johnson was shot and killed at 101 Sweetwater Avenue in Alliance, Nebraska, and that said Man Johnson and said James Man Johnson were one and the same person, notwithstanding the discrepancy of name. Affiant further sayeth not." [2911]

That is signed and sworn to.

The second affidavit is that of F .M. Shelmadine:

> "F. M. Shelmadine, being first duly sworn, upon his oath states that he is of lawful age and that he is now and has been for approxi> mately 16 years last past, deputy sheriff of Box Butte County, Nebraska; that he has read the foregoing affidavit of Daniel O. Hoppes, and that he knows of his own personal knowledge all of the facts set forth in said affidavit and that all of said facts are true and correct, and he makes oath to them as fully and completely as though they were again set out in full over his signature. Affiant further sayeth not."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Signed and sworn to.

I have what I shall not trouble Your Honor by reading in addition, a certified copy of a report of the coroner's inquest in the State of Nebraska, Box Butte County, held over the body of James Johnson, found dead over a gunshot wound at 101 Sweetwater Avenue, Alliance, Nebraska, at 8:00 o'clock p.m., April 2nd, 1934.

I have also, if Your Honor please, two statements which were certified to by the editor of the Alliance Times & Herald swearing that the above articles were taken from the newspapers current at the time in Alliance, Nebraska, in support of the matters I have heretofore called to Your Honor's attention. I therefore respectfully say to Your Honor that the [2912] question No. 1 asked of the witness Manning R. Johnson:

"Isn't it a fact that you were convincted of a felony at such and such a time," and more particularly with reference to a later question asking if it were not a fact that Mr. Manning R. Johnson, the witness, had in fact been operating as a bootlegger in his place of business, should not have been asked of the witness because, as a matter of fact and as a matter of law, the defendant Manning R. Johnson has never been convicted of any offense, felony or misdemeanor. As a matter of fact and law, the person whose identity appeared in the telegram which was the basis for Mr. MacInnis asking the questions in the first place is a person now deceased, and obviously therefore could not be the witness Manning R. Johnson, and therefore I renew my motion and ask Your Honor to instruct the jury that the question with respect to the conviction of Manning R. Johnson, and any answer that may have been made to at least one of those questions be stricken from the record, and that Your Honor instruct the jury that the counsel for the defendant has failed to produce any evidence establishing the fact that he had heretofore in his possession evidence tending to show that the witness had been heretofore convicted of a felony.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Do you have the page of the transcript where those matters appear, counsel?

Mr. Donohue: I think I have them marked, yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Page 2462. I have one reference wherein you [2913] said:

> "I assume counsel will present a certfiied copy of the record which purports to show a conviction of a felony on the part of this witness for the purpose of impeachment, because

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> I am sure he would not ask that question unless he had such positive proof."

Mr. MacInnis said:

> "You may well be sure of that."

That appears at 2462, lines 12 to 17.

But I do not have the precise page where the question appears, the matter to which you objected.

Mr. Donohue: Page 2462, line 8.

The Court: Yes, I have it.

> "I now ask you this question, Mr. Johnson: Have you stopped practicing deceit?"

The question starts: "Very well. Now, in relation to that statement——"

Mr. Donohue: On page 2463 this question was asked of the witness:

> "Now, actually your occupation at that time was that of a bootlegger in connection with a pool hall, is that not true?"

and again on page 2464:——

The Court: I sustained the objection.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor. [2914]

The Court: Mr. MacInnis said, "I am about to come to that."

Mr. Donohue: Then on page 2464, if your Honor please, line 10, question by Mr. MacInnis:

> "Mr. Johnson, on the first day of December, 1926, in Alliance, Nebraska, were you found guilty of possession of intoxicating liquor?"

To which objection was made and subsequent Mr.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

MacInnis said—I objected, if your Honor please. "That is not the question he asked a minute ago. He asked him a minute ago if he had been convicted of a felony.

"The Court: That is right.

"Mr. MacInnis: That is a felony, your Honor.

"Mr. Donohue: I hope he is prepared to prove that possession of intoxicating liquor is a felony.

"Mr. MacInnis: Yes. I have the certified copy on its way from Alliance, Nebraska. I have a wire from the chief of police of that city in my hands. I will show it to the Court."

The Court: The several documents from which you have read and to which you have referred may be received in support of your motion, all and singular.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment before your Honor makes that ruling.

The Court: I say that they may be received in support of [2915] his motion

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, you can not receive hearsay evidence in support of any motion. The rule is different, of course, with regards to certified copies.

Mr. Donohue: I was only carrying the burden for him. This was his responsibility.

Mr. MacInnis: I appreciate you have been very helpful. You have delved into the stormy history of this Johnson family in Alliance and found that this Manning Johnson was arrested for fighting and not bootlegging. But that does not settle the matter. Have you finished?

Mr. Donohue: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, in the first place, I think that your Honor can not be persuaded into making a ruling in this matter by documents which are still hearsay documents, however validly or however diligently they may have been procured.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, one interruption. Do you dispute any or all of the documents proffered to the Court by Mr. Donohue?

Mr. MacInnis: I haven't any knowledge one way or the other.

The Court: Do you have in your possession any document in a comparable sense verifying anything you have said?

Mr. MacInnis: Verifying anything he said? I have the same [2916] certified copy of the record that Mr. Donohue read to the Court. That is the same certified copy of the record of the people of the State of Nebraska v. Man Johnson, which he has read to you. I do not have the affidavits. I have never heard of the persons who executed them, and of course, I have never heard of this other Johnson, whom we are now told was killed in some dispute, taking him out of the purview of this case. I have not heard of those things. But the question, it appears to me, your Honor, is much more one of law than of fact.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: First, counsel, if I may interrupt you momentarily, departing from any proposed question of law, if in fact Man Johnson was convicted of a misdemeanor, about which you sought to impeach the witness Manning Johnson—

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is assuming it is a misdemeanor.

The Court: Let us assume that—

Mr. MacInnis: I do not assume that.

The Court: Let us assume for the purpose of this record if in fact Man Johnson is dead, there is no matter of law before the Court.

Mr. MacInnis: You can not proceed by that rule, your Honor. Under the doctrine of Idem Sonans in the Law of Evidence, the similarity of names presumes the identity of persons. The witness thereupon may be confronted with a certified copy and the witness may then have the opportunity of saying. [2917] "No, that is not I. I was not the person involved." That is a matter of fact. And that is what the law is. In other words, if that were the law in any matter of cross-examination involving a contradiction of any kind, there would be a hearing in the absence of the jury, in which the prosecution would present proof in advance so that questions it would seek to elicit in contrariety of the evidence would never be uttered in the presence of the jury. It seems to me, if it please your Honor, there is a deeper problem before you concerning the propriety of these questions on cross-examination. I have no dispute at all with what has been offered you as the historical enumeration of these affairs. When the witness took the stand, we thought it was to inquire in the city of Alliance, Nebraska, to see if he had ever been convicted of crime. A telephone call was placed to the chief of police of that city. The telephone call led to the information and the wire which has been read. I see that the chief of police of Alliance, Nebraska, has furnished the prosecutor with copies of those communications. He, however, has not furnished us with copies of the other documents which apparently have been transmitted to the prosecutor.

Now, at the outset of his statement before, your Honor, Mr. Donohue had stated that I had transgressed the law in some way by telling your Honor that under the state law this crime was a misdemeanor, but that under the federal law it [2918] would be a felony, and he then said he proposed to show you the federal code, to show that that crime was not a felony under the federal law. That statement, if the Court please—and I do not mean to be insulting our adversary, the prosecutor in this case—demonstrates that he does not appreciate at all the distinction between a misdemeanor and a felony in the federal practice, because what I mean is this: This is a very common example: Let us suppose that in our state courts here in San Francisco a man is prosecuted for the charge of, let us say, possession of a narcotic, which is a felony under the law. Let us suppose that he is found guilty, but it being his first offense, he is then given six months in the county jail. Under the state practice he has been convicted of a misdemeanor, and if he is ever involved in litigation in the state courts thereafter, that matter can not be intruded against him as a matter of impeachment. On the other hand, if that same man who served the six months in jail comes into federal court in any matter, he can then be impeached by saying that he was in fact convicted of a felony, and that is the distinction I mean—not the federal code on the possession of alcoholic liquors, but the federal code in respect to what is a felony and what is not a felony.

Now, here is the federal code. Title 18, United States Code, Section 541, provides:

> "All offenses which may be punished by death or imprisonment [2919] for a term exceeding one year, shall be deemed felonies. All other offenses shall be deemed misdemeanors."

In other words, under the Federal Code and under the cases supporting it, if an offense itself in the language of the statute, is one which may be punished by more than one year, then the offense is a felony in federal court contemplation even if the man pays a fine, is given probation or serves a short term in jail. The matter still remains a felony. Now, how do we determine whether or not the offense of possession of alcoholic liquors in the State of Nebraska on December 1st, 1926, is a misdemeanor or a felony? Well, we find that out by going to the Nebraska law. Yesterday when the matter came up, counsel indicated that he, like myself, had received this certified copy of the record, and I then said to your Honor I wanted some time to look into the Nebraska law, because this certified copy of the conviction is silent on the name or designation of the statute involved. It does not say, "Violation of Statute No. such-and-such" or anything of the sort. Because the statute involved is not known, we are thrown back upon a search of what the Nebraska law was at that time. Now, we find from the Nebraska statutes as follows: Statutes of Nebraska, November 1st, 1926. We are referred to the laws of Nebraska, Volume 1919 to 1921, page 638 to 648. We find that chapter 156 of that law was approved by the Nebraska legislature April 18th, 1921. We are then referred to section [2920] 56 of that law at page 647, and then we come to the offense, "Possession of alcoholic liquors." Possession of alcoholic liquors is under three prohibitive sections in very similar language. Two of the sections are said to be misdemeanors by the punishment which follows the description words, and the third is said to be a felony. Now, the law and its violation, apparently in the discretion in the trier of the facts, can be a misdemeanor or a felony.

We are offered this morning a further suggestion by Mr. Donohue, who has wired the Attorney General of Nebraska apparently. He says from the Attorney General he has the information that the first or second offenses under the Nebraska law at that time would be considered misdemeanors and, however, a third or fourth offense would be a felony. Would we be precluded, your Honor, from asking this witness whether or not this was the first, the second or the third offense? How could the rights of cross-examination thus be restricted? So, as I say, I do not know about this——

The Court: Do you propose to exhume the body of Man Johnson?

Mr. MacInnis: I have heard, your Honor, that Mr. Donohue has such information.

The Court: How do you propose to place this superstructure of misdemeanors over a dead man?

Mr. MacInnis: You are accepting the fact that there is a [2921] dead man.

The Court: I would say to you, Mr. MacInnis, in the kindliest way, that the evidence elicited from the affidavit presents a rather complete and clear chain of events, pointing to the death of the unfortunate Man Johnson. Otherwise we would be dealing in abstract sophistry.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say something in the kindliest sort of way? If I may say this to your Honor by way of analogy to a problem which I think will intrude itself before you in much the same light, the converse of the same problem. We have a man on the witness stand now named Crouch. Mr. Crouch was courtmartialed and sentenced to 40 years of hard labor He was asked the question himself yesterday,

"You were convicted of a felony,"

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

and as loudly as he could he cried out, "No, I wasn't convicted of a felony," or words to that effect. Now, I didn't see Mr. Donohue rise to correct the witness at that time, although I know that was a felony, and I know under the Federal Rules that was a felony. I know it from no better authority than the United States Attorney in this district who presented the problem to me in a very recent case, which I tried in the court upstairs before his Honor Judge George Sweeney of Boston, who sat here in the early fall of this year. In that case there was involved a defendant, who, while serving as a major in the army, had been courtmartialed. The penalty on him was no fine, [2922] no imprisonment, no anything else, merely his commission was taken away from him. The United States Attorney in this District asked the man, "Have you been convicted of a felony?" He said, "Why, no, I never have. I have never been arrested before."

The cross-examiner, who was the very able Mr. Joseph Karesh of this office, said to him, "Why, Mr. So-and-so you were courtmartialed in the army, weren't you?" He said, "Why, yes, that is true. My commission was taken away from me."

The following day Mr. Karesh brought into court a certified copy of the court martial and he brought along with that the citation of the Federal Code, which I have already read to your Honor. Title 18, U. S. Code, Section 541, does provide:

"All offenses which may be punished by death > or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year shall be deemed felonies."

He then turned to the section of our Federal Code discussing court martials, in which penalties may be from the lightest reprimand up to the heaviest, life imprisonment, and pointed out both under the code and under the law applicable that a court martial sentence amounted to a conviction of a felony under the federal law, and there was no answer to it, no answer at all. So I say this, your Honor, regardless of the question as to whether or not this man Johnson is dead or alive, in the first place, I had a perfect right to ask the question. I do not apologize for it. I would do it again. [2923] I would do it again in the same way. If I had a witness on the stand as we had on this occasion, I would endeavor, as we are doing as diligently as we can, to find out all the information that may exist about those persons, and if we find by telegram, as we did here, under virtually identical names, identical race, as these certified copies show, that that conviction existed, why, as I say, we would do the same thing. If your Honor comes to the conclusion that the evidence shows that these were different men, I suppose your Honor would have to instruct the jury to disregard the asking of the question, but in the same breath I think your Honor must instruct the jury that the witness Paul Crouch has been convicted of a felony and must be subject to the same limitations in the reception of his testimony which are applied to any person who has been convicted of a felony.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: We are dealing now with Manning Johnson.

Mr. Donohue: May I be heard briefly on this question of Manning Johnson?

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, one other interruption. As I understand the basis or bases of your remarks, do you depart or assume to depart from the first premise that must be established in the impeachment of a witness for possible conviction of a felony? The first premise we must meet is the identity of the individual. Now, you depart from that entirely in your argument. [2924]

Mr. MacInnis: May we stop there for a moment?

The Court: Yes. Where is the identity of Man Johnson and Manning Johnson? It appears from the evidence also that the two parties are diverse and are not one and the same. Have you any evidence to offer to this Court that Manning Johnson, the person on the stand, is or was the man Man Johnson referred to in the report?

Mr. MacInnis: I have not, but under the law the burden is upon the person who claims the false identity to show that.

Mr. Donohue: That is double talk, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Just a moment, if your Honor please.

Mr. Donohue: You have been talking quite some time.

Mr. MacInnis: If you will. Let us assume the witness is on the stand, your Honor, and let us assume I had more than one day's intervening time to get this record. Suppose I had more than a telegram.

The Court: There has been more than one day. It has been quite a few days.

Mr. MacInnis: I mean the day I asked him the question, Judge. I think we understand that. The witness is on the stand, and I take out of my pocket this certified copy, which seems to be the source of so much difficulty in the matter, and I say to him, "Now, Mr. Johnson, you have been convicted of a felony," and he says, "I have not." I say, "All right," and I hand a certified copy to the Clerk and I say, "There. Weren't [2925] you convicted of this felony on the first day of September, 1926?"

Then the man says, "That is not myself." Then a colloquy follows, probably an argument, but the right to ask the question is not destroyed. There is no intervening procedure in which I must find out if some other person bearing a similar name is one or if someone is dead.

Mr. Donohue: The burden then becomes his in that very instance, if the witness denies that conviction; it is then the duty of the person who asked the question to prove that he is or was the person so convicted, and that is the duty which Mr. MacInnis undertook when he asked that question. Now, it is all right for him to say he would ask the same question again. I suppose he means to include the question, "'Were you not acting as a bootlegger?" It was improper on several bases.

Mr. MacInnis: I will come to that.

Mr. Donohue: Pardon me, just a minute. First is the question of identity of names, and there is not any such identity. The second is identity of persons. The burden is on him to prove it. I have sought to prove that they were not, but we can not depart from the fundamental question: Was the conviction for the possession of alcoholic beverages in the State of Nebraska on the date in question a felony or a misdemeanor? I have listened to tortured legal arguments all my life, but I [2926] have never heard one more tortured than by a lawyer who will not distinguish between a first conviction for possession of intoxicating liquor, a second offense, a third or subsequent offenses, because every lawyer knows that there is as much difference between a first offense of possession of intoxicating liquor and a second offense as there is between robbery and arson. They are two totally distinct offenses, requiring two totally distinct methods of proof, and they are subject to two entirely different penalties. There can be no question, legally, morally or factually, that the offense in question was a misdemeanor, and Mr. MacInnis should have found that out before he asked the question.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say this, your Honor: Aside from the fact that the prohibition practice was a little before my time, I can only look at the statutes. Let us go along with Mr. Donohue on what he says with respect to the contents of a telegram from the Attorney General of Nebraska, pointing out this distinction of first offense, second offense and third offense. Would I be precluded as a cross-examiner from asking the witness on the stand if it was his first offense, second offense or third offense?

Mr. Donohue: The record proves it, Mr. MacInnis. You have the certified record. He was convicted of possession. Does it say first possession?

Mr. MacInnis: The record is negative on that point. I am [2927] not bound by that.

Mr. Donohue: The record is not negative.

The Court: What does the record show on that?

Mr. MacInnis: May I hand this to your Honor through Mr. Mitchell?

The Court: You may state it.

Mr. MacInnis: The record shows nothing as to whether it is a first offense, second offense or third offense. I just do not see what the difficulty is. If we are wrong as a matter of fact, the witness can tell us that. The witness may say, "This is not myself." He may say that. But we are not required before we may ask the question to eliminate everybody with a similar name in the State of Nebraska or everyone in the town of Alliance. That would make an impossible burden.

Mr. Hallinan: May I say this: Regardless of what your ruling may be on this particular matter, regardless of whether your Honor is ready to rule on the matter of Manning Johnson, we have some further matters with respect to that witness and we would like to have an opportunity to further examine him.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: When you speak of matters, is it on this point?

Mr. Hallinan: No, not on this point.

The Court: The matter may be submitted?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: Submitted, Mr. Donohue?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor. [2928]

The Court: On the particular motion presented by Mr. Donohue, the Court is now advised, through the medium of affidavits and evidence presented by the prosecution, no evidence having been presented by defense counsel, that is, in a documentary sense, that, first, the offense referred to in connection with the conviction of a Man Johnson was a misdemeanor; secondly, the Court infers from the chronology and chain of events set forth and depicted in the communications as well as the affidavits presented to the Court, no opposition having been presented thereto by defense counsel, that the Man Johnson referred to in the telegram received by Mr. MacInnis, upon which he predicated his questions seeking to impeach the witness Manning Johnson, that the said Man Johnson appears to have been shot under circumstances related in the affidavit. He is now deceased, and that the Man Johnson referred to is not Manning Johnson, the witness in this case. It becomes unnecessary, however, to make a formal finding as to the death of Man Johnson because I believe assuming we were not confronted with that particular factor of death, nevertheless the record discloses fully, fairly and convincingly that the crime was at all times mentioned a misdemeanor. Accordingly, the Court will appropriately instruct the jury concerning the questions asked and given an appropriate admonition.

We will not resume at 2:00 o'clock, unless there be something further. [2929]

You asked for the return of Manning Johnson.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: That is, we will need him for some further questions after this witness is closed.

The Court: I indicated to you that you might send for the transcript in the Eisler case.

Mr. Hallinan: That is one thing. There is another matter.

Mr. Donohue: Now, if your Honor please, as I stated before, he has a wife in New York who is ill.

Mr. Hallinan: We will be through anyhow by tomorrow; it wouldn't be more than one extra day at the most.

Mr. Donohue: We will have him here.

The Court: 2:00 o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [2930]

December 20, 1949, 2 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, at this time

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

I am required by a rule that you will be familiar with to make a momentary interruption in this cross-examination. We have conclusive proof in the court here, documentary and oral, that this witness and the preceding witness, Manning Johnson, have committed deliberate perjury. On June 27, 1936, the Saturday at which they testified Mr. Bridges was elected to and appeared before the National Committee in New York, Mr. Bridges made a speech in Stockton, California, which was widely advertised, both in the local papers of Stockton and in the trade reports.

Now, I have here, if the Court please, certain documents and certain oral information which I wish to convey to the Court, to the effect that these gentlemen be ordered by the Court held for the grand jury for perjury and placed in the custody of the United States marshal and that they be not permitted to escape the jurisdiction of the Court.

On Saturday, June 27, 1936, the Stockton Record——.

Mr. Hallinan: Saturday, June 27, 1936. [2931]

Mr. Donohue: If it please your Honor, I think in all propriety that if Mr. Hallinan has a motion of this kind, it should be called to the attention of your Honor not in the presence of the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we want to do this, your Honor. We are willing, the order of proof is within the discretion of the Court, and we are willing that a brief recess in the prosecution, and we can put Mr. Bridges on the stand, and the witnesses who were present at the meeting with them. We have six of them. It will be substantiated by documentary proof, and we are willing to put them on in the presence of the jury and have that also introduced as part of the case. Now, I know that it is customary, the custom seems to have grown up, to occasionally exclude jurors when legal matters are being discussed. But it is a new practice, it isn't a necessary one; while we make no objection to it, we think the jury should hear the matter. We would prefer to have the jury hear it.

Mr. McMillan: That is an independent matter.

Mr. Donohue: Of course, your Honor——

Mr. Hallinan: Of course, the main, the principal purpose, as I say, your Honor, is this: My understanding of the law is that as soon as counsel, as an officer of the court, becomes aware of a situation such as exists here, it is his obligation to forthwith call it to the attention of the Court, and he is remiss in his duty if he waits or if he continues on with some [2932] examination without allowing the Court to know that. Now, we can show the Court, as I say, conclusively, that these two men have testified falsely in this matter. We have this concern: the testimony or the cross-examination of this witness is almost concluded. The United States Attorney, being in charge of this prosecution, will, we esteem, neglect or refuse to present this matter to the grand jury. We have the case in which Johnson's intimate, George Hewitt, in Washington, testified falsely against a professor up there. The grand jury indicted him——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: That is not true, if your Honor pleases, and Mr. Hallinan ought to know it.

Mr. Hallinan: The man is now a fugitive from justice in the State of Washington, with a warrant for his arrest. And I think he has been protected in New York.

Mr. Donohue: I challenge that statement, if your Honor pleases.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, and Mr. Hallinan, may I interrupt both of you momentarily?

Mr. Hallinan: Surely, your Honor.

The Court: I, of course, Mr. Hallinan, can not predict what may eventuate in the light of your disclosure to the Court. As you say, you make it promptly as, according to your view of the matter, it behooves you to make it. Now, that being so, traditionally in these courts, as well as in state [2933] courts, where matters of this character have been suggested to the court by counsel on either side, particularly as drastic a matter as this, until a solution has been reached, to the end that no possible prejudice results to either party, I think that in the exercise of discretion, the jury should be excused. Accordingly, I shall excuse the jury until I hear this matter out to its fullest extent.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I ask this, your Honor, that this witness and the witness Johnson——

The Court: This, of course, is not on the part of the Court, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, to exclude you from any matters that ordinarily would obtain in your final determinations. Rather, there may well be legal matters to thresh out, there may be a myriad of things to encounter, and I trust that you will bear with the Court, as well as counsel, in a consideration of this rather startling disclosure. Accordingly, ladies and gentlemen, I ask you to retire until the matter is heard out by the Court, with the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case or any phase of it.

> (Whereupon the jury retired from the courtroom, and the following was heard outside the presence of the jury:)

The Court: You might step down. Take a seat in the body of the courtroom.

> (Witness on the stand left the witness stand and assumed a chair in the body of the courtroom.) [2934]

Mr. Hallinan: And might it be understood, your Honor, that the witness and the witness Johnson will be in such position that they will not leave the control of the Court?

The Court: That is the order.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, Mr. Bridges, will you take the stand?

Mr. Donohue: No, no; I must interrupt at this time, if your Honor pleases.

The Court: Now, Mr. Hallinan, may I ask you to delineate for the Court a little more particularly?

Mr. Hallinan: Very well. Take a seat, if you will.

Now here is what we have, Judge. On the airplane schedules to New York as of that time, they consumed at the fastest 17 hours from San Francisco to Newark, and then let us say an hour or so to get into New York. Now, this witness has testified unequivocally and Johnson has testified without fixing the exact date, but fixing the circumstances which involved the——

The Court: Now let us take this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: You say he has testified unequivocally?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, he said this:——.

The Court: Will you point to the page and the line, please, wherein he so testified?

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I haven't it right here. Here is what he said. I think you will bear me out. He said that the last business of the convention of 1936, as in all conventions, [2935] is the election of committees and the election of committees and the election of the National Committee was the last act of the 1936 convention, preceding the mass meeting in Madison Square Garden. Then he attended the convention, and that Harry Bridges was elected under the name of Rossi. That Mr. Bridges appeared and was introduced by Mr. Stachel, who said that "Now you have seen Comrade Rossi, we will not bring him back here again." All right, as fixing the date, he——

The Court: Well, just a moment, Mr. Hallinan. I can't recall that particular testimony.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I didn't bring the testimony down with me.

The Court: In such an important matter, when charges of this nature are made, it would seem to me that you would have the page reference and the line reference.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I should.

Mr. MacInnis: We will have that in a matter of minutes, your Honor.

The Court: Well, I should like to have, rather than these generalities, the page and the reference, the time and the place and the record of where these statements are made. These are very drastic, startling charges, and I think you should fortify them page for page and line for line.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: We haven't the volume, but we will have it [2936] here within five minutes, your Honor.

The Court: Within five minutes? We will pass the matter for five minutes until we have this transcript before me. I certainly would not assume to now recall in its minutest detail every phase of the testimony of this man or any other witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I suggest this, your Honor, that he said that that convention, that election, might have taken place on either of these three times.

The Court: He challenged the newspapers, he said that the newspaper had set the matter back. He challenged the newspaper on that.

Mr. Hallinan: No. But as far as the time of the convention is concerned, he said that the election of this National Committee and the introduction of Mr. Bridges took place on either Friday afternoon, Friday evening or Saturday morning. That would be on the afternoon or evening of Friday, June 26, or on the morning of Saturday, June—I am sorry; he said it took place on either the afternoon or evening of Saturday, June 27th, or on the morning of Sunday, June 28; that that was the necessary time, that it was one of these three times, the afternoon or evening of Saturday, June 27th, or the morning of Sunday, June 28th. Now he said that there might be some bare possibility, based upon human error, that it might have been one or two days after that. And I will cover that presently. [2937]

But so far as it was possible to state at all, he said it was Saturday afternoon or the evening, or Sunday morning. Now, aside from the inherent probability of it, and aside from his statement before the Un-American Activities Committee that he had never seen Bridges except in some public meetings, we have the physical impossibility that Harry Bridges could have been in New York on either Saturday, June 27th, or Sunday, June 28th. Now, we can show beyond any question of a doubt, if the Court please, that on Saturday, June the ~~28th, at about~~ the hour of 8:00 o'clock p.m., he made a speech before a union in Stockton, June 27th. That was advertised in the paper, that the statement of it having been made appears afterward, that in one of the papers even part of the context of his speech appears. Now, he went to Sacramento—and this is borne out by the newspaper item—with two men, one of whom was Henry Schmidt. Now, it will not be pretended that this was looking forward, in advance.

In the issue of Saturday, June 27, 1936, of the Stockton Record, there is a heading, "Harry Bridges will address Stockton ILA meeting. Harry Bridges, militant maritime labor leader and president of the San Francisco local of the International Longshoremen's Association, will address Stockton members of the association tonight at a meeting in Teamsters Hall, 421 East Minor Avenue, at 7:30 o'clock. Bridges is waging a campaign for the Pacific Coast presidency of the ILA. [2938] Other ILA officers and candidates for district offices to be heard will include Henry Schmidt, member of the executive board of the San Francisco local; Eugene Dietrich and Henry Schrimpf, members of the executive board of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, leftwing organization of waterfront workers. Walter Mahaffey, business agent for the Stockton ILA, this afternoon urged all members possible to attend the meeting."

Now, in the Pacific Coast Longshoreman of Monday, July 6th, the following news item appears:

> "Bridges and Schmidt at Stockton."

Now, this is after the meeting, Judge.

> "The ILA locals of longshoremen, bargemen, warehousemen and clerks of Stockton have made arrangements for a mass meeting of their membership, and invited Bridges and Schmidt to make a report on the convention of the Maritime Federation held at San Pedro, at which both were delegates. The Stockton locals having no delegates at the convention except the first two days, transferred their representative voting strength to Bridges and Schmidt, to be used in the best interests of the Stockton locals.

"Their advice to the men to vote 'yes' on all questions on the federation ballot was accepted and their report on the convention was unanimously endorsed.

"Especially the remarks of Bridges were received with [2939] enthusiasm by the men. He spoke for nearly one and a half hours, going into the history of the movement that was just started by the ILA in June, 1935, spoke on the different phases and angles of the great 1934 strike. He made it plain that the maritime workers must be constantly on the alert and ready to combat the organized forces of the employers. There is no doubt, said Bridges, that the organized employers of the United States are always watching and plotting to destroy the organizations of the maritime workers on the Pacific Coast. We are one of the leading bodies of workers' organizations in the United States of America; have gained much in the way of improvement of our economic conditions, and although we can not solve the unemployment problems of the people by getting them work on the waterfront, we can not afford to isolate ourselves from workers in other industries. Their problems are our problems. The workers must use their political power as well as their economic power in the struggle of solving the unemployment problem. It behooves the maritime workers to interest themselves in the welfare of less fortunate members of the working class. By using our political power, organizing a worker-political party, we can elect honest workers' representatives to the state legislature, municipality and Congress, et cetera, representatives who will fight to pass legislation beneficial [2940] to the workers. The employers are organized on the political field and make the most of it to get legislation beneficial to themselves passed. For example, the recent passage of the Copeland Bill (Fink Book). The workers must follow their example, was Bridges' advice.

"Just before adjournment the mass meeting secretary, Walter Mahaffey of Stockton longshoremen invited Bridges to be the chief guest speaker at the Stockton Labor Day celebration. He was unable to definitely accept this invitation, inasmuch as the San Francisco local may demand his presence on Labor Day."

We have a statement from five members of the Stockton local in connection with the meeting. And the importance of Bridges having attended there and spoken at that meeting impressed itself on their minds, so that refreshing their minds by newspaper items, the records of the organization, they were able to give this statement:

"We, the undersigned, members formerly of Stockton longshore local 38-93, recall the following incidents as occurring in May and June, 1936.

"During May, 1936, the delegates to the ILA convention in San Pedro from our local were Mike Silk and Walter Mahaffey. On May 21, 1936, a special meeting was held to decide whether Mahaffey should stay in San Pedro as the local's delegate to the Maritime Federation of the Pacific [2941] convention. After considerable discussion and a report by Silk on the ILA convention, a motion was made by Silk, seconded by A. Pope, and carried by voice vote, that we send a night letter to Mahaffey instructing him to give his proxy to the San Francisco Local 38-79 and return to Stockton immediately. Mahaffey complied with our instructions.

"After the M.F.P. convention was over, Mike Silk invited Harry Bridges to address and report to the Stockton local on the convention.

"This meeting was arranged for June 27, 1936, at 7:30 p.m. at the Teamsters Hall, 421 East Minor Street, in Stockton. Bridges arrived shortly after 7:30 p.m. that night, accompanied by Henry Schmidt and William Christensen, and all three men spoke, with Bridges making the major report of about two hours long. Several hundred men belonging to the longshores, warehouse and bargemen's union, also clerks, were present.'

"After the meeting, which ended at about 10:30 p.m., several of us went with Bridges and Schmidt to Matteoni's Night Club, California and Minor Streets, for drinks. We talked and drank until about midnight, and then we went home and we think Bridges and his friends went back to San Francisco.

"The above statement has been read by us and it is [2942] the truth to the best of our recollection."

"James Shuffler, Louis N. Devonshire, Barth Woods, Gerald C. McDonnell, F. Jaworski."

The man who drove up with Mr. Bridges, and who is mentioned in one of these news items, is available and we have sent to produce him in court. Now, at that time the Federation put out a paper called The Voice of the Federation. In the issue of Thursday, July 2nd, the meeting that I have just described is discussed:

"Bridges and Schmidt at Stockton. The ILA locals of Longshoremen, Bargemen, Warehousemen and Clerks of Stockton, made arrangements for a mass meeting of their membership and invited Bridges and Schmidt to make a report on the convention of the Maritime Federation held at San Pedro, at which both were delegates. The Stockton locals having no delegates at the convention, except the first two days, transferred their representatives' voting strength to Bridges and Schmidt, to be used in the best interests of the Stockton locals."

Well, then follows practically what was contained in the other article, including the statements by Mr. Bridges. There are excerpts from him, and including the statement that he was invited by Mr. Mahaffey to address the forthcoming Labor Day celebration.

The man who drove off with him and who drove the automobile, [2943] William Christensen, gives this statement. He is available.

> "My name is William Henrik Christensen.
> "In June of 1936 I was a member of ILA Local 38-79, and a member of the Board of Trustees of that local; also a delegate to the San Francisco Labor Council from that local.
> "Some time one or two days before June 27, 1936, Henry Schmidt arranged for me to drive him and Harry Bridges from San Francisco to Stockton for a meeting which Bridges was to address on June 27, 1936.
> "I was at the union hall during the morning of Saturday, June 27, 1936, where I saw Bridges and Schmidt, and we all left for Stockton in my car about 2:00 or 2:30 p.m."
> "Then the three of us went to the offices of the Stockton Longshore Local and met Walter Mahaffey, the business agent of the Stockton Longshoremen. We went to dinner with Mahaffey and then in Mahaffey's company we went to the union meeting at about 7:30 p.m. The members were already gathered, and a little while after we arrived the meeting began. Both Schmidt and I were introduced and said a few words to the membership. Bridges was introduced and made the main talk of the evening, which dealt, among other things, with a report by him on the recently concluded maritime federation convention. He made a long report which took about one and a half to two [2944] hours to deliver.

"After the meeting was over, several of the Stockton men took Bridges, Schmidt and myself to a night club in Stockton where we had a few drinks and talked for probably a couple of hours.

"Bridges, Schmidt and I left Stockton some time after midnight and commenced to drive back to the Bay Area. On the way back we had with us a man called 'Sailor Jack Reilly.' I can't remember whether we picked him up in Stockton or whether he drove up to Stockton with us, but I do remember he was with me on the trip back.

"We got into Oakland some time after 3:00 o'clock in the morning and Bridges and Schmidt and Reilly wanted to go directly to San Francisco, but since I lived in Albany, Alameda County, on the east side of the Bay, I insisted that the men come to my house and have some breakfast before we crossed the Bay. They came to my house and I remember they all sprawled out on the living room furniture and slept for a couple of hours. At about 6:00 o'clock Sunday morning, June 28th, 1936, we had breakfast. My wife Edna and my daughter Dorothy had breakfast with us.

"This was the first and only time that Bridges was ever in my house in the East Bay.

"After breakfast I drove Bridges, Schmidt and Reilly [2945] back to San Francisco. I think I dropped Reilly somewhere along the waterfront. I remember taking Bridges out to his house on Pine Street and leaving him off there. This was between 8:00 and 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning, June 28. I don't remember whether I took Schmidt on to his house or whether he got off somewhere and got a street car.

"This was the only meeting that I ever attended in Stockton with Harry Bridges."

Now, we have the day book of the Stockton Longshore Workers and Warehousemen's Union, and there is a payment here on May 29, "Cash, Hall, chairs and entertainment for Bridges meeting, $19.80." That is on June 29th of 1936.

I have a letter, a copy of a letter which Mr. Walter Mahaffey, who was then secretary of Local 3839 of the International Longshore Association at Stockton, California, sent under date of June 29th, the day after the meeting, to Mr. B. Mays, editor of The Voice of the Federation, 120 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California.

"At a special meeting Saturday night, June 27th, held in Teamsters Hall, the longshoremen, bargemen, warehousemen and ship's clerks were addressed by Brothers Harry Bridges, Henry Schmidt and William Christensen of Local 3879. The speakers were very well received and the membership expressed themselves as desirous of having them back again as soon as possible. Brother Bridges was given an invitation to speak in Stockton on Labor Day, which we sincerely hope he accepts as this is to be the biggest celebration of Labor Day ever had in this city.

"Fraternally yours,

"WALTER MAHAFFEY,
"Secretary Local 3839,
"ILA, Stockton, Calif."

Now, we have here, your Honor, the minutes of a reconvened session of Local 3879, held in Scottish Rite Auditorium Monday, [2947] June 29, 1936, a continuance of the session held Monday, June 22, 1936.

"Meeting called to order by President Bridges at 8:15 p.m."

And the statements made, the discussion that took place, Mr. Bridges' leaving the chair and talking from the floor, are discussed in the minutes there, signed by Harry Bridges, president and chairman, and Ivan Cox as recording secretary.

On the following day, June 30, 1936, we have the minutes of a regular meeting of the San Francisco Bay Area District Council No. 2, held in Room F Ferry Building, San Francisco, California, on June 30, 1936, Chairman Harry Bridges, and Secretary Mervyn Rathborne, the brother-in-law of Krolek, who is one of the Government witnesses, signed by Mervyn Rathborne, which discusses the holding of this meeting, Bridges' participation, Bridges again discussing matters from the floor and making the report, one that is not subject to any question or equivocation.

On the very next day, July 1, we have minutes of the Executive Committee of District Council No. 2 held in Room 729, 268 Market Street, on July 1, 1936, Chairman Harry Bridges, Secretary Mervyn Rathborne again.

We have minutes of the ILA Local 3879 Executive Board meeting Wednesday, July 1, 1936. Meeting called at 8:30 p.m. President Bridges read the minutes of the District Council [2948] setting forth the action to be done on July 5. They were going to hold a parade on July 5 of that year, and in these minutes are discussed preparations for that parade.

I have a news press release signed by Harry Bridges, which doesn't bear any date, but the internal evidence of which indicates it was issued on July 2, 1936. It refers to action taken by the Council on June 30 and speaks of the July 5 parade. It is headed, "For Friday's paper." Friday was July 3, so that the press release would have to be issued on July 2 or even July 1.

It is on the San Francisco Bay Area District Council No. 2 stationery. Heading, "Official Release by District Council No. 2 for Friday's papers."

> "On maritime memorial day, July 5, 17,000 members of San Francisco maritime unions will pay tribute to the seven union men who were killed on the Pacific Coast during the maritime strike of 1934.

"The San Francisco Bay Area District Council of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, at a regular meeting held on June 30, requested its 27 affiliated unions to take part in the observance of July 5. This day will be commemorated by a parade of several thousand seamen and longshoremen; a memorial meeting at Civic Center, and services at the graves of Nicholas Bordoise and Howard Sperry, two union members who were killed by police on a [2949] picket line at Mission and Steuart Streets on July 5, 1934.

"The line of March of the parade, which will begin at noon, will be on Market Street from the Ferry Building to the Civic Center. The memorial meeting will be held at 2:00 p.m. The spot where Sperry and Bordoise fell will be decorated and a guard of honor will be posted during the day.

"The San Francisco Bay Area District Council has invited trade unions and friends to organized labor to participate in the observance of July 5. Similar services will be held in Seattle, Portland and San Pedro.

"San Francisco Bay Area District Council No. 2."

Signed, "Harry Bridges, President," in his own handwriting, and the seal of the organization on it.

We have the minutes of the Labor Relations

Committee, an employer-employee body, for July 3 from 10 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., which show that Harry Bridges was present and participated in the discussion.

We have the minutes of the Executive Committee of District Council No. 2, which shows that Bridges was present in San Francisco on July 3, 1936, from 3:20 p.m. to 4:25 p.m., answering the roll call and taking part in the discussions, and this is again signed by Mervyn Rathborne.

We took the matter, so there can be no question, up to July 6, 1936, the last of these minutes that we have bothered [2950] to take in. The minutes of a regular meeting of Local 3879 held Monday, July 6, 1936, at Scottish Rite Auditorium, "Meeting called to order by President Bridges at 8:10 p.m.," and this is signed "Harry Bridges, President and Chairman," and signed by Ivan F. Cox, Recording Secretary.

Now, going back to the 22nd of July, which was the preceding Monday. You remember, your Honor, that the convention in New York——

The Court: The 22nd of July?

Mr. Hallinan: I beg your pardon.

The Court: You said the 22nd of July.

Mr. Hallinan: The 22nd of June. The convention in New York ended on the 28th—was held on the 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th.

The Court: June 24th to 28th.

Mr. Hallinan: 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th. Now, that meeting on the following Monday,—that would be on July 1 that I refer to here—I am not going to get that date wrong—yes, July 1st—stated that it was a meeting adjourned from the 22nd. Pardon me; June 29. It was a meeting held at the Scottish Rite Auditorium——

The Court: That was the following Monday?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, on Monday, June 29, 1936, stated it was a continuance of the session held Monday, June 22, 1936.

Now, I have the minutes of Local 3879 for Monday, June 22, [2951] 1936. "Meeting called to order by President Bridges at 8:20 p.m.," and at the end, "The Chairman ordered that this meeting would be reconvened next Monday night to take up unfinished business. Meeting declared adjourned at 11:20 p.m."

I have the minutes of the San Francisco Bay Area District Council No. 2 of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, which shows that Harry Bridges was in San Francisco on June 23, 1936, from 8:22 p.m. to 11:50 p.m., at which time a meeting was held, minutes of a regular meeting, Chairman Harry Bridges, Secretary Mervyn Rathborne, and showing the roll call of the persons present, the calling of the meeting to order, and signed by Mervyn Rathborne as secretary.

I have the minutes of a regular meeting of the Executive Board held Wednesday, June 24, 1936, at 9 p.m. "Meeting called to order by President Harry Bridges at 9:00 p.m.," and signed by Ivan F. Cox.

Now, the situation is this, your Honor: That the reason we are constrained, in addition to the ordinary matters, is that perjury is always held to be the severest affront to the dignity of the court that can be brought up.

The witnesses in this case are produced here by the United States Attorney's representatives and officers. It is not conceivable that they will themselves carry this matter before the Grand Jury or detain these witnesses for action by the Grand Jury.

I want to call your Honor's attention to a matter that has been adverted to in this case. A man named George Hewitt, a colored friend of Manning Johnson, appeared in the State of Washington before the Canwell Committee and testified that a certain professor in the University of Washington had attended a school in New York, during some short period. The professor dug up dental records, matters that he had attended, and so forth, not one-half as conclusive as this. The Grand Jury of Washington indicted Hewitt. He was placed on an airplane and escaped from the jurisdiction of the court and into the State of New York. Extradition papers were issued by the State of Washington, and the officials of the United States Government protected him.

They then brought in Johnson to testify for the first time now as a witness in New York on the extradition of Hewitt that he also had seen this professor at this school in New York during that period, and a nisi prius court in New York, a judge of an inferior court, refused to extradite Hewitt to the State of Washington, so that the efforts of that

State to extradite Hewitt have come to nothing.

Your Honor, we see here what I consider to be as remarkable a phenomenon in American jurisprudence as in the famous State trials of England when Pitt and the Whigs were trying to repress universal manhood suffrage in the prosecution and persecution of the Irish Rebels in the Rebellion of 1798, the [2953] English government maintaining a stable of professional witnesses, ten or twelve men, practiced, coached, erudite, well able to take care of themselves in any sort of discussion, and they were sent all over the country, through Ireland, through England, through Scotland, to send honest, decent people to the gallows or into exile or to prison. We have never seen that in the United States until the present time. But now, Judge, they have men like these fellows, Crouch, Johnson, Hewitt, and a half dozen other men, trained pet cobras who are maintained back in the Eastern part of the United States and sent into Washington, San Francisco, New Orleans and Hawaii, wherever it is desired to ruin some labor leader or to destroy some person. If the persons they were attacking were only these poor little Communists and ex-Communists that they have been going after, it wouldn't be so bad; but now they are union-smashing in San Francisco.

Your Honor, they are not going to do anything to put the brand upon their own tools and their own bloodhounds. If anything is going to be done to now arrest this, to now assert the dignity of the Court, it is up to you to do it.

We appeal to you now not to take any step against these men, but here is a matter that should be referred to the Grand Jury for immediate action. We ask that these men be committed to the custody of the Marshal. They can be released on bail, we don't care what the procedure may be, but we insist that [2954] for the proper dignity of this Court that action should be taken.

Now, your Honor, let me say this, and I say it in kindness to you and not by way of criticism: For what I think your Honor would admit was overzealousness on my part in representing my client, I am to be both imprisoned and disbarred. Here these men come in here and commit abject, flagrant, arrant perjury, bold-faced smiling, a grin on his face as he narrates the thing; the other man a black, foul hyena of Hell comes in here.

Your Honor, I met some years ago a fine little man named Marzani, an honest, decent little man employed by the United States Government who took a loyalty oath and then he was indicted by the Grand Jury for having committed perjury. It seemed to me a sad thing, and I thought, well, why didn't he tell the truth, and I so said to him. He said it was the truth, he was never a member of the Communist Party. Well, I just found out recently it was Manning Johnson that sent him up to the penitentiary where he is now.

How long are they going to get away with it? Is your Honor going to allow them to come in here and let them testify, and then just smirk and walk out and go on with the next victim, or is your Honor going to rule for the dignity of the court of the United States and not only be a sword of justice but a shield of protection for innocent men that are going to be [2955] subjected to these things in the future?

We ask you, we beseech you to now take some action that will assure that this sort of procedure is arrested and that they cannot come in here and be caught in perjury, saying, "That is one of the men," and walk out and go on to the next victim.

As I said, your Honor, earlier, the schedule of the airlines, and the only airline that was running through at that time——

The Court: You said 17 hours.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, 17 hours from San Francisco to Newark, but it would be impossible to come down from Stockton to San Francisco and then make it over any such period.

The Court: In 1936 they were flying Boeing planes then. I flew them.

Mr. Hallinan: That is right.

I offer all these documents to the Court. Well, of course, what I can say is only advisory. I am not in a position to make a motion. It is only a matter addressed to the Court's honor and to the Court's dignity, that the proper procedure be taken at this time to see that this matter is referred to the Grand Jury and that these men are now placed in custody and held for action by that body.

The Court: Mr. Hallinan, Mr. MacInnis has the transcript now. We may take a three- or four- or five-minute recess [2956] while you consult the pages for appropriate references.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

Mr. MacInnis: We have them.

The Court: We will take a five-minute recess.

(Recess.) [2956-A]

Mr. Hallinan: If the Court please, with regard to the testimony of Manning Johnson, we find Johnson's testimony on this point, while it is not unequivocal as to time, as Crouch's we find this on page 2512, line 1:

> "Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Johnson, concerning the occasion when you say Harry Bridges was presented to a group of fifty-odd people in 1936, did that occasion take place during the 1936 convention of the Communist Party?
> "A. That meeting—that closed session of the National Committee took place right after—shortly after the election of the National Committee. It was either before the convention adjourned or a day or so following.
> "Q. It would be within a matter of a day or two at most? A. Correct."

And on page 2551, after discussion of the matter:

> "The Court: Are we settled on this matter? The proceedings commenced on the 24th of June?
> "Mr. Donohue: So I am informed, Your Honor.
> "The Court: And they terminated on the 28th of June?

"Mr. Donohue: So I am informed, Your Honor.

"Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Johnson,——"

and then questions were addressed to Mr. Johnson on that subject. Then:

"The Court: Has the witness' recollection been refreshed?

"The Witness: I accept the date as that the Government [2957] accepted or agreed upon."

Now, with relation to Crouch, he testified this, on page 2620, line 6:

"Q. Are you able to tell us, Mr. Crouch, whether at any time during the 1936 or 1938 National conventions of the Communist Party you saw the defendant Harry Bridges?

"A. To the best of my recollection, I did not see him in '38, but to the best of my recollection, I saw him very briefly in 1936 during the course of the convention and at a meeting of the new Central Committee which followed for the purpose of electing the Politburo of the party."

Then moving to page 2676, when he was under cross-examination on that subject, line 25:

"Q. Now, I notice in skipping over some of your testimony of yesterday that you spoke of a meeting, you said, 'During the course of the convention and at a meeting of the new Central Committee which followed for the purpose of electing the Politburo of the party.' Now, was this Politburo then elected by the Central Committee?

"A. By the new Central Committee.

"Q. I see. The new Central Committee elected the Politburo? A. Correct.

"Q. And how did they do that? What was the procedure for electing that Politburo?

"A. The procedure in general—and as I recall, it applied in this case—was that at the Central Committee meeting Browder announced that 'the election of a Politburo is in order,' and someone, usually Stachel—I think Stachel on this occasion—got up and read a proposed slate, and the motion was made, and another seconded it, that this be the Politburo of the party. There were no further nominations, no one declined, and this went through like a perfect steamroller.

"Q. So, Mr. Crouch, while it is perfectly all right, when we know what you are doing, to use the general practice, I would like to confine ourselves to what you remember of these particular instances. So if you don't remember them, you can tell us that, then we can go into the general practice, but for the present moment, if you will stay with your recollection of this matter. Now, the convention that you spoke about which elected the Central Committee, then, I suppose, having done that as its last order of business, the next procedure was the mass meeting at Madison Square Garden at which the presidential and vice presidential candidates were nominated. Is that approximately correct, or did the convention, having completed its work of nominating the Central Committee, have any further business?

"A. The convention, after its election of the new Central [2959] Committee, had no further business except to also act as delegates at the public meeting at Madison Square Garden.

"Q. And do you know what time of day that public meeting was held? Was it in the afternoon or in the morning?

"A. It wasn't in the morning.

"Q. Was it in the evening?

"A. It was afternoon or evening, to the best of my recollection, but I can not recall the hour."

Page 2679, bottom of the page:

"Q. Now, when did the Central Committee meet to elect the Politburo?

"A. I can not specifically recall whether the meeting was held the night—Saturday night or Sunday morning, but my best belief and my best recollection is that it was held Saturday night.

"Q. Are you sure that it was held before the final ending of the convention itself?

"A. No.

"Q. I suppose that it wouldn't be reasonable that the committee members would stay in New York for any very long period of time after the convention ended, is that right?

"A. To the best of my recollection, it was held prior to the Madison Square Garden meeting, to the best of my belief and recollection. [2960]

"Q. So then it would have to be either Saturday night or Sunday morning?

"A. To the best of my recollection, although I stayed in New York, the best I can recall, for a couple of days after the 28th for the purpose of a series of conferences on various fields of party work, and I can not be too specific, but my best recollection is it was held prior to it. I might—it is humanly possible that I might be mistaken, because I remained in New York for at least two days after June 28.

"Q. When you say 'at least two days' now, could it have been eight or ten days?

"A. No, it couldn't have been over two or three days.

"Q. Do you know whether or not you had meetings with the Central Committee within that two or three days?

"A. Oh, yes.

"Q. How many?

"A. One, only one of the full Central Committee.

"Q. And that was after the convention had been closed?

"A: That was after the final nominating session; that is after all the closed meetings of the convention had closed. I do not mean necessarily—not necessarily after the Madison Square Garden meeting.

"Q. I am talking about the Madison Square Garden meeting as the ending of the convention.

Let us say that Madison [2961] Square Garden ended the convention.

"A. The meeting of the Central Committee would then have been prior to the ending of the convention, from that technical application, from that technical point of view.

"Q. Are you sure whether it was prior to the ending of the convention?

"A. I am not positive. I have already answered that question.

"Q. You stayed in New York a couple of days, and during that couple of days you had at least one meeting with the Central Committee?

"A. I said during those two days I had a series of conferences, various party meetings, trade union work in various other fields, and I stated while I was in New York, not necessarily the two days after—in fact, to my best belief and recollection, it was prior to the Madison Square Garden that we elected the new Politburo. I am almost—I am nearly certain. There is a human element. It could have been later, but my best belief and best recollection is that it was after the—of course, it was after the election started, which I believe we elected the new Central Committee, and prior to the Madison Square meeting.

"Q. That it would have to be on Sunday morning?

"A. Saturday night or—— [2962]

"Q. Saturday night or Sunday morning?

"A. To my best belief and recollection.

"Q. After the Madison Square Garden, did you have any meeting with the Central Committee, after the Madison Square meeting?

"A. Not unless there is the element of possibility that I could—that I might have been mistaken—I don't think I was—on the date when we elected the Politburo, but aside from the date on which we elected the Politburo, I didn't have any meeting with the full Central Committee while I was in New York. I had one meeting—I attended one meeting of the full Central Committee after the convention was called to order, before I returned to North Carolina."

And then going to page 2685, finally, talking about the statement that Mr. Bridges was there on Wednesday. He was asked if he recalled where he said he was going:

> "A. I don't recall any mention of where he was going.
> "Q. Just that Mr. Bridges was mentioned, that he was there, but that he was going to be called away on some trade union work and would miss the greater part of the convention?
> "A. As I recall.
> "Q. And then you saw him again on Saturday afternoon or evening? [2963]
> "A. If my memory serves me correct,—if my memory is correct on the date on which we elected the new Politburo, it would have been Saturday evening or Sunday morning. I stated there is a human element. I kept no notes. I made no memorandum. And that was about 13 years ago."

Now, Your Honor,——

The Court: One interruption, Mr. Hallinan. I suggest that Mr. Mitchell call the jury. They have now been waiting some time. By stipulation we might excuse them until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well, Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: It is now twenty minutes to four, and I see no additional reason to keep them waiting. You might wait until the jury arrives.

(Whereupon the jurors assumed their position in the jurybox, and the following occurred in the presence of the jury:)

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen, by stipulation of counsel, it is agreeable that we recess the jury at this time while additional matters are under discussion between the Court and counsel, until tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock. That is, tomorrow morning, the 21st, at 10:00 o'clock. Our plans have not changed with respect to adjourning tomorrow at noontime, so you may make your plans accordingly. I know that many of you ladies and gentlemen have looked forward to that respite of [2964] the intervening holiday. We may plan accordingly, then, that tomorrow at noon we will stand adjourned until the following year, 1950. It seems a long way off, but it is very proximate now. January 3rd, 1950. So you may have these matters in mind.

May I again admonish you not to discuss this case among yourselves, nor suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial; not to form or express an opinion until the matter is submitted to you. I admonish you to disregard any statement made by counsel prior to my recessing the jury this afternoon. You are to erase the same from your minds. You may now retire. Tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon the jury retired, and the following occurred outside the presence of the jury:)

Mr. Hallinan: Now, might I suggest, Your Honor, that it is a common device of practiced perjurers to take refuge in such statements as "to the best of my recollection," or "as far as my memory serves me," or some such thing as that; and they think that by that device they can evade responsibility. But the law is, in criminal cases, that if the impression which the witness obviously intended to convey to the jury was as to the existence of a certain fact, he can not avoid criminal liability by having cloaked it in such evasive terminology as that.

Now, aside from the gross improbability of the narrative [2965] by these two men, that Harry Bridges, under surveillance and under suspicion of being a Communist and subject to deportation as an alien, in the 1938 convention, having twice testified under oath that he was not a Communist, and therefore subject also to criminal prosecution, that he nevertheless permitted himself to be presented and his name to be presented before 750 to a thousand people for nomination to a central bureau of the party. Aside from that, and aside from Crouch's statement to the Un-American Activities Committee in answer to a question if he knew anything about Bridges, directly or indirectly, that he knew very little, that he had seen him a few times at public meetings, and had heard reports of him from Schneidermann. We have here conclusive proof that this man has committed perjury. We have conclusive proof, by putting his statement and Manning Johnson's together, that there was a conspiracy to commit perjury. And we have conclusive proof that Manning Johnson committed perjury.

Now, I conclude—I am certain—that there is no necessity for an outsider and a third person to appeal to the conscience of this Court, and I will say nothing more about it. I submit the matter to Your Honor now, having done what I can.

Mr. Donohue: May I be heard, if Your Honor please?

Mr. Hallinan: There is one thing I would like to say further. I would like to substitute photostatic copies of all the documents that I have produced here, because some of them [2966] are taken from files of the unions and they asked to have them returned. And I want also to offer one other document, Your Honor—a copy of the Western Worker for July the 6th which recites that "ten thousand marched on July 5th," and that Harry Bridges made a talk at the Civic Center on the subject. So I will withdraw the documents that I have here except the copy of the Stockton Record and the Voice of the Federation, which are the only ones I have. I will leave those with the Court and I will take the other documents.

Mr. McMillan: I don't understand he is seeking to offer them in evidence in any manner?

Mr. Hallinan: I offer them to the Court for his perusal.

Mr. McMillan: For his advisory capacity?

Mr. Hallinan: Exactly.

Mr. Donohue: May I be heard, if Your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: I shall not, of course, if Your Honor pleases, seek to match either the hysteria of my adversary, nor shall I attempt to engage with him in a game of name-calling, because I am sure, at least with respect to that phase of this matter, I could never equal him.

I have learned not to be concerned by whatever Mr. Hallinan may do. I am sometimes puzzled by why he does it. But his conduct this afternoon leads to but one rational conclusion. Despite certain observations that I have made personally [2967] concerning Mr. Hallinan's trial technique, I am nonetheless certain that he knows as a lawyer that for him to have made the accusations which he did make today in the fact and presence of the jury, was a serious breach of his obligation to the Court and to the jury in the trial of this case.

But passing beyond that, and looking for the true motive as to why he did so, and why he made the rabble-rousing speech which followed, I can only conclude that he is seeking to cover his ineptitude as a cross-examiner and to substitute therefor a speech to the public. Mr. Hallinan must know that in the ordinary process of the trial of a criminal case with the possession of the largely hearsay documents which he apparently has handed copies of to Your Honor, that it was his responsibility as counsel for these defendants, in the light of the information in his possession, to exercise the skill he is supposed to have in the cross-examination of a witness, particularly with reference to the witness Crouch, who is still on the stand, to so break down and destroy the testimony of that witness that the credibility of that witness before this jury would vanish; and that it was then his duty as a lawyer in the ordinary process of a criminal trial to have introduced such of this evidence as might be admissible at the time when the defendant put on his defense; and then to argue to the jury from the effects of his cross-examination on the credibility of the witness. And from the weight to which he would be [2968] entitled, the jury could give to the evidence which he might properly introduce, to come to the conclusion that the witnesses were in error in testifying that they saw Harry Bridges at the time and place stated; provided, number one, that the jury discredited the testimony of the witness Crouch and Johnson on that point, and provided, two, they believed the testimony which he might offer by way of defense. [2968-A]

But, of course, with his usual flair for the dramatic and apparently concerned about his inability to shake the testimony of the eight witnesses who have already testified, Mr. Hallinan takes his own method to raise this issue.

I say to your Honor that there is only one group of defendants on trial. I needn't ask your Honor, as a trial lawyer and judge, what would happen in any trial, civil or criminal, if at every moment there was a disagreement between plaintiff and defendant, the United States or a defendant at the bar on a criminal case, as to the truth of a statement made by a witness, if we were to suspend the normal operation of that trial and try a case of perjury. The answer, of course, is apparent.

If Mr. Hallinan believes that Mr. Bridges was not present at the time when these witnesses stated he was, then he still has the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses with respect to the documents in his possession, and at the time he puts his defense in issue, to introduce or offer to introduce in evidence such documents as are competent.

Certainly I believe that if Mr. Hallinan or any other trial lawyer were defending a case of perjury sought to be established by newspapers, press releases, letters, minutes of meetings, some affidavits and airport schedules, he would be loud in his criticism of the prosecution who would seek to introduce that in evidence. [2969]

I must respectfully say to your Honor at this time that when the jury convenes and this Court convenes again, that Mr. Hallinan should be at that time required to follow the orderly procedure for a criminal trial:

Mr. Hallinan: I can state one word: I am glad that counsel's reply took the form of a criticism of me rather than a defense of the conduct of the witnesses, lest by making himself an accessory after the fact he opened himself to the suspicion that he may have been an accessory before the fact.

We are not just representing witnesses in these cases. I have had twenty-five years' practice before the bar that has given me wealth and given me position, given me all sorts of gratuities of life, and I owe an obligation to the bar and I owe an obligation to the bench. The obligation is not one that I have assumed myself in this matter, because it has been often pointed out that it is the duty of a lawyer to the court when he detects a matter of this kind to point it out to the court and waive the consideration of how it may affect the case in point.

And I say this further, your Honor, I say this, and I know that it is with the consent of these three gentlemen: that their attitude and my attitude is such that we turn from our own defense and that it forces us to protect possible victims of such a conspiracy. We are not interested now only in clearing these men from the intendments that [2970] this fraudulent and perjurious testimony might involve. We want to see that something is done that this stable is curtailed, that it is locked in, that it is not used any more, and that poor, helpless people all over the country are not subjected to the same ruining murder of fellows like Crouch and Manning Johnson, who are produced here to identify anybody any place. Why, your Honor, here is what it amounts to: A person is called in before a congressional board of inquiry or before a court:

"Did you ever use the name John Blake"—the man's name being Pete Smith.

The man says, "No, I did not."

"Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?"

"No, I have not."

"Did you ever, as a member of the Communist Party, use the name James Blake and attend a convention of the Communist Party in a certain year?"

"No, no such thing. I have never used the name John Blake. I have never been a member of the Communist Party."

He is indicted by a grand jury, and upon the witness stand confronting him are men such as Johnson and Paul Crouch to say, "Yes, I knew him in New York in 1936 under the name of John Burke or John Blake," and the man is hung, is destroyed before his case can be presented.

I want to see if we can stop them now. I want to see if [2971] the United States District Court for the Northern District of California can do something about putting a terminus to it. And your Honor has to do nothing. All we ask is this: that these two be remanded to the Marshal to be turned over to the Grand Jury, and then we will come in, present our witnesses and our testimony before them, and let them stand their trial. Let us see then if they are proper and just men. Let us ask Mr. Donohue, "What is your notion about perjury that we uncover in a court? Is it your wish to dismiss the matter, as you pointed out before, by getting up and criticizing counsel who brings it to the attention of the Court? Is that the concept of the duty that you owe to the profession that you are engaged in and to the court that you are practicing before?"

Mr. McMillan: Are you representing us in an advisory capacity?

Mr. Donohue: I can only say in brief answer to that interrogation by Mr. Hallinan that I wouldn't hang a sick dog on the kind of evidence he has recited to your Honor upon which he has predicated his motion. In the conduct of this trial I must deal with legal proof, and I find Mr. Hallinan's arguments far from being legal proof.

The Court: The matter is submitted.

I might say that the interruption of the trial procedure by counsel for the defendants proved to this Court somewhat unusual; but apart from that, I see no reason why, upon the assertion of counsel at this stage of the proceeding, that we [2972] should interrupt the orderly procedure looking toward the eventualities and the final conclusion of these proceedings.

If, as Mr. Hallinan points out, Mr. Bridges was, as he contends, elsewhere than in New York City at the time in question, that appeals to me as a matter of defense. It seems to me that under the circumstances Mr. Bridges would offer himself on the stand and subject himself to cross-examination.

Mr. Hallinan: We offered to do that, your Honor.

The Court: Just a moment.

It seems to me, in addition, that all of the persons referred to in the letters, correspondence, minutes, and so forth, might well be offered as part of the defense. For this Court at this stage of the proceedings to intervene or interrupt the proceedings and remand people to custody, under the showing I think is unwarranted. We have had in the past in these courts charges made of the character made by Mr. Hallinan, perhaps not under the same conditions. The courts have awaited the eventuality of the trial, the final conclusion. The matters were then referred to the Grand Jury and appropriate action taken by the proper investigative bodies as well as by the Grand Jury.

I think it would be precipitous conduct on my part, non-judicial, and without any predicate so far as I know in these courts or in any other court, to now try, in effect, an internalism within the case itself. For all it appears, the Court, [2973] the Grand Jury and the investigative bodies would have to divorce themselves from the immediate purposes of this trial and engage in an internal trial looking toward the claimed or charged perjury of two witneses who have offered themselves for the Government. If we adopted that technique and procedure it might be that through an improvident use of that technique we would never reach the conclusion of any trial.

I therefore respectfully suggest to you, Mr. Hallinan, to proceed with the cross-examination of Mr. Crouch, to exhaust any cross-examination you may have of him. And if you may recall, I did not restrict you one iota in any cross-examination of that witness, nor in fact any other witnesses except in the early stages of the trial when, as I believe, your conduct was as I characterized it.

With respect to these two witnesses, Mr. Crouch and Mr. Johnson, I order them to hold themselves in readiness to the process of the Court, to be called either by the defense or by the prosecution as witnesses, and to hold themselves until the conclusion of this trial for any and all purposes. I shall not order them into custody and I need not make any other order.

With respect to having these witnesses in readiness, I instruct the United States Attorney, Mr. Donohue——

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: ——acting as special United States Attorney, [2974] to carry out that order.

Mr. Donohue: I shall do so, your Honor.

The Court: That is all I have to say at this juncture.

We will resume tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. Have Mr. Johnson available. In view of my assurance to the jury, we will have to recess at twelve o'clock.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor. I may say these witnesses are under subpoena by this Court. They have not been discharged and they shall not be.

The Court: In the case of Mr. Johnson, Mr. MacInnis has indicated that he wishes to conduct additional examination under the Eisler transcript. I realize Mr. Johnson has stated through you to the Court that he has a sick wife, or his wife is ill. He may of course respond to emergencies, but I instruct you to have him present at all times for the purpose of examination.

Mr. Donohue: I will do so, your Honor.

The Court: We will adjourn until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, December 21, 1949, at 10:00 a.m.)

Wednesday, December 21, 1949—10:00 a.m.

The Clerk: The case of the United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

PAUL CROUCH

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Over the recess have you endeavored to refresh your recollection on any of the names of the persons who were read off that list that was furnished the Un-American Activities Committee?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Are you familiar with the reports of the hearing of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of this country?

A. Only the—only a few of the reports, including those containing my testimony.

Q. Now, you were a member of the Communist Party in the year 1939, weren't you.

A. I was.

Q. Well, did you know that in the year 1939 on September 5 Earl Browder, secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, testified before the Un-American Activities Committee? [2976] Did you know that?

A. I probably knew it at the time. I don't recall the date or the circumstances.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I have that list, that document, the photostatic paper that has a Communist Party heading on it?

(Document handed to counsel.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, I want to show you at this time on the bottom of page 4281 a list of people comprising the National Committee of the Communist Party read out by Earl Browder under oath before the Un-American Activities Committee in September, 1939. Do you see that list?

A. I do.

Q. Do you detect any difference between it and the list which I furnished you and asked you to refresh your recollection by, which was furnished to the same organization, the same committee, on November 27, 1939?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. May I see the list and compare them?

(Document handed to witness.)

The two lists are identical, except that in reading this typewritten copy the name of—one name was read Albert Lamon, which it would appear to be by a glance at the photostatic copy, but it is printed as Albert Lannon in the printed copy of the book.

Q. In other words, the "m" looks like "n"? [2977] A. Yes.

Q. A mere typographical error.

A. Aside from that the names are the same names.

Q. So that the list that Mr. Browder furnished under oath to the Un-American Activties Committee in 1939 is identical with the list that you were questioned concerning yesterday, isn't that right, and which is marked now Defendants' Y for identification; is that right?

A. I only know this was the list shown me. I have no knowledge as to whether it is the list sent to the Un-American Activities. That is for the Court. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever hear of Browder being prosecuted for perjury after giving this testimony?

A. I have heard of Mr. Browder being prosecuted for perjury and convicted of perjury, but I don't think it was on this charge. I think it was on other charges he was convicted of perjury.

Q. Have you been indicted for perjury yet?

A. I have never been indicted for perjury.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I move that that question and answer be stricken. It is a highly improper question, and of course Mr. Hallinan knows it.

The Court: The motion is granted and the jury instructed to disregard that statement.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, yesterday you testified concerning [2978] one of the men whose names appear in this paper, Ray Hansboro, on page 2853, reading down the list, Ben Gold, Gil Green—

"Ray Hansboro, do you know him?"

A. I don't know——

"In my opinion, that name is a purely fictitious one, a pure fraud, intended to defraud the Government, and the character is nonexistent, not elected, does not exist.

Q. In other words, it is a fictitious name of some person; there is no such person in existence?

A. There may be a person by that name, but not a member of the Communist Party or elected."

You gave that testimony, didn't you?

A. I think so.

Q. Then on page 2866, you were asked, going down the list again, John Gates, Ben Gold, Gilbert Green, Rob Hall, Ray Hansbrough—did you know him?

"I did not.

Q. That is the same name that was mentioned in the other list, you remember, that you said you didn't remember? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And you thought it was a fictitious name, is that right? A. That is correct."

Now, would it change your opinion that that is a non-existent and a fictitious person if I called to your attention [2979] that in a hearing before the Un-American Activities Committee on July 21, 1947, Ray Hanbrough was identified by a witness named Steel as a chairman of the National Review Board of the Communist Party, and that in further testimony of the same witness he was identified as a member of the George Washington Carver school at 57—125th Street, New York?

Mr. Donohue: May the witness be shown the statement or document, if your Honor please?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes; this is the place here.

The Witness: May I see the list submitted previously?

Mr. Hallinan: What did you say?

The Witness: I said, may I see for comparison that typewritten list I was shown?

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Just answer the question whether that does change your testimony in that respect.

A. No, although the name appears to have a different spelling from any of the names on that list, still I have known no one even by—even by this spelling that I can recall.

Q. Well, now, might I see that again, please?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

There is another place where it is mentioned. Now, at the top of page 50 is the name and on the bottom of page 49 is the statement that he is a member of the faculty of that school.

A. I do not know him—not under that name. I may be well acquainted with him under another name, as a common practice, for example, Frank Waldron became Eugene Dennis, and the [2980] names are changed. Under that name I do not know him.

Q. I think you have talked about enough of your own volition.

Mr. McMillan: Well, that is a very——

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Would it change your statement if I told you that in 1938, August 1938, a hearing of the Committee on Un-American Activities identified Ray Hansborough as a former Chicago Negro preacher and that in the same session he was identified under oath as a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party in this country?

Mr. Donohue: May I again ask, if your Honor please, that the witness be shown the material.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes. One of them is on page 148 and the other on page 312.

A. The description would indicate that this might be another name for a Party leader I knew—another name of a Negro Party leader in Chicago I knew under the name of Newton—N-e-w-t-o-n. The name of Hansberry or Hansbrough means nothing to me.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Have you refreshed your recollection on the testimony of the other witness identifying him as a member of the Central Committee in 1938?

A. To the best of my recollection, there was a Negro named Newton from Chicago on the Central Committee in 1938, but I have no recollection of any Hanbrought or Hansberry or similar name. [2981]

Q. Well, that isn't what you said. Here is what you said:

> "Ray Hansboro, do you know him?
> A. In my opinion, that name is a purely fictitious one, a pure fraud intended to defraud the Government, and the character is non-existent, not elected, does not exist."

That was your testimony, wasn't it?

A. It was.

Q. Now, you were asked about another man:

> "How about David Davis?
> A. I have no knowledge of the existence of David Davis."

Now, would it change your opinion of that if I told you that in 1929 David Davis was Organizational Secretary in New York for the Young Communist League; and he was District Organizer for that association in California in 1931; that he was District Organizer in Philadelphia for that organziation in 1932, and became ultimately Business Agent of the United Electrical Workers, and in 1948 was on the National Committee of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please. Mr. Hallinan is not under oath. He is not a witness. He hasn't a right to tell this jury anything.

Mr. Hallinan: I am asking if it would change his opinion if I told him. That is not stating as a fact; the jury will understand that.

The Court: They may be confused. Are you reading from a [2982] particular document?

Mr. Hallinan: I have a note from which I am reading but the witness need not be confronted with a document to establish it.

The Court: It is a purely supposititious statement on your part?

Mr. Hallinan: At this time.

The Court. Overruled. [2982-A]

A. Detailed information, I recall there was a man who used another name, not—what was the name there, Dave, wasn't it?

Q. If you are going to say he used a different name, then you must know the name we say he used; is that right?

A. I do not know that name; that is a name I have never heard before.

Q. What name have you never heard?

A. I have never heard of—David Davis? I have heard of two or three Davises in the party. I have heard of Benjamin Davis and I have heard of a Herbert Davis.

Q. Now, let's go on to this one. You were asked, "Sam Donchin"? "I had no knowledge of his existence . . ." Did you so testify?

A. I did.

Q. But a few pages before, on page 2865, and down the line—Benjamin Davis, "I knew him." "David Davis?" "I didn't know him." Eugene Dennis?" "I knew him." "Bella Dodd?" "I knew of her." "Samuel Donchin?" "I knew of Donchin."

Now, which was true?

A. If there is a statement I knew of Donchin, the statement was in error. I thought I was answering another name. I did not know of Donchin.

Q. Now, you were also asked if you knew of a man named Frank Cestare, who also appears in this list. You asked how it was spelled, the name was spelled out, you said you never heard of [2983] him. Now, would it refresh your recollection to know that before the same Un-American Activities Committee under the date of—well, some time in nineteen—no, October 15, nineteen-forty—it was near October 1943—that his name was furnished, Frank Cestare; he was a founder of the American Youth for Democracy at a convention on October 15, 1943, and was national administrative secretary of the Young Communist League and of the Young Communist Weekly Review?

Mr. Hallinan: It is marked with the paper also.

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

A. I have never heard of Frank Cestare, although this—both this date and quotations were published after I had left the Communist Party. But I never heard of him.

Q. Now, there were a certain number of other people whose names were mentioned on the document that you were shown; that is, Defendant's exhibit for identification Y. And you testified that you knew of them. There was George Dimitroff, M. Ercoli, D. Z. Mamilky.

A. Manuilsky, pardon me.

Q. Beg your pardon? A. Manuilsky.

Q. Manuilsky, all right. Now, they were members of the secretariat furnished by, and the executive committee of the Communist International elected at the Seventh World Congress of 1935, according to the information furnished the Congressional [2984] Committee by Mr. Browder. That is your understanding of that?

A. Mr. Browder was present at that Congress of the International in Moscow. I was not there, and I am not in a position to dispute his testimony or confirm it.

Q. Well, in your connection with the Communist Party and the high offices you occupied, were you acquainted with the names of persons in Russia whom you testify exerted some force over the Communist Party here? A. Very well.

Q. Did you ever in that connection hear the name of I. S. Turgeneff?

A. Ivan Turgeneff was a very well known novelist, author of Fathers and Sons, and other works; has been dead for many, many years, long before the Russian Revolution.

Q. You never heard of similar names or a similar name in connection with this organization, is that right?

A. I have not heard of any modern Russian Communist leader using the nom de plume of Ivan Turgeneff or anyone having actually that name, arising to prominence in the Soviet Union. It is possible; I have no knowledge of it.

Q. Have you been in any institution for nervous or mental disorders?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, I object, if your Honor pleases. That is a wholly improper question. [2985]

Mr. Hallinan: It is entirely proper to find out this witness' mental background.

Mr. Donohue: There is a rule of law, if Your Honor pleases, that no witness may be asked any question the answer to which may tend to degrade him. That is the only purpose for which this shot in the dark could be asked of this witness by Mr. Hallinan. After all, a witness is entitled to some consideration.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Very well.

Q. Now, going back to the matter of the section of the CIO Council for the Annual Convention in 1941, we were finishing the statement by Mr. Bridges, and I want to continue where we left off.

"When we expressed our determination to see that the energy of labor is properly geared to provide the maximum output of materials and equipment to supply those nations now fighting Hitler, and to efficiently build our own national defenses, we do not speak of great production as the dollar-a-year corporation men in Washington speak of it.

"We want no longer work weeks, which Mr. Knudsen believes is necessary. We want none of the anti-labor and, in many cases, Fascist legislation aimed at establishing compulsory arbitration and concentration camps, discriminating [2986] against foreign born people or minority political groups. Both of the latter happen to be doing a good job of making Hitler squirm at the moment. We want the dollar-a-year big business hirelings that have sabotaged national defense and greater industrial productivity replaced by conscientious Americans and sent back to their corporation offices. Let them get their profits by legally competing with other firms instead of illegally highjacking them from the Government through behind-the-door political deals, while at the same time pretending they are serving their country for a dollar a year.

"We insist that the NLRB, the National Mediation Board, and such governmental agencies function in the way they were intended to function—not as instruments of the corporations, but to give labor a fair deal and to protect its right to organize and bargain collectively.

"The juggling of priorities and the resulting unemployment, because of the attempts of some sections of big business to grab off the juiciest portions of defense contracts, must be exposed and stopped.

"The national president of the CIO, Philip Murray, has proposed a plan to correct many of these evils. The workers who have pledged themselves to put forward their best efforts in the fight against Fascism are entitled to know that their interests and security will be protected [2987] by their own representatives assuming their proper place in the government, not only as a part of the actual production end, but as part of the planning and administrative structure. Certainly, labor representatives can not help but do better than some of the so-called experts that have brought about chaos and confusion and created a situation that is a national scandal.

"We need assurance that there will be a cessation of the activities of the FBI as an anti-labor spy agency, their framing of evidence and collecting of stool pigeons in order to bring about a Fascist decision such as that just rendered by Judge Charles Sears.

"Our interest is not what we will get for ourselves in this fight. There are no enormous profits for the workers in defeating Hitler. The big majority of the common people not only make the weapons, but they will have to fly, drive or shoulder them, and in many cases give their lives; but they want to be sure that we know where the enemy is and to keep him in front instead of having him use a knife at our back.

"We insist that any individual, any group or any agency that interferes with or retards in any way our determination to give our best efforts, loyalty and support behind the all-out aid program of the President of the United States and the greater part of the CIO, [2988] is aiding Hitler and supporting the appeasers.

"There is no middle ground in this fight—you either are or you are not—and labor can not be called upon and expected to apply itself to the task of continuous maximum production while it is harried by anti-labor and Fascist minded agencies or individuals or selfish corporation representatives.

"I have attempted to put the essence of my last few remarks in the form of a resolution, which I have asked the ILWU delegation to this convention to present for the consideration of the assembled delegates. I will read the resolution, and I urge that you give it your unanimous and wholehearted support, both in the convention and later in their various unions > and councils and that you work in every way to put into action the policy outlined in the resolution."

Then there followed——

Mr. Donohue: Excuse me a moment, Mr. Hallinan. If Your Honor pleases, for nearly an hour now we have listened to the reading of this speech by Mr. Bridges. I had hoped at the outset that it would be of normal content and length. I see no reason why this speech should be read before the Court and jury. If there are some questions Mr. Hallinan wishes to ask of the witness with respect to this letter or its contents, I think the speech should be exhibited to the witness and he [2989] should be permitted to read it to himself, and then answer any question about it. Of course, the usual method of asking a question about a written document is to submit it to the other side for consideration before any question is asked at all.

Mr. Hallinan: It is in there, in the document they furnished.

Mr. Donohue: Perhaps before Mr. Hallinan finishes, he may exhibit it to us. I certainly see no reason why it should be read to the jury.

Mr. Hallinan: It is right in the document, and if counsel wants, I am prepared to go right into that rule.

Mr. Donohue: It is not our document; we introduced a resolution, if Your Honor pleases, and the document is not in evidence.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Well, you can follow this along as I am reading, and we will even furnish the witness with an extra copy. But if they question what I think Your Honor has already in mind, that where a part of a conversation, proceeding or document is introduced, the remainder of the conversation, document or proceeding may be introduced; now I have here the latest edition of Wigmore on Evidence, very complete, and authentic. This is Volume 7 of the Third Edition. In discussing this matter of the introduction of part of a statement, conversation or discussion, the author, citing numerous authorities, states the law to be that where part of a document is introduced, [2990] the rule of entirety of parts requires that the balance be put in, if the other side desires.

Now, citing from Section 2094:

> "Entirety of parts is equally essential to the correct understanding of an utterance. A word is interpretable in the light of the use of the same word in another part. A clause is modified by a prior or subsequent clause. One sentence qualifies another, and one paragraph may form only a part of a whole exposition. We must compare the whole, not because we desire the remainder for its own sake, but because without it we can not be sure that we have the true sense and effect of the first part. Entirety of parts is thus as essential as verbal precision, for the greatest possibilities of error lie in > trusting to a fragment of an utterance without knowing what the remainder was.

> "But what is the whole of an utterance? No doubt this principle of entirety is flexible in its application. A simple thought requires but a simple utterance. A complex thought, a complicated utterance. When, therefore, we obey the canon that the whole of the utterance must be considered, the scope of our survey may be very variable, so far as concerns the mere number of words, sentences or paragraphs. The whole that is to be considered is obviously not the whole of a phrase or [2991] paragraph, any more than it is the whole of the printer's line or page; but the whole of the thought.

That is, such a quantity of utterance as the utterer has indicated to be distinct and entire in itself, for the purpose of representing a distinct thought. If this dividing line can be ascertained, there is no need for looking beyond it. A cry for help is entire in a single exclamation. A whole railroad passage contract is entire upon a small piece of pasteboard. But a treatise in defense of usury will require a perusal of several chapters to discover the entire thesis. Thus the possibilities are infinite and the boundaries indefinite in this search for entirety of utterance. It will be difficult for the law in applying of principle to employ any fixed test. Yet the law can not be expected to be satisfied practically with the indefiniteness which is in theory the conception of entirety involves; and therefore the application of it is full of difficulties.

"The general principle, then, which may be termed the principle of completeness, that the whole of a verbal utterance must be taken together, is accepted in the law of evidence. For the law in this respect does no more than recognize the dictates of good sense and common experience, therefore in the application of the important qualifications and exceptions. But the recognition of the [2992] principle and the reason for it is unquestionable. It appears clearly conceded and consciously applied as early as the 1600's, and no doubt was implicitly understood long before that."

Then a great number of cases, some of them very old, illustrating some by reference to Thomas Erskine, and other famous lawyers. The employment or the use of an entire thesis, statement, conversation, speech where part, even a small part, was introduced. Now, the two branches of the rule:

> "Compulsory and optional completeness, precision and entirety. The application of the general principle takes first of all two distinct aspects."

The Court: I think, Mr. Hallinan, without interrupting you, I am mindful of the rule that you advance. We started on the basis of a premise that the witness on the stand prepared or caused to be prepared certain parts or portions of the resolution. That was the original basis.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, but that is not all.

The Court: That is true. And thereafter it appeared that Mr. Bridges made a speech at the convention or at the meeting in Oakland, wherein the resolution was read; and in addition, he made additional comment. Now, I assume that at some stage of your examination you are going to present the witness on the stand with the question as to whether there is any part of the resolution which he prepared or caused to be [2993] prepared, and what he did, in the underlying motivation of the cause.

Mr. Hallinan: And parts of the speech.

The Court: And comparative analysis between the document and the resolution.

Mr. Hallinan: Exactly.

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, may I interrupt for just a moment?

The Court: I assume you have about reached the end of this speech?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: No, he hasn't come anywhere near it, if Your Honor pleases.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I have, because I have—one, two, three and a half pages left.

Mr. Donohue: The purpose of Mr. Hallinan, if Your Honor pleases, in reading before this jury a self-serving declaration in the form of a speech made by Mr. Bridges is not for the purpose of attempting to examine or contradict this witness with respect to any statement he has made concerning the resolutions which were a part of that speech. If so, I would not object. But his purpose, as will develop, if he is permitted to read this entire self-serving declaration by the defendant Bridges, is to introduce before this jury in still [2994] another way matters which have already been ruled by Your Honor are not pertinent to the issue.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, this Wigmore holds also that where——

The Court: Mr. Donohue, in part I can not agree with you. This witness has testified under cross-examination, brought out by Mr. Hallinan, that the defendant Bridges changed his complete mode of thinking in line with the asserted dictates——

Mr. Donohue: Correct, Your Honor.

The Court: ——of party leaders.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, Your Honor. And that he prepared these resolutions. He did not prepare the speech.

The Court: All right. Now, in view of that statement made by the witness, that Mr. Bridges changed his whole line of policy upon the asserted dictates of the leaders in Moscow, I think that the full import of that particular conference should be before the Court. With respect to the speech itself, I may instruct the jury as to the proper observation to be made of the speech.

Mr. Donohue: Is this a question, if Your Honor pleases, this speech?

The Court: I assume he is coming to a question.

Mr. Hallinan: Certainly. And furthermore,

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Your Honor, even if I weren't, Wigmore holds:

> "They were entitled on demand to a reading of the [2995] remaining portions thereof, immediately, and before the intervention of other evidence."

The Court: Just a moment. I enjoy those general statements at times, but I think we had better get along with it.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, as I suggested at the start, I felt sure that Your Honor had the same idea, that you knew what we had in mind.

> "I have mentioned the recent decision of Judge Charles Sears. I would like to add this much: A different decision from such an individual was not to be expected. He was selected to do a job. He carried out his orders faithfully. His superiors had committed themselves. Their honor was at stake and they saw to it that they were upheld. The decision is outrageous, and the conclusions on which it is based are the conclusions of a person many years removed and unacquainted with the everyday struggles of the people to meet such problems as how to pay the rent, how to buy food, or how to provide for a family."

Mr. McMillan: May it please Your Honor, is this in any way relevant to that resolution or any question that can be directed to this witness on cross-examination that has any relevancy to this resolution?

Mr. Hallinan: It is entirely on the portions of the resolution, Your Honor, anti-Labor activities of the Federal [2996] Bureau of Investigation, the removal of people from office who were concerned with trying to frame workers, and things of that kind, that were set out in it.

Mr. McMillan: I submit our objection to that, may it please your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: In other words, they want to get in the parts that they think will help them and omit the parts that will explain or interpret the meaning or the significance of this, how much was this man's statement and how much was Mr. Bridges'.

The Court: As I said, Mr. McMillan, in view of the answer brought out by Mr. Hallinan on cross-examination that this witness testified that Mr. Bridges had changed his thinking on the dictates of the leaders of the Communist Party, and particularly Moscow, that I believe the full import might be given. You may argue——

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, it doesn't change, obviously, from what he has already stated, Mr. Bridges that years before that time with reference to Judge Sears' decisions in other matters, it has nothing to do with his change of thinking at all. This is involving past acts and past conduct of others.

Mr. Hallinan: It is an old device to try to defraud a person by putting in a portion of what he has said and then trying to prevent him from showing the rest.

Mr. McMillan: We didn't put in any portion——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: Mr. McMillan, I of course cannot anticipate the text of the balance of Mr. Bridges' remarks at the convention.

Mr. McMillan: Isn't it apparent now what is coming? [2997]

Mr. Hallinan: No, because it goes in to President Murray and the Murray plan of the CIO. It relates to only this:

> "If one were to apply the reasoning that formed the basis of Judge Sears' decision to our trade unions, every union would become divided and weakened because of internal factional struggles. Can anyone think of anything more remarkable or more anti-labor than the insistence of the judge that if a union official does not want to be found guilty of Communist Party affiliation,"——

Mr. McMillan: Might I interrupt and respectfully request your Honor, before any more of this is read, that your Honor yourself read this.

The Court: No one has suggested I read it. I am like the jury here; I am listening. If someone would suggest that I read it, I might read it.

Mr. McMillan: I would very respectfully suggest that your Honor read this.

The Court: I should be glad to read it.

Mr. McMillan: Before any more is read.

The Court: I might take it up at the recess. If you have any other matters to pursue.

Mr. Hallinan: I want to pursue this matter along.

The Court: What is this? Some attack made upon a judge, or what is it?

Mr. Hallinan: No, it only goes, your Honor, to a [2998] discussion of a portion of that resolution which discusses the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the removal from positions of authority of individuals with Fascist leanings which they have in important posts of government, and Mr. Bridges enlarges upon those two matters. Here they put in, and of course they will have the same kind of argument then that here Mr. Bridges, without any reason or without any background for it, or without any facts upon which to support it, but to discredit his testimony, has attacked the FBI and the officers of the Federal Government, particularly of course Judge Sears being referred to, and they will try to prevent us from showing what he said at that convention in enlargement and explanation of those two paragraphs. Now, that is the purpose.

It must be remembered, your Honor, that they have put it in. They had the whole document here and they read it, and they had no right—if they wanted to run the risk of this being all read to the jury, then they can put it in. They were under no obligation to do so. The fact that they have made a bad deal upon this does not save them from having the rest of it now read in. They thought that they could put in this resolution and have this man say that he prepared it and submitted it to Mr. Bridges at the dictates of the Communist Party, and then they could avoid Mr. Bridges' explanation as part of the identical speech in which he [2999] introduced that resolution as to what he meant and what was understood by paragraphs 2 and 3 in it. That cannot be done. It cannot be done in law and it should not be attempted to be done in law or in morality.

The Court: What particular objection do you have, Mr. McMillan, to the following features of that?

Mr. McMillan: I object for this reason: that it is in no wise relevant to any question that could be put to this witness with reference to the resolution. It goes back and considers a time long before these matters under consideration. We have heard here now that he inveighing against the past conduct of the FBI and others and is inveighing against a decision and stating the nature of the decision. And if you can go ahead and put this in, there is no reason on earth, on the same theory, that you cannot take all the past speeches that Mr. Bridges has made everywhere in order to show what his state of mind was and when he changed, if he did change. Now, by doing that you will be rehearsing the entire Bridges proceedings.

Mr. Hallinan: Just to show how little counsel is prepared in this matter and how little he knows about it, the decision of Judge Sears was still pending at the time that this speech was delivered. Judge Sears had made a decision that was still pending, which resulted finally in the Supreme Court decision of 1945. He says things that were past. The matter [3000] was still pending.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. McMillan: It is obvious now, may it please your Honor, that if he is relating——

Mr. Hallinan: Further, I dare say a great many speeches made by Mr. Bridges are going to get in the record. If they are going to put in portions of them, we will certainly put in the rest of them. We are not going to let them mislead the jury as to what Mr. Bridges meant here in regard to some question, by a statement which is supposed to be something directed by the Communist Party. We say that that resolution was concerning and involving Mr. Bridges' own personal aims, his existence, his right to remain in the country, all the things involving him.

To subtract it from the context is like the statement of Erskine that you can get anything out of the Bible, even the statement that there is no God, by omitting the first part of the sentence, "Only a fool saith in his heart there is no God."

We are entitled to show what was said by Mr. Bridges.

Under Wigmore, your Honor, the statement may have no relevancy, the statement may not convey anything, still the person against whom the document is offered has the right to put it all in, because it may make it plain, or a jury may conceive that it explains it or amplifies or enlarges the statement that was put in. [3001]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. McMillan: May it please your Honor, over and above Mr. Wigmore in his comment in his book on evidence, there is a fundamental matter with reference to the production of evidence. It is always in the sound discretion of the Court to curtail cross-examination when it takes too far a range. Now, I think counsel has finally signaled to your Honor just what he intends to do, and it is absolutely in support of the objection that I have made. Are we to have by this method a complete recitation in speeches and otherwise of the very thing that your Honor has already ruled is not material to this cause of action and by this dexterous method bring it to the attention of the jury and the Court in the face of the ruling which your Honor has made?

I respectfully suggest again, in order that your Honor may see the force of my objection, that your Honor read this before any more of it is read to the jury.

The Court: May I see it, Mr. Hallinan?

Mr. Hallinan: I beg your pardon. Do you want to see the document?

The Court: The part——

Mr. Hallinan: It starts where I have the pencil mark on page 42 and the entire speech ends in the middle of page 45.

The Court: We will take the recess, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. The same admonition to you not to discuss the case under any conditions or form or express an opinion until it is submitted to you. You may retire.

(Recess.) [3002]

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, with regard to one question you asked about the man designated as Judge Sears, he was not a judge. I understand he had been a judge of an inferior court at one time. But he was a presiding inspector——

The Court: Well, I am prepared to rule, Mr. Hallinan. I have read the subject matter.

Mr. Hallinan: All right.

The Court: And I feel, Mr. McMillan and Mr. Donohue, that although the subject matter of the succeeding paragraphs may be self-serving and to that extent not altogether immediately relevant to the inquiry to which this witness is to be subjected, nevertheless I feel it is part and parcel of a general context and should be presented. You may proceed.

Mr. McMillan: Well, Your Honor, I had another ground beside irrelevancy.

The Court: What was the other ground?

Mr. McMillan: I had this ground, as sent down by the Supreme Court in one of the leading decisions on cross-examination. I will read from it:

> "The extent of the cross-examination with respect to an appropriate subject of inquiry is within the sound discretion of the trial court. It may exercise a reasonable judgment of determining with the subject is exhausted."

My point is this, Your Honor, that if you now permit counsel to have the widest extent on cross-examination, that is permissible, [3003] but I don't take it that that means unlimited extent.

The Court: I certainly did not intend to convey the impression to counsel on either side, that the scope would be an unbridled scope; nor that the exercise of discretion would be anything but that as I meet the impact of the evidence as it unfolds. But as I said before, Mr. McMillan, this witness has made, on cross-examination, that specific charge, that he introduced the resolution apparently for that specific purpose, showing an alleged domination of the defendant Bridges. And under the circumstances I feel that the full text of the remarks, conversation or speech might be set forth. I may hereafter instruct the jury with respect to that portion thereof, that it is self-serving. Certainly with matters of evidence, we can't piecemeal the situation, to the extent of segmenting the same. I think the full text may be disclosed. I may hereafter discuss it with the jury.

Mr. McMillan: Well, my point was this, that this is just relatively a small portion which counsel may seek later on, as he signaled to the Court, to introduce. In short, supposing Mr. Bridges had written a book, we will say, in three volumes reviewing his entire career and his experiences and all cases in which he was concerned; would it not, on principle, in keeping with what counsel said, be admissible?

The Court: I might say in response to you, Mr.

McMillan, that if this witness claimed that he wrote two chapters, it [3004] might be the subject matter of a very pertinent investigation. You may proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes. And often a whole book is gotten in on one paragraph being introduced.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Hallinan: In fact, we trembled on the verge of that abyss, Your Honor, ourselves on one thing. I want to say that I don't know if the jury understood that the Judge Sears whose name is introduced here was presiding inspector, appointed by the Attorney General, and was not a judge of any court at the time this discussion took place.

Mr. McMillan: Well, now, that is additional comment, Your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, is there any question about it?

The Court: Mr. McMillan, there could be no possible harm in that comment, as I see it.

Mr. McMillan: No, I think not, may it please your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan (Continuing):

> "If one were to apply the reasoning that formed the basis of Judge Sears' decision to our trade unions, every union would become divided and weakened because of internal factional struggles. Can anyone think of anything more remarkable or more anti-labor than the insistance of the judge that if a union official does not want to be found guilty of Communist

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> Party affiliation, [3005] he must take it upon himself, our union constitutions and national policies and even the Bill of Rights of the United States to the contrary, to weed out and discriminate against those members of our unions who choose to be Communists?
> "What could be more vicious than Judge Sears' ruling that because the longshoremen in 1934 accepted the proffered aid of a bona fide union that was at that time recognized by the United States Government, dealt with by the United States Government, that participated as a second party in an election conducted by the United States Government and a special arbitration board appointed by the President, and that because I as an officer of my union followed the instructions of the membership in accepting this aid in order to win the strike, that such is proof of Communist Party affiliation and membership?

I would like to point out to the delegates that they might consider the many crimes that they would be accused and found guilty of by such a judge, who could see no reason why the testimony of an A. F. of L. official against the CIO should be biased or in any way untrue. I shudder to think how many of you would find your way into jails or be deported or even executed if one fraction of what the A. F. of L. officials have testified to about you was ever believed by a person having [3006] authority to decide such punishment.

"The judge saw nothing wrong in labor spying. He saw nothing wrong in the fact that one of the witnesses was advocating membership in the Nazi Bund, inasmuch as he ruled such was immaterial.

"The judge could not bring himself to believe that the FBI could do anything wrong or would attempt to frame evidence. In this connection he said, 'If their testimony is not true, there has been a dastardly attempt to deceive me as the presiding inspector by false testimony for there is no chance of a mistake, and if I were to believe O'Neil was framed or his declarations falsified, I would look with suspicion on the entire case presented by the Government. No such idea finds warrant in the testimony as I have heard it and as I have reviewed it.'

"Again, in reference to the FBI agent's testimony on the witness stand, he said, 'They denied explicitly the alleged intimidation,' 'They were in my opinion thoroughly credible witnesses. I believe them implicitly.'

"Ask the many union men that have been arrested and intimidated and jailed by FBI agents for union and strike activities. Ask any union man who has had any dealings with the FBI as to whether they are the angels and souls of honesty that the judge pictures them to be!

"I know, and the judge admits in his decision, that [3007] they violated the law by wiretapping.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

I also heard them discussing using the equipment at a union meeting to be held in another part of the hotel when they recently tapped my hotel room in a New York City hotel. I made tests to prove that the information that they got on union matters through tapping my telephone was communicated to employers for strikebreaking purposes. It is noticeable that our request to prove this was denied by the judge, and the FBI has always denied that they engaged in illegal wiretapping or labor espionage.

"At prior conventions I have warned of the activities of the FBI in acting as an anti-labor agency in many respects. I wish to call your attention to it again with this addition this time—that now we can prove it.

"President Murray, speaking for the National CIO, has made his position clear as to how he regards the Sears' decision and his promise that the fight goes on. I wish to point out to everyone that this decision, in its scope and intent, is a dangerous threat to our right to organize, to formulate our own policies, to choose our own members and our own officers. I urge you all to see that this fight does go on, to recognize this decision for what it is—a weapon that is of untold value to all who seek to undermine our organizations.

"We approach the National CIO convention. In the [3008] past year, our national organization, its officers and executive council have been ever vigilant in guarding the interests of the millions of members of the CIO.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

"On the many occasions when I have had to call on the president of the CIO, Philip Murray, and other of its national officers on behalf of California unions, they have been ever ready with their aid and advice. In many cases when I sought the help of John L. Lewis, he likewise responded.

"Important decisions and policies will be formulated at the National CIO convention. There has never been an opportunity or a time like the present for labor to unite on a common platform against a common foe.

"I sincerely hope that this convention will aim at and adopt a program to which each and every delegate can wholeheartedly support.

"Let that part of the CIO that represents the great and progressive State of California make known to the national convention that we have united as a single unit to expand and build the CIO in every way, and are determined to contribute every bit of energy and effort possible for national defense and full support behind the program of all-out aid for the armies of Great Britain, Russia and China and every nation who is fighting the fight for freedom and democracy against Hitler and his Fascist allies." [3009]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, as I understand it, the only part of that speech that your genius contrived and dictated was the resolution that was read here, is that correct?

A. Your Honor,——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Will you kindly answer the question Yes or No.

Mr. Donohue: It is pretty hard when you put in there the word "genius."

Mr. Hallinan: All right; we will leave "genius" out. Withdraw the question.

The Witness: Your Honor,——

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): The only part of the speech which you contributed was the resolution, is that right?

A. This cannot be answered Yes or No, your Honor. The question——

Mr. Hallinan: I withdraw the question again.

Q. Now, you tell us that you conveyed to Harry Bridges some order that he should deliver or he should propose this resolution on the floor of that convention, don't you?

A. You mean I had conveyed to him?

Q. Yes, by your wife as the courier. Was she being paid by the Communist Party, too, then?

A. No. I was on the payroll of the Communist Party, but my wife was not on. She was an unpaid county official of the Communist Party, head of the National Minorities Commission of the Party of Alameda County at that time. [3010]

Q. Have you found out how much they are paying you for your services in this case?

A. I have been paid $9 per day.

Q. You have been paid?

A. Partly; not up to date.

Q. And how much are you promised?

A. I am promised nothing. I have answered that question before, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. Hallinan: We are going to put Mr. Boyd and Mr. Barber on the stand to find out about the matter, so we won't concern ourselves with that.

Mr. McMillan: Now, that is an observation, a gratuitous one, if your Honor please. It is not a question.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, it saves the witness worrying his mind about trying to figure it out——

Mr. McMillan: You are assuming the witness is worrying about something. He hasn't indicated it.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Your wife, acting as courier, having conveyed this message to Mr. Bridges, you state that that was in response to some determination that Mr. Bridges must present this resolution on the floor of the convention or be removed from the Communist Party, is that right? You can answer that Yes or No.

A. That is correct.

Q. What? [3011]

A. That is essentially correct, although there is a shading and complex meaning in the language. I would like to answer it, but it is essentially correct aside from the complex innuendoes and inflections there. The general meaning is essentially correct.

Q. And at that time, you want this jury to believe that so trifling a matter as putting that resolution out was insisted upon by the Communist Party against Mr. Bridges when Judge Sears had already made a ruling that he should be deported from the United States for Communist affiliations? You tell us that, do you?

Mr. McMillan: We object to that question because he is invading once again the province of the Court and jury, "such a trifling matter as this."

The Court: Overruled. You understand the question?

A. I understand the question. If I may be permitted to answer it fully, I will be glad to.

Mr. Hallinan: Go ahead.

A. This resolution was of definite major historic importance, considered with the greatest seriousness by the District Bureau of the Communist Party. Its results were far-reaching from the viewpoint of the Party, because they no longer had to worry about the need of weaving a web around Mr. Bridges to prevent him—they, the Communist Party, had done considerable work, considerable organization, not only to expel Mr. Bridges [3012] from the Communist Party, but they had taken organizational steps, had carried out working out the details for furthermore removing Mr. Bridges from the positions he held in the CIO. The Communist Party at that time dominated the CIO through control of its higher officials and through control of every major CIO council in the State of California, and they had the force to do it with and they would have done it, although they would have considered it, and they discussed it from this point, if it were necessary to expel Bridges, a major report. They also had considered it from the viewpoint that a public expulsion would hardly be wise. I made the motion myself on the 9th of July that if it became necessary to expel Harry Bridges from the Communist Party that this motion should not appear in public, because the workers would say the Communist Party is cooperating with the Government and has put Bridges on the spot. And all the other members immediately agreed with me that if it became necessary to expel Bridges from the Party, that this would be done through a statement denouncing him, condemning him as an enemy of labor, but not mentioning the fact that he had been a member of the Communist Party. This was agreed to. In fact, as soon as I made my motion Schneidermann said, "We are not fools; we are certainly not"——.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. He said "We are not", what?

A. Schneidermann said, "We are not fools."

Q. Did anybody agree with him? [3013]

A. I did.

Q. Were you ever confined in an insane asylum?

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, must this witness be treated——

The Witness: May I say no, before I protest against the insulting questions to which I am being subjected.

Mr. Donohue: Is there any action which your Honor can take which will keep him within the bounds of decency in the trial of this case?

Mr. Hallinan: I object to that statement by counsel, and I assign it as misconduct and move for a mistrial.

In the recess I took occasion to inquire into the law on this thing, and the question that I addressed to the witness as to whether he had been treated for any mental or nervous affliction and the question as to whether he had ever been confined in an insane asylum are proper questions as bearing upon the credibility of the witness.

The Court: The witness has answered the question.

Mr. Hallinan: I have made a very large study of insanity and psychiatry, to the extent that I have testified as an expert in the Superior Court in San Francisco on that subject. I claim to be able to recognize an insane person when I see him. Now, the questions that I ask are proper ones, and I have the right to pursue that to whatever degree I may choose.

The Court: The witness has answered the question. [3014]

Mr. Hallinan: What I am objecting to and what I am protesting against is this use of the word "decency." I don't know precisely what it means. Counsel who bring in witnesses like Crouch and Manning Johnson, put them on the stand, and continue them on under examination after the disclosures of yesterday probably have a different designation of that term from what the rest of us would have. But I protest against the special prosecutor getting up here, and in lieu of legal objections making statements of that kind, as a constant and insistent practice. He has done it, and Mr. McMillan has been doing it here. He stands up and uses some word that has no place in a legal objection.

Mr. Donohue: I arise to make a legal objection, if your Honor please, to this Mr. Hallinan qualifying himself gratuitously as an expert in the field of psychiatry. I haven't seen any evidence that he is an expert in any field.

Mr. McMillan: I think it is very improper, may it please your Honor, for counsel to stand up in court and undertake to qualify himself as an expert along those lines, and then state to your Honor and this jury, as a foundation for asking a question of that kind or giving a reason for having asked it that he possesses those qualifications. That is very improper, and I call your Honor's attention to this very case that I referred to, Alberts v. United States.

The Court: I am familiar with it. [3015]

Mr. McMillan: In which the court has held it is always the duty of the Court to protect the witness against any humiliating, degrading conduct. And obviously that question and the statement which he made about being an expert along those lines was intended insolently to degrade and humiliate this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't think that is possible.

The Court: The motion for a mistrial is denied. The jury is admonished and instructed to disregard the comments of all counsel at this stage of the proceeding. All right, proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, now, you knew, did you, at the time that you were having this discussion that a trial had been held in which Harry Bridges had been charged with being a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

Mr. Hallinan: It goes to the probability that any such order was given to him. In other words, here is a man under——

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): You did know that, did you? A. Rephrase the question, please.

Mr. Hallinan: Would you please read it.

(Question read.)

A. I did not know that Mr. Harry Bridges had ever been tried [3016] in his life.

Q. You didn't know that a deportation proceeding had been just concluded within that year, within the year 1941, before presiding inspector Sears upon a warrant issued for the deportation of Harry Bridges upon the ground that he was a member of or affiliated with the Communist Party? A. I did not know there was any connection between an administrative procedure of government and a trial.

Q. And had this subject of these pending proceedings against Mr. Bridges been discussed at that conference in which Mr. Schneidermann for one asserted that he was not a fool?

A. Yes. The District Bureau had received frequent reports on that proceedings and had given advice as to the policies that Mr. Bridges and his attorneys should follow in that proceedings.

Q. And this council decided then that even if Mr. Bridges——Withdraw that.

You knew, too, that in the proceedings of 1941, tried before the CIO convention, Mr. Bridges had stated unequivocally under oath that he was not and never had been a member of the Communist Party? You knew that, didn't you?

A. I knew many members had stated under oath things that weren't true.

Mr. Hallinan: I ask that be stricken.

The Court: Motion granted. [3017]

Mr. Hallinan: Answer Yes or No.

The Witness: Please restate the question. Please read the question.

(Question read.)

A. I do not recall now whether I had any knowledge as to whether Mr. Bridges had testified under oath or not.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): And that subject was not discussed at the meeting at which Mr. Schneiderman asserted that he for one was not a fool?

A. Not at that meeting.

Q. So when you were registering under a fictitious name in Alameda County and having your wife scoot over with messages to the fraction or denominator or quotient or whatever mathematical terms you employed, you didn't know then that that very year a trial had been held looking toward Mr. Bridges' deportation, is that right?

A. I did not know that there was a trial; I knew there was some administrative proceedings. I did not know Mr. Bridges had ever been indicted.

Q. You did not know at that time that in this administrative proceeding Mr. Bridges had testified under oath that he was not and never had been a member of the Communist Party, is that right?

A. I do not recall the full details at this time years later. I probably knew the details—I certainly knew the [3018] details at that time, but—but now years later I cannot recall, because they were changing from day to day, and I cannot remember distinctly all of those administrative details of many years ago.

Q. Now, do you remember, or did you know at that time, rather, that Mr. Bridges had presented evidence before presiding inspector Sears that the FBI had been tapping his telephone wires for a long period of time preceding that?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please. It certainly is not relevant to the cross-examination of this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Let's find out if he knows.

Mr. Donohue: Suppose he did know?

Mr. Hallinan: This is of great importance,—this figure that they are protecting and moving under cover, and so forth. Let us find out now whether they knew of the surveillance he was under and whether or not secrets were being kept, and whether they wanted Bridges to be protected or whether they were pushing him out into a position where he would expose himself as one of them.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: What is the question?

(Question read.)

A. I did not know then and I do not know today that the FBI has tapped Mr. Bridges' wires, and I did not know that he had [3019] any evidence or pretended evidence to that effect.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you stayed at the meeting at which Mr. Bridges read off this resolution for a part of the time after he finished it, isn't that right?

A. Not more than a very few minutes, at the most, after he finished. He had hardly finished before I turned around and walked out. I was only interested in the reading of the resolution itself.

Q. You weren't a bit interested in the disclosure by Mr. Bridges of the tapping of his wires by the FBI, is that right?

A. As a Communist I knew that Mr. Bridges was engaged in a lot of propaganda, which I didn't need to bother about the details of it.

Q. You say you had no evidence or no belief that there actually had been wire-tapping by the FBI in Mr. Bridges' case, is that right?

A. The only time, as I can now recall, was reading an allegation in the Communist Party press about the—around the 1st of September, in which Mr. Bridges had alleged that his telephone wire had been tapped, but——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. That is all you heard?

A. That is all I heard.

Q. But you don't believe it had been tapped, do you?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. His belief or disbelief on that subject is certainly not relevant here. [3020]

The Court: Overruled.

A. I am not qualified—I have no opinion. I am not qualified to express an opinion, and I have no opinion whatever on that subject.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Let me ask you this: Had you found out that Judge Sears, after the original hearing and after evidence of the wire-tapping in New York, had made a finding of fact that the FBI had been illegally tapping Mr. Bridges' telephone wires?

Mr. Donohue: I once more object, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you hear, in the midst of these discussions of people, at least one of whom was not a fool—I forget his name—any discussion that Judge Sears had made a positive finding of fact that the FBI had been illegally tapping Harry Bridges' telephone wires?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: Did your Honor sustain that objection?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now it is your story here——

Mr. McMillan: No, it is his testimony, may it please your Honor, not his story. [3021]

Q. It is your story here, is it, then, that despite these efforts to have Mr. Bridges deported the Communist Party was trying to push him out into a position where he would have to make a public assertion and show of compliance with their orders? Is that right?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor pleases. I object to it on the basis of Mr. Hallinan's characterization of the witness' testimony as his "story."

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Your Honor, might we—We have some other material relating to this witness that we haven't yet completely compiled and as it is ten minutes to 12:00 now, might we have the adjournment before pursuing the matter further?

The Court: I have no objection.

In accordance with the assurance given to the jurors yesterday, and earlier in the case, we have reached the point in the trial wherein we will take the adjournment, the holiday adjournment, until January 3, 1950, 10:00 o'clock, Tuesday. This will represent, ladies and gentlemen, a departure to some extent from the ordinary procedures of the trial of a case. As a rule, a trial proceeds with a continuity of time; and this circumstance that we do part—that is, the Court and jury and counsel—does not relieve you from your obligation not to suffer any person or persons to converse with you on any subject of the trial. The Court realizes that during the holiday season, [3022] is a natural relaxation and enjoyment. Naturally it is the wish of this Court, as well as my colleagues on the federal bench, that you have the full and complete enjoyment of the holiday season, and the resultant rest to which I know you are entitled. I ask you not to discuss any phase or any part of this case with any person, including the members of your family; because in the very nature of things, you cannot have much rest if you discuss this case with anyone. So a great deal rests in your own conscience. I asked you at the outset whether you would serve this case conscientiously. You said you would; you have served it conscientiously. I have noted your observance, your attentiveness, and I have presided over many trials in these courts, as well as elsewhere, and I daresay you represent one of the finest juries I have seen in standpoint of strict attention to the evidence. There have been many features about the case thus far that have been the subject matter of discussion in your absence. I, of course, do not know whether any of those matters have been brought to your attention, directly or indirectly. If they have been, I ask you and admonish you to disregard them. I told you at the threshold of this case that I would assume to arbitrate the legal matters. Thus far I have done that, I think, to the best of my ability. Perhaps not to the liking either of the defense or prosecution at all times. But we assume to stand here as an individual to administer justice and in turn we—[3023] for you act as a team with me.

I again admonish you and instruct you that if any person or persons assume or assumes to intrude upon your privacy to the extent of conveying information to you concerning this case, or any efforts made or to be made concerning the matter, seeking to influence you or persuade you in any form or any manner, you shall immediately conclude such interference promptly, be it by telephone, by letter or by person—you are to conclude the same and to convey such information to Mr. Mitchell, the Clerk of this Court; who in turn will transmit it to such person or persons as may be proper.

I do not know of any other phase of the matter that needs particular attention at this juncture. Mr. Crouch, you will be available on January 3rd, 1950, for further cross-examination, sir.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Unless I am advised by counsel upon either side as to any other matters they would like conveyed to this jury, we will stand adjourned until January 3; 1950. You may now retire.

(Whereupon the Court recessed in the trial of the above entitled cause until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Tuesday, January 3, 1950.) [3024]

Tuesday Morning Session, January 3, 1950,
10:00 o'Clock

The Clerk: United States of America vs. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: Let the record show that the jurors are present, the twelve jurors, including the four alternate jurors.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

The Court: You may proceed.

PAUL CROUCH

resumed the stand on behalf of the United States; previously sworn.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Mr. Crouch, at the recess we were discussing that 1941 CIO convention in which you claim to have participated, doing some work for the Communist Party. Now, you lived at some hotel under a fictitious name at that time in Oakland, is that right?

A. That is correct. Under the fictitious name of Carl Wilson, being registered with my wife as Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson at the Harrison Hotel.

Q. You were taking, were you, a considerable amount of interest in that convention?

A. Yes, a considerable amount.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Or were you just staying in the hotel and doing little more? [3025]

A. The question, Mr. Hallinan, is very vaguely worded.

Q. All right, then, don't answer it. Did you keep track of what was going on at that convention?

A. I received constant reports from my wife, who was courier between me and Walter Lambert, who was with me part of the time, and the convention floor. Through the secretary and assistant secretary she was kept informed and reported constantly to me on the progress of the convention.

Q. You testified at your last appearance that the web was drawn about Harry Bridges by getting him to make that anti-Fascist resolution at the CIO convention in 1941. Will you explain what you meant by that?

A. Certainly, Mr. Hallinan. Ever since the Soviet attack—since the German attack on the Soviet Union on the 22nd of June of 1941, the Communist Party was anxious to place the trade unions definitely on record for all-out support for the countries fighting on the same side as the Soviet Union.

Q. Just a moment. We are talking about a web drawn about Harry Bridges. That is what I want to get. How was this web now drawn about Harry Bridges? Wait a minute. We will start a little earlier on it. You say that for a while there was some discussion about expelling Harry Bridges from the Communist Party. A. Correct.

Q. Now, when did that discussion start? [3026]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. The discussion started at a district bureau meeting at Schneidermann's office, to the best of my recollection and knowledge, on the 9th of July, on a Wednesday, I believe, and immediately upon the return——

Q. What year?

A. 1941—on the return of Schneidermann, Steve Nelson and Anita Whitney, from a meeting of the Central Committee in New York, at which meeting Schneidermann reported that Bridges was very reluctant to go along with the change of party policy, that he was opposed to all-out production, no strike policies, and other basic issues connected with the full support for the countries fighting on the side of the Soviet Union, and we had probably reached a break, and it would be necessary to expel Bridges from the Communist Party and remove him from the positions that he held in the CIO.

Q. Tell us the things now that Bridges was doing that was opposed to Communist policy. What was the first?

A. The first was the information—I do not know upon what it was based—all I know is that William Schneidermann reported that Bridges was in conference, had been in touch in the East with the trade union leader of national prominence, and he was opposed to the party line on this question at the time.

Q. Who was that? A. John L. Lewis.

Q. Fine. First he had been in conference with John L. Lewis? [3027]

A. In contact with John L. Lewis.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. In contact with John L. Lewis. All right, now, what was the second thing?

A. The second was just the information in which he did not give the details, but stated that he was informed that Bridges was fundamentally opposed to the change, the abrupt, aboutface change in line on the question of no strike, on the question of all-out production, on the question of aid to Great Britain and so on. This was the basis—— [3028]

Q. Well, now, wait a minute, wait a minute. Now, what else? Give us the third thing.

A. This was all we had. And when we had the discussion in the District Bureau meeting on the 9th of July, I presumed that Schneidermann's information was accurate.

Q. No, just a moment, just a moment, Mr. Crouch. Now, we want to get these things now specifically, then we will go into the discussion. Now, the first thing that objection was made to was that he had a conference with John L. Lewis, or in touch with John L. Lewis. The second was that he was fundamentally opposed to the change in no strike and all-out production. Now, was there any third thing?

A. And in this connection the whole matter of aid to Great Britain and the Allies, and no change —which his union, and the whole CIO, which he headed in California, was following up to June 22.

Q. All right. Now, you say that you proposed in some measure, in some manner, by getting Bridges to give this resolution that you discussed, to draw a "web" about him. Now, by drawing a "web," you mean you wanted to entangle him in some sort of declaration that could afterwards be used against him; is that what is meant?

A. To place him on record so clearly, so unequivocally and so positively that he would not be able to make another about-face. [3029]

Q. So that now he couldn't change and start back again advocating strikes, is that right?

A. Pardon me?

Q. For instance, you wanted to put him in such a web by having made this public declaration that he couldn't change around, for instance, and start advocating strikes again, is that right?

A. That is the question of advocating strikes—that is only one step in the matter of a whole, general, basic policy.

Q. Yes. But now here you were going to put a web about him so that he couldn't change his position from that which he had shifted over to. Now, for instance, had he dropped his friendship for John L. Lewis?

A. He had ceased reflecting, or expressing the same general ideas. While John L. Lewis, as I recall, was becoming very quiet around this period, but I don't recall any statement of John L. Lewis calling for all-out aid to Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and so on, before Pearl Harbor. He might have, but I don't recall it.

Q. All right, now——

A. While Mr. Bridges did.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Well, let's forget Lewis. You don't know enough about him, about that. Now, on the second thing. You wanted to draw this web about him so that he couldn't change his position of no strikes and all-out production; by giving this little— [3030] what do you call it?—resolution or whatever it was, he had put himself on record so that he couldn't change back again now and change his policy of no strikes and all-out production; that's right, is it?

A. Those are reflections of a whole basic line on the international situation.

Q. All right. But we have gotten him down now to things that you wanted to tie him up with in a web so he would have to stay there. We have gotten him down already, so let's stay down with him; let's not run all over the prairies here. Now, this web was going to keep him now from, among other things, shifting his position on no strikes and all-out production. That's right, is it?

A. Those were reflections of the general policy.

Q. Yes.

A. And we wanted to be sure he couldn't change on the basic policy of full, complete aid to the Soviet Union and its allies, involving everything that aid might imply.

Q. Yes. And then by him coming out and making a public declaration, then that, according to your notion, wrapped some kind of a web around him so he couldn't change it any more?

A. It placed him on record, placed him in the web, yes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Now, prior to that time he had had a different policy, had he?

A. He had had, he and the union he headed in California, had [3031] been operating on a policy, under the Communist Party policy, had had until the 22nd of June a very different policy——

Q. Can't you answer them more simply? Now, did he have a different policy? Say Yes or No..

A. Your question is complex.

Q. No, I say, did he have a different policy prior to this time? Yes or No.

A. The question cannot correctly and accurately be answered with Yes or No, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. If he did have a different policy, was there some kind of a web that tied him to that policy?

A. There was a tightening, increasing web, and Bridges had started with a speech——

Q. Who put the web on him in the first place? Now, here—— A. Communist Party.

Q. Now, let's get it this way: He had a policy that you wanted him to change. You and these bigwig Communists that you are talking about—all these delusions-of-grandeur gentlemen, like yourselves. You had some kind of policy and you wanted him to change——

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment.

Mr. Hallinan: All right. Withdraw the statement, withdraw the question.

Mr. Donohue: I don't want it withdrawn; I want your Honor to ask the jury to disregard it. [3032]

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Court: The jury may disregard the statement.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, here, this gang of yours—whatever you describe them as—you say that they had some policy that they wanted Bridges to come out and publicly announce. Now, let's not mind what it was, but they wanted him to publicly announce it; that's right, isn't it?

A. It is correct.

Q. Yes. But by doing that, that tied him up in some kind of a web that he couldn't change again, is that right? Isn't it?

A. Without losing face and making himself ridiculous.

Q. That's right. Now, before he tied himself up in this web, he had had a different policy, didn't he?

A. He had been the leader under Party direction.

Q. Can't you answer Yes or No? Did he have a different policy from the one that you webbed him around with?

A. The previous policy had also been part of a web of the Communist Party, up to June 22; but a new policy was established as of that date, and on that date—and at first he did not go along with this policy. He did so increasingly. His speech at Cleveland, Ohio, before a trade union convention was a partial compliance with Party orders; it was by no means wholehearted, and the Party regarded his speech at Cleveland a few days after we discussed his expulsion on the 9th, I think, previous to the

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Cleveland speech, on the 13th of July—we regarded that speech as very unsatisfactory. [3033]

Q. Just a moment. All right, let's don't wander around like that, if you will. Here he had a certain policy that he had publicly announced, regardless of what it was, regardless of whether—he had some policy he had publicly announced. Now, was he tied up in a web on that announcement so he couldn't get out of it without losing face, and so forth? Well, was he or wasn't he? Yes or No.

A. The question is——

Q. Oh, never mind.

A. You can't answer it with an affirmation or a negation; it is very complex.

Q. All right. Let's get to this, if you will. Now, we read some of Mr. Bridges' statements at that convention that you talk about, in which he gave this very important resolution that tied him up in a web. That consisted of five parts: (1) He endorsed the Murray plan of advisory councils; (2) he opposed the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; (3) he requested the removal from position of authority of all individuals of Fascist leanings; (4) he pledged loyalty and support to the leadership of Philip Murray; and (5) he requested that Philip Murray make our position in these vital questions known to Franklin Roosevelt.

Now, that last one, of course, is of no consequence —a mere letter to Mr. Roosevelt would have done that.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I think you left one out there, too. [3034]

Q. All right. Now, the big things were this: endorsing the Murray plan and advisory plans; that's right, isn't it? That is one of the things you wanted him to do, is that right? A. One of the things.

Q. That is one of the things. In other words, you Communists wanted the Murray plan of advisory councils supported by Mr. Bridges, is that right?

A. As an implement to an earlier part in that resolution.

Q. I don't care what it was for, but that was one of the things that you wanted Mr. Bridges to do, to support the Murray council, the Murray plan of advisory councils; is that right?

A. Yes, because that would help prevent strikes.

Q. Yes. And Mr. Murray was not a Communist, was he?

A. Mr. Murray was not a Communist, and is consistently opposed to Communism throughout, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. All right. And Mr. Murray had drawn up a plan of advisory councils, hadn't he?

A. He had.

Q. Yes. And that plan of advisory councils was then, at that time, the policy of the CIO, wasn't it?

A. It was the policy of the CIO and was supported by Communists after the 22nd of—this whole policy of the CIO was supported after the 22nd of June. Previously——

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. So then what Mr. Bridges was doing, the first important thing he was doing, was supporting the Murray plan of advisory [3035] councils, which had been drawn up by Philip Murray, who was not a Communist, and which was then the policy, the general policy, of the national CIO; that's right, isn't it?

A. Yes. And contrary to the policy of the Communist-controlled unions and the CIO, which they had followed prior to June 22. [3035-A]

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, the second one, he was to oppose the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Was that one of the things that the Communists wanted him to go out for, to oppose the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

A. The——

Q. Yes or no.

A. To clearly answer this question, I would like to point out——

Q. No, I will point out some things in a moment. Was that one of the things that you wanted him to get into the resolution?

A. If you will permit me to give an answer——

Q. Can you give a yes or no answer?

A. It does not call for a yes or no answer.

Q. It does call for a yes or no answer.

A. It is misleading to the Court and the jury to give a yes or no answer.

Q. That is none of your business what the Court and jury do, Mr. Crouch. If you will just answer the question: The second part of this resolution was to oppose the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Was that one of the things that you say the Communists wanted Mr. Bridges to include in the resolution?

A. That was one of the things the Communist Party included in the resolution.

Q. In the meantime, Mr. Bridges himself had been the victim of [3036] the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, had he not?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please. It calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

Mr. Hallinan: Withdraw it.

Q. You had been informed prior to that time that Mr. Bridges had been a victim of anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is that right?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please. It could not make any difference if he had or had not been informed that Mr. Bridges had or had not been a victim of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It is argumentative.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: What was the question?

(Question read.)

Mr. Hallinan: Yes or no.

The Witness: The question is vague. If I were to answer yes or no, I would deliberately by helping to mislead the jury and the Court.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: You do not mind that, do you?

A. I object to that kind of insult, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. Yes or no; Had you heard that Mr. Bridges himself had been the victim or the object of anti-labor activities by the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question as it is now framed, [3037] if the Court please, because there is no evidence here to sustain the fact that Mr. Bridges had ever been the object or subject of any illegal activity.

Mr. Hallinan: We will come to that.

The Court: The question is, had he ever been informed on the subject in any particular.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Had you been?

A. Repeat the question, please.

(Question read.)

A. I had no knowledge of any anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): So then that was not included in the Communist orders to Mr. Bridges?

A. Pardon me?

Q. So, of course, then that was not included in the Communist orders to Mr. Bridges? That was not included in the resolution that you wanted to make?

A. I just stated that paragraph on the FBI was included by the Communist Party in the resolution.

Q. You said you had no knowledge that they had indulged in an anti-labor activities, didn't you?

A. I didn't say the Communist Party didn't try to make the people think that it did.

Q. Then the third part was to request the removal from positions of authority of all individuals of Fascist leaning whose [3038] retention in important governmental posts raises questions of doubts in the minds of the workers, undermines the morale of the army of industrial workers and the morale of the people; was that included?

A. It was.

Q. The third one was to pledge loyalty and support to the leadership of Philip Murray and urge him to retain leadership of the Congress of Industrial Organizations: was that included in the report?

A. It was.

Q. And the fourth one was, "As we say, we request Philip Murray to make our positions known on these questions to Franklin Roosevelt."

You heard read out here a few days ago part of Mr. Bridges' speech, which included this:

> "We need assurance that there will be a cessation of the activities of the FBI as an anti-labor and labor spy agency, their framing of evidence and collecting of stool pigeons in order to bring about a Fascist decision such as that just rendered by Judge Charles Sears."

How many people were at the convention at which Mr. Bridges made this speech?

A. I was only on the floor for a few minutes.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. How many people did you observe?

A. I would say there were several [3039] hundred.

Q. Several hundred people, and those were laboring people themselves, isn't that right?

A. That is correct; most of them.

Q. And they would know, would they not, whether Mr. Bridges was telling the truth about these matters? A. No, not all of them.

Q. Now, listen to this: This is said to these several hundred people:

> "I would like to point out to the delegates that they might consider the many crimes that they would be accused and found guilty of by such a judge, who could see no reason why the testimony of an A. F. of L. official against the CIO should be biased or in any way untrue. I shudder to think how many of you would find your way into jails or be deported or even executed if one fraction of what A. F. of L. officials have testified to about you was ever believed by a person having authority to decide such punishment."

What is the meaning of the A. F. of L. in that sentence, do you know?

A. The A. F. of L. are the initials for an employee of the American Federation of Labor.

Q. Do you know whether or not A. F. of L. officials were testifying falsely against CIO officials?

A. I had no personal knowledge of it, I [3040] said.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. You have no knowledge?

A. No personal knowledge.

Q. Did you have any opinion on the subject?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. His opinion would have no probative value before this jury.

Mr. Hallinan: It goes to the probability of the formation of this resolution by this gentleman.

Mr. Donohue: You might ask Mr. Bridges about that.

Mr. Hallinan: He will tell you all about it.

Mr. Donohue: Then ask him about it.

The Court: The objection is overruled, if he has an independent opinion.

The Witness: I had no reason to have an opinion as to whether any A. F. of L. leaders had ever testified falsely under oath against CIO officials or not. On that subject I had no opinion whatever.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, listen to this, if you will, and see if this emanated from your mind or whether it reflects Mr. Bridges' own experience:

> "But the judge saw nothing wrong in labor spies. He saw nothing wrong in the fact that one of the witnesses was advocating membership in the Nazi Bund, inasmuch as he ruled such was immaterial. Judge Sears could not bring himself to believe that the FBI could do anything wrong or would attempt to frame evidence. In this connection, [3041] he said if their testimony is not true, there has been a dastardly attempt to deceive me as the presid> ing inspector by false testimony, for there is no chance of mistake, and if I were to believe that O'Neill was framed or his declarations falsified, I would look with suspicion on the entire case presented by the Government."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Did you know anything about that subject?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you mean to say that you made no inquiry as to whether or not the charges of Harry Bridges on wire-tapping and illegal spying were untrue or not?

A. I read the newspapers, but my assigments by the Communist Party did not include investigations in those fields.

Q. When you included or when the Communist Party included, as you say, this portion of the resolution against the anti-labor activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, didn't you receive any information on the subject from the other members of the party?

A. No; to the best of my recollection, Walter Lambert introduced that particular point in the resolution in our political discussion in the District Bureau, but it was not amplified, a job which, of course, was left for Mr. Bridges to do.

Q. Listen to this:

> "Again in reference to the FBI agents' testimony on the witness he said, 'They denied explicitly the alleged [3042] intimidation. They were in my opinion thoroughly credible witnesses. I believed them implicitly.' "

Now, listen to this:

> "Ask any union men who have been arrested and intimated and jailed by FBI agents for union and strike activities. Ask any union man who has had any dealings with the FBI as to whether they are the angels and souls of honesty that the judge pictures them to be. I know, and the judge admits in his decision, that they violated the law by wire-tapping."

Did you check to find out whether or not the judge had admitted in his opinion that there had been illegal wire-tapping of Harry Bridges by the FBI?

A. I did not check.

Q. "I also heard them discussing using the equipment at a union meeting to be held in another part of the hotel, where they recently tapped my hotel room in a New York City hotel. I made tests to prove that the information that they got on union matters through tapping my telephone was communicated to employers for strike-breaking purposes. It is noticeable that our request to prove this was denied by the judge, and the FBI has always denied that they engaged in illegal wire-tapping or labor espionage."

Did you check on that at all? [3043]

A. I was not assigned by the Communist Party to check on that. I did not.

Q. At the same convention the report of the president and secretary read in part,

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> "Our report of the Bridges case must take into consideration——"

Mr. Donohue: May I ask, if your Honor please, if this is a report by Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Hallinan: No, this is a report by the president of the union. He identified him as Mr. Connelly.

Mr. Donohue: It not having been suggested that the witness had anything to do with the preparation of this report, I object to any questions being asked of this witness concerning it.

Mr. Hallinan: My purpose is to show that other, and a great many persons in the convention, without any dictation from the Communist Party, Mr. Crouch or anyone else, had proposed resolutions similar or even identical with the one that Mr. Bridges proposed, and that this was just simply the order or the plan of the CIO national committee and had nothing to do with Communists' orders or anything of that kind. There were 25 or 30 resolutions of a similar nature that this man said he was familiar with the other day. He said he kept track of the resolutions. He identified some of them. One was the Connelly report. [3044]

The Court: He did refer to Connelly.

Mr. Donohue: May I respectfully say, if your Honor please, there were hundreds of resolutions introduced at the convention. This witness has only identified one resolution as having been prepared by him under the circumstances he narrated. If Mr.

Hallinan believes that the jury should be informed as to the nature of these other resolutions, the time for Mr. Hallinan to call that to the attention of the jury is when Mr. Hallinan is on his proof, not on the cross-examination of a witness who has nothing to do with their preparation.

Mr. Hallinan: That does not make any difference. He says he is familiar with it and it goes to the weight of his evidence as to whether this resolution Mr. Bridges gave was in fact under the dictation of this man or simply in line with the policy of the CIO as exemplified in the resolution he has identified.

The Court: In this particular instance, I will allow the question.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): The one of Mr. Connelly that you spoke of already, that you said that you had read, I want to read this part of the language:

> "Our report on the Bridges case must take into consideration the illegal activities of the FBI in tapping Harry Bridges' telephone in New York in August. Brother Bridges has long recognized the FBI as a tool of the vested interests. [3045] He was not surprised to discover three G-men occupying the room adjoining his, that they had secreted a listening device in his room. Wire-tapping is a federal felony, whether perpetrated by the FBI or an ordinary individual. The failure of responsible governmental authorities to prosecute the FBI, cou> pled with their gross disregard of civil rights and their seemingly apparent determination to discriminate against one of labor's outstanding champions, does perhaps as much as any single thing to shake our confidence in our Government and its democratic processes. The issues are crystal clear. Our faith can only be restored by our Government properly evaluating the Americanism of Harry Bridges and by punishing those agents of the employers who resort to illegal methods in their desperate attempts to embarrass him and weaken him."

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Now, that statement is even stronger than the part of the resolution that you say you prepared, isn't that right?

A. If the number of words is an indication of strength, it is. It has more words in it.

Q. And this was part of the resolution proposed by Mr. Philip Connelly, the president of the CIO convention, isn't that right?

A. I don't recall whether it was part of the resolution or part of a speech by Mr. Connelly.

Q. With regard to the statement in the resolution that you [3046] read about persons in high position of Fascist leanings, I ask you to listen to this portion also of Mr. Connelly's resolution:——

Mr. Donohue: Is that a resolution or a speech, if your Honor please? It is not in the form of a resolution.

The Court: It appears to be in the form of a speech.

Mr. Hallinan: It is a report, report of president and secretary to the fourth annual convention of the State Industrial Council.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I was told and I assumed your Honor's ruling was predicated on the assumption that Mr. Hallinan was going to read to the witness a resolution which Mr. Hallinan contends the witness had said was almost akin to the resolution——

Mr. Hallinan: I do not care what you call it. It is the same thing. What difference does it make whether it is in the form of a resolution or a statement?

The Court: No, I had in mind as the basis for my ruling that you had a resolution or a formal document, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: Then we will ask this. Here is a resolution.

Q. Did you ever hear of a lady named Norton, a Congresswoman, Mary T. Norton, chairman of the Committee on Labor in the House of Representatives?

A. I think I have heard of a Congressman named Norton.

Q. Do you remember a resolution at this convention in which a [3047] statement made by her in the House of Representatives was offered as a resolution to be adopted by the convention?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. He has not identified that, never said he saw it.

Mr. Hallinan: Let us see if he can identify it.

The Witness: I can't recall it.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Here. I will show it to you. You told us you kept abreast of the resolutions that were read, didn't you?

A. From the time in 1941 it is difficult to remember the wording of every one of the resolutions, although I do remember the majority of them.

Q. Refresh your recollection by taking a glance at it and seeing.

Mr. Donohue: May I suggest, your Honor, before any question is asked of the witness that I be permitted the courtesy of looking at it?

Mr. Hallinan: I imagine you have a copy of this resolution. [3048]

Mr. Donohue: I don't happen to have it.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, you said that about other documents that afterwards turned up in your possession. You made inquiry of some of your——

Mr. Donohue: I challenge that statement.

Mr. Hallinan: You might inquire of some of your associates.

Mr. Donohue: That doesn't come very seemingly from you, Mr. Hallinan.

Mr. Hallinan: This original resolution that you said you couldn't find, and behold, Mr. Kaiser was pulling it out of the briefcase, with regard to this very witness. You said, "No, we haven't it." And

I pointed out to you that your associate was getting it out of his briefcase; then you found it.

Mr. Donohue: I appreciated the courtesy of your telling me so. I said I didn't have it, and I don't have it.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I'll tell you—ask them now about these resolutions.

Mr. Donohue: I say for the record that it comes unseemingly for you to criticize anybody saying that they have or haven't the papers.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, wait until you hear some of the criticism I have to make of you. I will do it in due time—not now.

Mr. Donohue: It will be answered in due course.

The Witness: This, Mr. Hallinan, this resolution, one of [3049] of 130——

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, just do you recognize it? A. No, I don't recognize it.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection that it was offered?

A. Not this particular resolution, I am sorry, no, sir.

Q. Yes. Well, now, let's find a few more. That is an anti-fascist resolution.

I will ask that this be marked for identification at this time, so that we may identify the various resolutions as we go along, if the Court please. That is a set of resolutions proposed at the convention of the CIO in October, 1941.

The Court: It may be marked for identification as next in order.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Clerk: Marked——

Mr. Hallinan: And the one that we are now questioning this witness about is proposed resolution No. 7.

The Court: The so-called "anti-Fascist resolution"?

Mr. Hallinan: That's right, your Honor.

The Clerk: The exhibit is marked Defendants' Exhibit Z for identification.

(Proposed resolution No. 7 was marked Defendants' Exhibit Z for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): In looking that over, you saw it was a very strongly worded anti-Fascist resolution, didn't you?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, to the [3050] question.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): I mean, identifying it now at this time?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if your Honor please.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, you didn't pay any attention to that resolution; you didn't know whether it had been offered or not, is that right?

A. I looked the resolution over to see if I recognized it. I did not.

Q. All right. Well, now, we will show you a couple more. These are two more anti-Fascist resolutions——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, to Mr. Hallinan's characterizing the document, which has not been presented to the witness for the purpose of refreshing his recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: I note that counsel inadvertently looks down at the papers when he comes up to make an objection. I wish you wouldn't do it. If you would step over to the side, so I don't have to turn these papers over? It looks bad.

The Witness: What are the numbers on this?

Mr. Hallinan: 35 and 37.

A. While I do not recognize the particular resolutions, I do [3051] recognize many of the phrases —expressions of both resolutions being practically identical with the general—with the copies that were first drafted by the Communist Party's District Committee as a blueprint for CIO unions throughout the State. They were written along that line.

Q. So that, then, resolutions Nos. 35 and 37 are practically identical with the ones that you furnished Mr. Bridges to deliver, is that right?

A. No, they are not identical, although they contain many of the basic expressions and are very —and they have many points of similarity. For example, with the resolution I personally wrote, and which was passed by the Alameda CIO Council prior to that date——

Q. Yes?

A. They are modeled very much on the resolution which I wrote, by instruction of the Communist Party, and which was adopted by the Alameda County CIO Council.

Q. Yes. Now, for instance, the Marine Cooks and Stewards Association proposed resolution No. 35,——

Mr. Donohue: I object to his reading the resolution, if your Honor please. It isn't in evidence and isn't admissible in evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, he identifies it as being almost identical in form with the one that he had talked about.

Mr. Donohue: So what, if your Honor please? He didn't [3052] prepare it; he can't be responsible for it. Is it to impeach the testimony he has given about other resolutions?

Mr. Hallinan: Counsel seems to think that the only purpose that a person can have is a matter of impeachment. What we would like to do is to enlighten the jury and the Court, the Court and the jury. We would like to show the Court and the jury that a great number of similar resolutions, consistent with the policy of the national CIO, were offered at that convention. A great number of resolutions, by other persons. And that it is extremely unlikely——

The Court: Well, Mr. Hallinan, would it be in order, in keeping with your thought on examination, to ask him the specific question whether or not there were any other, additional resolutions of like character?

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I don't like to accept this gentleman's word just on a thing of that kind. I want to ask it question by question. I don't want to depend upon the statement of a man whose previous testimony has resulted in a situation that we have been now trying to press before Donohue's Grand Jury. So I don't want to ask him, "Was there such a thing?" He will say, "I don't know," or, "No," or something of that kind. I want to prove it in my own way.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, the statement——

The Court: One moment. It is incumbent upon the Court to admonish the jury to disregard the statement made by Mr. [3053] Hallinan with respect to, quote, "Donohue's Grand Jury," close quote, as improper and as misconduct on his part. Now, with respect to such characterizations and statements, I again admonish the jury and each of the jurors individually, and collectively, to ignore the statements, disregard the same.

Now, Mr. Hallinan, going back to the resolutions. How many in all were there? Let us see if we can analyze this matter.

Mr. Hallinan: There were nine anti-Fascist resolutions, nine on that one subject. Then there were eleven on civil rights, including wire-tapping by the FBI. There were two more on the right to strike, which is one of the things that he has had here. And there were two resolutions criticizing the American Federation of Labor officials for their false testimony and illegal activities against the CIO officers.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases,——

The Court: Do you propose to go into all those resolutions? It will take some time.

Mr. Hallinan: I don't want to. I want to read one or two and then show that the rest are similar to them.

The Court: You would like to establish a pattern?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, that is all.

Mr. Donohue: May I say, before your Honor rules, this:——

Mr. Hallinan: And I might say this, too, your Honor: Of these anti-Fascist resolutions, five were adopted and the [3054] other four were filed in favor of these five that were adopted. In other words, the language being so similar, they were withdrawn in favor of the ones that were adopted. Now, there is one, No. 37, that about does the whole thing, and I would like to read that one to show that these resolutions were the same kind. And I would also like to read out the names of the unions that proposed the various resolutions, without, however, reading the resolutions.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, Mr. Hallinan has stated to your Honor that his purpose in reading these resolutions is to call to the attention of the jury the substance of the resolution. That on its very face is certainly in this case not proper cross-examination. If Mr. Hallinan wants to introduce these resolutions, let it be done in the proper manner and at the proper time, when he attempts to put on his own defense, or the defense of his client. It isn't proper cross-examination of this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: He has testified on the subject.

The Court: The witness stated, Mr. Donohue, that he was familiar with these resolutions and the general subject matter.

Mr. Donohue: So what, if your Honor pleases? Any one of the 300 or 400 people present at that convention was familiar with the resolution.

The Court: I do not propose that the context or contents of the resolution be read. [3055]

Mr. Donohue: That is what he wants to do.

The Court: At any great length. You might establish——

Mr. Hallinan: One resolution will give the context and it is only a short resolution. They are not long; they are not any longer than the resolutions that were——

The Court: All right. Proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: All right. Now, this is No. 37 from the San Francisco Industrial Union Council:

> "Whereas, countries representing a majority of the peoples of the world are now directly involved in the war now raging in Europe and Asia; and
> "Whereas, since this war started in September, 1939, the forces of Nazi aggression have succeeded in conquering a large number of

countries in Europe, with the result that the people of these countries have lost all the democratic rights and privileges they previously enjoyed; and

"Whereas, Hitler as publicly declared his eventual goal is to conquer and place under Nazi rule all the countries of the world; and

"Whereas, the delegates of this Fourth Annual Convention of the California State Industrial Union Council, CIO, are convinced that a victory for Hitlerism in the present war will lead to the destruction of democracy and the abolition of free trade unions in this and [3056] every other country;

"Therefore be it Resolved, we believe the most important issue facing the people of the United States today is that of establishing unity with and giving support to all freedom-loving people in the fight to defeat the menace of Nazi aggression. Organized labor, because of its strength and strategic position, has the responsibility not only to lead but to carry a major part of the burden in this fight.

"Be it Resolved, that this fight can best be waged at this time if all the people of this . . . subscribe to a program which includes (a) closest possible collaboration by the United States with all the countries, including Great Britain, China and the Soviet Union, who are actually engaged in armed conflict to protect their people against Nazi aggression; (b) the energetic carrying out by the Government of the United States of a policy of all-out aid for these countries; (c) full support of the eight-point program enunciated by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill on August 18, 1941; (d) assumption by labor of the leadership in an active fight to defeat all appeaser and pro-Fascist forces in the United States and to remove those fifth columnists from the high councils of the Administration who attempt to obstruct the program of giving greatest possible aid to the [3057] countries and peoples who are actively fighting Nazi aggression; (e) conducting an aggressive fight for the preservation and extension of the established rights of labor and the civil rights of the American people.

"And Be It Finally Resolved, that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the national office of the CIO, all CIO national and international unions, and organizing committees, to all CIO bodies in California, and to the press.

"San Francisco Industrial Union Council."

Q. Now, you heard that read and you stated already that No. 35 was quite similar to it, is that right? Just Yes or No.

A. I don't remember the numbers.

Q. But the other one that you read was quite similar to it, wasn't it?

A. Many of the phrases and the same line emanating from the Communist Party was identical in both, and this resolution, I might say, is almost an exact copy, to the best of my recollection, of a resolution passed in July of 1941 by the San Francisco County CIO Industrial Union Council, drafted by the Communist Party and specifically by Steve Nelson.

Q. All right. Now, drafted by Steve Nelson?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, then, why did you have to redraft the one that you gave to Harry Bridges? [3058]

A. I drafted—Steve Nelson drafted a resolution passed by the San Francisco Council, I drafted the resolution passed in July by the Alameda CIO Council. But the resolution that was passed was simplified, and, in our opinion, somewhat sharpened and made more unequivocal, the resolution which we drafted and which I edited and polished and which was read by Harry Bridges.

Q. Now, without—unless he wants to see them or unless counsel wants to look them over, I would like to state the names, or the numbers of the resolutions on that subject and the persons proposing them.

Mr. Donohue: I object to it, if your Honor pleases.

Mr. Hallinan: Take a look at them.

Mr. Donohue: I don't care to see them.

Mr. Hallinan: No. 38, proposed by the Industrial Union Council, is in somewhat the same language, except that it includes China.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, this witness has been on the stand for about five and a half days, and at least half, perhaps, two-thirds, of the record is replete with statements by Mr. Hallinan which are not in the form of questions. This is supposed to be a cross-examination of Mr. Crouch. I don't know that Mr. Hallinan has been sworn to testify.

Mr. Hallinan: I thought we were trying to save time by [3059] just announcing it this way. If the Court wants, I will show him the resolutions and let him identify them.

The Court: Let us take it up at the recess. Probably we can agree on some formula.

We will take the morning recess, ladies and gentlemen. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case or to form or express an opinion thereon until the matter is submitted to you.

(Recess.) [3059-A]

Mr. Hallinan: I will ask that the witness take a look at Resolutions 38, 39 and 41. Resolution 38 was also an anti-Fascist resolution in substantially the same language as 35 and 37, wasn't it?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor please, as a characterization by Mr. Hallinan of the substance of a resolution which has not been identified and is not in evidence.

Mr. Hallinan: It is a leading question which is proper on cross-examination.

The Court: If it is merely for the purpose of describing the resolution, without any evidentiary value, it may be allowed.

The Witness: What was the question?

(Question read.)

The Witness: The word "substantially" is subject to wide variations of meaning and I would not like to split hairs on such a matter.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Leave out the word "substantially." It was a similar resolution, wasn't it?

A. They all conformed to the party line of 1941 and in sharp conflict with the party line of 1940 and early 1941.

Q. Except 38 also included a resolution in support of China against Japan, isn't that right?

A. Yes, but even on that—— [3060]

Q. I didn't ask you about even on that. I said that is what 38 did. 38 was proposed by the San Francisco Industrial Union Council, is that right?

A. Correct. I believe it says so there. I have no specific recollection of all the 130 resolutions of that convention. I read them all at the time. They were all cleared through my office and all received the O.K. of the party before they went—were sent from the resolutions committee to the floor for a vote. I can't remember the details of 130 resolutions after these years.

Q. You do remember that you went over all the 130 resolutions, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. You made yourself familiar with all the proposed resolutions?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Just merely glanced to see that they were in conformity with the party line, that is all.

Q. The ones that did conform to the party line you O.K.'d, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. This 38 conformed to the party line, did it?

A. Every resolution passed by that convention conformed to the party line. Every resolution opposed to the party line was thrown out.

Q. 38 conformed to the party line but also included a resolution that China should be supported against Japan, isn't that [3061] right?

A. Correct.

Q. Then No. 39, which also conformed to the party line, went on record supporting China, Great Britain and Russia against the Hitler Fascists; that is right, isn't it?

A. That is right, conformed to the party line after June 22nd. They were fundamentally opposed to the party line and would have been defeated by any CIO convention in California before June 22, 1941.

Q. Take it easy, Mr. Crouch. We are coming to those things in a minute. Just contain yourself because you may have to take some of those things back. I have a few things to propose to you at an earlier date, so just follow the thought. This 39 was submitted by the United Auto Workers No. 60, the Contra Costa Industrial Congress and the Oil Workers Union No. 5?

A. I believe that is what it says on there. I don't remember from my own personal knowledge.

Q. No. 41, which you just looked at here, is a resolution supporting England, China and the U.S.S.R., and is proposed by Local No. 76, International Union, United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Equipment Workers of America, isn't that right? A. I don't know.

Q. I just showed it to you there. Will you please look at that and see if you can refresh your recollections? I want you to look at No. 45, Nos. 104 and 108 and see if you can keep in [3062] your mind for a few minutes the persons endorsing those.

A. What are the numbers?

Q. 45, 104 and 108. Now, No. 45 is also an anti-Fascist resolution, wasn't it, asking that the United States foreign policy give aid to Russia, England and China?

A. Resolution No. 45 was a resolution I have never seen before in my life or, as I can recall now, heard of. This is alleged to be the resolutions adopted by that convention, that resolution obviously slipped through, but I am certainly not convinced that it was passed. If it was passed, it was an accident.

Q. We will come to whether it was passed or not. I said it was one of those that you looked over? [3063] A. No, it was not.

Q. You didn't see this one there?

A. I did not see—I have never, to the best of my recollection, seen the resolution No. 45 before.

Q. This says it is proposed by the SWOC, Local No. 1891. Do you know who that is?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Yes, that is one of the few anti-Communist locals of the Steel Workers.

Q. Yes?

A. That was an anti-Communist local, as I recall.

Q. Well, now, this anti-Communist local that was a Steel Workers organization, proposed a resolution that aid should be given to Russia, England and China, didn't it?

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please——

A. Tagged onto an anti-Communist——

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, Mr. Witness. This resolution has not been identified by this witness, and——

The Court: Sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Let's see if we can get it identified; that's what I wanted to do.

Q. You say tagged on with an anti-Communist what?

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, Mr. Witness. I object, if your Honor pleases, because the answer he is now seeking to elicit is a question the objection to which Your Honor sustained.

The Court: Well, have the witness identify the resolution. [3064]

Mr. Donohue: He said he never saw it before.

The Witness: I never saw it before, Your Honor, to the best of my recollection.

The Court: Have you examined the text of the matter?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

The Witness: I have, and to the best of my knowledge, I have never seen it before.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, you say that the Steel Workers Organization was an anti-Communist organization?

A. I said certain Steel locals. Now, I may have been confused. As I recall, I believe this number is the local of the East Bay machinists, but I am not sure of that. I know that some of the locals were Communist-controlled, some were anti-Communist. If I am not confused in the numbers, this was one of the anti-Communist locals.

Q. Yes. Well, do you know if the anti-Communist Steel Workers did not propose an anti-Fascist resolution?

A. They had been consistently anti-Fascist before and after July 22nd.

Q. They what?

A. They had been consistently anti-Fascist before as well as after.

Q. Yes. In other words, that organization had been anti-Fascist before this, before July of 1941, and continued anti-Fascist afterwards, isn't that right? A. That's correct. [3065]

Q. All right. Now, the other two that we asked you about, 104 and 108, the one, No. 104, that was submitted by the Ship Scalers and Painters, is that right? A. Of the ILWU, I believe.

Q. Yes, that's correct.

A. That was what it said on there. I did not remember the resolution.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Well, it was an anti-Fascist resolution, was it?

A. I don't—are you asking me as to whether it was from reading it from this, or what I remember of it at the convention?

Q. Well, remembering it as your recollection is refreshed by this.

A. I have no recollection of that particular resolution at all.

Q. Well, now, when you read it here, did you see that it asked for closest possible collaboration by the United States with all countries, including Great Britain, China and the Soviet Union, who are engaged in armed conflict against the Nazi aggression?

A. Of course, that was typical of the line that was being followed under Communist direction, by the ILWU leadership, as well as the state leadership at that time. But still, I do not recall this specific resolution.

Q. Say, was your gang writing out any of Roosevelt's speeches around that time? [3066]

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, may we have that question read?

Mr. Hallinan: I asked if his gang were writing out Roosevelt's speeches at that time.

Mr. Donohue: There are some questions, if Your Honor please, which perhaps don't even justify an objection.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, then, don't make it.

Q. Were they?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor pleases.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, then, this apparently justifies the objection.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, this one justifies it.

Mr. Hallinan: That is preliminary, as showing that Roosevelt's speeches at this time were identical with these resolutions. Now, this——

Mr. Donohue: Now, if your Honor please,——

Mr. Hallinan: Now; this supposition that 1/50th of one per cent of the country was running the policy of the country on this anti-Fascist thing should be played up, if this witness wants to take that position, why, let him go ahead. We want to see how far he contends his gang went in formulating the policy of the American government. We have got the CIO already, and now let's go right on up into the United States Government.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, I can't tell counsel that he can't use the word "gang" in referring to the associates [3067] in the Communist Party of this witness, but I think Your Honor may tell him properly.

Mr. Hallinan: What would we call them?

Mr. Donohue: He has no right to use that word.

Mr. Hallinan: "Mob?" What would we call it?

Mr. Donohue: You would, because that is the——

Mr. Hallinan: According to counsel, there are a lot of criminals, according to the witnesses here, they are perjurers, frauds, liars, the worst kind of people. I don't see why he should be sensitive about the designation being given to this witness. They apparently aren't—they call themselves worse things than anything we can call them. Now, counsel is up here defending them from characterizations that they give themselves.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases,——

Mr. Hallinan: What does he want me to call them? I will call them whatever he wants. What do you want me to call them, this bunch that hung out at 142 Haight Street or something and dictated the policy not only of all the unions but of the United States Government? What do you want to call them?

Mr. Donohue: It is only natural, of course, if your Honor pleases, for Mr. Hallinan to use the words which come easiest, naturally, to him.

Mr. Hallinan: Yes, that's right; when I see a gangster, I call him a gangster. If I hear of a gang, I call it a gang. [3068] I am fraid that is true. I don't think I should have to look around and hunt for words; but if counsel wants me to call them by some other appellation, why, to that extent I think I will be willing to oblige him.

Mr. Donohue: I object first, if your Honor pleases, to the appellation used by Mr. Hallinan, contained in the question. I object, too, to the question further on the ground that whether or not this witness is of the opinion that his associates wrote the speeches for Mr. Roosevelt, which is an improper question, whether they did or not isn't pertinent to this issue. I had thought we were trying Mr. Bridges, not Mr. Roosevelt, who is now deceased.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we are trying the CIO now; we have got the whole convention in here on the matter.

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question.

Mr. Hallinan: He not only says now that he told Mr. Bridges what resolutions he should propose, but that every resolution that was passed at that CIO convention first received his approval. Now, I have another purpose in it. I made a statement the other day as to my opinion of this gentleman's mentality, and I want to inquire, I want to find out just how far these things are true, just how far he can satisfy the truth and how far they may be illusionary. Now, here he has come to the position where every resolution, he said, that was passed at the CIO convention in California in 1941 was first passed and [3069] approved by him and then put through. Now, we are entitled to find what his mental background is, what his notion on it is. I want to see if he would go further. Of course, counsel jumps up and warns him, but what about it? On that question there is an objection, too. What is Your Honor's ruling on it, as to whether he——

The Court: Would you read the question, please?

Mr. Hallinan: I will repeat it, if you would prefer.

Q. That gang, or whatever you want to call them, that officiated on Haight Street, of which you were a member,—did you, any of you, write so far as you know, the speeches of President Roosevelt at that time?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor pleases. There is no evidence Mr. Roosevelt made any speech at this convention.

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, not at the convention.

Q. Did you write any speeches at that time that were delivered by President Roosevelt?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

A. I have no knowledge of who wrote Mr. Roosevelt's speeches, but I do know that they did not make any flop on June 22nd, and that President Roosevelt had been as militantly opposed to Hitler and Fascism before June 22nd as he was the day after, and [3070] he didn't have to make any about-faces, like certain Communist officials did in California and elsewhere.

Q. Yes. We'll come to that, too, as I suggested to you, later. Now, there is also a resolution, No. 108, that you just read, is that right? And that was an anti-Fascist resolution, is that correct?

A. Under the general heading.

Q. Yes. Now, will you take a look at Resolution No. 37, (Document handed to witness); which is a different subject. Now, that was a resolution that was adopted, wasn't it? A. I don't know.

Q. Well, now, didn't it have your recommendation? Didn't you go over that resolution and decide whether you wanted it given by this union? And wasn't it passed after you recommended it be so?

A. I have already stated that after some eight years I can not remember specifically the details of 130, I believe, separate resolutions.

Q. Yes, but if I tell you that that resolution was adopted, why, then, would you bring it within your general statement that all the resolutions that were adopted were done with your consent and at the instance of these persons whom you have designated as dictating the policy of that union?

A. I certainly—I have no reason to doubt it, because I certainly would have O.K.'d that resolution, since it was in line [3071] with the—consistent Communist party line, which has not changed at any period, of always attacking and trying to discredit the FBI. That has always, at all periods, been the Communist Party line, and this particular resolution is in line with that.

Q. Yes. Well, now, take a look. Do you see where it says there, on 87, "adopted as read"?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, here is a resolution (reading):

> "Whereas, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has again violated the laws of the United States Government in spying on Harry Bridges, California CIO director, and president of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union; and, whereas, this most recent illegal activity against Bridges occurred in New York between August 4th and August 22nd.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

1941, when FBI agents secreted a dictograph in Bridges' hotel bedroom, thereby tapping Bridges' telephone; and, whereas, spying by the FBI has persisted after Bridges has twice been the subject of deportation proceedings, and during the interim in which the trial examiner, Charles B. Sears, was preparing his recommendations on the second hearing; and, whereas, the FBI is continuing its anti-labor activities, as exemplified in this most recent invasion of the privacy of Harry Bridges, based on the second hearing; and, whereas, wire-tapping is [3072] a felony, punishable by $10,000 fine, and two years imprisonment, or both; and, whereas, Bridges has requested the United States District Attorney in New York to prosecute the FBI agents guilty of violating the federal laws prohibiting wire-tapping and has stated that he, Bridges, will testify against them if the FBI agents are brought to trial; therefore, be it resolved, that this organization join in urgently requesting the United States District Attorney Mathias F. Correa, of New York City, to prosecute the guilty FBI agents; and be it further resolved, that we, the International Fishermen & Allied Workers of America, Local 33, join the Harry Bridges Defense Committee and other groups interested in preserving constitutional and civil liberties in urgent requesting our United States representatives and United States Senators to begin > a Congressional investigation of this latest anti-labor activity on the part of the FBI; and be it finally resolved, that we send copies of this resolution to all affiliates, CIO. Industrial Union Council, and to the State CIO convention, to be held October 3, '45, and ask them to take some action immediately."

Did you draw that resolution? Did you draw that resolution?

A. I did not personally draw that resolution.

Q. Now, at the same convention, there were proposed a great number of resolutions insisting upon the preservation of civil [3073] rights to Americans, isn't that right? A. I think so.

Q. Will you take a look at Resolution No.—I will tell them when you are up there, when the document is up there. (Document handed to witness.)

Nos. 67, 68, 70 and 91.

A. What was the first one?

Q. 67, 68, 70 and 91.

A. What was the second one, No. 70?

Q. 67, 68, 70 and 91.

(Documents examined by witness.)

Mr. Hallinan: Should we take the noon recess, Judge?

The Court: Do you have more questions to ask him?

Mr. Hallinan: Well, it would take some time.

The Court: Well, we will take the noon recess, ladies and gentlemen, with the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor to express an opinion until it is submitted to you. We will resume at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to 2:00 o'clock p.m.) [3074]

Afternoon Session, 2 P.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The witness on the stand is Paul Crouch, heretofore sworn.

PAUL CROUCH

resumed.

Cross-Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Now, you identified resolutions Nos. 67, 68, 70 and 91. Without reading them off, the No. 68 was a motion against the poll tax, is that right? Do you remember that?

A. I should remember that. I am familiar with that particular bill and all the circumstances connected with it.

Q. Then No. 69 of the National Maritime Union was a protest against the segregation in the armed forces of whites and colored people, is that right?

A. I don't remember the particular resolution.

Q. You saw it there just a few minutes ago. Does that refresh your recollection as to what it was about? A. It doesn't refresh my recollection.

Q. All right. Now, No. 70, the National Maritime Union, was against a bill relating to radio telegraph operators, wherein Bill H.R. 5074 gave the right to suspend the license of a radio operator if there were a reasonable probability [3075] that he was taught, advocated or believed in any subversive activity at present or in the past. Do you remember that resolution? A. No.

Mr. McMillan: Your Honor, may I interrupt that? I would like to make an inquiry of the Court, and I make this very respectfully: Hasn't the time about arrived, after long last, that your Honor should exercise your judgment in laying some limitation upon the extent of the cross-examination on this particular subject of inquiry? We have finally reached the point in this case where we have spent all morning talking about a web and we spent all morning going into resolutions. Now, your Honor, this witness has been examined for many days. I grant counsel has a right to test his testimonial qualifications. He has a right to go into his observations, his recollection and his narration, his interest, his bias, and all these matters, matters affecting his credibility, contradictory statements, and thus and so. But even a limitation may be laid upon those matters by your Honor. Just a few days ago Mr. Hallinan read from Mr. Wigmore at great length. May I just read a few sentences:

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

> "Whenever the admission of a particular class of relevant evidential facts would, by reason either of the amount of evidential data or the complication of subordinate issues or the length of time spent on relatively minor [3076] details, tend to obstruct the tribunal's ascertainment of the truth, either by unduly distracting attention from the substantial issue or by unnecessarily confusing or obscuring them, the evidence may in a general class of cases or in a particular case be admitted with limitations or conditions or excluded.
> Further, whenever the admission of a particular class of relevant evidential facts would be likely to thus tend to dominate the mind of the tribunal and prevent a rational ascertainment or determination of the truth, and where the evidence, having this tendency, is not necessary to the ascertainment of the truth, the evidence may be in a general class of cases or in a particular case admitted with limitations, conditions or excluded."

Now, your Honor, the indictment in this case charges what? It charges in a naturalization proceeding that the defendant Harry Bridges was asked certain questions and that he gave false answers to those questions: "Do you now or have you ever belonged to the Communist Party in the United States?" Answer: "I have not. I do not."

Now, those are the substantial issues, the dominant question to be determined here.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

In short, aren't we going wide afield when we go into these webs, and when we go into these resolutions? With reference to these resolutions, this witness has been shown [3077] several resolutions and he answered, and his answer has been typical of the 130 which have gone through his hands. We know now what the answers would be. This matter here has reached the point where it has become exhaustless, if your Honor please. It is becoming interminable. I respectfully submit some limitation should be laid not only on the cross-examination as a whole but upon this particular subject. Otherwise it is simply going to become interminable, and if I may say it with the becoming diffidence of my own judgment, we are reaching the point here where it has become a lingering agony, long drawn out, your Honor, and I respectfully request that some limitation, which is within the power of your Honor to exercise in your sound discretion, be laid upon this cross-examination. We are getting far afield. [3078]

Now, here we had for cross-examination this morning, I remember this, we had reached a point where this witness is asked a question, "Did your gang write President Roosevelt's speeches?", and counsel makes a statement, "Why, I have got a right to go into these matters. I have a right to test this witness' mental condition, see whether or not he was laboring under some hallucinations when he gave these answers with reference to these resolutions." There is a limitation. And when you spend two or three days in the cross-examination of a witness, I respectfully submit that his testimonial qualifications have reached a point even beyond the breaking point. He stretched them way beyond the breaking point. He has reached a point where it is far beyond endurance, and I respectfully submit my inquiry to your Honor.

Mr. Hallinan: Might I suggest this, your Honor? Their whole plan is to introduce one small part, one small thing which they claim to be an important thing, as constituting some element in their case. And then they limit the defense from showing that no such intendment occurs. Now, it is very easy to say, "Be very happy if you would dispose of those matters in a sentence or two." But here, this man has said now, and they are trying to raise the inference, that the CIO, at least in California, was dominated by the Communist Party. And that is his statement. And as proof that it was dominated by the Communist Party, they show that a resolution condemning Fascism [3079] and condemning wiretapping by the FBI were offered by Harry Bridges.

Now, we have the right to show, first, that that was the general position of the entire American CIO, not only the California Council, but the whole country; that Harry Bridges was carrying out not any statements of this man or his gang—or whatever they want to call them—but that it was carrying out the policy of the CIO; and we also have the right to show that these things which he ascribes to himself were the general sentiment of the country at the time. And we can show your Honor that these resolutions are almost repetitious of statements that were made on the radio by Franklin Delano Roosevelt. They are practically the exact same thing.

Now, we have no desire to string it out or to try issues that aren't of any importance. We would like to finish the thing. But we don't want to be reproached for having in the record something that could have been offered to the jury. We don't want to have somebody come in afterwards and say, "We had this," and "We had that"; and then have it said, "Why wasn't it presented at the opportune time?"

The Court: How much additional do you have?

Mr. Hallinan: There isn't very much, your Honor, and I have showed an inclination to cut it down. I haven't read these resolutions, I have read one, and then went on to the rest, just referring to the moment—— [3080]

The Court: With the assurance given to the Court that you will curtail the matter, I will permit you to proceed.

Mr. Hallinan: This will take only a very few minutes more, I would say.

Now, will you show this witness No. 50 (document handed to witness by the Clerk).

Q. As that resolution was passed, I take it that was one of those you looked through and passed upon, is that right?

A. I have no recollection about this particular resolution. As I stated, out of 130 and so on, many of them technical, I was looking for political import. There was no political import whatever in this resolution, and there is nothing whatever about it to attract, to have caused me to have remembered it one way or the other.

Q. Do you know what U.C.W.O.C. means, what union that was? A. No.

Q. "Los Angeles District Council"? And this, without reading the entire resolution, says that the CIO in Southern California is being constantly confronted in their drive by A. F. of L. goons and pickets and Teamsters are constantly going through CIO picket lines with trucks and scabs, and et cetera. Now, did you propose that to Mr. Bridges?

A. This is a technical, and what I would have termed a non-political resolution, with which I was not particularly concerned. [3081]

Q. Well, now, to go back to the three that we just talked about, and without reading them off again—that is, Nos. 67, 68, 70 and 91—the No. 68 you identified that, it referred to the poll tax. The other to the taking away of radio operators' licenses if there were reasonable probability to believe that he had ever belonged to what they termed a subversive organization. And No. 91 related to a certain discrimination by whites against negroes in the military camps and a riot that had occurred in one of the camps in which a number of negro soldiers were injured. Do you remember that?

A. Not now.

Q. Well, would you look at No. 102, 106 and 122

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

(documents handed to witness by the Clerk).

Now, No. 102, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, proposed an anti-discriminatory resolution. You remember that one?

A. No.

Q. That is a resolution condemning discrimination in defense industries. Then No. 106 insisted that while all aid be given to the countries fighting Hitler, that it not be at the expense of such gains as labor had already made. Do you remember that one?

A. There is nothing about that one to impress itself on my memory one way or the other.

Q. And then No. 122 recommended the National Federation of [3082] Constitutional Liberties for its stand against anti-labor legislation, wire-tapping, anti-alien legislation, violation of free press, free speech, free assembly, free worship and restrictions on the free ballot. Do you remember that one?

A. No, there is nothing to attract my attention in that one.

Q. Now, do you know, without telling us what it was, do you know what the Murray Plan was about? A. Essentially?

Q. Yes. I mean, were you familiar with the Murray Plan?

A. I was quite familiar with it at the time, yes. I spent a lot of time studying and working on it and working on resolutions connected with it.

Q. Yes. Now, the Murray Plan was a matter involving the national defense program, wasn't it?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And it involved specifically the—the principal point about it was the creation of industry councils in defense plants, is that right?

A. That is correct, and I served on one of those later.

Q. And one of the points of the industry council was that it should consist of an equal number of persons working in the plant, together with representatives of the management, is that correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. And it was also part of the plan that the President of the [3083] United States should establish an industry council for each basic industry, and that there should be an allocation of all available raw materials between the basic industries. That was one of the points of the plan, was it not?

A. I don't recall. It could have been.

Q. All right. And then it was also part of the plan that all firms within the industry having available plant facilities should not only be entitled to, but required to, participate in the program for production of defense materials. Do you remember that? A. Yes, I am quite sure I do.

Q. All right. Then it was also part of the plan that the executive and administrative authority should be vested in those industry councils to carry out the program, is that right?

A. I don't remember those wordings. I see no reason to the contrary.

Q. And then it provided that the President should establish a National Defense Board, consisting also of equal representatives of labor and industry, and that they should have the right to plan and to handle appeals and to regulate matters arising in these industry councils. Do you remember that?

A. If my recollection is correct, that is essentially right.

Q. Yes, all right. And then the industry councils were for the purpose of promoting industrial peace through the sound collective bargaining relationships and to call upon the [3084] government boards, involving social security laws, wages and hour act, National Labor Relations Act, et cetera, is that right?

A. Some of those details I don't remember after these years, but I have no reason to think it [3084-A] isn't.

Q. And that act was proposed to the President of the United States by Philip Murray in December, 1940, wasn't it?

A. I don't recall the date of it.

Q. Will you show him the date at the top there? It is just at the top. There is one line that should refresh your recollection on it.

A. I don't recall, because the Communist Party was not particularly interested in this until after June 22.

Q. The Communist Party, you say, took no interest until after June 22, but in December, 1940, the President of the National CIO submitted to the President of the United States this Industrial Council program called the Murray Plan, is that right?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. It is true that Philip Murray before, as well as after, June 22 was working for peace in industry and supporting the forces fighting Fascism, that is correct.

Q. That plan, did you know whether or not that had been passed and proposed by the CIO Executive Board which met at Atlantic City in November, 1940? Did you know that?

A. I don't recall it. I have no reason to doubt it.

Q. At that time do you know who was president of the CIO? A. Nationally, Philip Murray.

Q. No, John L. Lewis, wasn't he?

A. What date?

Q. November, 1940.

A. I don't recall. [3085]

Q. Don't you remember that following that meeting John L. Lewis resigned as president of the CIO and then Philip Murray took his place?

A. I don't remember the date of Mr. Lewis' resignation.

Q. See if it will refresh your recollection if I tell you this, that John L. Lewis being president of the national CIO, that the Executive Board of that organization met at Atlantic City in November, 1940, and passed or indorsed this Murray Plan unanimously; did you know that? A. Quite likely.

Q. Did you know at that time Harry Bridges was one of the members of the Executive Board of the CIO? A. I did.

Q. And did you know that in November, 1940, he was one of those who voted unanimously for the Murray Plan?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I presume he as well as the other Communists on the board voted for it.

Q. Did you know that at that convention of the CIO the president, John L. Lewis, made the following report. Now, listen to this and see if you recognize it: "One of the most serious threats"—pardon me. This is back in November, 1940, in Atlantic City. "One of the most serious threats"——

Mr. McMillan: May it please the Court, we object to the reading of these reports. I cannot understand why he can't show it to the witness and ask him whether or not he saw it. [3086]

Mr. Hallinan: Show it to him.

Mr. McMillan: Another thing: It is collateral and has no relevancy. It falls within the observation I have heretofore made.

Mr. Hallinan: I think your Honor will see in a moment that it disposes of the other points in this program he is supposed to have put over in the CIO convention in Oakland.

(The document was handed to the witness and returned to Mr. Hallinan.)

Mr. Hallinan: "One of the most serious threats"——

Mr. McMillan: If your Honor please, we object to his reading it. I submit that the proper question, after submitting it to the witness, is whether or not after reading that he has any recollection of it. If he hasn't any recollection of it, that ends the matter.

Mr. Hallinan: That is telling the witness.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. McMillan: It is not for Mr. Hallinan to read that. The difficulty about Mr. Hallinan making these statements and reading these things, he is not under oath.

Mr. Hallinan: You can read it. It is right in the document.

Mr. McMillan: We are deprived of the opportunity, he not being under oath, of cross-examining him.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Do you remember that this was part of the CIO?

A. I know from looking at this that is part of a report by [3087] Lee Pressman to the convention, Mr. Pressman being known to me by reputation as a member of the Communist Party.

Q. All right. This is Mr. Lee Pressman's recommendation to the CIO but adopted by the CIO, regardless of who put it in: "One of the most serious threats"——

Mr. McMillan: That is objected to. The witness has not testified he has any recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: He says he recognizes it as being of Mr. Pressman's composition and submitted to the CIO.

Mr. McMillan: He said Mr. Pressman made a report.

The Witness: I said I note in this book—I have no recollection whatsoever. I note in this book that this appears as a part of the report by Lee Pressman, whom I have known by reputation to be a member of the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. McMillan: But he has not testified that he has any recollection.

Mr. Hallinan: He says he recognizes it is Lee Pressman. There is nothing in this book to indicate that Lee Pressman has anything to do with it, not a word.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I show the Court to what I refer?

The Court: Show Mr. Hallinan what you have in mind.

The Witness: I am citing from page 68, at the bottom paragraph. This all comes under the head of "Report of the Legal Department," and states in the first line of the paragraph [3088] that this legal department is headed by Mr. Pressman.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Where did you find that out? You did not look at this when it was shown to you on the stand?

A. I saw this book for the first time in my life when you handed it to me on the stand. I automatically looked back to see the source of that department report, to see who was reporting. I never saw it before in my life until just now.

Q. Of course, the way you dispose of everything, Mr. Crouch, which is clever—I do not deny it—you say the man is a Communist——

Mr. McMillan: Just one moment, your Honor. A while ago he said the witness was laboring under hallucinations. Now he is saying that he is clever.

Mr. Hallinan: Those are not mutually destructive. I have seen many clever madmen, Mr. McMillan.

Q. But you do use the device, don't you, Mr. Crouch, whether you be mad or clever? Let us pass by the——

Mr. McMillan: I ask that that be stricken out and the jury instructed to disregard it.

The Court: Yes, the jury is instructed to disregard the statement of Mr. Hallinan.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Mr. Crouch, did you ever hear of the Reuther plan?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. We will soon have the Marshall plan. I think we have had enough plans [3089] for today. I think we ought to come to some conclusion as to where all this is going to lead us. I have not heard that plan mentioned by the witness either on direct or cross-examination.

The Court: It may be relevant. I never heard of it here before.

Mr. Donohue: I object to it.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you ever hear of that plan?

A. I don't recall now. I have heard of many, many, innumerable plans.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I said that it was a plan for the production of 500 planes a day proposed by the United Automobile Workers? Do you remember that?

A. No, I don't recall it now. I do not deny it. I have no reason to deny it or doubt it. I have no recollection now.

Q. Do you know that Mr. Bridges and the Executive Board of the CIO in November, 1940, also voted for adoption of the Reuther plan?

A. I was not in California in 1940. I do not know what they did.

Q. That would not change your mind one way or the other anyhow, would it?

A. It would depend upon an examination of all factors concerned. [3090]

Q. Having this, you say that you as a courier or transcriber or whatever it was for the Communist Party composed a document which you delivered to Mr. Bridges or had delivered to him in October, 1941, to be recited by him at the CIO convention. Does it change your mind on that at all to know that Bridges voted for the principal part of that resolution, that is, the Murray plan, in November, 1940?

A. If the statement were correctly—if your question was accurately worded, I could answer it, but it is not correctly worded, because the Murray plan is only a minor incident and to supplement the convention, to supplement the resolution, the main parts of the resolution you have not even touched on or read. That is not the major part.

Q. Would it change your opinion any to know that in 1940 the resolution presented, as you say, by Mr. Pressman touching criminal activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation had also been voted upon by Mr. Bridges in Atlantic City in November, 1940?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please, because the mere asking of the question is an attempt by Mr. Hallinan to state as a fact that these incidents or these matters took place and there is no evidence of that other than Mr. Hallinan's statement. I object to it, if your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

The Witness: Will you read the question. [3091]

(Question read.)

A. No, because the Communist Party's position against the FBI remained as violent after June 22 as it was before.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): But at any rate, as regards those matters, Mr. Bridges' position, that is, conceding that he voted for them in 1940, was identically the same in October, 1941, wasn't it?

A. No reason for him to change because the Communist Party line didn't change.

Q. Didn't you tell us that Mr. Bridges had been holding against the Communist Party line and that you were going to expel him?

A. Yes, but not over the question of his telling the FBI, we certainly were not.

Q. Let us get this: Do you know how Mr. Bridges was appointed the head of the California CIO or director of the California CIO? Do you know the procedure by which he was placed in that position?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. And later removed? I suppose through the national office of the CIO, on the basis of recommendations from the Communist-controlled State organization.

Q. He was first appointed by John L. Lewis. Did you know that? A. I presume so.

Q. And then when John L. Lewis resigned as national president [2092] he was reappointed by Philip Murray. Did you know that?

A. Yes, on the basis of local autonomy.

Q. And he was appointed to that office by those two men, isn't that right? A. Correct.

Q. And you said in your previous testimony that the Communist Party was going to get him removed from that office in the CIO, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do they control both of those men, John L. Lewis and Philip Murray, or only one of them?

A. The statement is intended—The question is of a nature intended to confuse the witness and everyone else concerned. If you will state it correctly I will answer it.

Q. All right. Did you know that in April, 1941, the ILWU, that is, the longshore workers' union here in California, had already endorsed the Murray plan?

A. I don't recall. It is quite likely. I have no reason to doubt it.

Q. Did you know that in September, 1941, that is, the month before this meeting of the CIO convention, Harry Bridges had already submitted the plan together with a working diagram of it to Admiral Landis for use on the Pacific Coast?

A. I have no reason to doubt it.

Q. Did the Communist Party run anyone for President in the year [3093] 1940?

A. 1940? No, I don't believe so.

Q. Wasn't Earl Browder a candidate for President on the Communist ticket?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And Harry Bridges supported Willkie, didn't he?

A. Many Communists supported Democratic and Republican candidates in that election.

Q. Now, you were unable to recognize certain names on this 1938 list of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, but you stated that all of the people whose names appear on it were members of it, save and excepting that you could not recognize four of them. Do you remember that?

A. I cannot now recall the number of names. If you read them off again, I would be able to tell you the names I recognize and the names I never heard before.

Q. Do you know anybody whose name does not appear on this list that was given to you, that is, Defendants' Y for identification, do you know any person who was a member of the Committee for the year 1938 whose name does not appear on this?

A. Yes, at least three.

Q. Who are they?

A. Tony—at least three names anyway I can think of—Tony Minerich, James Matles, and Harry Bridges.

Q. Just a moment. Spell them. [3094]

A. Tony Minerich, M-i-n-e-r-i-c-h; James Matles, M-a-t-l-e-s, and Harry B-r-i-d-g-e-s.

Q. But I thought that was D-o-r-g-a-n or D-a-r-g-a-n last time you mentioned it. What about that?

A. With the various aliases common to most Party leaders.

Q. Those were the only three people you don't remember whose names should be on the list, is that right?

A. At this moment possibly. You are asking me out of a clear sky.

Q. Let us get this: For what length of time did a person elected to the national convention of the Central Committee serve?

A. Until the next convention. You mean elected to the Central Committee?

Q. Yes.

A. He served as a member of the Central Committee until the next election or until he was removed from the Central Committee.

Q. So if he were elected in 1936 he would serve what years?

A. Until a convention was held, which in this particular case happened to be in 1938.

Q. In May, 1938, was it?

A. To the best of my recollection.

Q. So if he were elected in June, 1936, he would serve until May, 1938?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. Unless, as often happened, he was removed, he was expelled [3095] from the Party, or removed from the Central Committee, or dropped from the Central Committee.

Q. Or died or something. Now, suppose he were elected in 1938; how long would he serve?

A. Until the next convention.

Q. And when was that?

A. As I recall, in 1940.

Q. So if a person served for the years 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1939, how many times would he have to be elected?

A. Twice. Will you recite the years again?

Q. 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1939.

A. Twice. [3096]

Q. And what time, what years would he be elected? A. '36 and '38.

Q. So he would be elected, then, in New York in June, 1936, and he would be elected at New York again in May, 1938, is that right? A. Correct.

Q. Now, aside from the three people whose names you gave us here, Tony Minerich, James Matles and Harry Bridges, or Harry Dorgan or Henry Harvey —whatever the name is—you know of nobody else on the 1938 election, elected to the Central Committee and above the names that appeared on the list you were shown, is that right?

A. If you were to give me that list to study, carefully, I might be able to recall additional names (document handed to witness). Oh, I don't see the name of the head of the secret underground apparatus, J. Peters, on this list. He was in the Central Committee.

Q. He was on the Central Committee. Now, you don't see Manning Johnson's name on there, do you?

A. I do not specifically recall Manning Johnson being reelected on the 1938 convention. He might have been. He was elected in 1936, to the best of my recollection, but I am not positive about his being elected in 1938. You would have to ask Mr. Johnson. I am not sure.

Q. Now, in discussing your leaving the Communist Party, you [3097] testified in part, referring to page 2598, that the circumstances under which you left "date back to my first disagreement on some issues with the Communist Party, in 1934, increasing differences which I felt throughout the years, becoming greater and greater, until November of 1934 I asked the District Bureau for permission to quit as a full-time organizer and go to work in private industry. My differences with the party were such that I couldn't, with a clear conscience, continue the responsibilities ~~of an organizer~~. And yet I hadn't quite reached the point where I felt that my differences were great enough to cease membership entirely.

Now, when was it that you arrived at the position where your dealings with the Communist Party had come to the breaking point?

A. It was over a period from the fall of—from about November, starting at about November of

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

1941, until the early spring of 1942, that I was becoming more and more convinced that I was doing harm to the working class and to my country by staying in the Communist Party. And I also felt that I should face the grave physical risks to myself and my family by leaving its ranks.

Q. And when did you first have any open discussion with them about leaving the organization?

A. I wasn't quite crazy enough to invite my death and my family's death by discussing that language. If I had, I would [3098] not be sitting here today testifying in this court. You can be sure of that.

Q. Oh, by the way, have you learned yet the names of the three men who sleep surrounding your bedroom? What are their names? Have you found them out yet?

A. I am not sleeping in the same bedroom I was before. I do not know.

Q. Well, have you still got the three guards sleeping one on each side and one across the hall?

A. I do not know, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. I do not know, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. You don't know me?

A. I do not know the answer to your question, Mr. Hallinan.

Q. Well, I say, are the three men still located in those positions that you testified to before?

A. I just stated, I do not know if they are or are not.

Q. When did you last see them in that place, in those places? A. Before I returned to Miami.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. When did you return to Miami?

A. The day after I got off the witness stand for the Christmas adjournment.

Q. You left the State of California?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have the consent of the Court to do so? [3099]

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor pleases; there is no showing that the witness needed the consent of the Court to go any place.

Mr. Hallinan: They were told to remain within the jurisdiction of this district, Your Honor, at the time that court adjourned.

Mr. Donohue: They were told, as far as I understand it, if Your Honor pleases, to hold themselves in readiness to be here today, and he and Mr. Johnson are here.

The Court: Yes, he is here today.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, where are you staying now?

A. I am staying at the Hotel Sutter.

Q. In a different room from the one you had before? A. I am.

Q. What room are you in now?

A. I am in Room five two seven, 527.

Q. Five two seven, 527. Now, is your wife with you?

A. Unfortunately, she is not. She is ill with flu, and also our son, who had three transfusions last week, requires her constant care.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. At any rate, she isn't with you?

A. She isn't.

Q. Now, is any agent sleeping in the room that you are in?

A. Not unless he is sleeping under the bed. I didn't look under the bed. [3100]

Q. Look, will you? A. Thanks.

Q. Now, Mr. Crouch, if there is any agent——

Mr. MacMillan: Do you want to report hereafter?

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Is any agent sleeping in the room next to you?

A. I have no knowledge. You should ask the hotel management.

Q. Well, at the time you left to return to Miami, or at the time you were testifying here before, there was an agent sleeping in the bedroom adjoining you on each side, isn't that right? A. Correct.

Q. Now, there was one also sleeping across the hall, is that right? A. Correct.

Q. Do you still go out to dinner alone or to movies?

A. I have not been out to any movies alone, or I have not been to dinner alone.

Q. You have not been to dinner alone. Whom do you go to dinner with since you have been back here?

A. Mr. Zamlich.

Q. How many times have you gone to dinner with Mr. Zamlich? A. Once.

Q. That was last night? A. Today. [3101]

Q. When did you return to San Francisco?

A. At 2:30 this morning my plane being about two and a half hours late because of bad weather.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And you landed down at San Francisco Airport, I take it, is that right.

A. It appeared to me, looking around, to be the San Francisco Airport.

Q. Did Mr. Zamlich meet you there?

A. Mr. Zamlich met me there, yes, sir.

Q. Met you there yesterday?

A. This morning.

Q. All right.

A. To be technically correct. It was scheduled to have been yesterday, the plane was due at 10:45. As I stated, it was two and a half hours late.

Q. And Mr. Zamlich was there when you arrived, is that right? A. That's correct.

Q. And then he drove you to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he alone in the car?

A. He was, I believe. I didn't look under the seat to find out if there was someone else, or in the trunk or anything like that. He is the only one I saw in the car.

Q. And then he took you directly to the Sutter Hotel, I take it, is that right? [3102]

A. I suppose he took me by the most direct route; I didn't check the street map.

Q. And then has he a room adjoining you?

A. I don't know. You will have to ask Mr. Zamlich. I have no knowledge where his room is.

Q. No agent that you know of has any room adjoining you?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. I have no knowledge on the subject.

Q. Did you ask to have agents assigned to those rooms? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ask for any kind of guards?

A. I asked that my—that adequate—I made the statement, it was necessary to have adequate protection, particularly I urged adequate physical protection for my home and my family at all times, and which is being done.

Q. There are guards now in your home?

A. That's right; my home is under constant guard by the Government.

Q. How many guards?

A. I do not know how many guards. I know that I have the assurance that my home would be under constant guard of the Federal Government during my absence from Miami.

Q. And you are not under guard, though?

A. Pardon me?

Q. You are not under guard here, no guard is taking care of you?

A. I don't know what the meaning of your question is. [3103]

Q. All right. You say—now, did you go to breakfast this morning with Mr. Zamlich?

A. I stepped across the street, in the next block, for breakfast.

Q. With Mr. Zamlich? A. No.

Q. Alone? A. Presumably.

Q. And then at lunchtime today, did anybody accompany you?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

A. It was lunch I was referring to as "dinner"; Mr. Zamlich.

Q. I see. Now, since you were on the witness stand before, have you received any money from the Government?

A. Yes, I received, I believe, about $90 before I left for Miami.

Q. And anything since?

A. Nothing whatever.

Q. So then you received altogether, personally, only $290, is that right, since you have been in San Francisco?

A. To the best of my recollection, somewhere in that figure, yes.

Q. All right. And did your wife receive any more money since you were on the stand before?

A. Before she left the plane, she received the same amount I did.

Q. $90? [3104]

A. Somewhere in there. That figure may be a little high. Possibly not over $70. I don't recall the exact amount of the check.

Q. Now, have you checked with any of the gentlemen connected with the defense or any of these agents to learn how much you are to receive for your services in this case?

A. I have checked with no one on any——

Q. You didn't ask them?

A. On any financial subject.

Mr. MacMillan: You don't mean the attorney for the defense, Mr. Hallinan?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Mr. Hallinan: At this time, if the Court please, we want to offer in evidence the list of the members of the 1938 committee which have been identified by this witness. It is part of the document offered as Defendant's Exhibit Y for identification. But all of the persons who are on the list have now been identified by this witness as actually being members of the Central Committee except that he says there were three persons whose names he gave and who do not appear.

Mr. Donohue: I object to it, if Your Honor pleases. The witness on cross-examination has identified certain persons on a certain list as having been, from his best recollection, members of the Central or National Communist Committee. He has said that there were certain officials, that some names he didn't recognize [3105]

Mr. Hallinan: Well, subject to those limitations. But at any rate, he has said there are four people on the list whose names he does not recognize, and there are three people who should appear on there who do not appear.

Mr. Donohue: The purpose, obviously, if Your Honor pleases, of introducing this piece of paper in evidence, is to establish by the fact of this piece of paper that tnese persons, are, as the paper would indicate, members of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. We have no——

Mr. Hallinan: So he has testified.

Mr. Donohue: We have no information as to where that paper came from, it is not authenticated or certified in any way, it certainly isn't admissible in evidence, and we object to it.

Mr. Hallinan: We showed, if the Court please, that that was the document that was sent to the Un-American Activities Committee by Browder, secretary of the Communist Party.

Mr. Donohue: Let Mr. Browder come in here and say that.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, bring him in; you seem to have control over all these Communists.

Mr. Donohue: You have his letter, bring him in here and we will ask him some questions.

Mr. Hallinan: Issue your ukase, or whatever you do, and bring him in. You know how to get him. We don't.

The Court: We have had the matter under discussion, when [3106] the paper or document was identified and marked for identification. And at that time I noted for the record that I doubted very seriously the admissibility, and there has been nothing to change the Court's mind in the interim.

Mr. Hallinan: But since that time, if the Court please, he has identified the people on it. He has said that that is the party, except for these omissions and the additions that he makes to it. That is all we want.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you stated that if Mr. Bridges didn't deliver this little resolution that you prepared, that the Communist Party was going to make a statement denouncing and condemning him as an enemy of labor, is that right?

A. I made that statement in connection with events of July, not in reference to this convention. And if you will check my testimony, you will find this to be true, if you look back in the transcript.

Q. All right, I don't care what the reason might be. But at any rate, you stated that was what was contemplated by the—shall we call it the "gang"?—or what would you call that outfit of yours that included these people that you have been talking about?

A. I would call it the Communist Party

Q. Well, just this little group that you were a member of. What would you call that? [3107]

A. The Communist leadership.

Q. All right, but here in San Francisco, in this district. Is that right? I mean, the ones that met out here on Haight Street that formulated these—this momentous resolution?

A. The District Bureau of the California-Nevada-Hawaii District of the Communist Party.

Q. All right. And you stated that the Communist Party, that that District Council, agreed with you what would be done was a statement would be issued denouncing and condemning Harry Bridges as an enemy of labor, but not mentioning the fact that he had been a member of the Communist Party, is that so?

A. That is in reference to events under discussion in early July, and this has no reference to the

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. Well, let's take early July. That was the thing that was going to be done, is that right?

A. If the information proved correct, that Bridges had refused to go along with the matter of support for Great Britain and France and the other allies and the others who were now allies of the Soviet Union, for all-out production, for the no-strike policy and all the other implications of the new line; and if he refused to go along with this and persisted or maintained the old line, then this was what was going to be done.

Q. What was going to be done was, you say, that you were going to issue a statement denouncing and condemning him as an enemy of labor, is that [3108] right?

A. That's correct.

Q. But not mentioning the fact that he had been a member of the Communist Party, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Now, you stated that when you met Mr. Bridges over at the CIO convention, somebody introduced you to him, is that right?

A. I think someone went through the formalities of an introduction, yes.

Q. Yes. And Mr. Bridges said, when he was introduced to you, "I am pleased to meet you," or something of that kind, isn't that right?

A. I think I said, I think I would have said, "How do you do, Mr. Bridges?" or something of this kind. Just a mere formality. I don't recall the words.

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. And you had never met him except on that occasion, isn't that right?

A. I stated I didn't recall the first time or the first place I met Mr. Bridges.

Q. Yes. You have no recollection of ever having met him before?

A. I didn't say anything of the kind.

Q. Beg your pardon?

A. I didn't say anything of the kind.

Q. I say, you have no recollection of ever having met him [3109] before?

A. I have. But the exact date, the exact time and place and the circumstances and so on, is not linked with specific circumstances that would enable me to distinguish that particular occasion and point it out, naming people who were there, the matter which was under discussion, and the circumstances and so on, surrounding it.

Q. Well, do you know who was the person that introduced you to Mr. Bridges at the CIO convention in Alameda?

A. I don't specifically recall. I think a trade union leader who was along with me went through the formalities of an introduction. That is my impression.

Q. I see. And you acknowledged the introduction to Mr. Bridges, didn't you?

A. Yes, essentially.

Q. And you never saw Mr. Bridges out at any of these meetings of that District Council, did you?

A. Pardon me?

(Testimony of Paul Crouch.)

Q. You never met him before, Mr. Bridges, at any meeting of this so-called District Council, did you?

A. You mean the District Bureau of the Communist Party?

Q. Yes.

A. No, Mr. Bridges was never present at any meeting of the District Bureau of the Communist Party at which I was present.

Mr. Hallinan: That is all. [3110]

Mr. Donohue: Shall we take our recess at this time, if Your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Hallinan: Now, Your Honor, we have some more cross-examination of the witness Manning, so if he is available, we would like to have him for the next.

The Court: He is available.

We will take the afternoon recess, ladies and gentlemen. In the interim, bear in mind the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until the matter is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.) [3111]

Mr. Donodue: If your Honor please, we have no further questions of this witness.

The Court: Call the witness Manning Johnson for further cross-examination by Mr. Hallinan.

MANNING JOHNSON

recalled; previously sworn.

Mr. Donohue: May I ask, if your Honor please, if two counsel are going to cross-examine Mr. Johnson?

Mr. Hallinan: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: I understood Mr. MacInnis examined him before.

Mr. Hallinan: We have the privilege of examining him.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Hallinan:

Q. Mr. Johnson, were you familiar with the persons who were members of the Central Committee of the Communist Party for the year 1938?

A. Some of them.

Q. You attended a convention in 1938, did you not? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And voted for the members?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you ever know a man who was a colored preacher, had been a colored preacher from Chicago named Ray Hansboro?

A. The name is familiar. I don't recall at present. The name [3112] is familiar.

Q. If my recollection serves me correctly, he had been a minister in Chicago and then was a member of the National Committee even after the year 1944. Here is a printed list for the year 1944, and down about in the middle of the second row you will find the name. Will you take a look at it? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. On the 1938 list also his name appears. Let me see if I can find it for you. Yes; they follow in alphabetical order: Gold, Green, and then his name, Ray Hansboro. Do you remember anything about that?

A. No, I don't recall anything about him.

Q. Do you remember that he had been a minister in Chicago? A. That I don't know.

Q. Do you recall if he was a colored man?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall that there was such a man at all?

A. I recall the name. I have heard of it in Party circles at one time or another.

Q. You remember he was at times a member of the National Committee of the Party?

A. That I am not sure of.

Q. There is another name that I notice here, Haaland, Jasper Haaland. Do you remember that name at all? And that occurs right under the Hansboro name or above it. [3113]

A. No, I never heard that name before.

Q. Did you hear of a woman by the name of Rose Biltmore? A. Rose Biltmore?

Q. Yes. Her name appears under a list called "Candidates."

A. I don't know a Rose Biltmore.

Q. Did you ever hear of a man named Harry Gwinn? A. No.

Q. His name also appears among the candidates for the 1938 convention. The only name you remember of those mentioned is Ray Hansboro, is that correct? A. I heard the name before.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. You say that you met Harry Bridges in New York for the first time at a meeting of the National Committee in June of 1936, is that correct?

A. That is at the 1936 convention.

Q. That is correct? A. That is correct.

Q. That is the first time you ever met him?

A. That is correct.

Q. At that time you did not speak to him personally? A. No.

Q. And you never met him again? A. No.

Q. With relation to the persons who were members of the National Committee at times when you were a member, had you known all the [3114] people on the National Committee before you were elected to it?

A. I wouldn't say that I knew them all. Some of them I met for the first time.

Q. How many of them did you meet for the first time? What percentage would you say?

A. I don't recall now. That is going back quite a number of years.

Q. Then I suppose of them in addition to Mr. Bridges you never met again, is that right?

A. Oh, some of the others I saw after at meetings of the National Committee.

Q. How many members were there of the National Committee in 1936? I think you already told us.

A. I think there was fifty some.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Fifty-four, I think you said. A. Yes.

Q. How many of those people were friends of yours? A. Friends of mine?

Q. Yes.

A. I wouldn't say we were friends. We were fellow Communists together.

Q. Were any of them personal friends of yours?

A. Personal friends?

Q. Yes.

A. I wouldn't say I had any personal friends in the Party. [3115]

Q. When a person was elected in 1936 what years did his tenure cover?

A. Well, his tenure—he finished out the year of 1938—I mean 1936, 1937 and 1938, up until the newly elected National Committee met after the convention in 1938.

Q. And then how long did the persons who were elected in 1938 continue to serve?

A. Well, they continued to serve until the next convention.

Q. You were asked this question by Mr. MacInnis:

> "Well, tell me this: Would there be any place where there would be a written record of the members elected to the National Committee in that year?
> "A. Well, there possibly is, and I will tell you why I say that: because at a meeting, at the convention they would have 28 or 30 women stenographers. They took down a stenographic record of every single remark made by every speaker at the convention. They would type up in copies of five on onion-skin paper. After they are typed they are given—they are given to each speaker to correct or make any changes or modifications. After that they are turned in and they are retyped and they are—some copies are sent to—were sent to the Communist International, and other to various Party commissions in Moscow. This—so—those are the sources that I can say that you can find the actual speeches or you could possibly [3116] find the actual speeches that were made. As far as the general resolutions and parts of the summary that is finally edited, they may be published in some of the—in copies of the Communist, or some of the copies of the Daily Worker."

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Do you remember so testifying?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. That was with regard to the convention. Now, with regard to the national convention did you say this:

"Q. . . . you say that stenographers were present during that convention?

"A. Yes, they always had them. They had them at National Committee meetings, too.

"Q. There were stenographers present at this National Committee meeting, is that true?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. About how many?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

"A. Well, at the National Committee meeting they would have possibly a half dozen stenographers, and they would have the typewriters in an anteroom, and they would take down the speeches stenographically."

Do you remember so testifying? A. Yes.

Q. Then with relation to the candidates for the National Committee you testified as follows: [3117]

"J. Peters and Abe Benson very closely guarded every single copy of the list of members of the National Committee. Each copy, if I recall correctly, was numbered numerically. J. Peters or Abe Benson would walk over to the head of each delegation and present the head of the delegation with a typewritten copy, maybe No. 1 or No. 2, depending on what the number of that delegation was, and he would look, the head of the delegation would look over this list of names. Then they would pass it around to the other delegates in that delegation and they would scrutinize it. After they had finished, then J. Peters would come over and pick up that list. He would follow that procedure, going from one delegation to the other. Abe Benson would do the same thing. After they had collected all of those lists, then the question of voting would come up. A motion would be made that the entire slate be accepted and everybody would vote. There was never any dissension. That is the principle. That is how it was handled.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

"Q. These were typewritten lists?

"A. Yes, on onion-skin paper."

Do you remember that? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is that the procedure that was followed?

A. That was the procedure when I was with the Party. [3118]

Q. In other words, they would have lists of the proposed candidates for the National Committee on onion-skin paper typed out, and each list would be numbered separately so they would follow in rotation, and Mr. Peters and Mr. Benson would distribute a list to each head of each delegation, is that correct?

A. That was the procedure followed.

Q. And the head of that delegation would then take it up with the separate members of his delegation, and I suppose they would have a discussion of some kind upon the members, and then these two men would collect all of these lists once more, is that right?

A. I would say that the lists would be turned back to the head of the delegation, and then the person who gave us the list would collect.

Q. So that how many lists would be made all together, would you say, at each convention?

A. I don't know. I never counted them. It depended upon the number of delegations they had.

Q. The first time that you were ever questioned by any person concerning the Communist Party—I mean by any of the Government agents—was in relation to Harry Bridges, isn't that right?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I don't understand you.

Q. The first conversation that you had with any Government [3119] agent regarding testimony against Communists or concerning the Communist Party related to Harry Bridges, isn't that correct?

A. When are you speaking of specifically?

Q. Well, you remember testifying in the Eisler case, don't you? A. Yes.

Q. The Gerhard Eisler case? That was held in Washington in July, 1947, and in answer to these questions you gave these answers, did you not? See if you can recognize them:

> "Q. Now, isn't it true that long before the visit of that particular FBI agent, referring to the one that came to see you first, isn't it true that before that time you had given information to some representative of the police or Government with respect to your activities in the Communist Party?
> "A. (By You): Let's see if I can recall. Just a minute. Yes. At the time of the Bridges trial I was questioned with regard to my knowledge of Bridges' activities. Apart from that there were no others."

Do you remember that? And then you were asked:

> "In what place was the examination conducted?"

The Court: What is your answer? One moment.

The Witness: I was thinking then.

The Court: Do you wish to see the transcript?

The Witness: I would like to see the transcript of [3120] testimony.

Mr. Hallinan: I will mark it up so he can't mistake that. If you will look at pages 921, 922 and 923, the parts marked off in pencil; that will help you out. A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember that testimony?

A. Yes, I do recall that.

Q. Is it a fact that the first time that any inquiry was made of you concerning Communists or the Communist Party related to Harry Bridges?

A. Yes, that was the first one I recall.

Q. In other words, you had never been asked nor given any information to any officer or official of the Government prior to being questioned about the Bridges case?

A. I had not been questioned prior to that by any other official of the Government.

Q. And that took place in New York City?

A. Yes, that took place in New York City.

Q. As I remember your testimony, you were questioned by a certain police inspector. Do you remember his name?

A. No. I think his name was Mulholland.

Q. In the 23rd Precinct of New York City, you say you ~~were called~~ in by Detective Inspector Mulholland and interviewed about 45 minutes.

A. I don't recall exactly how long I was in there.

Q. And then you came out to the West Coast and prepared to testify in the Bridges case, but did not testify, is that correct?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I came out prepared to testify, but I was not called.

Q. Do you remember testifying before the Canwell Committee in the State of Washington in the year 1948? A. Yes.

Q. You have already testified that you did so testify. A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember being shown a picture of Mr. Bridges on that occasion?

A. I think I was shown a picture of Harry Bridges shaking hands with Molotov or something.

Q. It was some sort of banquet; it was a picture of a banquet that took place at the Russian consulate in San Francisco following the Russian victory at Stalingrad. Do you remember that?

A. I don't remember what it was in connection with. I was just shown the picture.

Q. Do you remember that Mr. Brady, the president of the American President Lines, was on one side, and on the other side of Mr. Molotov, Mr. Bridges?

A. I don't recall. I recall Mr. Bridges shaking hands with Molotov, if I recall correctly.

Q. On that occasion when you were shown that picture you were asked this: "Mr. Johnson, here is Exhibit 9 which was introduced here yesterday. I will ask you to observe this [3122] exhibit and see if you recognize any of the people there." To which you replied, "Oh, yes, yes, yes. That is my old friend and comrade Harry Bridges."

Did you so testify?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. Yes, that is right. If it is in the record I so testified.

Q. But Mr. Bridges was not a friend of yours, was he?

A. Well, it depends on how you express it.

Q. What you were trying to do was give this Canwell Committee the impression that Mr. Bridges was an old friend of yours, weren't you?

A. Well, I said it more in a sarcastic way than any other way.

Q. Let's see now another matter here. You were asked this question: "Did you ever attend any meetings of the National Convention of the Communist Party?

> "A. Yes, I attended the convention in Cleveland and also the convention in New York City in 1938."

Did you so answer?

A. May I see the testimony, please?

Q. Yes, the top of the page where it is marked. (Handing transcript to witness.) [3123]

The Clerk: The witness asks if you are sure it is his testimony.

Mr. Hallinan: Certainly that is your testimony.

The Witness: I see, yes.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I submit, Your Honor, he is only entitled to look at the particular matter.

The Witness: I was merely looking to see if this was my testimony. You showed me a page here; I don't know what precedes it.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Well, I would show you the rest of it if I may have it back, so there is no question about it being your testimony.

A. I will read this in the meantime. (Examining.)

Q. Was that your testimony? A. Yes.

Q. Were you under oath?

A. Was I under oath?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. You had been sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, hadn't you?

A. That's correct.

Q. And in answer to the question, "Now did you ever attend any meetings of the national convention of the Communist Party?", you answerd, "Yes, I attended the convention in Cleveland [3124] and also the convention in New York City in 1938." That was your answer, wasn't it?

A. From what you say—what is written in that book may be one thing and what I answered another. I said, if I recall correctly, from 1934 until 1938 I attended three conventions, '34, '36 and '38. If I recall correctly, every convention from 1934 to '38.

Q. Just a moment, Mr. Johnson.

A. If I recall correctly.

Q. I want an answer to this one question. Now, if you say "No," well, then, we will have another method of handling it. A. Well, let's have it.

Q. Did you give the answer to the question, "Now, did you ever attend any meeting of the national convention of the Communist Party?", did you answer, "Yes, I attended the convention in Cleveland and also the convention in New York City in 1938." Did you give that testimony?

Mr. Donohue: May I arise, if Your Honor pleases, to ask whether we are, or the witness is, being interrogated and shown an official report of the transaction which occurred at that meeting?

Mr. Hallinan: This is an official record of the Un-American Activities of the State of Washington; 1948, report of the Joint Legislative Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities. It is put out by the State of Washington, established [3125] by the thirtieth legislature and by House Concurrent Resolution No. 10. It is the official document from the State of Washington.

Mr. Donohue: That isn't what I asked, Your Honor. If Your Honor please, an official report of the committee may include some, perhaps not all, or perhaps not any, of the official transcript of the questions and answers placed before this witness.

Mr. Hallinan: He can have no consolation in that, Your Honor, because not only is this a verbatim statement of all the matters, but they weren't even taken down by a stenographer, they were taken down by electronic transmission. That appears in the document.

Mr. Donohue: I know nothing about it, if Your Honor please. I simply rise to ask the question. Is the witness being shown an official transcript of the question and answers which were proposed to him?

Mr. Hallinan: Certainly he is.

Q. What is your answer to it?

A. I have stated my answer.

Q. Did you give the answer that I just read to you?

A. I won't say I did, and I won't say I didn't; for the simple reason that I, in the reading of the copy of the testimony that was given me, there were a number of mistakes that were made in the transcription or translation, stenographically or otherwise, of the testimony given. [3126]

Q. Now let me ask you this: Were you ever a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party? A. That's correct, I was.

Q. You were? A. That's right.

Q. When?

A. That's right. From 1936 through until 1938.

Q. What month in 1936 did you commence being a member of that committee?

A. I was elected at the convention in 1936.

Q. What month?

A. That was in the summer months.

Q. You were elected at the convention in the summer months of 1936; what month?

A. At the convention that took place in New York City.

Q. What day of the convention?

A. I don't recall—that is thirteen years ago—what exact date I was elected.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Which day of the convention were you elected? A. I don't recall which day.

Q. When did your term of office end?

A. My term of office ended at the time of the election of the new National Committee, at the 1938 convention.

Q. What part of the year 1938 was that in?

A. That was in the—during the warm months of 1938. [3127]

Q. The warm months? A. That's right.

Q. Well, now, tell me if, in answer to the following question before the Canwell Committee, you gave the following answer:

> "Q. Now, did you receive at any time any other position?
>
> "A. Yes. I became later a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party.
> "Q. What year was that?
> "A. From 1936 up until 1939."

Did you answer that?

A. Yes, I was a member of the National Committee up until the convention, and after that was on the Negro commission of the National Committee,——

Q. No, we are not asking that.

A. (Continuing): ——and the Trade Union commission of the National Committee.

Q. Now just stay with the one question, Mr. Johnson.

A. Yes. Well, I am answering your question.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. Now, when you were giving this testimony, what you wanted to do was deceive this Canwell Committee into believing that Harry Bridges had been a friend of yours, isn't that correct?

Mr. Donodue: I object to the question, if Your Honor pleases.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we are entitled to inquire into the state of mind—— [3128]

The Court: Overruled.

A. No, I wasn't trying to deceive the committee. I just merely said it sarcastically.

Q. Sarcastically? A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell the committee you were saying it sarcastically?

A. Well, they could tell by the manner in which I said it that it was sarcastic.

Q. Well, the first time that any inquiry was made by you concerning any proceedings against Communists was in the State of New York around the year 1940 or 1941. That's right, isn't it?

A. I think it was about that time.

Q. And at that time, over in the 23rd Precinct of the State of New York, Inspector Mulholland asked you if you knew anything about Harry Bridges, isn't that right?

A. Yes, he called me in to ask me a few questions.

Q. Yes. And you didn't tell Inspector Mulholland that Harry Bridges had been a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, did you, Mr. Johnson?

A. I don't recall what Mulholland asked me and I don't recall what I told him.

Q. Did you tell him that Mr. Bridges had ever been a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party?

A. I don't recall what Mulholland asked. It was just a few cursory, a few questions that he asked, and I answered them. [3129]

Q. How long did the examination take?

A. Oh, I don't know how long it took. Just a few minutes. He asked me a few questions.

Q. Didn't you testify in the Eisler case that it took 45 minutes? You just refreshed your recollection by looking at this document. Do you remember that now, Mr. Johnson? You have been testifying about matters that happened some thirteen years ago, and not ten minutes ago you read this document in which you were asked, "How long did this interview take?" That is, the interview with detective-inspector Mulholland in the 23rd Precinct in New York?, and you answered, "About 45 minutes," didn't you?

A. Are you reading from the testimony there? May I see it?

Q. You have read it already. Don't you recall?

A. I don't recall reading that section of it.

(Document handed to witness by the Clerk.)

Q. Now, do you remember it took 45 minutes?

A. I so testified at that particular time.

Q. Well, do you remember now that it took 45 minutes?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. It sort of refreshes my memory.

Q. And you didn't tell them that Harry Bridges had ever been a member of the National Committee, did you?

A. I don't recall what I told Inspector Mulholland, because there was no stenographic record kept of what was said. I was merely asked a few questions with regard to if I knew Harry [3130] Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, and that sort of thing. And I explained to them that I did.

Q. And then some seven years afterwards, way out on the opposite coast from New York, one of the questions that was put to you was, "Do you know anything about Harry Bridges?", isn't that right?

A. Beg pardon? Will you repeat that again?

Q. I say, then some seven or eight years later; that is to say, in 1948, and before the Canwell Committee away out on the opposite part of the United States in the State of Washington when you appeared there, the same question was put to you, "Do you know anything about Harry Bridges?", isn't that right?

A. Yes, they asked me the question. The Canwell Committee did ask me that question.

Q. Are you a married man? A. Yes, I am.

Q. Living with your wife? A. Yes, I am.

Q. Where?

A. I wouldn't tell you, because since I was away quite a few persons have come over and threatened and intimidated the people, and I have reported it to the FBI.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. You mean by that——

A. And I wouldn't tell you where because I do not wish to have my family intimidated as they have been since I have been out [3131] here.

Q. Your family? A. Yes.

Q. Now, is Mrs. Bond your wife?

A. No, Mrs. Bond is not my wife.

Q. That is the lady with whom you are living, are you? A. That is my landlady.

Q. And where does Mrs. Bond live?

A. She lives at 62 West 125th Street. That is where the people visited and threatened her and intimidated her.

Q. Yes? A. Yes.

Q. And she is living at 62 West 125th Street. That is in Harlem? A. That's right.

Q. All right. And how many rooms has she there?

A. She has—one, two, three, four, five.

Q. How long have you been living there?

A. I have been living there since, oh, about, oh, several months.

Q. Several months. Have you been living there more than a year?

A. I imagine about that. I wouldn't say a year. I wouldn't say positively on that.

Q. Does your wife reside in New York?

A. No, my wife does not live in New York.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. How long is it since you have seen your wife?

A. I saw her Christmas.

Q. When did you see her before that time?

A. Just before——

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, Mr. Johnson. Unless there is some stated purpose, if Your Honor pleases,——

Mr. Hallinan: Well, we don't have to state the purpose. We have a purpose and I think we could show it to you presently, but a stated purpose is not necessary in the cross-examination.

Mr. Donohue: May I suggest to Your Honor that a rule of law which is recognized by most lawyers has been called to the attention of Mr. Hallinan on a number of occasions. I think again I should say to Your Honor that if the purpose of this examination is to inquire into matters the sole purpose of which is to attempt to degrade this witness, that the question ought not to be asked and Mr. Hallinan should be so instructed.

Mr. Hallinan: We haven't any intention of degrading him. I don't think I could degrade this witness.

Mr. Donohue: I am sure you couldn't. But, I think, if Your Honor pleases, that counsel should be told that that is the rule of law, and if that is the purpose of this question, my objection should be sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: That isn't the purpose, Your Honor. I have another purpose. I don't care whether he is married or not married, except for one particular reason. [3133]

The Court: All right, proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): When did you see your wife prior to going back to New York?

A. Just before I came out here.

Q. Had you heard from her in the meantime, during the time you were out here until you went back to New York?

A. Yes, she wrote to me. I received a few letters.

Q. All right. Now, talking about this degrading Mr. Donohue just mentioned about, you testified in here that for some number of years you lived in a cesspool. Remember that testimony? What address was that?

A. When I used that particular term, I was speaking in connection with the Communist Party. I say it is a political cesspool, that is what I said.

Q. You said you lived——

A. In the Communist Party.

A. And slept in a cesspool.

A. In the Communist Party, which is a political cesspool. The Communist Party is a political cesspool.

Q. Well, that is something that I think that will not take much conviction to assure me, Mr. Johnson; so you don't have to press the matter too hard.

A. Well, that was——

Q. Now, in other words, when you said you were living in a cesspool, living, eating and sleeping in a cesspool, you weren't [3134] actually doing so, is that right?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. I was when I was in the Communist Party. I said in the Communist Party.

Q. Well, where was the cesspool located?

A. The Communist Party is a political cesspool, slimy and filthy.

Q. You didn't say a political cesspool; you said a cesspool.

A. Cesspool—that is what it is, stinking, rank.

Q. Now, then, you weren't actually living in a literal cesspool?

A. Yes; when you live in the Communist Party you are living in a filthy, slimy political cesspool.

Q. And you lived in that cesspool?

A. Yes, and every Communist lives in it.

Q. And when you were testifying before the Canwell Committee you also testified that every Communist is a traitor, isn't that right?

A. I say, yes, that a Communist is a traitor.

Q. Well, you testified, every Communist is a traitor. That's right, isn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. All right. You were a Communist, is that right? A. Yes, I was a Communist.

Q. All right. Now, you also testified this way: You referred to Communists as bloody, slimy, stinking, scummy Communists, [3135] isn't that right?

A. I presume I did; I would have to see the testimony. But if I did, I wouldn't take back one iota of that.

(Document handed to the witness by the Clerk.)

The Clerk: Will you indicate where that was again?

Mr. Hallinan: Pardon me. It is right here, Ed. on page 171, where it is marked with pencil (indicating).

(Document examined by witness.)

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you so testify?

A. Yes, it is in the record.

Q. So that you also testified in this trial that every Communist is a liar, isn't that right?

A. I say that again, that they are.

Q. All right. And you said every Communist practices duplicity and deceit, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. So then at some part of your career, Mr. Johnson, if not at all parts of it, of your career, you can describe yourself as a traitor, liar, bloody, slimy, stinking and scummy, isn't that right?

A. I can describe——

Q. Well, answer that yes or no.

A. I can describe every Communist—I think that fits every Communist, including the defendant Bridges.

Q. Yes? [3136] A. Yes.

Q. But if Mr. Bridges isn't a Communist, why, then, of course he wouldn't fit in with you?

A. Oh, he is.

Q. All right. But let's take this. We will get away from Mr. Bridges a minute. We will get a little vignette of yourself a little description of yourself. At least, up until the recent time, by your own description now, you are a liar, a traitor, bloody, slimy, stinking, scummy and fit only to live in a cesspool, isn't that right?

Mr. Donohue: It is a typical Hallinanism, if Your Honor please. I object to the question; it is argumentative. The witness has already conceded.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Well, I think with that concession, we can dispense with any further discussion, Your Honor. That is all.

The Court: That is all.

Mr. Donohue: Just a moment, Mr. Johnson. May I ask Your Honor before this——

Mr. Hallinan: Oh, yes, there is one other matter. I forgot about this.

Mr. Donohue: There is one I shan't forget about, Mr. Johnson.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Now, you remember in this Eisler case that you testified that you had met Earl Browder who was national [3137] secretary of the Communist Party, and two leaders of the Canadian Communist Party named Tim Buck and Carr; do you remember that?

A. I remember testifying in the Gerhard Eisler case that with regard to a meeting, a secret party meeting that was held——

Mr. Hallinan (to the Clerk): Will you show this to him?

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

A. (Continuing): ——that was held in Buffalo back in 1933, if I recall correctly.

(Document handed to the witness.)

Q. Do you remember so testifying?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You testified that you met Earl Browder, who was national secretary of the Communist Party, and two leaders of the Canadian Communist Party, named Tim Buck and Carr, isn't that right? [3138]

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Now, without going through all these documents here picking out your testimony, it did develop afterwards that at the time of that meeting, Messrs. Tim Buck and Carr were in jail in Canada, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. All right. And the Government came in and conceded that at least as to that, you were still a liar, didn't they?

A. They did no such thing. In fact, I was not called upon to identify Tim Buck and Carr. I only reported on a meeting that was arranged secretly in Buffalo, and I, and the persons who were present were representatives of the Canadian Party. They were introduced to me by those names and that name was the only name that I knew them by. I had never seen them before and I have never seen them since. The only two persons in that group that I ever saw after that meeting was Earl Browder and Gerhard Eisler. Gerhard Eisler's name at that time——

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Q. We don't care about Gerhard Eisler's name. We are concerned with your identifying people who just by good luck happened to be either in jail, in Canada, or making a speech at Stockton. That is what we are concerned with.

A. It is not uncommon that people use the names of other persons as an alibi; it is not uncommon.

Q. Let me ask you this:——

A. That they used that to cover up further movements and, [3139] activities of leading Communists. That is not new.

Q. All right, all right.

A. That is a part and parcel of the Party policy and tactics.

Q. Now, let me ask you this question, if you will: This George Hewitt, who is an intimate of yours, where is he now?

A. I don't know where he is.

Q. He is in Bellevue insane asylum, isn't he?

A. No, he isn't, to my knowledge.

Q. When was he let out?

A. By my best knowledge, he is at home with his family.

Q. When did he get out of Bellevue?

A. I don't know, but I know he is at home with his family.

Q. Now, let me ask you if this isn't a fact, that at the time you were testifying before the Canwell Committee, your friend George Hewitt said that a professor in the University of Washington named Melvin Rader had attended a Communist school in

New York, that thereafter Mr. Rader was able to prove by documentary proof that he was in Washington at the time, and a warrant was issued for your friend Hewitt's arrest on the ground of perjury, and that then for the first time you came in and in the extradition proceedings in New York testified that you had seen Rader in New York at the same time. Isn't that right?

Mr. Donohue: Is that a question, if your Honor pleases, or is it an unlimited series of questions? Object to it. [3140]

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Hallinan: Beg your pardon?

The Court: Sustained. It is argumentative, Mr. Hallinan, and you might rephrase it in some form. This matter has been gone into before, and you might rephrase that if you wish in some other form.

Q. (By Mr. Hallinan): Did you testify in the extradition proceedings of George Hewitt in New York?

A. I testified in the extradition, proceedings.

Q. Did you testify that you had seen Professor Rader in New York during the time that you—that Hewitt said that he was there?

A. I did see Professor Rader in New York at a secret school in upstate New York during that year.

Q. Yes?

A. Because I taught a class up there during that year.

Q. Yes. The extradition proceeding in New York

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

was in response to an indictment for perjury issued against Hewitt from the State of Washington, isn't that right?

A. I don't recall what it was, but I knew it involved the question of extradition, and I know the judge refused to extradite him.

Q. Yes. The Government protected him, didn't they?

A. I don't say the Government protected him at all. I think you would have to read from the record the statement of the [3141] judge in that matter. I couldn't supply the answer.

Mr. Hallinan: Nothing further.

Mr. Donohue: Now, if your Honor pleases, before Mr. Johnson leaves the stand, in the light of the information which was brought to your Honor's attention in the absence of the jury on Tuesday morning of last week, I now ask your Honor to instruct this jury with respect to the question asked by Mr. MacInnis of this witness, whether it was not a fact that he had been convicted of a felony, which Mr. MacInnis said he would prove.

The Court: Yes. Heretofore, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, the witness on the stand, Manning Johnson, was asked by Mr. James Martin MacInnis, counsel for the defendants, whether he had been convicted of a felony. And thereafter it was determined that the witness Manning Johnson had not been convicted of a felony or any crime. In addition, the witness Manning Johnson was asked whether he operated a bootlegging establishment, and in that connection, as far as the record shows, the circumstances surrounding the question, there was no evidence to fortify that question, and accordingly the Court instructs you to disregard the several questions and each of them, and to ignore the same.

(Testimony of Manning Johnson.)

Does that satisfy your request?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: That is all. [3142]

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we have now reached the period of recess and adjournment, and we will take our adjournment until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock unless we have some other matters?

The Clerk: No, your Honor.

The Court: Ten o'clock in the morning. I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, nor to form or express an opinion thereon until the case is finally submitted to you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, January 4, 1950, at 10:00 a.m.)

Wednesday, January 4, 1950—10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The Court: Call the next witness.

Mr. Donohue: The witness is here, if your Honor pleases, ready to be sworn. Mr. Lawrence Ross.

LAWRENCE S. ROSS

called for the Government; sworn.

The Clerk: Will you state your full name to the Court and jury.

The Witness: Lawrence Seton Ross.

A. I had my headquarters in North Carolina, but traveled throughout North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Q. And when you left your headquarters in North Carolina in 1940, where did you then go?

A. I went to Fort Smith, Arkansas.

Q. What was your business or occupation at Fort Smith? A. The same.

Q. Were you still representing the same union?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And you remained there how long?

A. Approximately a year.

Q. And where did you go then, if you went any place?

A. I went briefly to New Orleans in the same capacity.

Q. And you remained there how long?

A. A month or six weeks.

Q. And you went from there to where?

A. Then I went from there back to North Carolina, still on the same business.

Q. How long did you remain on your return to North Carolina?

A. Approximately two months, I would say.

Q. And then where did you go?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Then I went back to Forth Smith, Arkansas.

Q. Still in the same position, the same union?

A. Still in the same position.

Q. How long did you remain on your return to Fort Smith? [3149]

A. Several weeks. Then I went back to North Carolina.

Q. How long did you remain in North Carolina on your third visit?

A. Approximately a month and a half or two months.

Q. Did you then return back to Fort Smith?

A. That is right. Then I made Fort Smith my home for approximately six months.

Q. Were you still employed by the same union?

A. Not on my return to Fort Smith.

Q. What was your occupation then?

A. I was unemployed for about six months.

Q. When you finally obtained employment, what was the employment?

A. Managing editor of a newspaper in Capitol Hill, Oklahoma City.

Q. And how long did you remain in Oklahoma City?

A. From January of 1941 until the end of September, I believe, 1941.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. I went to Russellville, Arkansas. [3150]

Q. In a newspaper capacity?

A. Yes, city editor for a Russellville newspaper, Courier-Democrat.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And how long did you remain there?

A. Until December, 1946.

Q. And when you left that newspaper, where did you then go? A. I went to Memphis.

Q. And you have been in Memphis until this time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a married man, Mr. Ross?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you live in Memphis with your wife and family? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where and when was it, Mr. Ross, and under what circumstances that you joined the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We object to that, if the Court please, as calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness; not the best evidence; not binding upon the defendants in this case, and calling for facts done outside the presence of the defendant, res inter alia actae.

Mr. Donohue: May we, if your Honor please, with respect to a ruling on this question, as with respect to the same objection to a like question addressed to a number of other witnesses, ask counsel to again stipulate that his objection will be considered as having been made to each of a succeeding number of [3151] questions along the same line as were asked before?

Mr. MacInnis: On that point we will enter into the stipulation, your Honor.

The Court: The objection is overruled, the stipulation becomes a part of the record.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May we again ask that your Honor instruct the jury as to the purport of that?

The Court: Yes, I was about to do that, Mr. MacInnis.

The jury is now instructed that this evidence with respect to the entry of the witness or the proposed entry of the witness into the Communist Party and into the intramural and internal affairs of the party, in so far as this testimony is presently concerned, is not binding upon any of the defendants. I have heretofore instructed you with respect to this phase of the matter.

Mr. Donohue: Mr. Reporter, could you now refer back to the question to which objection was made and read it to the witness?

(Record read.)

A. It was in Los Angeles at the beginning of 1932. At that time I had made contact with an organization known as The International Labor Defense, which was headed in Los Angeles by a woman whose name is Lillian Goodman. Knowing of my newspaper activity, she asked me to help them write out some leaflets.

Mr. MacInnis: Just a moment. Now, your Honor, the answer [3152] transgresses the limits obviously allowed by your Honor's ruling. We cannot have the record filled with hearsay statements. We ask that the answer be stricken.

The Court: The answer may go out, the fact that the witness was approached by Lillian Goodman and the contact may remain of record; but the conversation may be deleted from the record.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Subsequent to the conversation, without relating the conversation you had with this named woman, did you then file a formal application for membership in the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That question is now leading and suggestive, informing the witness what the answer is which the examiner desires he shall hear.

The Court: Overruled. A. I did.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you recall to whom or at what place you filed this application or what you did with it?

A. I gave the application card to Miss Goodman at the headquarters of the International Labor Defense.

Q. In Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you ultimately receive a membership card or book? A. I did.

Q. May I ask you whether or not, when you applied for membership [3153] in the Communist Party, you did so in your own name or did you use some other name?

A. Yes, my own name.

Q. At all times during the period of your membership in the Communist Party, were you enrolled under your own name, Mr. Ross? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the time as stated by you, when you came to San Francisco, did you occupy any position with the Communist Party during the period of time that you lived in San Francisco? A Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us what position or positions you occupied here?

A. At first, co-editor of the Western Worker.

Q. And will you tell us what the Western Worker was?

A. The Western Worker was then the official organ of the Communist Party in the West.

Q. When did you become the co-editor of the Western Worker, Mr. Ross?

A. Upon my arrival in San Francisco.

Q. And how long did you continue as its co-editor? A. Approximately six months.

Q. And then what next was your position with the party?

A. Editor of the Western Worker. [3164]

Q. And over how long a peroid did you continue as editor?

A. Until my leaving San Francisco.

Q. Did you occupy any other position in the Communist Party during the period of your residence in San Francisco?

A. Yes, I was the county organizer, San Francisco County organizer.

Q. Did you occupy any other position?

A. No, sir, not that I can recall.

Q. When you came to San Francisco, did you transfer your membership in the Communist Party, or was it necessary, from Los Angeles to San Francisco?

A. I, of my own action, did nothing about it. It was done for me, I assume, by the organizational department of the party.

Q. Who was the district organizer for the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The same objection to that, your Honor, calling for hearsay, calling for the opinion and conclusion of this witness upon a matter not probative of any issue in this case.

Mr. Donohue: A member of an organization, your Honor, certainly ought to know who the highest executive officer of that organization is.

Mr. MacInnis: Not the best evidence, and we repeat the same objection, that no showing has been made that the records and books of this organization could not have been brought to court to supply those details, if they were relevant. [3155]

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May we have the understanding with your Honor upon the objection just now interposed, that the same objection will be made to all questions of a similar line?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: And that your Honor's ruling, I take it, would be the same, so that the record will be preserved?

The Court: It will be the same, as in this phase of the matter.

(Record read.)

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Mr. Donohue, at what time do you have reference?

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): At the time when you first came to San Francisco.

A. Sam Darcy.

Q. And how long did he continue as district organizer while you were here?

A. To the best of my recollection, it was the spring of 1935 or perhaps early summer of 1935.

Q. Can you tell us who it was who succeeded Mr. Darcy during the time while you were still a member of the party here in San Francisco?

A. You mean succeeded him as district organizer?

Q. Yes. A. Bill Schneidermann. [3156]

Q. And can you tell me when Mr. Schneidermann became district organizer, how long after Mr. Darcy left? A. It was in the fall of 1935.

Q. And during the interim between the departure of Mr. Darcy in the spring and Mr. Schneidermann's coming here in the fall of 1935, under whose direction were the affairs of the Communist Party in this district? Under whose direction were they during that interim of time?

A. Under the direction of three members of the Communist Party, supervised by a member of the Central Committee of the party, sent here for that purpose.

Q. Now, who were the three members under whose supervision or whose direction the party affairs were handled during that interim period of time?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Arthur Scott or Kent, he was known by both names; Oleta O'Connor and myself.

Q. And who was the member of the Central Committee under whose supervision those three persons functioned? A. Jeck Johnstone.

Q. Mr. Ross, during the period of time that you were in San Francisco and as a member of the Communist Party, did you attend few or many Communist Party meetings? A. Very many.

Q. And by the way, when you were in San Francisco, were you ever a candidate for public office? [3157] A. Yes, sir.

Q. When and for what office?

A. I believe the year was 1936, but I can't be certain of it, and the office was United States Congress.

Q. And upon what ticket or what party platform did you stand for that office?

A. The ticket was ostensibly a United Labor ticket, but I ran for office as a known Communist and on the Communist Party platform.

Q. At any time, Mr. Ross, during the period when you were a member of the Communist Party, did you ever conceal the fact of your membership in the party? A. No, sir.

Q. And is it a fact from your testimony that at all times during your membership in the Communist Party, you were employed as a functionary of that party? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Mr. Ross, do you know——

A. Mr. Donohue, I might make one amendment to that answer, please.

Q. Surely.

A. Until I went to New York and became an organizer for the United Furniture Workers Union.

Q. And at that time, while still a member of the party, you were not a paid functionary thereof?

A. That's correct.

Q. Mr. Ross, do you know Harry Bridges?

A. I do.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom?

A. I do.

Q. Will you indicate where he may be?

A. If you will step out of the way. The third man from my left at the table on my left (indicating).

Q. Mr. Ross, do you know a man by the name of Henry Schmidt? A. I do.

Q. Do you see him in the courtroom?

A. I do.

Q. Would you indicate where he may be?

A. At Mr. Bridges' left.

Q. And do you know a man by the name of J. R. Robertson? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Ross, can you tell us where and when and under what circumstance it was that you first saw the defendant Harry Bridges.

A. I first saw Mr. Bridges at the conclusion of a Communist meeting in Fresno, late in 1934.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. If the Court please, the details and the facts are the elements upon which the Court and the jury must pass judgment, and I think he can say he saw Bridges at a meeting and describe the meeting, but [3159] he may not put a characterization upon the meeting because that may be one of the ultimate facts in the case. I suggest that that answer be stricken and the witness advised to tell us the facts and not his opinion.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question, if your Honor pleases, and ask it another way.

The Court: The answer is stricken.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Where was it, Mr. Ross, that you first saw the defendant Harry Bridges?

A. In Fresno.

Q. And by "Fresno" you mean Fresno, California? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was it?

A. Toward the close of 1934.

Q. Can you describe the place where it was that you first saw Mr. Bridges?

A. It was a meeting hall on one of the main streets of Fresno and it was one flight of stairs up from the street.

Q. At the time when you saw Mr. Bridges in that meeting hall, were there many or a few persons present?

A. There was quite a large number present.

Q. And when was it before the time——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a minute. I think, your Honor, in the interest of the record that a witness may not state [3160] that there was quite a few present, because individuals will vary in what to them may be quite a number. I think the witness must estimate the number of persons present.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: Well, I thought he might develop that on cross-examination, but I will be only too happy to ask him.

Q. What is your best judgment or what do you mean by "quite a number of persons," Mr. Ross?

A. Between 60 and 75.

Q. When was it prior to the time that you saw Mr. Bridges at this hall in Fresno that you went to Fresno?

A. It was the morning of that day.

Q. And how did you go to Fresno?

A. This is an assumption, Mr. Donohue: I must have gone by automobile; I cannot remember the details of the trip over.

Mr. MacInnis: We ask that the assumption be stricken.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection, if your Honor pleases.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You have no distinct recollection as to how you may have gone there?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Have you any certainty as to when it was that you went with relation to the time when it was that you saw Mr. Bridges there? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And when was it? [3161]

A. It was toward the close of 1934.

Q. I mean, with respect to the immediate time prior to your having seen Mr. Bridges, that you left San Francisco to go to Fresno?

A. Left San Francisco in the morning and saw Mr. Bridges late that afternoon.

Q. What was the occasion for your going to the hall in Fresno on that particular day?

A. To attend a meeting.

Q. Had you called the meeting, Mr. Ross?

A. No, sir.

Q. By whom were you notified that there was such a meeting to be held?

A. By Elmer Hanoff. [3162]

Q. And who was Elmer Hanoff?

A. He was the organizational secretary of the Communist Party district.

Q. At this meeting in Fresno did you perform any particular function personally?

A. I can't recall any.

Q. Where in this hall was it that you saw Mr. Bridges?

A. Near the entrance door; inside the entrance door.

Q. Can you at this time recall any other person or persons whom you saw present at the time you saw Mr. Bridges?

A. Yes, I saw Sam Darcy and Sam Diner.

Q. Can you recall any other person or persons whom you may have seen or whom you did in fact see at that meeting?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Elmer Hanoff was there and Walter Lambert.

Q. Did you have any conversation personally with Mr. Bridges? A. No, sir.

Q. And I believe you testified that was the first time you had seen him?

A. That's right.

Q. Subsequent to the day and date you have been discussing and up until the present time have you seen the defendant Harry Bridges on many or few occasions, or have you seen him at all?

A. Yes, I have seen him on approximately twenty occasions, I would say.

Q. And with respect to the defendant Henry Schmidt, how often [3163] or on how many occasions would you say since the first time you saw him until today have you seen him?

A. I can't recall quite as many occasions; perhaps a dozen.

Q. And I believe you have testified you do not know Mr. Robertson? A. That's right.

Q. Mr. Ross, did you ever hear Mr. Bridges Speak? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you recall the first time you ever heard Mr. Bridges say anything?

A. You are not referring now to a formal speech, are you, Mr. Donohue—just talk?

Q. No, I mean engage in any conversation at all.

A. I first heard Mr. Bridges talk at a small meeting held early in 1935 at an apartment house—in an apartment, rather, in San Francisco.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And your best recollection is that this was early in 1935? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the best of your recollection as to where the apartment house was located?

A. I have none as to its physical location.

Q. How did you go to that meeting?

A. I went by automobile accompanied by Mr. Hanoff.

Q. And is he the same Mr. Hanoff you rescribed just a moment ago? [3164] A. Yes, sir.

Q How were you notified that there was to be such a meeting?

A. I was notified by Mr. Hanoff.

Q. And when you got to this apartment house, can you recall where in that apartment house the apartment to which you went was located?

A. No, sir, I cannot.

Q. When you got to the apartment was Mr. Hanoff still with you?

A. He was still with me.

Q. And who was there when you arrived?

A. I recall that we were greeted at the door by a person who I was told was the occupant of the apartment.

Q. Did you learn the identity of that person?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As being who? A. Norma Perry.

Q. And did Norma Perry continue to remain during the course of the meeting which was held there or the conversations which were had in that apartment?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. To the best of my recollection, no.

Q. Who else was there when you arrived, after having been admitted by Norma Perry?

A. I can't say who was there when I arrived; I don't recall.

Q. What is your best recollection of the persons who either [3165] were there upon your arrival or who came subsequent to your arrival?

A. Sam Darcy; Hanoff, of course, who came with me; Walter Lambert; Mr. Bridges, John Schomaker.

Q. Now, who was Mr. Darcy?

A. He was then the district organizer of the Communist Party.

Q. And Mr. Hanoff you have already identified as being who?

A. Organizational secretary of the district.

Q. And who was Mr. Schomaker?

A. He was a member of the Communist Party on the waterfront.

Q. Do you know whether or not at that time he occupied any position with the Communist Party?

A. To the best of my recollection he was waterfront section organizer.

Q. And who else did you say was there?

A. Walter Lambert.

Q. Who was Walter Lambert?

A. He was the trade union functionary in the Party, in charge of trade union work.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And who else was there?

A. Darcy, I have already identified him—Lambert, Hanoff, Bridges, Schomaker. Those are all I can place there.

Q. Now, is it your testimony, Mr. Ross, that those persons whom you have named were all the persons who were present? A. No, sir. [3166]

Q. Or were there others whose names you cannot recall?

A. There were several whose names I cannot recall.

Q. Now, at this gathering you indicated that you heard Mr. Bridges for the first time say something?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us what it was that Mr. Bridges said? A. No, sir.

Q. You only recall that he did say something?

A. That is right. I recall that, because it was the first time that I was ever present with him at an intimate meeting, and I was rather impressed.

Q. Mr. Ross, what was the purpose of this meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. I think the witness can best give us the purpose by telling us what conversations were had, but I think he may not place a character on the meeting or upon the conversation. We therefore object upon the ground that this question calls exclusively for an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: You might state what occurred.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you tell us now, Mr. Ross, what was said by anyone at that meeting?

A. Specifically, no.

Q. Can you tell us what the general nature of the conversation was? [3167]

A. Discussion of the waterfront situation.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. May the answer be stricken pending the objection, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Counsel has now asked the witness, who says he can't remember what the specific conversation was, to tell the general nature of it; in other words, to place a character upon it. I think that your Honor must instruct the witness that he can give us his best memory but not his best opinion.

Mr. Donohue: I think, if your Honor please, having exhausted his recollection as to what was said by anyone, he has a right, having been present, to testify as to what the general substance of the conversation was, though he may not recall the words or by whom they were said.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, not with no recollection. It is true a recollection which is general may be given, but where the witness states he has no recollection, he can hardly be allowed then to offer us conjecture upon what the purpose of the conversation may have been.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question back, then, Mr. Reporter.

(Question read.)

A. The general nature was a discussion of the situation on the [3168] waterfront as it affects the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): At that time, Mr. Ross—that is, the time of this meeting—what was your then occupation or position with the Communist Party?

A. Co-editor of the Western Worker.

Q. Can you tell us now whether or not at the time of this meeting you knew all persons who were present at that meeting? A. I did.

Q. And can you tell us now whether you knew at that time that all persons who were present were members of the Communist Party? A. I did.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May I ask that that answer be stricken and that your Honor admonish the witness not to answer when counsel is obviously arising to make an objection.

Mr. Donohue: He can't always anticipate that.

Mr. MacInnis: The witness was looking straight at me and hurried his answer so that it would be given before the objection.

Mr. Donohue: That is an unfair conclusion. I thought he was looking at me.

Mr. MacInnis: You flatter yourself.

Mr. Donohue: Possibly.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the difficulty with that question is this: Counsel elicits from this witness the statement that he doesn't remember the names of the persons present, and [3169] then he is allowed to say that he knows the persons whom he has not named. Now, may it please your Honor, if this witness were to tell us the persons whose names are not before the Court, names which apparently will never be brought before the Court, were names of persons who are members of the Communist Party, now, obviously inquiry is frustrated by that kind of an answer. The man says, "Several persons were there; I don't remember their names, but I assure you that they were members of the Communist Party." In other words, they may now put a character on this meeting, if it took place at all, without giving the defense an opportunity to probe the nature of the persons who were present. I think that this man may not be allowed to put a blanket character upon the names or positions of persons at least whom he cannot give us by name.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, the witness has named all of the persons who were present at what I think he described as a small, intimate gathering, identified each of the persons whom he knew by their function in the Communist Party. He stated that while there were some others present, he is unable at this time to recall their identities specifically, but he also states that as a then functionary of the Communist Party in the City of San Francisco he knew then and testifies now that all of the persons present, including those whom he is not able to identify personally, were members of the Communist Party, and I think that is perfectly proper testimony. [3170]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the difficulty with that kind——

The Court: I will limit the testimony at this juncture with respect to those persons whose identity has been disclosed by this witness.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Is it your testimony, Mr. Ross, that all of the persons whose names you have stated as having been present at that meeting were the names of persons who were, to your own knowledge, members of the Communist Party?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Was that question only as to the persons he has already given us the names of?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: I understood it that way.

Mr. MacInnis: I'm sorry.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Now, so that there may be no misunderstanding about it, would you again repeat the names of the persons whom you now identify as having been present at that meeting?

A. Sam Darcy, Elmer Hanoff——

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this has been asked and answered.

Mr. Donohue: Just to clear the record so that there won't be any doubt about it.

A. Walter Lambert, Harry Bridges, John Schomaker and myself.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. When, Mr. Ross, was it that you next recall having [3171] been at a gathering of any kind, at which either or both the defendants Bridges and Schmidt were present?

A. In the fall of 1935 was the next time I recall seeing them.

Q. Where, Mr. Ross, did this meeting take place?

A. At a Sokol hall in San Francisco.

Q. Can you recall now where——

Mr. MacInnis: May the name of that hall be revealed? A. Sokol—S-o-k-o-l.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Can you recall now, Mr. Ross, where Sokol Hall was then located?

A. I recall it was several blocks up on Haight Street, and it was somewhere off Haight Street to the right, I believe, as you walk up from Market.

Q. May I ask you if you have lived in San Francisco since you left here in 1937?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is your best recollection as to the time when this meeting which you are about to describe took place? A. In the fall of 1935.

Q. Can you recall at this time by whom you were notified of this meeting?

A. Yes, I was notified of it by Elmer Hanoff.

Q. And can you tell us now whether you went to Sokol Hall alone or whether you were accompanied by someone when you went there? [3172]

A. I can't recall.

Q. Can you now tell us how many persons were present at this meeting?

A. I would say between 40 and 45.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And whom do you recall now as being among those who were then present?

A. Bill Schneidermann, Elmer Hanoff, Oleta O'Connor, Elaine Black, Harry Bridges, John Schomaker, and—I believe but I am not positive—I have the impression that Walter Lambert was there, and Henry Schmidt.

Q. Do you recall at this time, Mr. Ross, whether anything was said at that meeting by Mr. Bridges?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall anything that was said at that meeting by anyone?

A. The general nature of the discussion, yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think that the question demands at least a direct answer as to whether he has any such recollection or not.

Mr. Donohue: May I withdraw the question and ask another question, if your Honor please.

Q. Mr. Ross, do you recall at this time whether any of the persons whom you have named as having been present at that meeting made any statement on any subject? A. Yes, sir. [3173]

Q. Will you tell us who that person was and your best recollection of what that person said?

A. That person was Bill Schneidermann.

Q. And may I ask you again what at that time function did Mr. Schneidermann perform, if you know?

Mr. MacInnis: That has bee nasked and answered twice, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: I think it is the first time, if your Honor please, because this is the first reference we have made to this particular meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he told us that Schneidermann succeeded a man named Sam Darcy just about five minutes ago.

Mr. Donohue: That is correct, if your Honor please, but there is no indication thus far from this witness as to whether at the time of this meeting Mr. Darcy had left.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. Mr. Schneidermann spoke at length on a congress, the Seventh World Congress Communist International to which he had been a delegate, and in turn he was given a picture of the situation in San Francisco.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We ask that that last sentence be stricken as obviously entailing heresay and nothing else.

Mr. Donohue: I have no objection, if your Honor please.

The Court: So ordered.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue:) Mr. Schneidermann reported on the congress? [3174]

A. On the Seventh World Congress.

Q. May I ask you, Mr. Ross, whether that was your first meeting or conversation with Mr. Schneidermann, or had you met him prior thereto?

A. I may have met him prior at a private meeting at Party headquarters, but I do not have any recollection of it.

Q. At the time of this meeting at Sokol Hall

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

how long had Mr. Schneidermann been here in San Francisco? A. Perhaps a week or two.

Q. And to your knowledge——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I think, your Honor, that unless the witness shows a foundation or background for knowledge, that he may not testify how long this man, this man, myself, or anybody else has been in San Francisco unless he knows, because the basis appears to me to be entirely hearsay. I ask that that answer be stricken pending your Honor's ruling.

Mr. Donohue: May I say this to that, if your Honor please: There are some matters which I think we all understand persons are capable of testifying concerning as a matter of fact, not as a matter of opinion.

The Court: What materiality is there with respect to whether Mr. Schneidermann was here a week or ten days or two weeks before the meeting?

Mr. Donohue: Perhaps there isn't any, if your Honor please. I will withdraw the question. [3175]

The Court: Why argue about it?

Mr. Donohue: I wasn't arguing. I will withdraw the question, if I may.

The Court: It may go out.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you recall, Mr. Ross, whether or not Mr. Bridges had anything to say at this particular meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That has already been asked and answered. He said that he didn't recall whether Harry Bridges spoke or not.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: I will overrule the objection.

A. I do not recall.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): May I ask you, Mr. Ross, whether or not, to your own personal knowledge, every person whom you have named as having been present at this meeting was a member of the Communist Party? [3176]

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor. The objection, of course, is upon the ground that this question calls for a matter beyond the knowledge of a witness, calls for his opinion and conclusion upon a matter not relevant to the scope of our inquiry. It calls for hearsay. We have a meeting with 40 to 45 persons present, according to the testimony of this witness. He has named seven or eight people. And he has now asked to put a character upon those people. Now, I think that particularly since a co-defendant, Mr. Schmidt, is now named in the testimony, one of the only instances in which two defendants have been named, that he should not be compelled to defend himself against pure hearsay testimony. I think that this man may offer facts, but not opinions. We object to that question.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, just a few minutes ago Your Honor sustained an objection made by counsel with respect to unnamed persons who were stated to be present, but not identified by the witness. Therefore I carefully restricted the particular question to the persons whom he named as having been present.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, this question touches the very soul of the inquiries which we read about so much in contemporary periodicals, guilt by association—the allowance of one man to take the stand and to give his naked opinion that several other persons belong to some subversive organization, thereby damning them immediately in the ears of those who are present and leaving [3177] little room, if any, to probe the matter.

The Court: Mr. Donohue, in instances before where the Court permitted answers of like character upon questions of like character, some foundation was afforded the question.

Mr. Donohue: Well, I thought here if, Your Honor pleases, in light of the fact that this witness has testified that from the time he came to the City of San Francisco until the time he left here, he was continuously a paid functionary of the Communist Party; he testified further that during the interim period, from the spring of 1935 until the fall of 1935, during which there was no district organizer for the Communist Party here, that he served as one of the three Communists in San Francisco who were acting as interim, as an interim board of directors for the Communist Party under the supervision of Jack Johnstone, a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. Now, certainly a witness who has so qualified himself is able to state not as a matter of opinion——

The Court: Well, Mr. Donohue, if I may interrupt you momentarily?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: Surely.

The Court: He has already testified as to Mr. Schneidermann, Mr. Hanoff, Oleta O'Connor, Elaine Black—no, he didn't designate Elaine Black in any particular descriptive content; he referred to John Schomaker as waterfront organizer and Walter Lambert. Now, what, if any, basis is there for the characterization [3178] as to Mr. Bridges and Henry Schmidt? You lay the foundation, and I will permit the question.

Mr. MacInnis: I might say this, Your Honor——

The Court: I think I have ruled on it, unless you have some other matters?

Mr. MacInnis: Well, probably nothing that would enlighten Your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: May we take the recess at this time, if Your Honor pleases?

The Court: All right. We will take the morning recess, ladies and gentlemen of the jury; the same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, not to form nor express an opinion thereon.

(Recess.)

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Referring, still, Mr. Ross, to the meeting you have described at Sokol Hall, were any security measures taken with respect to that meeting of which you know of your own personal knowledge?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. That is calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness, and we object to it upon that ground.

The Court: Overruled.

A. Yes, sir. [3179]

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Will you state what those security measures were?

A. Everyone who was to attend was instructed to go to the hall,——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. That calls for hearsay. In fact, the witness is giving it as hearsay. He says everyone who was to attend was instructed to a certain effect.

The Court: He can state his instructions, if any were given to him.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Yes. What instructions were given to you?

Mr. MacInnis: Now, Your Honor, I would object to that, Your Honor, as being of no probative value, because whatever some persons not before the Court may have told this man would not be relevant either to the character of the meeting or to any alleged security involved.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question, if Your Honor pleases.

Q. What occurred when you got to the hall, Mr. Ross?

A. I was allowed to enter after being recognized and passed in.

Mr. MacInnis: Now pardon me. That answer,

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

I think, must be stricken, and, Your Honor, we make the motion that it be stricken—"after being recognized." That certainly calls for conduct amounting to declarations outside the presence of these [3180] defendants; it calls for conduct amounting to hearsay statements.

Mr. Donohue: Well, these defendants, two of them were there, if Your Honor please.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you recall by whom you were recognized at the door, Mr. Ross?

Mr. MacInnis: Now, we object to that, if Your Honor please; that is calling for an opinion and conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Donohue: He certainly ought to know who was at the door, Your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: May I be heard on that?

The Court: You are asking for the identity of an individual?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor,——

The Court: By name?

Mr. MacInnis: If he were asked who met him at the door; but who was the man who recognized him—in other words, he couldn't be allowed to name a man and then give a conversation, because that would be hearsay. But this recognition is just another way of intruding hearsay into the [3181] record.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You may answer, Mr. Ross.

A. I don't recall who was at the door.

Mr. MacInnis: Now we move to strike the statement about recognition, Your Honor, because he doesn't recall who the declarant was.

Mr. Donohue: I think that the fact that he was recognized, if Your Honor please, by someone he says was there for that purpose is an element of proof which should be allowed to stand in the record.

Mr. MacInnis: It is proof, Your Honor, which cannot be inquired into, since we are not allowed the name of other persons.

Mr. Donohue: He says he doesn't recall it.

Mr. MacInnis: That is the purpose of the rules of evidence, is to allow for that——

The Court: Mr. Witness, what, if any, identification was asked for of you by this person whom you can not now identify?

The Witness: I was recognized by face.

Mr. MacInnis: We move that answer be stricken as not responsive to the question.

The Court: One moment.

Q. What, if anything, was said to you by this man, if you now recall?

A. The word of greeting. [3182]

Q. What?

A. A word of greeting—"Hello."

Mr. MacInnis: May we have an objection to that?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: You have an objection to that.

Q. What was the word of greeting?

A. "Hello," and "Go right upstairs."

Q. Did you show any credentials?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever seen the person before?

A. Oh, yes, he was familiar to me at the time.

Q. But now presently?

A. Presently I can't recall who it was.

Mr. MacInnis: You Honor, in view of his——

Q. (By the Court): Where did the person stand in the door? A. Just outside the entrance.

Q. Were there others with you at the time?

A. I think I went in alone.

Q. Where was this gentleman whom you refer to, the person who informed you as to the meeting?

A. Mr. Hanoff?

Q. Yes.

A. He went in alone or with someone else.

Q. Wasn't he with you?

A. Not at the time I went into that hall.

Q. What is the condition—— [3183]

The Court: So I will understand and the jury can understand; thus far it isn't clear in my mind, and the purpose of asking these questions is for clarification, the sole and only purpose.

Q. What is the nature of the door? Do you have a closed door, open door, what is it? A peephole door?

A. No, there was a door, a closed door downstairs.

Q. Yes?

A. And the man standing outside of it who recognized people who were supposed to go to that meeting and passed them.

Q. After this so-called recognition on your part, or what you ascribe to be recognition, did he then open the door? A. I opened the door.

Q. You opened the door? A. Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Was the meeting held upstairs or downstairs?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me just a moment. Has Your Honor finished the questions?

The Court: Yes, I have finished.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, now, we move to strike the answers concerning the recognition.

The Court: Motion granted.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Ross, in between the time when you testified that you first saw Harry Bridges or first heard him [3184] speak at Norma Perry's apartment and the time of the meeting in Sokol Hall, had you in that interim ever seen the defendant Harry Bridges function as a member of the Communist Party? A. Yes,——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Now, may the answer be stricken pending the objection?

The Court: Well, there was no answer given. You did not answer?

The Witness: I answered.

The Court: The answer may go out. And in the future, so that counsel for the defense may interpose an objection in aid of the record,—which he is entitled to; it is his privilege and duty—I ask that you refrain from answering in such event and the answer here may be stricken. Now, Mr. MacInnis?

Mr. MacInnis: In the first place, might the question be read so that Your Honor will——?

The Court: I would sustain an objection to the question if you would propose it?

Mr. MacInnis: I do.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Ross, in between the time when you heard Harry Bridges speak at a meeting at Norma Perry's apartment and the time when you attended this meeting, you have described at Sokol Hall, did you, during that interim, ever attend a Communist Party meeting at which the defendant Harry [3185] Bridges was present?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. The objection to that question is that it is leading and suggestive; that it is calling for the opinion and conclusion of the witness; that it invades the province of the Court and jury by allowing this witness to put a character upon a meeting which character must be placed by the triers of the fact, the jurors in this case. I think the question is also without foundation. He stated that he saw this man up to now twice in his life; we are now asked interim questions. And neither of those occasions can he recall what the man designated as Harry Bridges said, if he said anything. Now, there is no foundation, and I think that——

The Court: Well, Mr. Donohue, without indicating at this time any of the related testimony, there were matters of such character gone into in this trial and there was a foundation, as I recall it, in instances when these questions were asked or at least an assumed foundation.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, this witness has already testified not as Mr. MacInnis has stated, that he saw Mr. Bridges on two occasions—he said that he had seen Mr. Bridges on 20 or 25 occasions.

The Court: That is correct.

Mr. MacInnis: That is, in all, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Donohue: That he distinctly recalls the first occasion [3186] that he saw him, because it was the first time that he had ever seen him, was at Fresno, California. He said the first time that he ever heard Mr. Bridges say anything was at the meeting at Norma Perry's house. Now, certainly, if Your Honor pleases, every statement of fact made by a witness is not as Mr. MacInnis would have your Honor believe, a statement of an opinion, because I suppose any person might testify that it is cold outside or it is raining or the sun is shining.

Mr. MacInnis: Or that Harry Bridges is a Communist.

Mr. Donohue: I would say that Mr. Ross, a prominent functionary in the Communist Party in the State of California, who said that he attended many Communits Party meetings, is certainly qualified——

The Court: Mr. Donohue, if I may interrupt you?

Mr. Donohue: Yes, sir.

The Court: There are and were, according to the testimony, various types of meetings held and conducted.

Mr. Donohue: That is my next question, if Your Honor pleases, because I can't ask him that question unless I can ask him first——

The Court: The questions asked call for an opinion.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Ross, will you describe for His Honor [3187] and the ladies and gentlemen of the jury the various kinds of meetings which are held by the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, Your Honor. This man has not been qualified as an expert, if indeed this could be the subject of expert testimony, which we gravely doubt.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. The Communist Party meetings are restricted to Communist Party members. Of course, the Communist Party also holds or controls mass meetings at which non-Communists are admitted. These are for propaganda purposes. The meetings to which I have reference and which I am testifying about are closed Communist Party meetings.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Now, we move to strike the last sentence.

The Court: The last sentence may go out.

Mr. Donohue: May I say, if Your Honor pleases, that certainly a witness who is a member of an organization can testify that he attended a meeting of that organization, the attendance at which was restricted to persons who were members of the organization. Now, this witness has testified that——

The Court: If he knows of his own particular knowledge that a meeting was restricted and so restricted, he may testify. But thus far there has been no question presented to this witness save and except a general conclusion.

Mr. Donohue: Correct, Your Honor. They are only preliminary [3188] questions, for the purpose of qualifying this witness as competent to testify as to the character of a particular meeting.

The Court: All right.

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest, Your Honor, in this discussion that the prosecutor is bound by his previous witnesses one of whom, Mr. Krolek, has stated that there can be Communist Party meetings at which non-Communists are in attendance.

Mr. Donohue: He just said so.

The Court: Well, Mr. Krolek testified to various forms, other witnesses testified to various forms. I haven't assumed to discuss those in the presence of this witness, for very obvious reasons. But I think, Mr. Donohue, that there should be some definition of the nature and type of the meetings, delineations as to what they were, and so forth.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, if Your Honor pleases. This witness has just testified that the Communist Party holds two kinds of meetings, one of which is a meeting the attendance at which is restricted to members of the Communist Party; that the Communist Party sometimes has meetings to which non-Communists are invited, and he said that the purpose of the latter kind of meeting was for propaganda purposes.

Q. May I now ask you, Mr. Ross, with respect to the meeting you have just described as having taken place at the apartment of Norma Perry, what was the nature of that meeting?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May it please the Court, we [3189] object to that question, as what appears to be a deliberate evasion of the Court's previous ruling. In previous questions put to this witness, he declared himself as unable to tell us who were the persons present at this meeting outside of seven or eight people whom he named. Your Honor then sustained objection as to the character of the meeting or as to the character of who was present.

The Court: Well, the witness could state in response to a question presented to him as to the nature of the call with respect to that meeting.

Mr. Donohue: Correct. That is what I——

The Court: Or the nature of the communication made to him as to the meeting and the like.

Mr. Donohue: That is exactly what I asked him, if Your Honor please, what was the nature of the meeting which he had attended in Norma Perry's apartment, at which Mr. Bridges was present.

Mr. MacInnis: I might state, Your Honor, if it is now the purpose which the prosecutor declares, the question would have been asked and answered, because he has already elicited from this witness a statement as to the purpose of that particular meeting.

The Court: He said the purpose, as I recall,—well, objection is overruled. Let us see what the answer is. Objection overruled. [3190]

A. It was a closed meeting for Communist Party members only.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We ask that answer be stricken, Your Honor, as an evasion of your previous ruling, and not called for by the question and obviously not called for by the stated purpose of the prosecutor.

Mr. Donohue: It is not, if Your Honor please.

The Court: The motion is denied. You did not complete your answer?

The Witness: No, sir.

The Court: All right, you may proceed.

A. (Continuing) It was a meeting of top members of the Bureau of the Communist Party with——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We move that part be stricken. This man has already said that he can not identify the names of persons present. It is a deliberate invasion of Your Honor's previous ruling.

The Court: Well, I assume when he refers—Strike my assumption. You may proceed.

A. (Continuing) It was a meeting of the top members of the Communist Party Bureau with the leading Communist Party members of its waterfront section.

Mr. MacInnis: The same motion, Your Honor.

The Court: Motion denied.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And with respect to the meeting at Sokol Hall,—— [3191]

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me a moment. Did I understand correctly that Your Honor's first ruling upon this motion was based partly upon the fact that the witness had not yet concluded his answer and Your Honor wished to see what the entire context might be?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, he has now stated his opinion, which the prosecutor had been forbidden to ask him about by reason of the previous rulings. He stated that these people are not now known to him by name and how he can put a character on those unknown people, which would have probative value in this case, I am wondering.

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor please,——

The Court: Well, your observation would seem to answer itself, Mr. MacInnis, because the unnamed persons or the persons not identified would not serve to characterize a meeting. They might be component elements of a meeting, but they would not serve to give character to the particular meeting.

Mr. Donohue: Isn't it apparent, if Your Honor please, that any person who belongs to any kind of a fraternity may look back ten years and know that he attended a meeting of the fraternity at which a particular subject was discussed, recall personally the identity of some persons who were there and yet know that all of the persons who were there were members of that fraternity? Mr. MacInnis would give the impression that [3192] we are violating all human experience, and I think we have asked questions which have been permitted heretofore to be answered; and certainly it is not our purpose to deliberately or unintentionally evade or avoid the Court's ruling.

The Court: The motion to strike is denied. [3192-A]

Mr. MacInnis: May I suggest in response to that observation, it would be like saying that man who was an officer of the Democratic Party is because of holding that office empowered to tell us that all persons in any gathering are members of the Democratic Party. It obviously is beyond human experience that a person could do it.

The Court: If a member of any given group or organization or body attends a caucus, I assume that the identity of the caucus would be disclosed in general terms as a caucus or as a fraction or the like. I will deny the motion to strike.

Mr. Donohue: Would you read the question, Mr. Reporter.

(Question read as far as framed.)

Mr. Donohue: (continuing) ——what was its character? A. It was——

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. Same objection to that question without repeating it in its entirety. This man has named eight or ten people out of a group which he says numbered 40 to 45 people, and he was allowed, under your Honor's ruling, to testify only to his own interest. Your Honor then struck his observations concerning the methods by which other persons either entered or were recognized. Now, I think that, with that foundation having been stricken from the case, the prosecutor can hardly now go back to the same subject and have his witness give the desired opinion in the face of the previous rulings. [3193]

The Court: You may answer.

A. It was a closed meeting of the Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Ross, do you recall having attended a meeting at which Mr. Bridges was present at Communist Party headquarters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us where and when?

A. It was at Communist Party headquarters at 121 Haight Street.

Q. Here in San Francisco?

A. San Francisco.

Q. What is your best recollection as to the time?

A. My best recollection is the early fall of 1936.

Q. Can you recall any specific incident that causes you to specifically recall this meeting?

A. Yes, sir, it was a feeling of almost amounting to shock, certainly surprise, that Mr. Bridges was present.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me, your Honor. I ask that that observation be stricken as not responsive to the question, purely a conclusion.

Mr. Donohue: I believe it is entirely responsive.

Mr. MacInnis: Whether this man was surprised or not has no probative value.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: He says he was surprised at the fact that Mr. Bridges was present. I think we have a right now to ask him what caused the surprise.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): What caused the surprise on your part at Mr. Bridges being present?

A. There had been so many careful precautions to conceal his identity as a Communist previously that I was surprised to find him at Communist Headquarters.

Q. Can you tell us now, Mr. Ross, who else may have been or was present at Communist Party headquarters when you saw Mr. Bridges there?

A. Bill Schneidermann, Elmer Hanoff, Walter Lambert, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Schomaker, Betty Gannett, Frank Carlson.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. What was that name?

The Witness: Frank Carlson, C-a-r-l-s-o-n. I believe Oleta O'Connor was there; I am not very positive as to that.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Do you believe there were other persons there whose names you do not now recall, or have you recited the names of all persons who were there present?

A. Elmer Hanoff was there. There were others present whose names I can't recall.

Q. Can you tell us, Mr. Ross, whether or not on this occasion Mr. Bridges said anything?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us what he said, or the best you can recall the substance of what he said.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. He made a report of approximately an hour, perhaps longer, [3195] on the situation along the waterfront and the advisability of preparing for a strike.

Q. Do you recall that other persons present said anything and can you recall what was said by any other person or persons present?

A. I recall Bill Schneidermann presided. I can't recall either the content or the substance of his conversation.

Q. Do you recall whether the defendant Schmidt said anything?

A. No, sir; that would be an assumption; I can't recall it.

Q. And how would you characterize this meeting at Communist Party Headquarters?

A. As a closed Communist Party meeting.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May the answer go out pending the same objection?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: We urge the same objection.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): You may now answer, Mr. Ross.

A. As a closed meeting of the Communist Party.

Q. Mr. Ross, during the period of your membership in the Communist Party while you were here in the city of San Francisco, did you ever attend a national convention of the Communist Party?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us when and where that convention was held?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That convention was held in New York City on June 24, 1936, at [3196] a hall called the Manhattan Opera House.

Q. (By the Court): What was the name of the Opera House? A. Manhattan Opera House.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And in what capacity did you attend that convention?

A. As a delegate from California.

Q. Can you tell us now how many persons were delegates from California to the Communist Party convention in 1936?

A. No, sir, I am afraid I can't.

Q. What is your best recollection of the number of delegates from California?

A. Perhaps, a dozen, perhaps ten.

Q. Did you go to this convention alone, or were you accompanied by someone else?

A. I was accompanied by another delegate.

Q. And who was that delegate?

A. Dave Saunders.

Q. Can you recall at this time, Mr. Ross, the name or names of any other person or persons who were also delegates from California to that convention other than the man you have just mentioned?

A. Bill Schneidermann, John Leech; I believe Anita Whitney was a delegate. Those are all I can recall.

Q. And there were others whose names you can't recall?

A. There were perhaps six or seven [3197] others.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Do you recall how long you remained in New York for the purpose of the convention?

A. The better part of a week, I would say.

Q. Did you then return to California?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with the same person with whom you had gone to the convention?

A. No, I can't recall with whom I returned from the convention. I can recall the trip there, but not the trip back.

Q. At that convention did the California delegation present any name or names to the delegates in convention for nomination and election to the Central Committee of the Communist Party?

A. Yes, sir, all delegations did.

Q. And will you tell us—first, may that be stricken, if your Honor please?

The Court: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Were you on the floor of the convention when the name or names of the California choice for the Central Committee was made? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you on the floor when the delegates who were elected were in fact elected?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was nominated by the California delegation from California to serve on the Central Committee of the Communist Party? [3198]

A. I recall there were several nominated, Mr. Donohue.

Q. Who?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I can't recall all of their names. I do know that among them was Bill Schneidermann; Comrade Rossi, who was Harry Bridges; possibly Walter Lambert and possibly Anita Whitney.

Q. Now, at the time when the delegates voted on the candidates who had been nominated, were any of the delegates or were any of the candidates who had been nominated by the California delegation in fact elected? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who or which?

A. I remember Bill Schneidermann was elected, and I remember Rossi was elected. I believe Anita Whitney was elected, but I can't be positive of that.

Q. You returned then to California about how much later than the convention ended?

A. Oh, probably a week.

Q. And that was in what year?

A. In 1936.

Mr. Donohue: I have a break at this point, if your Honor please. I wonder if we might take a recess at this time?

The Court: No objection. We will take the noon recess, ladies and gentlemen, and resume at two o'clock this afternoon. The same admonition not to discuss the case under any conditions, [3199] nor to form or express an opinion thereon until the matter is submitted to you.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. this date.)

The Clerk: The United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. Donohue: May I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Lawrence Ross, heretofore sworn.

LAWRENCE S. ROSS

resumed.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Donohue:

Q. Mr. Ross, why did you join the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. We object to that question upon the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, not binding upon the defendants, and not probative of any issue in this case.

Mr. Donohue: This question has been asked and answered by six preceding witnesses, if your Honor please, and is asked for the same reason.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

A. I joined the Communist Party during the depression years. At that time I believed that the Communist Party program was one that was designed to help the American people to achieve a more satisfactory status and greater liberty. I suppose I [3200] joined because I was partly humanitarian and had an inadequate knowledge of economics.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): And why did you leave the Communist Party?

Mr. MacInnis: The same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Overruled.

A. My leaving the Communist Party was not occasioned by any particular act or revelation. It was a process of being weaned away and having my eyes opened to the truth. I finally recognized that the members of the Communist Party leadership were not overly anxious about the welfare of the people but were anxious about their own advancement in the Party and had been more or less ruthless for power for themselves. I also became convinced that for some reason or other their theory of economics was thoroughly unsound. I was thoroughly disillusioned with both the Party's aim and with its policy. Also, I became convinced that the Communist Party of this country did not have fraternal relations with the Communist Party of the Soviet Union but occupied the position of a satellite political organization, subservient to the Russian Communist Party.

Q. (By Mr. Donohue): Mr. Ross, during the period of your membership in the Communist Party did you ever teach in any of the Communist Party schools? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. May the answer be stricken?

The Court: Yes. [3201]

Mr. MacInnis: Whether he did or not would scarcely be binding upon the defendants or probative of any issue in this case, and we object to it upon the ground that the question is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Donohue: I will withdraw the question, if your Honor please.

You have the witness.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Mr. Ross, you say that you found out after a series of years in the Communist Party that its leaders were not humanitarian but that they were interested in advancing themselves within the ranks of the leadership. That was one of the reasons that you gave for your enlightenment which ultimately led you to leave the Communist Party, is that true?

A. That is correct, in essence.

Q. In other words, you found that the men in the Communist Party, I suppose, had the same ambitions, the same selfishness, the same private ends that you find in any other group of men?

A. That isn't the way I would state that, sir.

Q. You would say it somewhat differently?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Ross: You gave us a summary of the various careers that you have followed over the past many years, and you said that you are at present occupied as the managing editor of some trade paper; is that correct? [3202]

A. That is correct.

Q. What is the name of that paper?

A. Cotton Trade Journal.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. The Cotton Trade Journal. And who are the owners of that paper?

A. The publisher and owner is Francis G. Hickman.

Q. And the interests of that trade journal are directed to what particular end?

A. Toward reporting news of happenings in the cotton industry.

Q. And it is an industrial trade paper?

A. Well, it treats of cotton from the farm to the mill. It is more than a trade paper; it is an industrial paper, that is correct.

Q. One that is circulated among the various businesses which have to do with the buying and selling of cotton?

A. Buying, selling and growing cotton and manufacturing of cotton.

Q. Largely an employer's paper, I will say, I suppose? A. Yes.

Q. At least it is definitely not a trade union publication? A. Oh, no, definitely not.

Q. So that although you followed trade union activities for that part of your life which did not find you a paid functionary within the Communist Party, your present job is with a trade journal which has to do with the employer groups [3203] within the cotton industry?

A. I followed trade union activities for the smaller part of the period since I have left the Communist Party. My present job and the one before this and the one prior to that were newspaper jobs.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. You mean by that ordinary daily circulation newspapers? A. That is correct.

Q. So that at some point you ceased to follow the union activities as a means of earning a living and went into ordinary employment?

A. That is correct.

Q. What was the date of your last service as a union official? I believe that you told us that you worked as an organizer for the United Furniture Workers of America; is that the name of the organization? A. That is correct.

Q. When was the last date that you were employed in that capacity?

A. I can give you the pproximate—I can give you the year and the approximate month.

Q. Yes..

A. I can't give you the day. The summer of 1941. [3204]

Q. What was the circumstances impelling you to leave the employ of the union?

A. I was dismissed from the union as an organizer.

Q. Who was that that dismissed you? Do you remember the name of the person or the group?

A. The information of the notice of dismissal came from the president of the union.

Q. Let's see. What was his name?

A. Maurice Muster, M-u-s-t-e-r.

Q. Maurice Muster, M-u-s-t-e-r?

A. Correct.

Q. And what had been the circumstance that impelled Mr. Muster thus to dismiss you from your job as an union organizer?

A. A story released in Washington to the effect that I was a known Communist and an organizer of the CIO, and the CIO, I think at that time, was taking some steps to rid itself of Communists.

Q. And was there some occasion in which you were transferred because of some government investigation from the State of North Carolina down to the State of Arkansas? A. Oh, no.

Q. When you were transferred to the State of Arkansas, as you have related this morning, was that pursuant to an order from this Mr. Maurice Muster whom you have mentioned?

A. That's correct. [3205]

Q. And what was that date?

A. It was in June or July of 1940, I believe.

Q. Now, what was the approximate month that you offered us as being the date of your discharge or dismissal as an organizer for the union?

A. Approximately a year later.

Q. About what month of 1941?

A. The summer. I can't say whether it was July or August; it was the summer.

Q. What was the first time, the first occasion, Mr. Ross, upon which you were questioned by any agents or representatives of our Government in respect to the matter of Harry Bridges?

A. It was either in March or in April of this year.

Q. March or April of this year?

A. That's right.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And is it fair to say that during all of the intervening years, from 1941 when you left your last job with any trade union, up to the spring of the calendar year 1949, no person had asked you any questions about the matter of Harry Bridges?

A. That's correct.

Q. So that any testimony that you have offered the Court and jury here is based upon at least your attempts to recall matters taking place those many years ago? A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Did you keep any memoranda or means of refreshing your own [3206] recollection upon those years? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you preserve any record books of the service that you say you put in as a functionary of the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. You had none of those papers or reports in your possession at the time you were first interviewed by any government agent in connection with this case, is that right? A. That's correct.

Q. Well, now, during those years, from 1941 up to the spring of 1949, had you been questioned by any government agency or by any person concerning your own past activities within the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, you had never had an inquiry of any nature put to you concerning alleged Communistic activities within unions or concerning your own past life as a known Communist organizer?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that would be true during all of the occasions in which you departed from jobs with the union whose name you have given us, and entered into the ordinary newspaper world?

A. That is true of the entire period since I have been in the Communist Party, since 1937.

Q. Would that be true so far as any prospective employers were [3207] concerned, also?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you ever taken any so-called loyalty test in any employment? A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, you have never been asked to give a thumbnail sketch of your own activities in respect of these so-called subversive organizations?

A. No, sir.

Q. And during those years, 1941 up to the spring of 1949, you had never in any written application or in any oral interview with any employer or any government agent, said anything about your past life?

A. I have told to my present employer that I had been a member of the Communist Party.

Q. And he is the only one? A. Pardon?

Q. And he is the only one?

A. That's right.

Q. Well, now, when you assumed the duties of your first job outside the trade union in 1941, did you give a true account of the activities of your own life during the years 1935, '36 and '37?

A. There was no need to.

Q. You mean no one asked you that question? [3208]

A. That's right.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. In other words, you were not asked to fill in that particular gap of years in your life?

A. No, sir.

Q. And how many employments did you say in all? That is, how many different employments have you undertaken since your leaving the trade union in 1941? A. Three.

Q. Three different jobs? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And not one of those employers asked you any question dealing with the years 1935, '36 and '37? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you told us, I believe, this morning that in Los Angeles you had run as a candidate of the Communist Party for public office?

A. That's correct.

Q. Was that in the year 1935?

A. No, sir, in Los Angeles it was in the year, either—I think once in '32 and once in '34. I am not positive as to the exact date. It was before 1935, however.

Q. When did you say you joined the Communist Party? A. In 1932, early in 1932.

Q. I see. Now, the offices for which you ran on the regular ballot you told us were for County Supervisor [3209] in Los Angeles County, for Mayor of Los Angeles and also for the United States Congress? A. That is correct.

Q. I daresay you were not elected?

A. No, sir.

Q. And those were open elections, of course?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. In which your name as a known Communist appeared on the public ballots?

A. That's correct.

Q. And again in the year 1936 here in San Francisco you ran for the Congress of the United States?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you tell us this morning that your sponsorship in that particular election was under the banner of the United Labor Party, although you were really a Communist Party candidate?

A. I said I ran on the ticket of the United Labor Party, but ran as an open and known Communist Party member.

Q. I see. I guess you would have run against the late Richard Welch, is that correct?

A. I may have; I don't recall my opponents.

Q. Well, do you remember in what Congressional District you ran? A. No, sir.

Q. Have no idea? A. I am afraid not.

Q. Well, did [3210] you seriously attempt to do what you could to foster your own election?

A. I had no hopes of being elected, Mr. MacInnis; it was merely a propaganda stunt from beginning to end.

Q. In other words, you filed for public office but you can't tell us now in what Congressional District you made such filing? A. That's correct.

Q. And how about in Los Angeles? Do you remember in what Congressional District you ran?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you remember who your successful opponent was there? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. So that your political endeavors were pretty superficial, then?

A. I wouldn't put it that way because—I would say my attempts to gain public office were superficial, but my political endeavors were not.

Q. Well, would you remember the successful candidate the year that you ran for mayor of the City of Los Angeles?

A. I believe I can, but I don't want to be held to it. I think the name was Shaw.

Q. You are really not sure of that either?

A. I am not sure of it, no.

Q. And, of course, if I asked you what persons were elected to the Board of Supervisors the year that you filed for that candidacy [3211] in Los Angeles, you naturally wouldn't be able to tell us all of the supervisors that were elected?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you be able to tell us any of them?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, that political campaigning of which you now tell us took place in Los Angeles, you say, between 1932 and 1934? A. That's right.

Q. And your San Francisco candidacy was more recent, in 1936? A. That's correct.

Q. Although you can not tell us the Congressional District in which you ran, nor the name of the incumbent in office who was your opponent?

A. No, sir.

Q. And I suppose one of the reasons for that is the great passage of years between the present day and the period of 1930's of which we speak?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That is one of the reasons.

Q. So that you feel, I suppose, that you wouldn't be expected to remember too vividly matters that happened in that period?

A. No, because the main intention of my running for public office, Mr. MacInnis, was not to gain office from any specific Congressional District, but the main intention was to forward the aims and policies of the Communist Party from election [3212] platforms.

Q. Now, you say that in March or April of the last calendar year, 1949, you were first approached in reference to the case in which you now sit as a witness? A. That's right.

Q. Could you tell us where and under what circumstances that contact with you was made?

A. Yes, sir. It was made at the office of the Cotton Trade Journal in Memphis, Tennessee.

Q. The office of the Cotton Trade Journal in Memphis? A. Correct.

Q. And what person or persons called upon you there? A. Mr. Bruce Barber.

Q. Mr. Bruce Barber? A. B-a-r-b-e-r.

Q. All right. Is he present in the courtroom?

A. I don't see him.

Q. Is he a red-haired man who was here in court this morning?

A. That's right; he was here this morning.

Q. You saw him here this morning, did you?

A. Pardon?

Q. You saw him this morning?

A. Yes, I did.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Now, Mr. Bruce Barber came to the office of the Cotton Trade Journal in Memphis and made a contact with you? A. That's right. [3213]

Q. Was he alone or was he accompanied by any person? A. He was alone.

Q. Entirely alone? A. Right.

Q. Before he saw you, had he, to your knowledge, spoken with your employers?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. I see. The Cotton Trade Journal, to say the least, is an anti-labor publication, isn't it?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: ~~I~~ object, if Your Honor pleases. There is no such evidence.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, where did you have the conversation with Mr. Barber in the office of the Cotton Trade Journal in Memphis?

The Court: Did the witness answer that question?

Mr. MacInnis: He answered it in the negative.

The Witness: I said the contact was made in the office of the Cotton Trade Journal.

The Court: No, with respect to the paper being an anti-labor newspaper; I overruled the objection. Did you answer?

Mr. MacInnis: He answered it already.

The Witness: I did.

The Court: What was the answer? [3214]

The Witness: I said, "No, sir."

The Court: "No, sir"; all right.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: I am sorry, I have now missed the last question.

The Court: Would you read it, please, Mr. Reporter?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the last question, please?

(Record read.)

A. The contact was made in the Cotton Trade Journal. Mr. Barber told me he wanted to speak to me about something confidential.

Q. Now, did he approach you through some other person first or was some message sent to you or how was he introduced to you?

A. He introduced himself.

Q. You were at a desk?

A. I was—I had arrived at the office and he was seated in the anteroom waiting for me.

Q. And you and he then had a conversation?

A. I went into my office and I was told he wanted to see me and I asked him to come him and he told me who he was, identified himself. There was someone else present in my office at the time and he asked me to speak to me confidentially somewhere, so I suggested I buy him a cup of coffee, which I did.

Q. Just the two of you were present at that meeting? A. Yes.

Q. When you had your cup of coffee? [3215]

A. That's right. That is, we were alone. There were others in the restaurant, but we were alone.

Q. Did he ask you questions then about whether or not you knew Harry Bridges?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Let me refresh my memory a minute, please. He told me what the purpose of the visit was.

Q. Pardon me. What did he say that that purpose was, do you remember?

A. I don't exactly recall the exact words, but the essence of what he said was that there will be another hearing in the Harry Bridges.

Q. Another hearing? Had there been some previous hearing?

A. Yes, I had heard the previous case against Harry Bridges.

Q. What was that case based upon?

A. I couldn't say; I didn't follow it.

Q. You had just heard of that as a matter of——

A. Matter of being a newspaper reader.

Q. ——of common gossip, I suppose. But Mr. Barber said to you that there was to be another hearing in the Harry Bridges case?

A. I am not quoting the word "another" and holding him to it; that is the impression I have.

Q. Well, we won't do that.

A. Thank you.

Q. But did he say it was a second hearing or a third hearing?

A. That it would be a case brought against Harry [3216] Bridges and he asked me whether I would volunteer to come forward and testify as to what I know about him and his connections with the Communist Party.

Q. Did he tell you that the same matter in the other hearings, the charge of Harry Bridges having been a Communist, had been disposed of favorably to Mr. Bridges on the two other occasions? [3216-A]

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please; that is putting words in the mouth of Mr. Barber which ought not to be testified even on cross examination.

Mr. MacInnis: I think I may ask him anything that may have taken place in this conversation.

Mr. Donohue: It doesn't take place just because you put it in your question. That is the vice of it.

The Court: The objection is overruled.

The Witness: Will you repeat the question, sir?

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read it, please.

(Question read.)

A. He made no such statement.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did he say anything about the reason for the bringing of another case against Harry Bridges?

A. Yes, he said the Government is certain that Mr. Bridges perjured himself when he applied for citizenship and that they feel they can prove it.

Q. Did he tell you how long he had been working on the case? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him in what fashion he obtained your name in that faraway city of Memphis?

A. No, sir.

Q. I suppose you were naturally [3217] curious about it?

A. May I add something here that I just recalled? About a week or maybe—no, about three or four weeks before Mr. Barber came to see me at Memphis, I had a call from someone else who asked me whether—asked me my name.

Q. Pardon me.

A. He identified himself as a Government agent and asked my name and asked me whether I was the same person who was in San Francisco and Los Angeles for a while and active in the Communist Party.

Q. Who was that person?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Was that a telephone conversation?

A. No, sir, that was a personal contact.

Q. The agent came to your office?

A. That is correct.

Q. And showed you some credential, I suppose?

A. He identified himself by credential.

Q. Was that any man whom you have since seen? A. No, I have never seen him since.

Q. You haven't seen him since?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. That would be possibly in March 1949?

A. I believe it was the first part of March; I think that is correct.

Q. That man was alone? [3218]

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. That man was alone? A. He was alone.

Q. And he asked you if you were the same Lawrence Ross who had been known as a Communist Party member in the 1930s in Los Angeles and San Francisco?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That was the essence of the question; also identified or sought to identify me by mentioning names of relatives, and I said, "Yes, I am he," and he said—I said, "What is it all about?" He said, "I wish I could tell you, Mr. Ross. I just can't tell you. Thank you for your courtesy." And he left.

Q. That is the only question he asked you?

A. That is right.

Q. He didn't ask you whether you knew Harry Bridges? A. No, sir, not a thing.

Q. Were you puzzled or surprised?

A. Yes.

Q. He just asked you one question?

A. Just that.

Q. Did you ask him the purpose?

A. He said, "I am sorry. I wish I could tell you, but I can't." He thanked me for my courtesy and left. That is the last I saw him.

Q. By the way, not being able to recall the name of this man, do you recall generally with what branch of the Government [3219] service he was connected?

A. No, sir. I remember his showing me a credential.

Q. Was it the Immigration Service?

A. I really couldn't say. I didn't pay too much attention to the credential. I had nothing to hide and I was willing to answer questions.

Q. You don't remember whether it was the Immigration Service or the Federal Bureau of Investigation? A. I don't know.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Would it have been either one of those?

A. I am not qualified to say that. It could have been either one, of course.

Q. You saw the credential, of course?

A. I saw the credential; it was a Government credential.

Q. Did you then expect out of that conversation that there would be some further contact made of you?

A. I did for a period of maybe a week or ten days and nothing happened, and I shrugged my shoulders and dismissed the affair.

Q. So that then you had the meeting with Mr. Barber which you have described and you found yourself in a coffee shop for purposes of privacy talking to that man? A. Correct.

Q. You had never seen him before in your life?

A. No, sir.

Q. And he identified himself, I suppose, as an official of the [3220] Immigration Service?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he at that time ask you questions about Harry Bridges? A. Not at that first meeting.

Q. Well, did he tell you from what city he had come or for what distance he had traveled in order to reach you?

A. Yes, he told me—I think he said he was on his way back to the West Coast from the East, although I can't be positive about that.

Q. He told you that he had come down to Memphis to see you?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. He had stopped over in Memphis to see me.

Q. And in that first interview he asked you no question at all as to whether you knew Harry Bridges?

A. Yes, he did ask me whether I knew him, but no detailed questions as to where I had met him or how often I had seen him or anything of that kind.

Q. How long did you talk to Mr. Barber at that first occasion?

A. Oh, possibly five or ten minutes; no longer.

Q. Did he make some arrangement to return to see you after that?

A. I made arrangements to return to see him at his hotel room that same day.

Q. And where did you meet him?

A. At his hotel room in Memphis.

Q. Do you remember the hotel? [3221]

A. The Gayoso.

Q. What? A. Gayoso—G-a-y-o-s-o.

Q. You went to see this man at the hotel room that night, did you? A. That afternoon.

Q. Was he alone then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a further talk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he then ask you questions about Harry Bridges?

A. He asked me a number of questions concerning what I had done, when I had been in the Communist Party, meetings at which I had seen Harry Bridges—went over generally the same ground we went over this morning except in a much shorter time—a general statement.

Q. In order to leave your employment to go over to the hotel did you have to reveal to your employer the nature of your departure?

A. No, sir. I am at liberty to go and come as I please from the office as long as my paper gets out.

Q. How long did you spend with Mr. Barber on that occasion?

A. Perhaps an hour and a half.

Q. And at the end of that conversation was any arrangement made between you for any further talk? [3222]

A. No, that was the last time I saw him in Memphis.

Q. What did Mr. Barber tell you on that occasion about the plans of the Government to instigate and effect a case against Harry Bridges?

A. Nothing about the plans of the Government. He merely took my statement as to my knowledge of Harry Bridges and his activities and membership in the Party and where I had worked since then.

Q. You say he took your statement?

A. That's right.

Q. You mean you wrote out a statement?

A. He wrote it out as I talked.

Q. You mean Mr. Barber, without aid of any stenographer, wrote out your statement?

A. That's right, in longhand.

Q. In longhand. And then did you sign that statement? A. I did.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. How long was that statement, if you can recall?

A. I think perhaps a little over two closely written pages.

Q. Have you ever seen that statement since?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have never seen it again?

A. No, sir.

Q. And it has not been used in any conference with you nor its contents disclosed to you for any other purpose? [3223]

A. If it was used, I didn't know it. I was never shown that paper.

Q. At the end of that interview what arrangement, if any, was made between you and Mr. Barber for any further talk?

A. He told me that I would be asked to come to San Francisco at some future date, he didn't know when, to testify before a grand jury, and asked me would I volunteer to come. I told him I would.

Q. And he then left?

A. And he then left and I didn't see him again in Memphis.

Q. What was the next contact that you had with any agent of the Government?

A. In San Francisco.

Q. Well, I assume that you were informed by some route or by some means——

A. Oh, I see.

Q. ——of the requirement of your presence here?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. By telephone call from Mr. Barber.

Q. And from what other city or station was that call placed?

A. It was made from San Francisco.

Q. He then asked you to come here?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did he tell you the time that he wanted you to come? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was when? [3224]

A. About the middle of May, I believe.

Q. Did you then make arrangements to come?

A. Yes.

Q. How soon after the receipt of that telephone call did you leave for San Francisco?

A. Within the same week, I believe. I believe the call came early in the week, either Monday or Tuesday, and I left on a Friday. That is correct; I left on a Friday.

Q. Did you make any arrangement with your employers at that time?

A. I told them where I was going and for what reason.

Q. And did you receive some leave of absence?

A. Yes, he said, "More power to you." He said, "I hate to see you leave, but it is an important job."

Q: What was his name?

A. Hickman, Francis G. Hickman.

Q. So then you arrived in San Francisco and stayed where?

A. Cartwright Hotel, I believe.

Q. For how many days? A. Four.

Q. And did you meet any persons connected with the Government whom you had not before encountered? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. While you stayed at the Cartwright Hotel?

A. Yes. [3225]

Q. What persons were those?

A. Mr. William Kaiser.

Q. Pardon me. Kaiser?

A. Kaiser—K-a-i-s-e-r.

Q. Do you see him here in the courtroom?

A. Yes, I do. I met Mr. Donohue.

Q. At the Cartwright Hotel?

A. Yes, I believe I did. That is right. I met —I believe his name is Gallagher.

Q. Do you recognize that man?

A. I think it is the man sitting at the counsel table—I may not have the right name, but I met him anyway—to the right-hand side just behind the man sitting right in front of me.

Q. Did you meet this man sitting in front (indicating Mr. Boyd)? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What is his name?

A. I can't recall. I met him briefly for about two or three minutes, said hello to him.

Q. When was that? A. Pardon?

Q. When did you meet him?

A. During that visit in May at the Cartwright Hotel.

Q. And whom else did you meet?

A. Mr. Jack McGowan. [3226]

Q. Jack McGowan. Do you see him here in the courtroom? A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Anyone else?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. May I ask you one question, sir, please? Are you referring to the entire length of my stay here, four days, in San Francisco? Is that correct?

Q. Yes.

A. I met the handsome, white-haired gentleman at counsel table; I can't think of his name this minute. I know it. I know he is an assistant United States Attorney, and I can't think of his name this minute.

Q. You met him when?

A. During the time I testified before the grand jury.

Q. Was he at the Cartwright Hotel, too?

A. No, I met him at the—in the grand jury room and outside the grand jury room.

Q. Anyone else whose name now recalls itself to you? A. No, sir, not that I remember.

Q. Well, at the Cartwright Hotel did you make any further written statement? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you at any time made a further written statement beyond the handwritten statement by Mr. Bruce Barber of which you spoke?

A. No, sir. [3227]

Q. That is the only written statement you have made? A. That is correct.

Q. And did you testify before the grand jury?

A. I did.

Q. And after that testimony did you return to Memphis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after that what contact, if any, did you have with any Government agent?

A. I came out here again about the middle of

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

November. That was when I expected that I would be put on the stand perhaps a day or two after the trial opened.

Q. Pardon me. Has someone given you that information, that you would be put on the stand a day or two after the trial opened?

A. I was told there would be a possibility, it wasn't a certainty.

Q. Who told you that?

A. I believe Mr. Kaiser did.

Q. Had you seen or talked to any agent in Memphis before you undertook the trip back to San Francisco?

A. You mean between—after the time Mr. Barber contacted me?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. How were you informed as to the time in which you were to return in November of last year? [3228]

A. I received a letter from Mr. Barber perhaps three weeks before that day, saying that the case was due to open at a certain date, sometime in the middle of November, and they would like to have me in San Francisco about two days before then —two or three days before then. Then I heard nothing further until I received a phone call several days before I left.

Q. From whom?

A. Mr. Kaiser, I believe it was.

Q. And what instruction or direction did you receive from Mr. Kaiser in that phone call?

A. He told me—asked me to leave on a Friday,

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

it was again, and I would be back as soon as they could let me go back.

Q. And up to that point had you been served with any subpoena requiring your presence here?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that this trip was a voluntary one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as you say, it wasn't only voluntary but you had the blessing of your employer?

A. I had the approval of the employer.

Q. As you stated. And you arrived in San Francisco when? I will state to you that this trial commenced on the 14th day of November, if I am correct?

A. That was on a Monday, was it? The previous Friday.

Q. You came here approximately the 11th of November? [3229] A. That is correct.

Q. And how long did you remain in San Francisco after that arrival? A. I left on Sunday.

Q. That would be the 13th of November?

A. That is correct.

Q. In other words, you had come out here, stayed two days, and then went back to Memphis?

A. That is correct.

Q. By what means of transportation had you come? A. Plane.

Q. And you took the same means of getting back to Memphis, did you? A. That is correct.

Q. And whom did you see in the two days you remained in San Francisco at that time?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. The same people I mentioned as having seen before.

Q. Where did you stay on that occasion?

A. I am sorry, sir, I can't recall that. I was in the hotel so rarely; I just slept there for two nights. I can't recall the name. It wasn't the Cartwright, I know that.

Q. You can't remember the name of the hotel?

A. No, sir, I can't.

Q. You lived here before, didn't you?

A. I lived here about fourteen years ago. [3230]

Q. And you were here for two nights?

A. That's right.

Q. In the month of November, 1949; which would be at most about six weeks ago, maybe seven; is that right? A. That's right.

Q. And you stayed at some hotel but you can't say where? A. That's correct.

Q. Well, did you stay alone in the hotel?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Were there any agents of the Immigration Service in adjoining rooms to yours?

A. No, sir, not that I know of.

Q. Do you know where this hotel was located?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Well, was it downtown or was it out in one of the residence districts?

A. Oh, I see. It was in the downtown section. I can't give you the street number or the name of the street.

Q. Was it a large hotel?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. About the size of the Cartwright, I would say.

Q. You don't remember the street?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, on those two days or two and a half days, as the case may be, in which you stayed here, you ate your meals in San Francisco, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. Did you take your meals alone or in company with any member of the Federal service?

A. In company with one or more members of the service.

Q. And who were they?

A. Bill Kaiser. I believe I ate with Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Kaiser once.

Q. Pardon me. This gentleman whom you have identified before as Mr. Kaiser is the person whom you call Bill Kaiser?

A. Yes, I am sorry; Mr. Kaiser.

Q. Oh, don't apologize.

A. I don't want to be too informal.

Q. I am sure it is perfectly all right. And who else?

A. Mr. Gallagher. I believe I ate once with Mr. Jack McGowan.

Q. Jack McGowan, Bill Kaiser, and who else?

A. Mr. Gallagher. That is all I can recall.

Q. And pursuant to what instructions did you leave to go back to Memphis?

A. They weren't quite sure when I would go on the stand. I was told that perhaps the selection of the jury might take quite a long time, and I couldn't spare the time to wait; I had to get back on the job as quickly as I could. So I was told to go back and wait for another call.

Q. Did you follow the progress of the case in the newspapers since then? [3232]

A. Very unsatisfactory.

Q. Well, what was the next communication that you had from these men?

A. During the first part of December, perhaps December 13 or 12, along about there.

Q. And how was that communication brought to you? A. By telephone.

Q. Who called you? A. Mr. Kaiser.

Q. And what did he say?

A. He told me that I would be required or asked to go on the stand either Thursday and Friday before Christmas or after the holiday recess. I told Mr. Kaiser that I could drive out if it weren't the Thursday or Friday before Christmas; I would like to drive out.

Q. Why did you want to drive out?

A. Oh, sort of a holiday trip.

Q. Yes, it is a nice holiday, isn't it? And did he tell you to drive or take a plane?

A. He said I could drive if I wanted to, it didn't make any difference to him as long as I was here on time.

Q. What date did he ask you to be here?

A. I was told to be here on the 1st of January.

Q. And you didn't return then to San Francisco in that interim until January 1? [3233]

A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. When did you arrive here actually?

A. On New Year's Day. No, excuse me; the 31st, Saturday.

Q. And by what route?

A. I came up the inland route from Los Angeles.

Q. You mean you drove?

A. I drove, yes.

Q. And brought your family along?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came, I suppose, by easy stages, it being kind of a holiday?

A. Well, I had to stop over in Manteca; I was fogbound. You mean from Los Angeles to here? I had to make a stop at Manteca.

Q. You drove from Memphis to Los Angeles?

A. Yes, I came by easy stages.

Q. And arriving here on the day that you have mentioned, you have been staying where?

A. At a local hotel.

Q. You would furnish us with the name, wouldn't you?

A. Mr. MacInnis, I will if the Court directs me to, but I am not quite willing to do it, because I have my wife and family here. I would rather not subject them to any possible unpleasantries.

Mr. MacInnis: I would suggest that you instruct the jury to disregard any comments of the witness.

The Court: What is your purpose in obtaining the information?

Mr. MacInnis: We have a right to know where this man is staying. I have certainly no wish to inquire into his wife or family or anything else, but we have the right to know where he is in reference to these men who are connected with the Government. And I suggest, your Honor, that there is no basis at all, except a preconceived and an inflammatory one, for this man to make the statement in court that he chooses not to give the name of the hotel where he is staying for fear of subjecting members of his family to unpleasantness. It certainly is highly prejudicial, and I ask your Honor to instruct the jury to disregard that statement.

The Court: Before doing so, I think, Mr. MacInnis, we might determine whether or not there is a basis in fact with respect to this assertion, or his declination to disclose to you the name of the hotel—if there is a basis, of course, on his part, I think that it would be an intrusion on my part to insist. Unless, of course, it involves some material aspect of your cross examination. If you desire to determine whether or not Mr. Kaiser or any of the other agents of the Government are in the hotel with him or beside him, you may inquire. But the name of the hotel wouldn't interest us or be material in the light of that disclosure. If there be some material reason, and you insist, I of course will require the disclosure.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I will abide by any rule that you make on that point, of course.

The Court: The name of the hotel, whether it be the Cartwright or any other hotel, may or may not assist you. You certainly are free to ask and privileged, and no doubt required by your examination, if you are so advised, to ask him.

Mr. MacInnis: It would be of interest, if for no other reason than that this man stayed here seven weeks ago, but can't remember where he stayed. Now, it may be that lack of memory is the basis for his refusal to answer. I don't know. But I am——

The Court: Well, you might ask him the basis for his assertion.

Mr. MacInnis: If you feel that this man's residence should [3236] be protected, I won't ask the question.

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, I will not indicate for the record that I have a feeling one way or the other.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, then, I repeat the request that I made of your Honor to instruct the jury.

The Court: I am not advised as to the reasons underlying his reluctance to make such a disclosure.

Q. (By the Court): Have you any reason, or is it based upon some whom, or what is it?

A. It is based upon what I consider very sound reasons, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me. I repeat the request I made to your Honor, to instruct the jury to disregard the statement made by this witness.

The Court: I see no reason, Mr. MacInnis, in the light of the disclosure, to instruct the jury to disregard any statement made by the witness, if, in fact, the disclosure has any basis in fact, so far as he is concerned. Because such an admonition on my part would tend to reflect upon the witness, as to his credibility and the like, and thus far there is no occasion for me to reflect upon his credibility.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, and such an observation on his part reflects upon the defendant and upon the defense counsel.

The Court: Well, of course, if we bring it up to the point where it rests in the limbo of uncertainty, it might or might not. If you follow the question by asking whether or not [3237] he has any basis in fact, it may or may not reflect upon the defense or upon the prosecution. I do not know. But if we leave it in an uncertain field, it certainly may. I don't know.

Mr. MacInnis: I am sure he will offer some conjecture of the same inflammatory nature if I asked him the question.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Ross: Wherever you are staying now, are there agents of the Government in any adjacent rooms? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you taking your meals in company with any agents of the Government? A. No, sir.

Q. And you have been here in San Francisco since approximately January the 1st, is that right?

A. December 31st.

Q. December 31st? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the place where you are living, by the way, is not the same hotel in which you stayed in November? A. No, sir; no, sir.

Q. It is a different place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are taking your meals without the intrusion of Mr. Bill Kaiser or Mr. Jack McGowan or any of the other men?

A. I have taken two meals in the company of Mr. Bill Kaiser, but others have not been in his company or any other government [3238] agent's company.

Q. And so far as the place where you are staying is concerned, you know of your own knowledge that there are no government agents at that particular hotel?

A. To the best of my knowledge, there are none.

Q. So that whatever reasons you might have as a basis for refusing to disclose the name of the hotel have not impelled you to ask for any government agents to be placed in the hotel with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have not made that request, have you?

A. No, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: May we take the afternoon recess?

The Court: We may take the afternoon recess, ladies and gentlemen. The same admonition to you, not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form nor express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Ross, where did you say you were born? A. Bell County.

Q. Bell County? A. Bell, B-e-l-l.

Q. Bell County, Kentucky. And what date?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. June 24, 1903. [3239]

Q. And your name has always been Lawrence Ross? A. Yes.

Q. And you left the Communist Party, according to your best memory, on about what date?

A. Either the end of 1937 or the beginning of 1938.

Q. Did you drop out of the party, just drift away as you suggested this morning?

A. That's right.

Q. Or did you give some formal resignation to the authorities in the Communist Party?

A. No, one doesn't resign from the Communist Party.

Q. I am asking you what you did, Mr. Ross.

A. I didn't.

Q. You didn't give any notice to anybody?

A. That's right.

Q. And you merely ceased performing the functions of a member of the Communist Party?

A. That's right.

Q. You stopped going to meetings and cut off those associations? A. That's right.

Q. And could you fix any better for us in point of time the date that you left the Communist Party?

A. No, sir, since leaving wasn't an abrupt act, or there was no notice given to anyone, I just drifted out of it.

Q. You say that while you were on the West Coast, you were [3240] openly a member of the Communist Party, but when you went back to New York and had a job as an organizer for a CIO union, you then concealed your Communist Party membership?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. There was no reason to conceal it or disclose it.

Q. You did not disclose it, is that the fact?

A. There was no reason to disclose it or to conceal it.

Q. Pardon me. The question was, did you disclose it?

A. The people with whom I worked in the union knew I was a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Would you answer the question? Did you disclose it? A. Yes.

Q. Well, didn't you tell us under oath earlier today that the only time in your life that you concealed your Communist Party membership was when you left the West Coast and went back to New York?

A. Well, that is the period I am talking about, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. Well, you did conceal it at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, when did you conceal it?

A. It wasn't ever an act of concealment. The facts are that when I went back to New York I wasn't openly active as a Communist.

Q. And you never thereafter attempted to rejoin the Communist Party? A. No, sir. [3241]

Q. And that would include all of its activities?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

You had no further contact as a supposed member of the Communist Party after that time?

A. That's correct.

Q. Either late '37 or early '38?

A. That is the best of my recollection, yes, sir.

Q. And as you say, it was not a sudden thing, you merely drifted away for the reasons that you have offered us already. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in San Francisco you were the co-editor of the Western Worker for about six months, is that correct?

A. That is approximately correct.

Q. That was in what period of time?

A. That was from November 1934 until May or June of 1935.

Q. And you were editor of the same publication, the Western Worker, from May or June of 1935 until what date?

A. Until I left San Francisco, in the summer of 1937.

Q. Did you resign from that job?

A. There was no formal resignation, no, sir.

Q. Well, you were employed as the editor, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I suppose you received a salary?

A. That's right.

Q. That was the way you made your living at that time? A. That's right. [3242]

Q. And you mean you just walked away from the job?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. No, sir; I mean the Communist Party transferred me.

Q. In other words, you didn't resign your job, you were merely assigned to some other post, is that it?

A. I was assigned to go to New York, my membership was transferred from San Francisco to New York.

Q. Now, did you tell us that in the spring of 1935 that the district organizer for the Communist Party in San Francisco was a man named Sam Darcy?

A. That's right, until the spring or early summer. I can't recall the exact time of year.

Q. Was he the district organizer for the Communist Party when you came here?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that some time after that he was replaced by another man?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And who was that man?

A. Bill Schneidermann.

Q. And there was some interim of time between the coming of Schneidermann to that job and the vacation of the job by Sam Darcy, is that what you told us? A. That's right.

Q. And that interim period of time comprised how many weeks or months? [3243]

A. Possibly three or four months. It was several months.

Q. Did you tell us that in that interim of months the duties of a district organizer were placed in the hands of three functionaries in this region?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those three, you said, were yourself, a woman named Oleta O'Connor and a man named Arthur Kent? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you say that this Arthur Kent had some other name?

A. I knew him under two names—Kent and Scott.

Q. Was he also known as Arthur Margolis?

A. I don't recall that name.

Q. And you mentioned a little later in your testimony the name of Norma Perry. Were Norma Perry and this man, Arthur Kent or Scott or Margolis, married to each other at any time?

A: Not that I know of.

Q. You never heard that, if they were?

A. If I did, I don't recollect it.

Q. How many times did you see this Arthur Kent while you were here in San Francisco or in Los Angeles?

A. Any number of times. I can't place a number upon it; I would say at least 50.

Q. Did you know him well? A. Quite well.

Q. Was he a friend of yours? [3244]

A. Not personally. He was in the same organization I was, on a fraternal relation, I would say.

Q. Were you familiar with the background of his life? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you become familiar with it later?

A. No, sir.

Q. You haven't heard from him since leaving the West Coast? A. No, sir.

Q. And while you three, this man named Arthur Kent or Scott or Margolis, yourself and Oleta O'Connor, were elevated to jointly carrying out the post of district organizer, some man, you say, from the Central Committee of the Communist Party, supervised your activities?

A. In fact, the appointment of the three was made by this man from the Central Committee, Jack Johnstone. The three of us were named and I was named as acting district organizer.

Q. And Jack Johnstone was a man whom you had seen on about how many occasions?

A. Previously to that, I don't recall having seen him at all, previously to his coming down here.

Q. In other words, you saw him for the first time after he appointed you to the job you have mentioned? A. That's right.

Q. And did you see him often during the stewardship? A. Yes. [3245]

Q. How often? A. Probably every day.

Q. And I suppose you saw other people, Arthur Scott or Kent and Oleta O'Connor?

A. Quite often. I wouldn't say that I saw them every day or not.

Q. Now, then, in some further date or at some date following that period of time, the man whom you call Bill Schneidermann came to San Francisco, did he? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had never known him before, had you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Never saw him before he came here?

A. No, sir.

Q. And after he come here, did you see him frequently? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, coming into this matter of your recollections of things that happened in the 1930's, 1934, '5 and '6—the events that you told us about this morning—did you tell us the first time that you saw Harry Bridges was at Fresno?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had never seen him before in your life, is that right? A. That's correct.

Q. At the time you went to Fresno upon that occasion, how long had you been living at San Francisco? [3246]

A. Oh, possibly a month and a half, not very long.

Q. You had been but recently transferred to San Francisco? A. That is correct.

Q. And when you came up here, you took over your duties with the Communist Party?

A. As co-editor of the Western Worker, yes, sir.

Q. And in Fresno, in about December, was it, of 1934—you saw Harry Bridges for the first time?

A. I believe it was about December.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Did you have any personal conversation with him at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. You just saw the man?

A. He was pointed out to me as Harry Bridges.

Q. I see. Some other person pointed him out and said, "That is Harry Bridges," or words to that effect?

A. Yes. It was not during the meeting, it was after the meeting was over.

Q. And you didn't at any time shake hands with the man or have any personal conversation with him? A. No, sir.

Q. Pardon me?

A. No, sir, I saw him inside the hall, inside the place, and he reported to Sam Darcy that his overcoat had been stolen.

Q. This was in your presence? [3247]

A. That was in my presence and it had been pointed out to me who he was, and at that time I expected a series of dramatic incidents to follow. I thought perhaps that was the beginning of a deep dark plot of some kind.

Q. The stolen overcoat?

A. Yes, the stolen overcoat. And——

Q. You haven't got the overcoat, have you, Mr. Ross? A. Pardon?

Q. You haven't got the overcoat, have you?

A. No, no, sir.

Q. That wasn't the deep dark plot that you were thinking about? A. No.

Q. Well, let me see if we are straight on this.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

You had never seen Harry Bridges in your life?

A. Correct.

Q. You had followed, since about 1932, the occupation of being a paid functionary of the Communist Party? A. In Los Angeles.

Q. Yes. You had come to San Francisco in the fall of 1934 to the post of co-editor of the Western Worker, correct? A. Correct.

Q. Are you able to fix in any way the date in December of 1934 at which you attended this meeting? A. No, sir, I am afraid not.

Q. Did you make any report of that meeting which might have [3248] found its way into the pages of the Western Worker?

A. I may have; I don't recall whether I did or what it was.

Q. If you did make such a notation, would that notation correctly represent the date, if we found it in the Western Worker?

A. Yes, I would assume so.

Q. I don't know that there is such a notation; I am just asking you if you ever did. Would it have been consistent with your policies as a newspaper man to report that you attended a meeting in Fresno?

A. I would have reported it if there had been good reason for reporting it; or, rather, no good reason for not reporting it.

Q. Now, at this meeting in Fresno there were 60 to 70 persons present? A. Approximately.

Q. And I suppose that Harry Bridges, when you saw him in the hall, was either sitting or standing in an ordinary fashion?

A. He was standing and talking to Sam Darcy.

Q. And any one of these 60 or 70 people present in that hall would have had the same opportunity as yourself for observing the presence of this man?

A. That I don't know. There were not very many people left at that time; the meeting had broken up, had concluded. There were several standing around.

Q. How big was the hall, Mr. Ross?

A. Not as large as this courtroom. Perhaps two-thirds as large, [3249] I would say.

Q. About two-thirds as large as this room?

A. Approximately.

Q. At any rate, the man whom you say was Harry Bridges was not attempting to conceal himself at the time you saw him? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember by what route you went down to Fresno for that meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember if you went by train?

A. I don't remember that I went by train. I certainly assume I went by automobile, since I do remember going back to automobile.

Q. Do you remember who drove the automobile?

A. I drove it back.

Q. Whose car was it? A. I don't know.

Q. Was it your car?

A. I don't think so; I don't recall that.

Q. Did you have a car at that time?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I had the use of a car, in San Francisco, at that time.

Q. Now, do you remember driving a car back from Fresno, but you don't remember who drove the car in which you probably went down?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you remember who your companion or companions may be? [3250]

A. No, sir. I remember driving back, because I drove back over the Pacheco Pass in a very, very heavy fog.

Q. Pardon me. Do you remember whether or not you had any companions going down?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have no memory one way or the other?

A. Just a complete blank. That trip down is just a complete blank.

Q. Did you stay at any hotel in Fresno?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you drive down in the course of one day from San Francisco?

A. Drove down, I believe, if I did—and I am sure I either drove or was driven—very early that morning. It was a Sunday, I think, and drove back the same evening after the conclusion of the meeting.

Q. And at this meeting, you say you don't recall Harry Bridges making any speech?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the second time that you saw Harry Bridges and the first time that you heard him speak, that is, you heard his voice in your presence, was in a San Francisco apartment, is that correct?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That's correct. [3251]

Q. By the way, going back to the other subject for just a moment, have you been in the city of Fresno of recent date at all? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. I passed through Fresno driving up here last Friday.

Q. Did you stop and attempt to find out where this hall was located at which 60 to 70 people gathered? A. No; sir, I drove right through.

Q. You didn't make any inquiry about that when you were in Fresno? A. No, sir.

Q. In the written statement that you made to Mr. Barber of the Immigration Service did you make any mention of the Fresno engagement?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Well, in the discussions that you have had with these various men of the Government, has the matter of the Fresno meeting been discussed between you? A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you asked by any of those persons to see if you could remember the name of the hall or its location in the city of Fresno?

A. Yes; I could remember neither the name of the hall nor the location. [3252]

Q. And when you passed through Fresno you made no effort to see if you could refresh your own memory?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. No, sir, when I passed through Friday I didn't stop.

Q. This meeting the first time you heard Harry Bridges say anything took place when in point of time?

A. I would say it was early in 1935; I can't place the month.

Q. Was it in the late winter or the early spring? Can you help us in that respect?

A. I would say it was late winter according to the calendar, because I believe spring starts March 21. I believe it was before then.

Q. Could it have been as late as March?

A. I don't think so. That isn't my impression. It might have been.

Q. And you went to this apartment along with some other man? A. That is correct.

Q. Named Hanoff, did you say?

A. Hanoff—H-a-n-o-f-f.

Q. You don't know where the apartment was?

A. No, sir.

Q. In the early spring or late winter of 1935 you had lived in San Francisco four or five months, hadn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, have you no idea at all as to where this apartment was located? [3253]

A. I am sorry, I don't, Mr. MacInnis. May I make a statement?

Q. I don't think so.

A. Very well; I won't, then.

Q. Since you have been here in San Francisco

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

have you made any attempt to see if you could refresh your memory as to where this apartment was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you failed? A. Quite dismally.

Q. None of these gentlemen associated with the Government were able to tell you where the apartment was? A. No, sir.

Q. Either based upon inquiries of their own or such investigations as they had made out of the lips of other people?

A. No, sir. When I was here for the first time Mr. Kaiser drove me around San Francisco to see whether I could spot the place, whether I could locate it, and I just couldn't.

Q. In what districts did you drive with him?

A. I am afraid I can't tell you that. I don't know what the districts are any more.

Q. Did you consume a great deal of time looking through the districts for this apartment?

A. Oh, perhaps twenty minutes to half an hour.

Q. Mr. Kaiser wasn't able to offer you [3254] any hints or suggestions? A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, Mr. Kaiser didn't consult any San Francisco directory of that year and find out the address of the person who you say was the occupant of the apartment?

A. I couldn't say what Mr. Kaiser did or did not do.

Q. He at least didn't point that out to you?

A. No, but he drove around and asked me whether any of these places looked familiar, and they didn't.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. In any event, he didn't reveal to you that he had made the ordinary search of looking into the directory of that year concerning the name of the woman you say occupied the apartment?

A. I don't think so, no, sir.

Q. About how much time did you spend in driving around and looking at the outside of buildings?

A. Perhaps twenty to thirty minutes.

Q. Did you stop in front of one or more buildings and look at them?

A. Yes, we stopped in front of one, two or three of them.

Q. Did you go inside the buildings?

A. We went into the lobby of one of them.

Q. You looked around to see if you could remember it and that was blank, was it?

A. Absolutely blank.

Q. In any event, you heard the voice of Harry Bridges in this [3255] apartment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was the first time that you had heard that voice? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part or role did you tell us that you played in that meeting as a functionary of the Communist Party?

A. I was very silent; I didn't know very much of the subject being discussed.

Q. Pardon me. I think that we are not asking you to say what you did not do; in other words, saying that you were silent doesn't help. What did you do? What role did you play?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I sat there more or less awestruck, impressed by the presence of the great Harry in the same room. If I opened my mouth, I don't recall it.

Q. How do you feel now about that?

A. I have nothing against Harry Bridges.

Q. Being in the same room with him do you feel the same impression? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember anything affirmative you did? A. I beg pardon?

Q. Do you remember anything affirmative you did in the course of that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. You can't remember anything that you said, any move that you [3256] initiated, or anything at all the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any notes?

A. Oh, no, sir; that is never done.

Q. Pardon me. You were the co-editor of the Western Worker at that time, were you not?

A. I certainly was.

Q. Did you know San Francisco any better in the early spring of 1935 than you had on your previous months of residence here? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Can you remember anything specific that Harry Bridges said at that gathering?

A. Nothing specific. I couldn't quote him.

Q. But you were very impressed.

A. Oh, yes.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. At meeting him, but you can't remember anything he said? A. That is correct.

Q. Do you remember anything specific that any other person said?

A. No, sir. All that I can recall is the general subject matter.

Q. And the general subject matter, as you told us, was the waterfront situation in San Francisco?

A. And the relation of the Communist Party to the situation. [3257]

Q. Did you tell us before how many people attended this gathering at the apartment?

A. I don't recall whether I told you or not, whether I testified to it or not.

Q. Would you tell us now?

A. Oh, perhaps a dozen.

Q. Would that be fairly accurate?

A. Perhaps fifteen or——

Q. Would there be as many as fifteen?

A. There might have been.

Q. Can you tell us again the persons whom you think you remember as being there?

A. The persons whom I place there are Sam Darcy, Elmer Hanoff, Walter Lambert, Harry Bridges, John Schomaker.

Q. That is five men? A. That is correct.

Q. And you say there may have been as many as fifteen people at that meeting?

A. There may have been as many as that.

Q. You can't help us any further, though, as to their identity?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. No, sir. I wish I could.

Q. Had you known the woman named Norma Perry before this time? A. No, sir.

Q. You had never seen her before?

A. No, sir. [3258]

Q. But you recall her name as being Norma Perry? A. That's right.

Q. Did you see her thereafter?

A. Oh, perhaps once or twice.

Q. Only once or twice. And this lady didn't stay for the meeting?

A. Not that I can recall, no, sir; I don't believe she did.

Q. But you remember her name?

A. Yes, she was pointed out to me and introduced to me by Mr. Hanoff.

Q. Were you impressed by her, too, so that you now remember her name although she didn't stay?

A. Not particularly, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. And you are fairly sure that there were approximately fifteen people at this gathering?

A. I say there may have been as many as fifteen, probably less.

Q. What would be the minimum? As few as twelve? A. Ten to twelve, I would say.

Q. And you don't remember what any person there said or what Harry Bridges said, although you did hear his voice?

A. I do recollect it is the first time I heard Harry Bridges talk in an intimate meeting.

Q. By the way, how big was this apartment?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Of course, we were all gathered in one large room, which I think was the living room. I didn't explore it. [3259] I judge it is about a five- or six-room apartment.

Q. From your ordinary knowledge of dwelling houses, about how big was this room?

A. I would say it was the ordinary sized living room.

Q. Would it be as much as 25 feet in length?

A. I don't think so.

Q. About 20?

A. Perhaps 16 might be closer to it.

Q. Was it as wide as that or narrower?

A. I believe it was a little narrower.

Q. Did the people present stand up or did they sit down?

A. I think some stood up and some sat down.

Q. Pardon me?

A. Some were standing; some of them were sitting.

Q. Were any refreshments served?

A. I can't remember any, no, sir.

Q. About how long did the gathering remain?

A. I would say approximately two hours.

Q. About two hours, approximately fifteen people remained in this room, which was about 20 or 16 by what other distance in feet, did you say?

A. I didn't say. I said I thought it was a little bit narrower than it was long.

Q. Those fifteen approximately people remained there for about two hours. You have told us everything you remember, I suppose, about that? [3260]

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Yes.

Q. Let us come to the third meeting, that is, the third transaction or matter concerning which you gave testimony this morning. Did you say that you went to some gathering of some people in Sokol Hall? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I think at my request you spelled out that name, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said it was S-o-k-o-l?

A. That is correct.

Q. Had you remembered the spelling of that name over the years, or had you refreshed your memory from some source?

A. I refreshed my memory.

Q. From what source?

A. Merely recollecting that meeting, that meeting at which I remembered Harry Bridges there, that came back to my memory.

Q. Let me see if I could assist you in this fashion: Did you go out on the street and pass by this hall? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Who is "we"?

A. Mr. Kaiser and I.

Q. When did you do that?

A. The last time I was out here. [3261]

Q. The two-day period in which you stayed at the hotel whose name you have forgotten?

A. That is correct.

Q. And does the hall still bear the same name?

A. I don't know. I don't even remember that.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Did you stop and look to see if it was the same building?

A. We stopped and looked, but I had merely a hazy recollection of it. I couldn't identify it, but I do recall the same Sokol.

Q. In other words, when you and Mr. Kaiser stopped out on that street in front of a building you couldn't definitely identify that as being the same building? A. Not definitely, no, sir.

Q. But the word "Sokol" came back to your mind, did it?

A. That strikes a very definite chord of memory.

Q. Did that name appear on the front of the building?

A. I don't remember seeing it there. It appeared at the front of the building at the time I was here as a functionary of the Communist Party.

Q. I mean the time you went there between November 11 and November 13 of 1949?

A. No, sir, I don't recall seeing that, no.

Q. Who told you that name?

A. I recalled the name myself.

Q. In other words, Mr. Kaiser didn't tell you the name "Sokol Hall" nor anyone else? [3262]

A. That's right; I recalled that name because there were many Communist meetings held there.

Q. Did you find out whether this was actually the place called Sokol Hall?

A. No, sir. I didn't. I knew it was here, and we passed it, and I was asked whether I recognized it, and I said it strikes a vague chord of memory, but I couldn't positively identify it.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Did you go into the hall on this occasion?

A. No, sir, we couldn't get in.

Q. Why was that?

A. It was on a Sunday, I believe.

Q. You never did return? A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, I assume that it would not have been impossible to arrange to go in and take a look at the interior of this hall?

A. Well, I don't know whether it would have been impossible or not, sir. We didn't do it.

Q. In any event, having looked at the outside of this hall on Sunday, which would have been November 13, you have never made any further attempt, either at the request of Mr. Kaiser or anyone else, to go back there and take a look at the interior?

A. No, sir.

Q. And the only thing that you say strikes a chord in your memory is the word "Sokol."? [3263]

A. That is correct. We had many Communist meetings there.

Q. Did you make any inquiry about the location of any hall by that name? A. No, sir.

Q. Where was the hall to which you and Mr. Kaiser went on the 13th of November, the Sunday afternoon?

A. It is off Haight Street. I can't tell you the name of the street.

Q. Off or on? A. Off.

Q. Off Haight Street? A. Off, I believe.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. In other words, not on Haight Street?

A. That is correct?

Q. But on some cross street intersecting Haight Street? A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know what that cross street was?

A. No, sir.

Q. This drive that you undertook with Mr. Kaiser on Sunday afternoon the 13th of November—— A. That is right.

Q. ——was to try to refresh your memory as to where this hall was located?

A. No, sir, the drive was to see whether I could identify the hall as being the Sokol Hall I had in mind. Its [3264] location wasn't very important to me.

Q. And you couldn't do that? A. No, sir.

Q. And you do not remember the cross street where this building was in front of which you stopped? A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. How far out Haight Street were you required to drive before you turned off in front of this particular building with Mr. Kaiser?

A. Perhaps ten blocks; I am not sure of that. It was quite a distance off Market Street up Haight.

Q. You entered Haight Street from Market and went out ten blocks?

A. I believe so; approximately ten. It may have been eight, it may have been twelve. I didn't count the blocks.

Q. You have told us all you remember about the hall? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Doing back to your memory in the year 1935, —is that when you said you went to this meeting at the Sokol Hall?

A. That was in 1935, that's right.

Q. About what part of the year?

A. In the fall of the year.

Q. By that time you had lived in San Francisco almost one year? A. That is correct. [3265]

Q. And I suppose your activities hadn't kept you indoors at all times? A. Not at all times.

Q. You went from place to place?

A. That is correct.

Q. You did various things pursuant to your job as editor of the Western Worker?

A. That is correct.

Q. And a functionary of the Communist Party?

A. That's right.

Q. But you still can't remember any more about this hall?

A. No, sir, I have a very poor memory that way, I'm afraid.

Q. I'm afraid so, too. Now, you say that 40 to 45 people were there? A. Approximately.

Q. And did you tell us the names of any of the people whom you remember as being there?

A. Bill Schneidermann, Elmer Hanoff, Harry Bridges, John Schomaker, Oleta O'Connor and Elaine Black. I believe Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Lambert were there, but I wouldn't be very positive about them.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. You just have some kind of belief that Mr. Schmidt might have been there?

A. Yes, I have the impression that he and Lambert were there.

Q. But you have no real memory of it? [3266]

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you have given us one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight people—six definite people and two further possibilities. There were 40 to 45 people in the hall, is that true?

A. That is my memory.

Q. Did you know all of the 40 to 45 people who were there? A. I believe I did.

Q. You had met all of them at one time or another? A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you say whether or not Harry Bridges spoke at that meeting?

A. I have no recollection of his speaking there.

Q. Do you mean by that that your memory is completely blank, or that you don't think he did?

A. Or that I don't what?

Q. Do you mean by that answer that your memory is completely blank on the subject of whether he spoke or you have some memory that he didn't speak? Which is it?

A. No, my memory is blank on the subject. I don't [3267] know.

Q. In other words, whether you were impressed with seeing him at that meeting or not, again, you are not able to remember whether he said anything or not?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Yes, I remember the meeting and I remember his being at the meeting.

Q. But not whether he said anything?

A. No, sir, because I was rather surprised to see him there.

Q. You say you don't remember whether he said anything because you were surprised to see him there?

A. No, sir, I didn't say that. I said I remember his being at the meeting because I was rather surprised to see him there. You see, at previous meetings, Mr. MacInnis, there had been small intimate meetings in private homes of perhaps 15 people present.

Q. Might be one at Norma Perry's apartment?

A. That's right. There had been a series of such meetings. They failed to impress me after the first one.

Q. And at those meetings you didn't remember what Mr. Bridges may have said either, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now, let's go to the fourth meeting. Now, you told us about an incident taking place at—did you say the Communist Party headquarters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which were located where? [3268]

A. 121 Haight Street.

Q. That is an address that you do remember?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. And that gathering took place when?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. The best I can place it is the early fall of 1936.

Q. Can you give us any more definite statement as to the date?

A. I am afraid not. I would love to be able to, I just can't do it.

Q. Where was your office as editor of the Western Worker at that time?

A. The Western Worker office was one flight up.

Q. The same building? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that was a building that you customarily inhabited as part of your own work?

A. Yes, that was the place where I worked.

Q. Now, how many people did you say were present at this gathering in the early fall of 1936?

A. Perhaps 20 or 25.

Q. Of whose number you were able to give us the names of how many?

A. Let me think. Bill Schneidermann who presided; Elmer Hanoff; Walter Lambert; Frank Carlson; Betty Gannett; Harry Bridges; John Schomaker; and Henry Schmidt.

Q. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven— [3269] eight persons, I think you named?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how many persons in all were at that meeting?

A. My guess would be between 20 and 25. That is my best recollection.

Q. And at that meeting you say that Harry

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Bridges spoke about the waterfront situation and the advisability of calling a strike?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, does the element of the thought about calling a strike aid you in any way as to fixing the date of that conversation?

A. Not any more specifically than the early fall of 1936.

Q. Was there any strike called at that time?

A. There was later, not at that time.

Q. About how much later?

A. Several months, I would say; perhaps a month, perhaps two. I don't recall.

Q. Well, if there was any strike called in the fall of 1936 on the waterfront, would that be the strike to which reference was made at this meeting?

A. Yes, it would. [redacted]

Q. And your best memory is that the strike called after that meeting on the waterfront was actually called about how much time thereafter?

A. It would have to be a rough guess, Mr. [3270] MacInnis. I am afraid I can't place the date with relation to the meeting. It was subsequent to the meeting, some time subsequent to it.

Q. Well, what would you say would be the range in time? Would it have been as long after as six months?

A. Oh, no, I would say within two months.

Q. And what would be the smallest possible time, within two weeks?

A. Possibly. I think not, though. I think perhaps a little longer than that. But I just don't know. I don't have any recollection of the time element.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Do you have any recollection as to the strike itself?

A. I remember there was a strike called.

Q. About how long did it last?

A. Several months, I think, to the best of my recollection.

Q. And what was the subject matter of that strike? That is, what were the issues involved? What was the controversy between the employers and the workers at that time?

A. I don't recall the exact issue. I know there was a struggle for power at that time between Mr. Bridges and Mr. Lundeberg of the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

Q. Mr. Lundeberg? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know him?

A. I saw him once. I never have spoken to him, never met him.

Q. Well, you say he had some struggle [3271] with Mr. Bridges?

A. I think there was a difference of tactics or political opinion between Bridges and Mr. Lundeberg.

Q. And that was the issue in that strike, was it?

A. No, sir; I didn't say that. That is what I recall about that situation.

Q. Well, do you remember how long the strike lasted?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I would say several months. I don't have any recollection of its duration.

Q. If there was a strike around that time, you would have reported it as editor of the Western Worker, would you not? A. I no doubt did.

Q. And you would have been following its progress from day to day, wouldn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Wouldn't you have been writing about it every day?

A. I would have been writing, but I would have been writing propaganda stories rather than factual, reportorial news.

Q. In other words, if one were to find some article in the paper you edited at that time, the paper probably would not contain the truth, is that it?

A. I would say it would contain an element of truth, distorted to suit the party line at the moment.

Q. It was always your policy while you were editor of the paper?

A. That was the policy of the Communist Party.

Q. Pardon me. Was that your policy? [3272]

A. I followed that policy.

Q. It was your policy, then?

A. It was my policy in so far as I followed the line of the Communist Party.

Q. Well, did you actually do that with news stories—slant them a certain way, distort them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the news stories actually did not represent the truth, then?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Represented the line of the Communist Party.

Q. Did you do that all the time, Mr. Ross, while you were connected with the Western Worker?

A. I would say part of the time, a good deal of the time; whenever the facts didn't suit the Communist Party, the facts were distorted.

Q. By you?

A. By the instructions of the Communist Party, which I carried out.

Q. I am speaking only about you, Mr. Ross.

A. Yes, I carried those instructions out, implicitly.

Q. You distorted the facts any time the leaders of the Communist Party gave you that direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you ever distort them on your own, without any specific direction from above? [3273]

A. I followed the line of the Communist Party, meaning that I took the initiative in distorting the facts, yes, sir, in that paper.

Q. In other words, you entered into this distortion of the truth on your own, following merely what you assumed to be a general policy of the Communist Party?

A. What I knew to be the policy of the Communist Party, what I knew to be that policy, sir.

Q. And I suppose on many occasions you followed that policy without anyone giving you an affirmative direction to that end?

A. I needed none.

Q. You knew what to do?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I was a good Communist at that time.

Q. And you knew how to distort the truth?

A. I knew how to slant the truth, how to take facts and slant them.

Q. Did it take you a considerable period of time to gain that facility?

A. I believe it took a period of breaking, yes.

Q. And once one gains that kind of facility, I suppose it remains with him as a kind of weapon for the rest of his life?

A. You suppose wrong, sir. Once one leaves the Communist Party and dissociates himself from it, repudiates it, the entire method of living changes.

Q. You mean, all you have to do is to make that confession that [3274] you are an ex-Communist and the sun comes out and you are forgiven all your sins?

A. No, sir, I wish it were as easy as that.

Mr. MacInnis: I think we will take a recess and maybe we will go into the ease of that matter in the morning, if Your Honor please.

The Court: What?

Mr. MacInnis: I say, maybe we will go into the ease of that particular matter in the morning that the witness mentioned.

The Court: Well, that is purely your concern, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes it is.

The Court: What the morning brings is, of course, another matter.

We will take the afternoon recess and adjournment, ladies and gentlemen of the jury. May I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any circumstances nor to suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial; not to form nor express an opinion thereon until the case is finally submitted to you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken to tomorrow, Thursday, January 5, 1950, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [3275]

Thursday, January 5, 1950—10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

The witness on the stand is Lawrence Ross, heretofore sworn.

LAWRENCE S. ROSS

resumed.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. MacInnis:

Q. Now, Mr. Ross, you told us, I think, at one point yesterday that your original reason for entering the Communist Party was a humanitarian reason; is that correct?

A. A combination of humanitarianism and ignorance.

Q. And on this matter of deceit, the second matter that we were discussing at the end of the day yesterday, I would like to ask you a few more questions. What was the date upon which you first came up to San Francisco to live and work?

A. I believe it was early in November, 1934.

Q. Early in November, 1934?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you live in San Francisco when you came here?

A. I am sorry, I can't recall.

Q. Do you remember the street?

A. No, sir, I don't. I lived at several places

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

while I was [3276] here, and I don't recall the location or address.

Q. Do you remember any address at which you lived while you were here in San Francisco?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. And yet you were here in San Francisco until sometime in 1937, weren't you?

A. That's right.

Q. Can you give us any address at which you lived?

A. No, sir. After I left the Communist Party, Mr. MacInnis, I drew a blind on that part of my life. I wanted to forget the whole life as a nightmarish experience, and I succeeded almost completely; not quite.

Q. You mean you succeeded to all intents except for the details that you have brought here?

A. I succeeded for all experiences I had here with the exception of several instances which remained in my memory because of certain things.

Q. Can you remember any street on which you lived in San Francisco?

A. Vallejo Street sounds familiar. I might have lived there, although I can't be sure.

Q. What part of Vallejo Street?

A. I don't know.

Q. And yet you lived here from the end of 1934 up to sometime in 1937? [3277]

A. That is correct.

Q. You can't tell us any single address at which you lived, and the only street that you say is vaguely familiar to your mind is Vallejo Street?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. At this moment.

Q. Do you know that there is such a street as Vallejo Street?

A. Yes, I have passed it in driving around town this week.

Q. Didn't you drive past any former abode of yours?

A. If I did, I didn't recognize it as such.

Q. Do you remember that you lived on a hill?

A. What street, sir?

Q. Do you remember that you lived on a hill or on the level? A. I don't remember.

Q. Well, do you remember, Mr. Ross, whether or not you were married when you came to San Francisco?

A. I wasn't living with my wife at the time.

Q. You were married?

A. Technically; we were separated.

Q. You had children? A. Yes.

Q. And how old were your children?

A. About three and two, or three and one. They were small, very small.

Q. Had the younger yet been born when you came to San Francisco? [3278]

A. Perhaps not. I can't recall.

Q. In any event, you say you were separated from your wife? A. Yes, that's right.

Q. So that whatever quarters you took here in San Francisco were not quarters which you shared with your wife and children? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Were they large quarters?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. How many rooms did you have?

A. I assume one; I don't know.

Q. Pardon me. You say you assume you had one room?

A. I believe so. I just assume it; I don't know; I don't remember.

Q. Did you live alone, or did you live with any other person, Mr. Ross? A. I lived alone.

Q. Always? A. As far as I can recall.

Mr. McMillan: What difference does that make?

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me?

Mr. MacMillan: What difference would that make?

Mr. MacInnis: Are you addressing me or addressing the Court?

Mr. McMillan: I am addressing Mr. Donohue.

Mr. MacInnis: I wish you would do it so I can't hear it, [3279] please.

Mr. McMillan: If I want to address you, I will do so.

Mr. MacInnis: Will you read the last question and answer, please.

(Question and answer read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, forgetting the absence of memory of your own upon these details, you were able to give us the names of certain people whom you met in San Francisco yesterday, weren't you. A. Yes, sir.

Q. You gave us the names of persons who worked with you in carrying out the Communist Party policies, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Who did you say were the other two persons who, along with you, had carried out the—was it the post of district organizer after Sam Darcy had left and before Schneidermann came?

A. Arthur Kent or Scott——

Q. Yes? A. And Oleta O'Connor.

Q. Who was Oleta O'Connor?

A. A member of the Communist Party.

Q. Was she your wife?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. Did you ever pass her off as your wife while you were here? A. No. [3280]

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor pleases. Mr. MacInnis knows that that is not a proper question.

Mr. MacInnis: He doesn't seem to remember anything, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: That is a wild statement.

Mr. MacInnis: He isn't even sure of the number of children he had. He can't remember where he lived. He has a vague recollection of one street. Now, we certainly have a right to know if he knows who his wife was at that time, because we have some matters that I think we might develop, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: Object to the question.

The Court: Overrule the objection at this time.

The Witness: Will you repeat the question.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: Will you read the question.

(Question read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you ever live with her as your wife? [3281]

Mr. Donohue: Oh, I object, if Your Honor pleases. That certainly is misconduct on Mr. MacInnis' part to ask questions which he knows are improper.

The Court: Yes. The objection is sustained; the jury is admonished to disregard the matter.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Ross, you say your memory is definite upon the fact that you were separated from your wife, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you separate from her at the time you came to San Francisco? A. Just before.

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please. Are we going to try a domestic relations matter here?

The Court: I have no idea as to the trend of the cross-examination or the reasons presently underlying the question.

Mr. Donohue: Well, of course, from past experience, if Your Honor pleases, I can only say that Mr. MacInnis will say, as he just did, "I have a purpose." But that doesn't justify asking an improper question.

The Court: What was the last question?

(Record read.)

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: Now, what possible bearing can the question of whether this man was living with his wife or separated from her have, or whether it occurred before he came here? [3282]

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, may I proceed? I have a purpose in mind.

The Court: All right. I will overrule the objection at this time.

The Witness: The answer was "Before I came here."

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And how long did you remain separated from her?

A. Never went back to her.

Q. You never went back to your wife and the two small children, is that right?

A. We were divorced.

Q. When?

A. I believe the final decree was in nineteen hundred—either 39 or 40.

Q. Yes. That was long after you left San Francisco, wasn't it?

A. Approximately two and a half, possibly three years.

Q. While you were in San Francisco, as co-editor and later as editor of the Western Worker, were you supporting your wife and children?

Mr. Donohue: Oh, I object, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What was the circumstance of your transfer by the Communist Party in

1937 out of San Francisco to New York? [3283]

A. I think the underlying reason, Mr. MacInnis, was an inability on my part to get along with Mr. Schneidermann. There was constant friction between us.

Q. Your wife and your two children were then living in New York, weren't they?

A. I believe they were.

Q. Weren't you transferred to New York, Mr. Ross, not for the reason that you have given us here, but because your wife had applied for county aid for herself and the children in New York and you were charged with deserting them?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if Your Honor please, and I think it is about time, if Your Honor please, that Mr. MacInnis be asked by Your Honor to confine his questions to questions which are proper.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he has given us a reason for his transfer to New York. I think we certainly can inquire into the underlying reasons, if we have other facts; and I certainly believe that we have such facts.

Mr. Donohue: That is just the danger of this type of questioning, if Your Honor pleases, that Mr. MacInnis has indulged in since ~~this trial~~ began. When we have facts upon which he asks questions, he is not under oath, I haven't the opportunity to cross-examine him, and he never produces the facts. I object to the question, if Your Honor pleases.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I will go on to another subject, Your [3284] Honor.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Now, you were telling us, Mr. Ross, characterizing your own work here in San Francisco, that you both wrote articles and edited the Western Worker, is that true? A. I did.

Q. Were you paid a salary for that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A living wage?

A. I wouldn't call it that.

Q. Pardon me? A. I wouldn't call it that.

Q. I see. And you say that you affirmatively, both on your own and instructed by members of the Communist Party, developed a technique in distorting news?

A. In slanting news to the party line.

Q. Well, who were the ordinary readers of the Western Worker?

A. Members of the Communist Party and a great many people who were in what was known as mass organizations, which were controlled by the Communist Party.

Q. About what was the circulation of the paper?

A. I don't recall.

Q. And what was the purpose of slanting the news items that you wrote, so far as those readers were concerned?

A. The purpose was to win people who were not yet members of the Communist Party into the Communist Party. [3285]

Q. How about the ordinary so-called rank and file of the Communist Party? Were they to be influenced by these slanted articles that you wrote?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. They were to be kept in line, if there was any danger of straying out of line.

Q. In other words, your purpose was to deceive not only those people on the outer rim of organized labor who might see the paper, but also the rank and file members of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir, "deceive" is not the proper word. At that time I believed that what I was doing was telling the truth and writing articles that were to the best interest of the people who would read them.

Q. In other words, you never intended to deceive anybody? A. No, sir.

Q. And you never wrote anything that was not the truth?

A. "Truth" is an odd word, Mr. MacInnis; what is true for one man is not true for another, sometimes. So what was truth for the Communist was not truth for a lot of other people.

Q. Well, did you ever go so far as to tell any out-and-out lies in the articles that you wrote?

A. I wouldn't put it past the Lawrence Ross of that time. I might have done it.

Q. That man has the same flesh that the Lawrence Seton Ross of today possesses? [3286]

A. The same what?

Q. The same flesh. It is the same person, isn't it?

A. No, sir, not the same person. The same body, not the same spirit.

Q. What was the circulation of the Western

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Worker, approximately, during the periods of time when you were in charge?

A. I was in charge of the editorial department and not the circulation department. I never gave it much attention.

Q. Well, the people upon whom you wanted to exert some influence were not only members of the Communist Party whom you say you wanted to keep in line, but also persons who might be sympathizers to the Communist Party and thus drawn into the party by any literature that they might read?

A. That's right; as was other people who would not be a member of any organization possibly, but might chance upon a copy of the paper.

Q. Well, now, I suppose, Mr. Ross, that you subscribed as most of the so-called ex-Communists who have appeared here do, to the notion that the Communist Party actually wants to overthrow our government by force and violence?

A. The Communist Party seeks to overthrow this government by any possible means.

Q. Including force and violence?

A. If necessary.

Q. In other words, it would be an untruth if I said that the [3287] Communist Party did not seek to overthrow the government by force and violence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever write any articles upon that subject in the Western Worker?

A. Probably.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: If Your Honor will bear with me a moment? Well, while I am looking for that, Your Honor, I thought I had written down the dates for my own information, but apparently I didn't.

Q. Will you let me ask you this, Mr. Ross: While you were editor of the Western Worker, was the Communist Party engaged in any effort to form a united labor party in San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir, I believe it was.

Q. Was the purpose of that movement an attempt by the Communist Party to control the labor movement itself?

A. It was part of such an aim.

Q. Did you write any articles upon that subject?

A. I should think I would have, yes.

Q. And what would have been the approach, according to your best memory, of that particular article?

A. I have no particular article in mind, Mr. MacInnis, but I perhaps had summarized the stand of the Communist Party at that time. If you will give a moment to recollect?

Q. Well, I can probably refresh your memory from your articles. [3288]

A. That would be helpful.

Mr. MacInnis: I found the original article, Your Honor, to which I made reference.

Q. Now, I will ask you, please, if you will, to look at the Western Worker of Thursday, August 6th of 1936, and I will ask you to read an article entitled "Who Is For Force and Violence?", with a question mark by a man named Lawrence Ross. And I will ask you to read that and see if the article refreshes your memory.

Mr. MacInnis: I would rather carry it myself; Mr. Mitchell has been ill, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: All right.

(Document handed to witness.)

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, in the interest of one day bringing this trial to an ultimate end, I object to this witness being asked to refresh his recollection by reading anything, for two reasons: No. 1, the question that was asked by Mr. MacInnis was not in cross examination of any matter which was asked on direct examination. Mr. MacInnis' question having to do with the policy of the Communist Party, about which the witness was asked nothing on direct examination. I object on the further ground that the question asked by Mr. MacInnis, "Did you write certain articles," was answered—he said, "I probably did." Certainly, whether this witness did or did not write an article in the Western Worker is not a direct, [3289] pertinent issue in this case. It is a matter which is purely collateral and under all the rules of law as I ever learned them, if on cross examination a witness is asked a question on a purely collateral matter and he answers that question, the examiner is bound by the answer. I did not object to the question originally. I now object, however, to any attempt to examine the witness further with respect to a matter wholly collateral, when he has conceded that he probably wrote such articles. Otherwise we might go through every article this man has written for three articles, and we will be here on the Fourth of July.

The Court: Objection overruled.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Would you read that, sir?

The Witness: The entire article?

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well,——

A. I will just skim through it. (Examining document)

Q. At least enough to recognize whether or not it is an article that you wrote.

Pardon me; have you looked at that sufficiently to identify it as an article you wrote?

A. I have looked at it sufficiently to identify it as typical of articles I wrote at that time.

Q. It was an article you wrote?

A. It is typical of such articles.

Q. It is an article you wrote, is that not?

A. I don't know for a fact. I say, it is typical of articles [3290] such as I wrote at that time.

Q. Well, it bears your name?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you were the editor of the paper at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, I think that is sufficient, Your Honor, from the fact of his editorship of the paper and his name and an inference arises, of course.

The Court: He does not dispute that.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

The Court: Apparently?

The Witness: No, I don't dispute it. [3291]

Mr. MacInnis (reading): "Who is for Force, Violence? by Lawrence Ross."

Mr. Donohue: Is Mr. MacInnis going to be permitted to read something which is not in evidence?

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, it will be perceived that this is not a collateral matter as has been suggested by the prosecutor.

Mr. Donohue: This book isn't in evidence, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the things that a man utters and the things that he writes in former years are always relevant to show his real state of mind on a fact in doubt. And here we have something that this man said in print in 1936.

Mr. Donohue: Your Honor, if there is anything in this book that this man has ever written or has ever said in which he said Harry Bridges was not a member of the Communist Party or that he never attended the Communist Party meeting at which Harry Bridges and Henry Schmidt were present, or which says that Lawrence Ross was never a member of the Communist Party, or which says that Lawrence Ross didn't vote for Harry Bridges under the name of Rossi for the Central Committee of the Communist Party in June of 1936, I have no objection. But if we are going into every editorial that this man wrote as the editor of the Communist paper on a matter which may have something to do with the purposes of the Communist Party, I say we will [3292] never come to any end. The burden is upon him to prove to your Honor that it is not. He is bound by a collateral matter by the answer of the witness that he wrote it, and I most seriously object to Mr. MacInnis reading from a paper which is not in evidence. He hasn't offered it in evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: I can assure your Honor I don't propose to read every editorial that this man wrote. I have two or three that I would like to call to the attention of the Court and jury.

The Court: What is your purpose?

Mr. MacInnis: My purpose, your Honor—well, of course, I would have to state exactly the purport of these questions and answers.

Mr. Donohue: I ask him to do as I did in one case when I had even slight doubts that a matter was irrelevant: I asked your Honor to excuse the jury and made my offer of proof to your Honor in the absence of the jury. I think it is about time Mr. MacInnis followed the same rule.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, the witness said a moment ago that it would be an untruth if anyone said that the Communist Party did not stand for violence. He said that he slanted news for the Western Worker. He testified to his activities as editor and writer for the Western Worker on direct examination, not solely on cross examination. Now, I want to find out whether this was an absolute lie that he wrote in the paper. [3293] He says he never wrote any absolute lies; that all he did was to slant news. We have a right to see what this man's notion of truth may be. He said a moment ago, very tellingly, I thought, what may be the truth to one man is not the truth to another man. So that might be symbolic of his appearance here. But rather than take and argue that, we have the man's own writing.

Mr. McMillan: We ask that that statement be stricken out and the jury instructed to disregard it.

Mr. MacInnis: If the prosecution produced——

Mr. Donohue: He won't pay any attention——

Mr. McMillan: Just a moment. He will pay attention if your Honor asks him to pay attention.

The Court: I can't hear you.

Mr. McMillan: I ask that that statement be stricken.

Mr. MacInnis: He says that I wouldn't stop if your Honor asked me to.

The Court: I haven't had an opportunity to speak.

Mr. MacMillan: He said that his appearance on the stand is symbolical of this matter. I ask that that be stricken out.

Mr. MacInnis: I didn't say quite that. I said it in another way. Counsel apparently did not hear me. I said that in a different sense.

The Court: I can't see, Mr. MacInnis, from your brief statement of your proposed use of the article how it would tend [3294] to prove or dis-prove any issue in this case; it is purely collateral cross examination. I sustain the objection, and I instruct the jury to disregard the remark made by Mr. MacInnis with respect to any symbolical witness or the presence of this man on the stand with respect to any symbolism. That is all.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: I don't think that that was quite what I said.

The Court: I will get the text from the reporter with respect to the exact language if you desire it.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, let me ask you this. Mr. Ross: Forgetting this particular article to which reference has now been made, I will ask you this: Did you from time to time write, either under your name or upon the editorial masthead of the Western Worker, statements to be circulated among the rank and file of the Communist Party and its sympathizers to the effect that the charge that the Communist Party stood for force and violence was an invention of the industrialists; that it wasn't true; that it was a smoke screen to keep the honest labor party from taking its place upon the ballot? Did you make that statement from time to time?

A. That sounds quite likely, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. Was that a true statement or a false statement?

A. It was true for the time at which it was written. The Communist Party line, Mr. MacInnis, is very flexible, flexible to the point of fluidity. It changed with changing events. [3295]

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. When virtuous people like yourself were members of the Communist Party, it didn't stand for force and violence, but now that you can fix your eye on it from the outside, it stands for everything that is evil?

A. No, that is not so.

Q. Let me ask you this: Did you from time to time, while editor of the Western Worker in San Francisco, write articles urging and encouraging the cooperation of all working people in the forming, along with the Communist Party, of a united labor front? A. Quite likely.

Q. And that was not a secret, was it?

A. No, sir.

Q. In other words, you not only wrote articles to that effect, but you probably appeared or arranged for other persons to speak upon the subject of a united labor party?

A. That is quite likely.

Q. And the things that you wrote on those subjects were similarly intended by you to influence the rank and file of the Communist Party, to keep them in line, as you say, and to influence and encourage those persons who were sympathizers of the Communist Party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you write from time to time upon that subject that all working people ought to unite with the Communist Party in [3296] an attempt to establish a united labor front?

A. That sounds very probable.

Q. And did you assure the readers of your paper that the Communist Party had no intention of trying to dominate the labor movement or trying to capture it for its own purposes, but that the Communist Party merely wished to lend the services of its organization to labor?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That has a very familiar ring.

Q. You said all those things, did you?

A. Very probably.

Q. And when you said those things, Mr. Ross, were you telling an untruth?

A. I was concealing all the facts—at least, concealing part of the facts.

Q. Well, was that a practice that you followed during all of the time that you were editor of the Western Worker, that policy of concealing certain facts? A. When called for, yes.

Q. You were willing to do that?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And you weren't merely following the orders; you did many of these things upon your own initiative, did you not?

A. After having been thoroughly indoctrinated, I acted like a Communist automaton.

Q. In other words, having been trained to deceive and to [3297] practice duplicity, you often needed no specific instruction to tell you how to do it?

A. At certain times, no; at certain times, yes.

Q. In other words, there were some matters in which you required instruction; in ordinary matters you knew how to deceive the liberals of the Party without any special directions?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I knew how to slant articles so that the prestige of the Communist Party was always held high.

Q. Now, so that there will be no doubt about the matter of which we now speak as to my representation that you did write such an article——.

Mr. Donohue: He said he did, if your Honor please. It is a collateral matter as to whether he wrote such an article on the question of a united labor front. It has nothing to do with the alleged perjurious statement made by Mr. Bridges. Since it is a collateral matter and since the witness has said that he did write such an article, Mr. MacInnis is bound by his answer.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, that is perfectly true. Your Honor, it seems to me that it comes with ill effect from the prosecutor, who vouches for the credibility of every witness——

Mr. Donohue: And still do.

Mr. MacInnis: ——that he produces here, to object to us bringing before your Honor and the jury articles signed by this person who comes here and is sworn to tell the truth. I think [3298] that, your Honor, but of course I will be bound by any ruling you make.

Mr. Donohue: Just be bound by the legal proposition. I just objected to any article you may bring here written by this witness. I have objected and do object to your bringing articles which this gentleman said he wrote which can serve no purpose in this trial. If, as was suggested a minute ago, this man was editor of this paper for three years and if every article he wrote during those three years, which is wholly collateral in the matter before the jury, was read, then we will be here for three years reading them.

Mr. MacInnis: In some of these articles, your Honor—and whether they be collateral or not, of course, that is for your Honor's discretion in these matters—the truth may shine forth, because certainly we are willing to introduce here articles signed by a man who is now a prosecution witness. What more could we do? Certainly if there were anything in them that would be detrimental to the case we represent, we wouldn't dare to make such an offer.

It has been held, and I know your Honor would recognize it in a thousand cases, that the credibility of a witness is never a collateral matter. Now, in this case, I think unique in the history of any case that I ever heard of, possibly in any case which your Honor has tried either as a trial lawyer or as a jurist, all of the witnesses appearing on behalf of [3299] one side, the prosecution, seem to be willing to admit that for a certain period of time in their lives that they told lies; that they were guilty of deceit, and duplicity, and that they practiced studied conduct calculated to deceive members of the public. Now, if those are the witnesses upon whom the prosecution places reliance, their credibility is seriously in doubt at every stage of the case, and I would propose, your Honor, that you exercise, and we ask you to with every bit of sincerity that we can muster,—we ask you to exercise your discretion in these matters liberally so that the matter of the credibility of people who admit that they are liars—

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, without interrupting your observation, I have exercised, I think, extreme liberality.

Mr. MacInnis: I am making no complaint, your Honor.

The Court: In connection with the examination of witnesses in the past I exercised what I regarded as extreme liberality.

In your reading to the jury the speech of Mr. Bridges at the conference in Oakland, as part of my reasoning on the subject, I took the position, which I then thought was sound, that the whole of the article or speech became part and parcel of the offer upon the theory that the resolutions sponsored by Mr. Crouch became integrated therein. I think that was the logic of my thinking. [3300]

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

The Court: That was the logic of Mr. Hallinan in presenting the matter.

Now we have an entirely different situation here, Mr. MacInnis, wherein it appears that this man may have written thousands and thousands of articles. He admits on the stand that he did slant the tone of the articles. He admits some degree of, let us say, duplicity; he admits that he was under the tutelage and domination of the Communist Party, and that as such protege, if you please, he took orders. And I can't see that any of the articles which you seek to sponsor and read to the jury or the Court would aid or assist this Court in determination of the issue which is involved, or how it would affect the credibility of this witness. He has admitted distortion during these periods of time.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say just one more thing, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: The witness says, apparently in an effort to mitigate the effect of his admissions about duplicity in the past, that he never really told absolute lies in these articles; that he merely slanted the truth and sometimes concealed facts. Now, your Honor, it would appear to me that if the writings of this man showed facts entirely beyond that point, if they show absolute lies, that certainly would reflect upon his present credibility. On the other hand, if the utterances [3301] to which I have now made reference, and one or two more which I have in mind, are the truth, then the truth would reflect badly upon the testimony of other witnesses who have heretofore spoken for the prosecution.

The Court: Counsel, without reading or attempting to read that article, may I ask you to address yourself specifically to the particular portion you have in mind and address the question to the witness, if you have such question, stating anything that may be what you regard as an outright lie.

Mr. Donohue: Then, may I ask your Honor—the witness has now said he wrote certain articles; the witness has said the writing of the article as the editor of the Communist Party was slanted and distorted. Mr. MacInnis says he wants to read the article because—and I have never seen it—it is a deliberate lie. How is the jury going to decide whether the subject matter of that article is, as Mr. Ross says, a slanted, distorted, Communist-written article, or, as Mr. MacInnis would have the jury believe, a deliberate lie, unless we recess this trial and try the subject matter of that article?

The Court: I don't know precisely what he has in mind.

Mr. Donohue: I don't either.

The Court: Let me hear the question.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, I can answer this question put to you now by the prosecutor now I think readily, for these reasons: He says—— [3302]

The Court: Without arguing the matter now, let us have the precise question. Let me hear it and I will rule on it, when we hear the question. I can only anticipate what you have in mind——

Mr. MacInnis: Then with your Honor's permission I will refresh my memory from these articles.

The Court: Let us take it up at the recess period if you would rather, after you have had an opportunity to go over your notes.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, Mr. Ross, let me ask you this: In 1936, around the month of August, was there any attempt to your knowledge in California to bar the Communist Party from the ballot?

A. I believe so, Mr. MacInnis. I mean, I am rather vague about it.

Q. And did you, as part of your duties as editor of the Western Worker, write articles in an attempt to forestall that movement?

A. If the movement took place, I undoubtedly wrote articles against it.

Q. Well, is it true that the advocates of the move to take the Communist Party off the ballot in California were picturing the Communist Party, in your language, as an illegal band of terrorists bent upon stirring open, violent strife with no regard for the principles of Americanism and therefore not entitled to a place on the ballot, in apparently your language? Is that [3303] true?

Mr. Donohue: Now, I object. Now, the pattern is apparent. What possible theory on the issues before this Court and jury can the views of this witness in 1934, '5, '6 and '7 on the question of whether the Communist Party should or should not be on the ballot have? That is the question.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, I will be glad to point out the purpose, your Honor. If——

The Court: I will overrule the objection at this time.

The Witness: I believe I lost the trend of the question.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you please read the question.

(Question read.)

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That is quite possible.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Is it true that the persons interested in removing the Communist Party from the ballot were employers and reactionary groups, in your language?

A. Are you asking me for my opinion of then, or my present opinion?

Q. Well, what you said then. What did you say then?

A. Yes, I believe I would have labeled them as reactionary groups at that time.

Q. And did those groups interested in removing the Communist Party from the ballot in California claim that one of the bases for that removal was that the Communist Party advocated the overthrow of our Government by force and violence? [3304]

Mr. Donohue: Object, if your Honor please. What difference does it make whether they did or did not? What possible effect on this trial could the views of the employer groups with respect to the purposes of the Communist Party have either on the credibility of this witness or the truth of the facts we allege in the indictment?

The Court: Overruled. [3304-A]

The Court: Overruled.

A. I would like to have the question read, please, sir.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you please read the question?

(Record read.)

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I don't at this time recall the basis upon which they made the objection to the Communist Party being on the ballot, but that sounds reasonable.

Q. It sounds reasonable that that was the reason offered by those groups?

A. That probably was one of the reasons, I expect.

Q. And did you then from time to time reply in writing that that was a lie, that that was pure fakery, that the Communist Party did not stand for force and violence in any way?

A. At the time that the Communist Party advocated any United Front movement, politically or in the labor movement, it did not stand for force and violence openly.

Q. Did you tell the people that the Communist Party did not stand for force and violence in any way?

A. I believe the statement I would have made at that time was to deny the fact that the Communist Party advocated force and violence.

Q. You would have denied that and your purpose in printing that kind of denial was to influence the rank and file members of the Communist Party and the persons who might be Communist sympathizers, who would read your paper? [3305]

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question because it is not a question; he is telling the witness what his purpose was, when he only has a right to ask.

The Court: Overruled.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. The purpose, specifically, was to influence those persons who were in or might be drawn into the United Front movement, who were not Communists or even sympathetic to the Communist Party at that time.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Ross, if a so-called rank and file member of the Communist Party were in some doubt as to what the principles of the Communist Party were or what the party stood for, one of the sources that he would look to at that time would have been the Western Worker, is that true? A. I expect that is so.

Q. So that the ordinary rank and file member would look to the Western Worker, read the articles, and be influenced to the end that he would then believe that that was what the Communist Party stood for?

Mr. Donohue: I object to this question on the same basis, if Your Honor please; it is not a question, it is a statement of fact by Mr. MacInnis of what the purpose of the writer was.

The Court: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, Mr. Ross, when you wrote these things in the Western Worker, did you know any of the readers? Did you ever meet them personally? [3306] A. Oh, yes.

Q. You knew those people who were to read your material? A. That's correct.

Q. And yet you were willing, of course, to slant such information and to conceal such facts so that they would be led into beliefs of your choosing?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question as argumentative. He has already testified on a dozen occasions that he did so slant articles.

The Court: It is argumentative, yes; I will sustain the objection.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, was it true or false, Mr. Ross, referring to the fall of 1936 that the Communist Party did not stand for or represent force or violence in any way whatsoever?

A. The platform of the Communist Party with respect to the United Labor movement did not mention the question of force or violence, it stood for what it called "unity of the working class."

Q. Pardon me. Would you answer the question asked you, please?

A. I thought I did, sir.

Q. I asked you the question not in particular respect of the United Labor movement, but the Communist Party generally its aims, and that is the purpose of the article and the purport of the matters we are discussing. [3307]

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read him the question, please?

Mr. McMillan: It is not necessarily the purport of the articles, because the article he referred to mentioned the united workers and that is what the witness answered, in his response.

The Court: Well, he made answer——

Mr. MacInnis: Come over here, Mr. McMillan, and see if you can find that.

Mr. McMillan: No, I never like to look over your shoulder, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, in that event, I suggest that the prosecutor has at least unwittingly deceived the Court.

The Court: I was interrupted. I did not hear Mr. McMillan. I addressed myself to the witness and asked him if he understood the question.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, he told you, speaking to the Court, that there was something that wasn't even in here, and I asked him to come over here and look, and he said, "No, I won't."

Mr. Donohue: Of course, if Mr. MacInnis would follow the usual rules of courtesy in the trial of a case and had exhibited these articles to us to see, there wouldn't be any confusion about it.

The Court: Let us take the morning recess and he may exhibit it to you. [3308]

Mr. MacInnis: I am afraid we can pass that, Your Honor.

The Court: I will admonish you not to discuss the case nor to converse with any person on any subject of the trial and not to form or express an opinion thereon until it is finally submitted to you.

(Recess.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Ross, are you the man who was known as Seaton Ross in Memphis?

A. Lawrence Seaton Ross, that's correct.

Q. How does your name appear on the masthead of the Cotton Trade Journal?

A. Seaton Ross.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And you are known as Seaton Ross in Memphis, aren't you?

A. Known as Lawrence Seaton, but my middle name is used by my wife, and she just likes it better.

Q. And on the masthead of the Cotton Trade Journal your name appears as Seaton Ross?

A. That is correct.

Q. Doesn't say Lawrence Seaton Ross?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or anything like that?

A. No, sir. But my name is known as Lawrence Seaton Ross.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you now please read the last question and answer that preceded the recess?

The Reporter: I don't have that, counsel. [3309]

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, you don't have that, I see.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Ross, referring to the things you say you wrote and uttered concerning the Communist Party in August of 1936, the purpose of writing the matters that you have described generally was so that they would have their editorial influence upon the people who read the paper?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question if Your Honor pleases. He is telling the witness what his purpose was, and not asking.

The Court: Overruled.

A. That statement is correct, sir.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): So that an ordinary rank and file member of the Communist Party who might be having a conversation with some Communist sympathizer about the joining of the Communist Party would be able to point out with perfect sincerity to that other person that the Communist Party didn't stand for force and violence in any way? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And a member, an ordinary member, of the Communist Party who was looking to your paper for guidance in any discussion he might have with others would find in your paper nothing but discussions of the Communist Party standing for the Constitution of the United States and the ordinary democratic process?

A. At that time, yes, sir.

Q. Now, in your paper, the Western Worker, while [3310] you were editor, did you have a policy either instigated by yourself or directed to you by others, to extol various labor leaders?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you extol particularly the labor leaders who followed or had gone along with Communist policy? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or would you extol all labor leaders?

A. No, sir.

Q. You would extol only the labor leaders who went along with Communist policy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you will please look at your paper, the Western Worker, for August 31st of 1936, merely for the purpose of refreshing your memory.

(Document exhibited to the witness.)

Q. (Continuing) I will call attention to an article upon the left side of the open page before the witness, which I have outlined in red.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read, please, the last question and answer that preceded the showing of the book to the witness?

(Record read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Well, now, is your memory refreshed by seeing an article in the Western Worker carrying the byline of no less a person than John L. Lewis?

A. No, sir; it isn't. As to that particular [3311] article.

Q. Did you carry an article by John L. Lewis on that date?

A. I certainly can't remember that.

Q. You can't remember that?

A. Not my own memory that I see the article in the paper.

Q. Oh. John L. Lewis was not a Communist sympathizer, was he? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did you carry any articles at any time either written by you or carried under the banner of your editorship, extolling John Shelley of San Francisco?

A. That name sounds vaguely familiar, but I couldn't recall who he is or was or what connection he had with the labor movement.

Q. How about a man named George Kidwell?

A. Kidwell sounds familiar.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Did you write any articles extolling his work in the labor movement?

A. I don't recall any, no, sir.

Q. Did you write any articles or carry any articles under your editorship speaking well of Michael Casey?

A. As to Casey and Kidwell and the other man you mentioned, if they had made a statement with which the Communist Party agreed, that statement would have been praised in the Western Worker without praising anything else they did, particularly. In the article you showed me, by John L. Lewis, carrying that byline, he called for organizing the unorganized, and that call was one with which the Communist Party was fully in sympathy [3312] because that would give the party a more fertile ground in which to sow its seeds.

Q. Well, now, did you follow the same policy of slanting the news and concealing facts when you wrote articles about ship owners?

A. In that situation, Mr. MacInnis, I didn't have the facts firsthand. I got them elsewhere and wrote articles according to the alleged facts that I had obtained elsewhere, not of my own reporting of any situation on the spot.

Q. In other words, in any article that you wrote about ship owners you had gotten the facts that you purported to narrate from other persons?

A. That is correct. If any facts were involved.

Q. I see. But they were never facts that you would have known of your own personal knowledge?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. No, sir. I didn't cover the waterfront.

Q. And you wouldn't have pretended, of course, to narrate them from your own personal knowledge in the articles?

A. I didn't quite get that last one.

Q. And I say, you wouldn't have pretended in the article to narrate them from your personal knowledge? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, however, when you did write about the ship-owning interests in San Francisco, did you follow the same policy of concealing facts? [3313]

A. I took the facts or alleged facts as they were given me. In other words, I took the information given me and treated them as facts.

Q. And it was always information given you by others?

A. Yes, I didn't cover the waterfront at all.

Q. Well, when you wrote matters concerning the ship owners were those particular writings intended to have any influence upon the rank and file?

A. They were intended to reach the non-Communist members of waterfront unions particularly.

Q. I am going to show you another page of your paper, the first page, bearing the date of Thursday, September 3, 1936; and I have an article that I have outlined in red, and I will ask you if this refreshes your memory (Exhibiting to witness).

Were you given some information by other persons in the month of September of 1936 to the end that the ship owners were trying to do something to discredit you?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. To discredit the Communist Party.

Q. How about you?

A. Mr. MacInnis, I was the face of the Communist Party in San Francisco, I was an open and avowed Communist; discrediting me was unimportant—but through me the Communist Party.

Q. Now, let me ask you this: A moment ago you told the jury under oath that the only things you ever wrote about the ship owners were matters given you as information, things that you [3314] didn't investigate yourself?

A. That, I said, only applies to any facts I may have stated in those articles or alleged facts.

Q. Now, is your memory now refreshed about an article that you wrote yourself, speaking of personal knowledge?

A. Not as to the facts. As to the opinions, yes.

Q. Why, didn't you write on September 3rd of 1936 that the ship owners had you arrested——

Mr. Donohue: I object, Your Honor,——

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): (Continuing) — for having a part in the King, Ramsey and Conner murder——

A. No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: As is always to be expected, Mr. MacInnis will make his statement and then permit counsel to make an objection. If Your Honor please, we are going to be in a peculiar situation, if and when this case ever reaches an appellate court because Mr. MacInnis is repeatedly permitted to read from papers and publications which are neither marked for identification nor are they in evidence; and no appellate court will ever know to what we are making reference. Now, Mr. MacInnis ought to know——

The Court: Now, then, to that extent, I have been remiss, have I?

Mr. Donohue: No, I don't say so, if Your Honor pleases; that isn't the purpose of my objection. Mr. MacInnis, if Your Honor pleases, should know that if he is going to try to impeach a witness, he should lay the foundation for that impeachment, and Mr. MacInnis ought to know that in order to lay the foundation for that impeachment, the document which is sought for the purpose of impeachment must be identified so that it may be subsequently offered in evidence. And Mr. MacInnis also ought to know that you can not impeach a witness on a matter which is purely collateral.

Mr. MacInnis: In the first place, Your Honor, we object to the use of the words "if and when this case reaches an appellate court." We have no intention, Your Honor, of permitting this case to reach any appellate court, because we have every intention and every hope that the case will be won here. And I cite the prosecutor for misconduct and I ask that Your Honor cite him for misconduct for making that statement.

The Court: Counsel, there is no misconduct in that statement. Accordingly I will not admonish the jury in that respect.

Mr. MacInnis: On the matter of this statement, if I may be heard, Your Honor, this gentleman tells us under oath for some reason, when asked questions about the ship owners very carefully that he didn't write anything of his own knowledge.

The Court: What was the question, counsel? I did not hear it. (To the Reporter) Would you read the last question, please, Mr. Reporter? Then we can take it up.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. [3316]

(Record read.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, Mr. Ross, you were shown by me within the last few moments the front page of the Western Worker of Thursday, September 3rd, 1936, is that correct?

A. I assume it is correct. I didn't look at the date of the paper. I took it on your word.

Q. Do you want to look at it again to see if that is correct?

A. No, Mr. MacInnis, I trust you. I will assume it is correct.

Q. Well, I won't return the compliment, Mr. Ross. A. I am not surprised, sir.

Q. You shouldn't be. The material that you were shown consisted of a statement made by yourself and quoted as emanating from you?

A. So it appears.

Q. Did you make that statement?

A. It would appear I did from that front page. I don't dispute it, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. A few moments ago you told the jury under oath that any statement that you made while you were editor of the Western Worker concerning the shipowners was a statement that you took on information from other persons?

A. I said any statement I made relating to facts or events concerning the ship owners. I did make statements on my own concerning opinion or propaganda material.

Q. Didn't you say, didn't you utter on one occasion, and wasn't [3317] it your belief and your statement, that the ship owners of San Francisco——

Mr. Donohue: I object to him reading from this paper, if Your Honor pleases, until he introduces it in evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: I might say, Your Honor, in view of that comment, we will have photostatic copies made, as we did before.

The Court: All right. Proceed with the question.

Mr. Donohue: But, if Your Honor pleases, the question is based on words which he is reading from a document which are not submitted to this Court in evidence.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to supply a photostat——

Mr. Donohue: It won't make a bit of difference whether he supplies a photostat of the original document, if Your Honor pleases.

The Court: I do not know the question. How can I rule on it?

Mr. Donohue: Well, if Your Honor pleases, if we must stand by and permit Mr. MacInnis to ask questions which are phrased upon a substance in a newspaper which is not in evidence, then there is no effect to our opposing the question. If he wants to introduce this article in evidence for the purpose of impeaching this witness, let him seek to introduce it and let us be heard on our objection. He doesn't have to introduce it if he is going to be permitted to ask a question which incorporates [3318] the substance of what is in that newspaper.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, we would be, of course, more than glad to, at the conclusion of this line of questioning, offer for evidence any article which we use; and if it would be convenient to the Court, I will do what we did before in some of these documents. We will have copies made; in the instance of this newspaper, we will have a photostat made.

The Court: I am not particularly interested in this matter at this time, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: But I think the question has nothing to do with this objection, Your Honor.

The Court: Let me hear the question, please.

Mr. MacInnis: I was in the middle of a question.

The Court: All right.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Ross, I think we have established, at least without dispute from you, that you have been shown the page of the Western Worker of September 3rd, 1936, in which there appears in quotes a statement made by you, Lawrence Ross?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. What is the question? I don't get any question there.

Q. Now, has that been established?

A. I don't dispute that.

Q. You don't dispute that. Now, isn't that a fact, Mr. Ross, that you made statements both written in your paper and orally at that time, in the month of September 1936, to the effect that the ship owners of San Francisco were so desperate in their [3319] attempts to ruin the Communist Party that they had you arrested on a criminal complaint in connection with the King, Ramsey and Connor murder?

A. No, sir, I was never arrested on any criminal complaint in that connection or in any other connection. [3319-A]

Q. Did you state that there was a clumsy attempt of the Alameda County District Attorney to involve you in the Point Lobos death?

Mr. Donohue: There again, if your Honor please, shows the absurdity of this situation. He first asks the witness, "Didn't you say the shipowners caused you to be punished?"——

The Court: Counsel,——

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor please, I think I should be heard. Then he reads again from the newspaper about a clumsy attempt to take him before the District Attorney. Let us not murder the facts even if we do read from papers which are not in evidence.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: That isn't the kind of murder that is mentioned in this article.

Mr. Donohue: No; I know the kind of murder that is being menioned in the article. So do you.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, if I may, so that your Honor won't be in any doubt, I would like to pass this document to you, if I may, so that you may see the subject matter of it.

The Court: I will read it at the noon hour.

Mr. Donohue: We ask you to remember the subject matter of the question Mr. MacInnis asked of the witness.

The Court: I heard the question. I will read it at noon. [3320]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Ross, were you held by the District Attorney in Alameda County?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Donohue: Just a minute. May I move that that be stricken? I arise only for the purpose of saying this to your Honor: We have been around this robin before. I believe that Mr. MacInnis ought to have learned by now if he ever will learn that you may impeach the credibility of a witness only upon proof of a conviction of a felony. Now, he tried once before unsuccessfully, and I say, if your Honor please, intentionally, to attempt to impeach a witness by a telegram which tended to show a conviction of a misdemeanor, and it wasn't even the witness. So that Mr. MacInnis must know that the question that he just asked of this witness is a question he may not ask, and I say to your Honor it is improper conduct.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, if this gentleman is to be——

The Court: The objection is sustained, Mr. MacInnis.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, if I may be heard just briefly upon this point. We are now told as a positive statement of fact that the only method of impeaching a witness is by showing a conviction of a felony. Now, I have always heard, and I would think that your Honor would be of the same mind——

The Court: Counsel, counsel——

Mr. MacInnis: ——that contradictory statements——

The Court: Counsel, I am not familiar with the nature of [3321] the article. Apparently Mr. Donohue is.

Mr. MacInnis: A moment ago he said he hadn't seen it.

The Court: Out of regard for the Court, I would like to have the matter taken up at an appropriate time during the noon recess. I will hear the matter at that time and see where we might be heading.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad to do that, your Honor.

The Court: All right; we will take it up at quarter to two.

Mr. MacInnis: I would be glad to display the article to your Honor so you will see just what the material is.

The Court: I sustained the objection to the last question.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Ross, in the year 1936 here in San Francisco did you ever know a man named Raoul Cherbourg?

A. No, sir. Raoul who, did you say?

Q. Cherbourg, C-h-e-r-b-o-u-r-g.

A. No, sir.

Q. You never heard of that man?

A. I have heard of the port of Cherbourg in France; that is the closest——

Q. You never heard of the man Cherbourg?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Cherbourg was a man that——

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. I don't [3322] care who he was. The witness said he didn't know him.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, in response to this prompted objection at the mention of that name, I want to make this statement to this Court as seriously as counsel can: Within the past few days I placed a telephone call to a reputable attorney in the city of Oakland who knows nothing about this case and has nothing to do with it. A day later a man from the Immigration Department called on this attorney. It is absolute proof to my mind that my telephone wires have been tapped.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: I resent that statement.

Mr. MacInnis: There is no possible way that they could have known of it, no other way.

Mr. Donohue: I resent that statement.

Mr. MacInnis: I will tell you the man's name.

Mr. Donohue: It is not a fact. Mr. MacInnis ought not to make such a statement. He knows he is not telling the truth.

Mr. MacInnis: The name of the man——

Counsel started with the concept of Mr. Cherbourg, Raoul Cherbourg.

Mr. Donohue: He mentioned the name Cherbourg. I never heard the name in my life before or since, if the Court please He asks this witness if he knows him, and he says he does not. He has no right to attempt to identify him.

The Court: Counsel was not on his feet, Mr. MacInnis, [3323] until after the question was answered in the negative by the witness, and then you apparently started in a reminiscent mood to tell him about Mr. Cherbourg. Now, the inference cannot be drawn, as I take it, by counsel's immediately arising to interpose an objection, that there has been any tampering with your telephone or any other telephone. Accordingly, I instruct the jury to disregard the remarks of Mr. MacInnis at this stage with respect to any alleged tampering with his telephone.

Mr. MacInnis: I ask your Honor, in your discretion, to permit me to make a statement either in the presence or absence of the jury, concerning the facts of which I now speak. I will give your Honor the name of the immigration agent and the attorney in Oakland.

Mr. Donohue: I invite him to do it, if your Honor please, and to do it properly, in the absence of the jury, at any time you may wish to do so. Now is as good a time as any.

Mr. MacInnis: I will do it right now, if your Honor please.

The Court: We will take the matter up also at quarter to two after I have some luncheon.

Mr. MacInnis: If we can fit these matters in, I should be glad to.

The Court: I always feel more comfortable after luncheon.

I see no reason for these charges and countercharges made in this fashion. We will take it up in the absence of the jury.

We might recess now until 2:00 o'clock, ladies and [3324] gentlemen of the jury. And accordingly, I admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor to form or express an opinion until it is submitted to you.

(Thereupon a recess was taken until 1:45 p.m. this date, the jury being excused until 2:00 p.m.) [3324-A]

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Thursday, January 5, 1950, 1:45 P.M.

(Proceedings out of the presence of the jury:)

The Clerk: United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial.

Mr. MacInnis: Shall we proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes. May the record show the jury is absent from the courtroom.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

Your Honor, by way of an offer of proof and by way of explaining to your Honor the purport of the questions I put to the witness, including the statements I made to the Court, and as a basis for further questions which will probably follow along the same lines, I want to make a statement concerning the whole matter.

Mr. Donohue, in his role as prosecutor, arose shortly before we recessed and said to your Honor that I was telling an untruth concerning the matter of possible wire-tapping of myself; that he knew that to be so.

Now, Mr. Donohue, much like the witness on the stand, who says he was the face of the Communist Party at that time,—Mr. Donohue is the face of the prosecution. I don't think for a moment that Mr. Donohue has any personal knowledge of this matter. It is like one of those documents which Mr. Donohue, quite honestly I assume, denied that he possessed, but which [3325] upon a little inquiry turned up in the briefcase of one of the agents sitting in the front row.

Now, I certainly have not charged that the prosecutor had any complicity, or possibly any knowledge, of the events. However, so far as the propriety of the subject matter of these statements and questions may be concerned, I want to say this: And your Honor will perceive, I think, that these matters would come into the mind of the inquiring cross-examiner not only along the line of preparing this case generally, but in view of the objections which have transpired.

In relation to the man who gives his name as Lawrence Ross, I find upon ordinary research that upon the 12th day—pardon me, the 22nd day of December in the year 1937 there appeared in the police department of the city of Beverly Hills a man named Arthur Kent. That name has come into this trial on several occasions under the name Arthur Kent, Arthur Scott, and Arthur Margolis. He was a man who was at one time married to the woman who has been called Norma Perry in this testimony. He was also named in some questions. Now, whether the answers were given or whether objections were sustained, he was also named as a person who was placed in the city of Portland in the year 1937 in connection with a radio station by men who have been identified as Stanley M. Doyle, Harper Knowles and other men whom I suppose from common knowledge of events of past knowledge the Court will remember as persons who have given testimony and have been prominent in the so-called subversive activities inquiries of the American Legion and of other agencies. [3326]

In any event, this man, Arthur Kent, Arthur Scott or Arthur Margolis, was a man who had been three times convicted in the State of California of the crime of burglary and according to the statement made by him to the Beverly Hills police, he was placed in the Communist Party as a sort of employers' agent working along with Harper Knowles, Stanley M. Doyle and others, so that he would make reports to them. And he made a rather complete statement of his activities at that time. I believe that statement to be a semi-public statement; I think it has been reported in newspapers. It appears in various Dies Committee reports and it appears in full in various of the reports of our local, that is, our state Un-American Activities Commission, composed of various assemblymen of this State. In that statement I came across this line, this statement that the man called Arthur Kent made to the Beverly Hills police, that "when Cherbough's body was found in San Francisco Bay, there was general panic out at 121 Haight Street, the Communist Party offices, and that Arthur Kent went at once to arrange an alibi for Lawrence Ross."

Arthur Kent, Your Honor will recall, in addition to the characters which I have placed upon him, was the man whom the witness Ross says was one of the triumvirate who rules the Communist Party in the interim between the departure of the man called Sam Darcy and the advent of the man called William Schneidermann. The witness Ross testified that Arthur Kent, or [3327] Scott, himself, and the lady named Oleta O'Connor took over the duties of district organizer of the Communist Party.

Now, with that paragraph as a lead, from the statement on record, with the Beverly Hills police, the inquiring mind, of course, would be brought to the question, "Who is Cherbourgh?" "Who is that man?" "What has he to do with this case?" So we consulted the public records of this community, the files of the San Francisco Chronicle and the San Francisco Examiner. We find that the murder of a man named Raoul Louis Cherbourgh, R-a-o-u-l L-o-u-i-s C-h-e-r-b-o-u-r-g-h, is apparently one of the unsolved crimes of the past twenty years in the State of California. The papers state that upon the 12th day of August of 1936, the nude body of a middle aged man, looped in heavy anchor chains, with his veins drained of blood, was found in the Bay. The first report said that there was no identification of this man, and both of the newspapers reported that investigators were looking into the possibility that the victim had some connection with the waterfront disputes.

So we go on into the following day, into the investigation of this tragedy, and we find, by a coincidence that this man was a man with whom Your Honor had some slight contact during his career as a lawyer because the San Francisco Examiner of the 13th day of August of 1936 made mention of a certain lawsuit in which Your Honor appeared as counsel for one of the parties, and apparently Your Honor at one time obtained an affidavit [3328] from this person, the man Cherbourgh, as part of the lawsuit; because the article goes as follows:

> "The body was identified as that of Raoul Louis Cherbourgh, San Francisco seaman, active in the rank and file activity of the SUP,——" which I assume to be the Sailors Union of the Pacific. It says that:

> "He has a police record, and in recent times he signed an affiadvit in favor of Eugene Aureguy in a suit against the latter by Attorney George K. Ford for fees in the Gavin Flood case."

So I assume that, since Your Honor represented that defendant in that case, you may have had some slight recollection of the name, whether your memory was refreshed; when you read of his death, I wouldn't know.

The Court: No, it has not been.

Mr. MacInnis: It says that his last place of residence was the Bay Hotel, at No. 24 Sacramento. That, I take it, is a hotel off the Embarcadero, the first block on Sacramento Street. It says:

> "The police are seeking William P. Shea and Thomas Sullivan, maritime workers, who left the hotel about the same time. Attempts are > being made to trace repeated phone calls made by a woman at a union office. A doctor has expressed the belief that Cherbourgh died of slow [3329] strangulation following a beating."

Then in the same issue, or the same date, rather—I can't tell whether this is the Examiner or the Chronicle from the report—a man named Ole Olson, a dispatcher, said that he saw Cherbourgh on the morning of August 4th. He had spoken at a meeting of the SUP, the previous night. Raoul Cherbourgh was first arrested in 1932 in Los Angeles under the Criminal Syndicalism Law, documents found on him indicated his affiliation with the Communist Party. Olson said he was afraid somebody would get him. James Creeks says that Raoul Louis Cherbourgh was recently beaten in a fight at Aberdeen, Washington. The police of that town have no record of a fight or complaint. Among the effects of Cherbourgh was a "rank and file" letter with his signature, dealing with Ivan Hunter.

Then on 8/14/36:

> "William P. Shea surrenders voluntarily and was taken into custody. The testimony of a shipmate of Raoul L. Cherbourgh on his last trip says that he was afraid of a 'gang.' Peter Andersen, a friend of the dead man and a shipworker, says that Raoul Cherbourgh's name is Langley, that he received a good education and that he came from a well-to-do family in Kentucky."

Now, it will be noted that the witness Ross testified that he was born in the year 1903 in the State of Kentucky, and we have some superficial inquiries about the background of Mr. Ross, [3330] in Kentucky, that might become relevant.

8/16/31. Apparently the mystery remained an unsolved mystery, because the paper said that there were no further clues, but that there was an attempt to link the death of Raoul Cherbourgh with the murder of C. W. Alberts on Point Lobos, and that those attempts were being discounted by the police.

Now, Your Honor will remember, proceeding from that point, I think that there was a man named Alberts who was killed in a murder case which became rather notorious as the so-called "King, Ramsey, Conner" case. That was reported widely over a period of years in our press. And that case was somewhat historic not only in Alameda County, but possibly all over the State of California.

Now, following the last statement out of the press, the attempt to link these two killings, the killing of the man named C. W. Alberts and the entirely unexplained killing of the man named Cherbourgh, we turn to the Western Worker of September 3rd, of 1936, and we come to one of the matters touched upon this morning; although from a different perspective. Your Honor will recall that the witness Ross testified, I thought rather cautiously, but possibly that is an overzealous remark on my part; but in any event, he testified definitely that anything that was printed under his direct order, or under his editorship in this paper, about the ship owners, would be matters in which he was not expressing personal knowledge but which was merely a [3331] narrative of information given him by others. So I showed the witness, as part of a stream of materials to which objections were made this morning, an article in this paper, the Western Worker, on the date I have mentioned, as follows:

The headline, or rather, the sub-headline:

"Ross Exposes Clumsy Plot as Frameup."

And then "Lawrence Ross, editor of the Western Worker and Communist Congressional candidate in the 5th San Francisco district, issued the following statement regarding the attempts to involve him in the Point Lobos death."

Then a little subhead, "A flimsy frameup attempt."

Continuing, in quotes from Lawrence Ross,

> "The clumsy attempt of the Alameda County District Attorney's office to involve me, and through me the Communist Party, in the Point Lobos death, is a pure and unadulterated frame-up. This was done for two reasons: an attempt to discredit the Communist Party; Secondly, the desperate wish to weaken the struggle of the waterfront unions at a time they were negotiating for new agreements, by seeking to give the impression to the public that Communists inspired terror on the waterfront."

Then a little sub-headline, "Communist Party Does Not Believe in Terror."

Continuing the quotes from Lawrence Ross:

> "The Communist Party certainly does not believe in terror [3332] and violence. This is a weapon used by ship owners and other large-scale employers of labor, to smash trade union organizations and break the resistance of workers to attacks on their standard of living. The Communist Party believes in the right of organized labor, a right recognized by law, to fight for improved conditions. All people who have worked with Communists (with the exception of provocateurs and agents of the employers, such as Matthew Guidera, of the Marine Cooks & Stewards Union) are well aware of this. The frameup attempt is a stupid and obvious one, but the ship owners are so desperate in their attempt to discredit the maritime unions and the Communist Party, they will stop at nothing. If a criminal complaint is issued against me, the trial will reveal and expose to what unscrupulous measures the ship owners and the industrial association are prepared to resort to weaken the fight of the waterfront unions for better conditions."

Now, that is the quoted statement emanating from himself, his own declaration of the man who, this morning, swore to the jury that the only things he ever wrote about the ship owners of San Francisco were matters passed to him by other persons by way of information.

Now, the record apparently shows, from other articles in the same paper and from other information which is apparently [3333] semi-public, that Lawrence Ross was taken over to the office of the District Attorney in Alameda County either held for investigation or questioned, and then released. And he was never thereafter questioned, either in connection with the so-called Point Lobos death, the case which became the King, Ramsey, Conner case or ay other—although Lawrence Ross apparently was the person sought by the police long before any of the defendants in that case, the Messrs. King, Ramsey or Connor, became involved. Now, that is a secondary point in the route which we must traverse.

The Court: If I may interrupt you momentarily, counsel, King and Ramsey were latterly convicted of the crime and incarcerated.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, I understand that, I guess, from the same source as Your Honor. I recall that those men were convicted.

The Court: And then there was a long period of application for clemency to the Governor and so forth.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. I don't remember now whether they were released or not. That is only one point. [3334]

The Court: The statement of the conviction of King and Ramsey would seem to satisfy the alleged implication of Ross in any complicity in the murder of this unfortunate man in the hold of the vessel in the Port of Oakland.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: That is the Alberts case.

The Court: So by reason——

Mr. MacInnis: I have no information on that. That is only, as I say, a point in the narrative which I now offer the Court.

Now, prescinding for a moment from matters affecting Lawrence Ross and going for just a moment to the statement which I made to the Court this morning, advisedly and sincerely, I think, about certain methods amounting to wire-tapping, a matter which I think follows as night the day from cause to effect, I will say this:——

The Court: You made the statement in the presence of the jury expressly that you believed that your wires had been tapped.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: In your office?

Mr. MacInnis: No. I have not been in my office for more than 15 minutes at a time in the last three weeks, and in the last month I say——

Mr. Donohue: You said in the record, may it please the Court, that the tapping was on "my telephone."

Mr. MacInnis: You said in "my phone." [3335]

Mr. MacInnis: I do have a home, unlike Mr. Ross who can't remember where he lives.

So I will begin first with a recital of matters which I think to a reasonable mind, something that might recall itself to your Honor's mind as a practicing lawyer, and yet which would probably cause a lawyer to be cautious in his telephone conversation. About, I would say, three weeks before this trial started and about a week after Mr. Hallinan and myself had been engaged as counsel for the defense, there occurred an incident which was rather strange.

I was going down to my office one evening at about 10:30 to pick up some papers, and as I arrived at the office I saw lights lit upon the second floor of the building which we occupy near by in the Civic Center, and knowing that there would be no occasion for such a number of lights, I started to see what the matter was. And as I came around to enter the building, being maybe 20 or 30 yards away, two men rushed out of the building, around the corner, and up a little alley called Ivy Street. And in my zeal to look into this matter, I had obtained a gun, which I had in my hand, and I ran after these men, around the corner into Ivy Street. That matter is also of some public record as I will reveal in a moment, because when the men disappeared into the darkness into Ivy Street, I decided it was rather foolish to go into the darkness in that fashion. [3336]

I went back into the building, and then I went through the office room by room, still with this gun in my hand, to see what it was. So I found that apparently nothing had been taken but that there had been some hasty attempt to go through the files. And I then walked out of the front of the building, intending to go around to the back, still with the gun in my hand, and if the Court please, coincident a squad car of the local police was cruising by, and these gentlemen stopped me and questioned me as to why I had a gun in my hand, with the result that we went together to the police station. There was some account of that in the local newspapers. In any event, the police were very nice about it, and the charges which the officers had filed as a matter of course were dismissed the following day or so.

In any event, that incident—and of course I don't pretend now, although I have my own ideas—I don't pretend to say who the men were or what they were looking for. In any event——

The Court: What was the date of that incident, counsel?

Mr. MacInnis: I could determine that. It was in October, your Honor, but I do not have it in my mind. I don't think I would have any record of it except the newspaper accounts. I could easily determine that.

In any event, because of that and because of our growing realization that the case which we had accepted was one which [3337] would give rise to a great deal of surveillance, a great deal of matters which one might look upon as conspiratorial, from the outset we therefore became very cautious in telephone conversations.

In any event, I received a telephone call, and I can't give your Honor the precise date, but I would say that it was about two weeks ago. I think that it was in the recess period of this trial. I received that telephone call at my own home, and that call came from a very reputable attorney in the city of Oakland, a man whom I am sure that your Honor knows. His name is Leo Sullivan. This gentleman, so far as I know, is a lawyer of great ability, of some renown, and his reputation as a trial lawyer probably exceeds that of most of his contemporaries in the East Bay. So far as I know, he is not a lawyer who has any active representation of any labor union causes, but one sees his name in connection with a variety of trial court matters. I take it your Honor has probably some knowledge of Mr. Sullivan's career. I have had an acquaintanceship and friendly feeling toward this gentleman for some years, although we have not been associated together in any matter.

And he called me, and with great caution told me that he had a matter of information that he wanted to disclose to me as a favor and as a courtesy, and that it had something to do with my present lawsuit, meaning the prosecution in which we find ourselves engaged; and he asked if I would come over and [3338] visit him at his home. He explained a fact that I also knew from some reading of the papers, that he had suffered a heart attack within a few days before that time. And I found him indeed in bed at his home with an oxygen tank next to his bed. Mr. Sullivan, as the Court may know, has been subject to heart attacks over a considerable period of years.

In any event, Mr. Sullivan gave me some information, surprisingly enough about the man who is now known as Lawrence Ross; and he told me that a client of his had come to him with information gotten from another person, asking Mr. Sullivan if the information would be of any benefit to him or if he would choose to pass it on to any interested people. The information, which I do not have in full detail, but which I will have within a day, I am informed involved possible complicity of Mr. Lawrence Ross with the death of Raoul Cherbourg. So I had a brief converation with Mr. Sullivan at that time, and thanked him for his courtesy, and received his assurance that he would look into the matter and obtain some more specific information for me. He had asked if the matter would be of any service to us in the case as involving a possible witness for the prosecution.

So, after that time, within a period of about two days, I had occasion to telephone Mr. Sullivan. I believe that I made that call from my own home. I received another call from Mr. Sullivan at my home on another occasion. Within either a [3339] day or two days after the last telephone call that I had from Mr. Sullivan, an agent of the Department of Immigration called upon Mr. Sullivan and asked him if it was not true that he had been contacted by the defense in this case, and if so, what the contact had been and what it was about.

The name of the agent as he gave it to Mr. Sullivan with his card was E. D. McAlexander; I believe it to be M-c-A-l-e-x-a-n-d-e r; phone Yukon 6-3111, extension 624; nights, Yukon 6-3195. Superficial inquiry, I think, reveals that those are in fact the numbers of the Immigration Service here in San Francsico.

Now, as I say, Leo Sullivan had no possible connection with this case; he had no possible connection with my law firm; we had no exchange of cases; we had not appeared against each other or as co-counsel in any case. So if there were any surveillance by the Federal Government, that surveillance would of course attach only to myself, because I am an attorney of record in this case, and there would be no other means on the face of the earth in which an agent of the Immigration Service could thus make a call upon this Oakland attorney, Mr. Leo Sullivan, other than that information had been obtained in the manner that I have suggested.

Now, here are the bases, not only for the interposition of this matter into the case—and I may say that as soon as I am in possession of the information, I am going to turn it over to [3340] the authorities, probably to our local District Attorney's office here in San Francisco; I believe it probably not to be a matter within the Federal jurisdiction. That I will do regardless of what the information may be, and the authorities can determine whether it is a matter of conjecture only, whether it is nothing at all, or whether it is a matter possibly inculpating——

The Court: Counsel, if I may interrupt you momentarily, do you make this charge and assertion based upon the coincidence of an agent calling upon Mr. Sullivan coincident with Mr. Sullivan calling you? Is that your basis?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, your Honor. What further basis could there be?

Mr. Donohue: I would like a full opportunity to explain, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I would say this, your Honor. It may be that your Honor's question—I don't know—is based upon this fact. Your Honor may have in his mind this: Did this man who now speaks examine his telephone wires to see if there was any physical evidence of tampering? If your Honor had that thought in mind, I would make this answer:

The agencies—I say this with some sadness, I hope—the agencies who do engage in wire-tapping in these days no longer find it necessary to make any actual physical contact with the telephone wires in an individual home, because this [3341] is how the operation is carried out, as I am informed by reliable persons within the telephone company.

Every exchange has a certain master conduit. Will you permit me to finish this, counsel? If you have some mirth at it, you can do it silently. I can't control your emotions, but I don't think you should disturb me while I am speaking.

Mr. Donohue: I think he ought to stop eavesdropping, if your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: I think, your Honor, counsel is entitled to make a statement to the Court without constant audible murmuring from the table in back of him. I think that is kind of an ordinary right.

In any event, your Honor, I am informed that

wire-tapping, so called, in this era is accomplished by a connection with the master circuit of a particular exchange. For instance, my office has a Hemlock number. All of the Hemlock numbers, including unfortunately the offices of our city government in the City Hall, pass in a master conduit underneath the opera house in San Francisco, and any person either having the power, coupled with the desire to listen in on any line need go no further than the location of the master conduit. This phone involves my office telephone. And very likely my home telephone—my home telephone is on the Fillmore exchange. I do not know where that master conduit may pass. It is accidental that I know the location of the other one. [3342]

But in any event, the tapping of telephone wires by listening in upon telephone conversations doesn't require either the physical presence of any person in the building of the person under surveillance or any immediate contact with the telephone wire itself.

Now, here are the points, though, that bring these matters within the purview of the case: Not only the matter of the wire-tapping, which is a side issue from the questions put to the witness Ross, but first of all, this: Ross was picked up in 1936. He was the first person suspected of the Point Lobos murder before anybody else was named. Ross was a notorious Communist. He was out in the open; he was an agitator; he had been arrested ten or twelve or fourteen occasions for activities of that kind. He was well known to the authorities. He was disliked by the authorities, and his banishment from our community would have been welcomed by persons in those spheres. Ross, however, talked once to the authorities and was released. Many persons completely innocent of a charge of murder have been forced either to stand by in custody for some period of time or even to stand trial before they would be cleared. So the question arises, Was Ross in 1936 making some deal to be a secret agent either against persons in the labor union movement or against persons in the Communist Party?

Now, as regards myself and the assertion that I made, I think it perfectly proper that I be permitted to ask the witness [3343] Ross, is he a party, is he a conspirator in any attempt to gain information by the tapping of wires or by tapping any other sources of information in connection with lawyers who represent the defense of this case?

Graver still from a public point of view, of course, did Ross have anything to do with the murder of Raoul Cherbourg? Why would that be important? It may be said that that is an internalism, another case, a case within a case. That would be very properly said.

However, this question would arise: Is that the hold that the Government has over a man like Ross? Is that the hold by which they can bring a man here who can't remember where he lived, who can't remember even on what street he dwelt, who can't remember what anybody said at any of the meetings he attended, who says he was a paid functionary of the Communist Party but can't remember the people in the same room with himself, who says he ran for public office but can't remember the persons he opposed or who was elected? Is that the hold, the possibility of this unnamed, this foreboding prosecution, this Damoclean sword that may be held over his head? Is that the reason for the testimony of a man named Ross?

Now, in response to one suggestion of your Honor's, of course the conviction of Messrs. King, Ramsey and Connor would not of itself exculpate Mr. Ross. I don't know anything about the case or what his connection with it may have been. That [3344] would be a circumstance, of course. It would not bar any prosecution in this case; it would be a matter, although it would be a circumstance which might assist in clearing up the matter.

Those are the statements that I would make, and I certainly feel that anything I have said has not only been said with perfect propriety, but that I have a right, because of these situations, to ask the witness the indicated questions.

I thank your Honor for his patience in hearing me out.

Mr. Donohue: If your Honor pleases, I don't know whether Mr. MacInnis is plainly stupid or cunningly culpable.

The Court: Cunningly what?

Mr. Donohue: Culpable, because Mr. MacInnis, we presume, starts with the fundamental proposition that a witness who appears to testify before any court may be impeached upon proof of conviction of a felony.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

By an article in the Western Worker, by some telephone call he had with Mr. Sullivan concerning something that a former client of Mr. Sullivan may have said which he has not yet received the reply to, he feels justified in assassinating the character of this witness by first attempting to show that he was connected with a murder that has been solved and the defendants convicted for fifteen [3345] years.

He feels justified in assassinating the character of this witness by first attempting to show he was conencted with a murder that has been solved and the defendant convicted for 15 years. And secondly, to associate him with a murder which was never solved. And Mr. MacInnis, with his typical ability to misstate the facts, even the facts concerning his own personal arrest, says to Your Honor, "Ross was the first one picked up for the murder."

The truth of the matter, Your Honor, and Mr. MacInnis should know it because his associates should tell him, is that when the murder was committed and the allegation was made that it was a Communist Party murder, that there was an attempt made to procure alibis for certain well known Communists, whereupon Mr. Ross was not picked up for the murder, but Mr. Ross asked George Andersen to take him voluntarily to the District Attorney in Alameda County so that he could forever lay at rest any allegation that he had anything to do, not with the murder, but with the preparation of an alibi.

The Court: George Andersen?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. Donohue: George Andersen of the firm of Galdstein, Resner, Andersen & Sawyer, associated at night with these—with the attorneys for these defendants, took Mr. Ross there, and when Mr. Ross tried to tell the District Attorney what the facts were, as he knew them, Mr. Andersen advised him not to testify on the ground of self-incrimination. And he foolishly [3346] followed his advice.

The Court: Is it the same Mr. Andersen who called on Mr. Schomaker?

Mr. Donohue: He is the same Mr. Andersen who called on Mr. Schomaker, and I can well understand the skill with which Mr. MacInnis describes the method of wire-tapping, because the same Mr. Lipsit who was engaged by Mr. MacInnis and Mr. Hallinan as an investigator in this case and who called on Mr. Schomaker and, as Mr. Schomaker waved his tie, indicating that he knew that there was a concealed microphone—Mr. Lipsit is the wire expert who could very well brief Mr. MacInnis.

Now, I said to Your Honor on the day when we considered certain motions before this Court, and on one day when the question arose during this trial, that I pledged Your Honor on my personal integrity and on the responsibility I owed to the dignity of the United States, that not one scintilla of evidence would be introduced in this court which was obtained by wire-tapping; because I have made every possible and careful inquiry to make certain that no wire-tapping has been done in this case.

Now, let me come to the incident upon the basis of which Mr. MacInnis, who can't even tell us the complete facts about his own arrest, upon the basis of which he said—and any lawyer who would make that statement in the face of a jury and in the midst of a trial, is guilty of misconduct—"It is absolute [3347] proof to my mind that my telephone wires have been tapped." Here are the facts, if Your Honor pleases. Some time during the Christmas recess there was called to my personal attention by a confidential informant of the Immigration Service the fact that Mr. Leo Sullivan had obtained certain information the possession of which caused Mr. Hallinan to be highly elated. I say to Your Honor that I know the source of that information, that that information came out of the Immigration Service, that it came from a person who did and could not have obtained it by wire-tapping.

Pursuant thereto, on Monday of this week, Mr. Mack Alexander, whose name has been identified and who identified himself by name and by card, went personally and called on Mr. Sullivan and said, "Mr. Sullivan, I am Mr. Mack Alexander, here is may card. I am from the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization. We have information from a confidential source that you have some information about Mr. Bridges being a member of the Communist Party," or "You have information in addition which would be of assistance to the United States in the prosecution of Mr. Bridges." Whereupon Mr. Sullivan replied that he had no information at the moment, but that if he obtained any information, he would be glad to make it available. Monday at one o'clock, that was. On Wednesday morning at 10:00 o'clock, Mr. Mack Alexander called again on the phone, this time, Mr. Sullivan—because in the interim we had more certain information from a [3348] confidential informant, and as to the nature of the information which Mr. Sullivan had. Mr. Sullivan was not in. And at 1:00 p.m. on Wednesday, yesterday, Mr. Sullivan called Mr. Mack Alexander and said, "I have some information I think you ought to have." Whereupon Mr. Mack Alexander called him back at 5:00 o'clock and asked him a specific question about a name which we got from a confidential informant, and Mr. Sullivan brushed him off, calling him back later to say there were persons in the office at the time, and "I couldn't answer your question." And then he made arrangements to talk to Mr. Mack Alexander later, today. That is the source of the information, if Your Honor pleases. That is the truth of the matter. And if there is any doubt about it, Mr. Mack Alexander will be glad to go under oath and testify before Your Honor.

Now, I renew the statement I made to Your Honor, on two occasions. There has not been, nor will there be in this case, one scintilla of evidence that was obtained directly or indirectly by the use of any wire-tapping device—at least as far as the government of the United States is concerned; I can't speak for the defense.

Now, having in mind—and even under the laws of the State of California, which Mr. MacInnis must know, though it is apparent he knows little or nothing about the procedure in a federal court, he must know something about the procedure in his own state courts. And even under the rules of procedure in his [3349] own state courts, and certainly as Your Honor and I know, under the rules of procedure in a federal court, a witness is entitled not to be destroyed by innuendo and by suggestion. And the fantastic tale that this man tells about some possible information he may get through any one that would seek to connect this man, this witness, with an unsolved murder fifteen years ago, would make you seriously ask the question of him that his associate asked of Mr. Crouch, "Are you crazy to make a statement of that kind?" I most respectfully say to Your Honor, and it was just as apparent to me, because I can read his actions like a book—he has gone through them so often. When he started to cross-examine Mr. Ross about certain immaterial matters in the Western Worker, it was apparent to me exactly what he was coming to. He knows that the conviction of King and Ramsey solved forever the Alberts murder. He has no information about the second murder, the Cherbourgh murder that he is talking about; but he feels since he can't impeach the credibility of this witness on that ground, Your Honor will permit him, under the guise of showing that Mr. Ross wrote things then that he wouldn't admit today that he wrote, trying by that method to read into the record a statement which would persuade the jury, perhaps, to believe this man had something to do with the murder.

I say that is dastardly conduct on the part of a lawyer, and I most respectfully submit to Your Honor——

The Court: Well, Mr. Donohue, what were the facts concerning [3350] the incident of Mr. MacInnis alluding to the intruders in his office?

Mr. Donohue: I only know what I read in the newspapers, if Your Honor please.

Mr. MacInnis: That is what I thought you probably had some personal knowledge of.

Mr. Donohue: And I am only happy to say, if Your Honor pleases, that I didn't get in to San Francisco until the 3rd day of November. I am awfully glad it happened in October. And I began to wonder, when he suggested that Your Honor prepared an affidavit for someone, whether he was going to charge Your Honor with the murder.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, may I say something, Your Honor?

The Court: Mr. MacInnis, in connection with the office matter, your office matter: in point of time, in relationship to this case, is it not a fact that that incident occurred long prior to the events, and your employment in this litigation?

Mr. MacInnis: It occurred either about the same date or within one or two days of it.

The Court: Because I recall the incident. I may be incorrect on the date, but I recall Mr. Hallinan's first appearance in this case, formally, was in relation to a motion for a continuance. I recall the press account of your incident as long antedating the formal or informal appearance of either you or

Mr. Hallinan in the case. I recall from the newspapers that, [3351] according to the press reports, you drove to your office, that you saw the lights on, and that you then undertook to determine whether anyone was in your office and drew a revolver. Shortly thereafter the police called, took you into custody, and you were brought to the Hall of Justice. Also, that there was no mention by you in connection with a police report or in connection with news accounts of any intruders or robbers or assailants.

Mr. MacInnis: Well, Your Honor——

The Court: Am I correct ~~in~~ that, sir?

Mr. MacInnis: No, if Your Honor pleases; if Your Honor would seek out the account, you would find such a mention. May I refresh Your Honor's memory? I now recall distinctly, to the end that I would stake my word upon it, that at least one of the papers (and at least so far as Your Honor's memory on the point of time may be concerned) referred to the incident naming me as one of the counsel for Harry Bridges.

The Court: I am merely trying to coordinate——

Mr. MacInnis: That is the fact. It didn't antedate it.

The Court: ——the fact, because it seems to me, Mr. MacInnis, that you are attempting to pyramid inference upon inference, and inference upon inference, without any particular, immediate evidentiary basis.

Mr. MacInnis: May I say something more?

The Court: Yes. [3352]

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: I now recall vividly that at least one or more of the newspapers, so far as their records are concerned, mentioned in connection with the affair that I was an attorney for Harry Bridges, and hence I know that this took place after Mr. Hallinan and I had been engaged in the Bridges case. And it is not so that it antedated the event, and I will be glad to supplement that statement.

The Court: I will accept your statement.

Mr. MacInnis: I am positive that is true.

Now, I listened, Your Honor, with some interest to the reply made now by a prosecutor, a man who was charged with the duty to be fair to the defense as well as to the interests of the Government. Now, I will not reply to the charge that I am crazy, because of course if I am, I can not help it. I wouldn't reply to that. And I think I wouldn't make any countercharge as to the mentality of the man who made the remark. If I am stupid, the other inference that he offers Your Honor, I will have to struggle along with my own stupidity. If I am of so shallow a character that he can readily read my every movement, as he suggests to Your Honor, that again is some inherent defect which I can not control.

But the prosecutor, who, I suppose, should be charged with some knowledge of the law, stood before Your Honor seriously and said that he knew and that I should know that the only method of impeaching a witness is by a shorting of conviction of [3353] a felony. Well, why, the veriest tyro at the bar, the beginning law student, knows that contradictory statements by a witness are the most ordinary means which can be used to impeach that witness. If your Honor has any different notion, or if your Honor thinks the prosecutor is right on the point, I will be very interested to hear any statement on a similar position. I am sure there can be no such statement.

Now, the prosecutor now betrays certainly a corroborating knowledge of the events which give me the moral support and certainty to make the statement which I did. He tells you, again telling you what he has been informed by people who work either with him or under him in this case, that a certain agent of the Immigration Department from a confidential source which he doesn't choose to reveal to your Honor, learned that Leo Sullivan of Oakland had knowledge, or had a communication or had information, which he had imparted to Hallinan, which had caused Hallinan to be very much elated. Well, now, I know it to be true—I am pretty sure I do—that Mr. Hallinan has never spoken to Leo Sullivan in this case. He has had no contact with him. I am the only person Mr. Sullivan has called; I am the only person who has called him. Whether some agent said that to the prosecutor I can not dispute it. I assume he is telling your Honor what he heard. In other words, he justs says, "We have got some knowledge from a confidential source which we don't choose to tell you, and our man went over as a routine matter." [3354]

Now, here is another interesting thing, your Honor. He says in effect that I have brought these charges out of the clear sky, that there is no basis for them, that they are fantastic, that they are fabulous. Well, now, listen to this. Who knew, who betrayed his knowledge, your Honor, within the past five minutes of the relationship of Ross to the murder of Cherbourgh? Why, the worthy prosecutor stood before you and said he knew that after the killing of Cherbourgh, that top members of the Communist Party arranged alibis. Well, why would he have looked into that matter if that were not something that at least crossed his mind in connection with this case? What would be the source of his inquiry if he didn't in the background of this case know something about it? He says that I am associated at night with Messrs. Gladstein, Andersen, et cetera. There is not a single night in which I have been associated in this case that I have met any of those gentlemen, and if the Government wishes to put on the stand agents who may have followed me, I would be very interested to hear of their accounts of those times in which I am supposed to have met with these men, because I haven't done so. I haven't met with them at night and I haven't met with them by day. I have met,—I met Mr. Andersen on the street, I believe, once since this case began.

Now, that is the charge that this prosecutor again, sworn under our laws to be fair to both sides in the case, makes [3355] against a lawyer for the other side. Now, I think that without my dwelling upon it, one may easily speculate upon the motives which harbor thoughts of that kind, or the motions which foster them.

Now, he speaks of an investigator named Lipsit, an investigator who was mentioned by the witness Schomaker as shaking his necktie. Mr. Donohue didn't tell your Honor that in the past month he approached Mr. Lipsit and asked him to give a job to a friend of his in the investigating business whom he recommended to Mr. Lipsit. Now, I will ask Mr. Donohue if wants to deny that statement.

Mr. Donohue: I do deny it.

Mr. MacInnis: In this very building you met Mr. Lipsit with a friend of yours from the East who wished to start in the investigating business in San Francisco.

Mr. Donohue: I think I should be permitted to answer that, if your Honor pleases. During the course of this trial some several weeks ago I went upstairs and met a man whom I have known for many, many years, a retired detective sergeant from the Washington, D. C., police department, who had been employed as an investigator by the United States Attorney's office in Washington under three succeeding United States Attorneys; a man of great skill and a man of the highest integrity. He introduced me—or he didn't at the moment introduce me, he had some man standing with him, some person whom I doubt if I would know [3356] again if I saw him. And he said, "Well, I came up here, Mr. Donohue, because I am thinking of temporarily working for this man who is here with me, and wanted you to tell him what you knew about me."

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

And I told him exactly as I have told your Honor, that my friend enjoyed the highest kind of reputation. The following—the same afternoon, or perhaps the following afternoon, the same person came back to me again and said, "Did you know who that person was whom I was with yesterday?" I said, "No." He said, "He is Lipsit." "Well," I said, "What are you doing bringing Lipsit up here in the United States Attorney's office? Don't you know who he is?" He said, "Well, I didn't know his connection with this case until I saw something in the paper either today or yesterday, and I wanted you to know that I wouldn't work for him for any amount of money he would pay."

That is my connection with Mr. Lipsit.

Mr. MacInnis: Your Honor, after those encomiums, I think we ought to give him a job, at least.

The Court: Well, I think I have heard enough. The incidents as narrated might very well be dealt with in a pulp magazine, but hardly in a court of law. Accordingly, I will sustain the objection interposed and I will admonish the jury that thus far there has been no evidence presented to this court that would justify the assertion that anybody's wire has been tapped including counsel for the defense. [[3357]

Mr. MacInnis: May I make an inquiry of your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. MacInnis: Now, is it the intendment of your Honor's ruling that all questions along the same line would, if met by objection,——

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: No, I am ruling on that particular matter.

Mr. MacInnis: Oh, I see. May we have about a five minute recess?

The Court: Yes. We will take a five minute recess.

(Recess.) [3358]

The Clerk: The witness on the stand is Lawrence Ross.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, before we take up the additional examination or cross-examination of this witness, I desire to instruct you and admonish you to disregard any reference made to alleged wire-tapping or any interference with the telephonic communication of Mr. MacInnis. The assertion was made by Mr. MacInnis that his wires were tapped, and under the circumstances, in the light of matters disclosed in your absence, I admonish you to ignore the same to the end that no prejudice attach by reason of the assertion thereof. Thank you.

Mr. MacInnis: I would like, respectfully, to ask your Honor to add to that instruction the statement, if you think it proper, that I am not to be criticized for making that statement.

The Court: No. I might add, ladies and gentlemen, that I am not criticizing Mr. MacInnis at this juncture, nor do I consider that he has done anything that I would consider a judicial reprimand, if you please, called for. He has made the assertion, and after a full disclosure to the Court, I believe that the assertion was not merited and that there was no foundation in fact for it, and I accordingly instruct you to disregard the same.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

Q. Now, Mr. Ross, when was it that you say that you heard the [3359] man named Schneidermann give a report upon his visit to the—was it the Seventh International Congress of the Communist Party? A. In the fall of 1935.

Q. In the fall of 1935. Could you fix the month with any particularity?

A. I could only hazard a guess, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. Well, tell me if I am incorrect in this summary of your testimony: that when you came to San Francisco the district organizer for the Communist Party was a man named Sam Darcy?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that he thereafter he left?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that there was some interim of several months in which there was no man appointed to that job here? A. That is correct.

Q. And that was the interim in which you, Oleta O'Connor and Arthur Kent or Scott had the post jointly?

A. Yes, sir, with myself as district organizer.

Q. And then it was after that that the man called Schneidermann came here? A. That is right.

Q. Can you tell us when, according to your best memory, Sam Darcy left San Francisco or when he was last engaged as district organizer here? [3360]

A. I am afraid I can't give you the month. I would say it was late spring or early summer, possibly.

Q. Of what year? A. Of 1935.

Q. Late spring or early summer?

A. That is my best recollection.

Q. Now, would there have been some account of his departure in the Western Worker or not?

A. I assume there would have been. I recall none.

Q. And I suppose that if the Western Worker stated in a story on a particular date something about the presence of Darcy as the district organizer there, that ultimate fact would have been a true one?

A. I don't know until I see the nature of the story.

Q. Then I will ask you if you will refresh your memory by looking at a particular article. Your best memory was that it was late spring or early summer of '35? A. That is my guess, yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to look at the Western Worker bearing date August 8 of 1935. I will ask you to look at an article which I have marked in red and see if it refreshes your memory. In the meantime, were you the editor of the Wetsern Worker on that date?

A. Either editor or co-editor; I can't recall—as of August, I think so, yes. [3361]

(A newspaper file was handed to the witness.)

Q. Is your memory now refreshed as to whether Sam Darcy was the district organizer of the Communist Party in the month of August of 1935?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. No, sir, it is not. That article you had reference to does not say whether or not Mr. Darcy was in San Francisco at the time.

Q. Doesn't the article refer to him as district organizer?

A. Yes, but whether he was in San Francisco at the time, I don't know.

Q. In other words, he still had the title of district organizer?

A. Yes, he had the title, as far as I know.

Q. By the way, around August 8 of 1935 was Sam Darcy in some difficulty?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. Are we going to try another case against Sam Darcy?

Mr. MacInnis: It is preliminary to something else, your Honor.

Mr. Donohue: Unless this man had something to do with his difficulty.

The Court: I will allow it. Go ahead.

A. According to that article you showed me, sir, he seemed to have been.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): What was that difficulty? [3362]

A. I don't know unless I refer to the Western Worker again.

The Court: What is the date again?

Mr. MacInnis: August 8, 1935.

(A newspaper file was handed to the witness.)

A. According to that article he seems to have been under danger of an indictment.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You were the editor of the Western Worker at that time?

A. Yes, I believe I was in August.

Q. And did you accuse the shipowners of San Francisco of having Sam Darcy indicted?

A. I don't acknowledge authorship of that particular article.

Q. You don't recall it at all?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. It did take place when you were the editor of the paper, did it not?

A. Yes, but very often the editor was handed a statement, typewritten statement, by the district organizer or bureau to put into the paper as a statement of policy.

Q. Did you know Sam Darcy well?

A. Yes, I knew him well until he left San Francisco.

Q. Were you friendly with him?

A. Was I? Yes, I was on friendly terms with him.

Q. Were you friendly to the extent that you knew the general events of his life and he [3363] yours?

A. No, sir, not to that extent; it was an official relationship rather than an intimately friendly one.

Q. It was following the month of August, 1935, that Sam Darcy was indicted and convicted of perjury in San Francisco, wasn't it?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

On what basis can we be responsible for Sam Darcy?

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. MacInnis: May it please the Court, I am not attempting to try any matter involving a man called Darcy, because I know nothing about him; I am trying to find out the date of this meeting that the witness testified to as involving Schneidermann making a speech when Harry Bridges was said to be present, and I am trying to trace the approximate date.

The Court: That was the meeting at the Sokol Hall?

Mr. MacInnis: That is what this man says, your Honor.

The Court: You want to trace the date in relation to an indictment, is that correct?

Mr. MacInnis: Yes. Pardon me; not in relation to the indictment; I am merely using that as a possible means of refreshing the recollection of this witness, who says he was on friendly terms with Darcy.

The Court: Well, does that refresh your recollection, Mr. Witness?

The Witness: I have already placed the meeting as sometime [3364] in the fall of 1935, which obviously was later than that August date.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): You say the meeting with Schneidermann was sometime in the fall of 1935? A. That is my best recollection.

Q. By the way, does the article which I showed you a moment ago refresh your memory at all as to whether Darcy left his job in San Francisco in the early spring of '35 or summer, as you just stated?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. It doesn't refresh my memory, no, sir.

Q. And you can't tell us in more particulars the months in which you and the two other persons were the guiding persons in the Communist Party?

A. It would have to be a guess, Mr. MacInnis. I would say perhaps three months, perhaps two months. I really don't recollect. It was a period of months.

Q. Well, tell me this: Do you remember if after a man named Schneidermann came to San Francisco there were various banquets or honorary meetings had so that the members of the Communist Party and other people could meet him and know the man?

A. I don't recall such an occasion, but it would be in keeping with usual Party custom.

Q. Did you ever attend any such banquet or meeting that might have been given for Schneidermann?

A. If one had been given for him, I would have been there. [3365]

Q. Well, would you have been there in a minor capacity or would you have been one of the principal persons welcoming the new person?

A. I would say one of the principal persons in attendance.

Q. Would you have been there in a situation in which you might have made a speech of welcome or something of that sort?

A. That is quite possible, I may have done it.

Q. On the matter of date, I am going to show you page 3 of the same paper, the Western Worker, of Monday, October 21, 1935, and ask you if this refreshes your memory as to the date upon which Schneidermann came to San Francisco (handing newspaper file to witness). Is your memory refreshed by that item?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Not specifically. I would say from that item he came here sometime prior to the 27th of October, which is the date of the banquet, according to that account.

Q. And the banquet was said to be held at Communist Party headquarters at 121 Haight Street?

A. That is what it says, yes, sir.

Q. In other words, that wasn't a secret banquet but one that was openly advertised?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that banquet?

A. I must have been there. I don't recall attending it.

Q. You have no memory at all that you can give us now about the meeting of yourself, a paid Communist Party functionary, [3366] with the man who was to be the district organizer for this whole district?

A. Mr. MacInnis, I attended probably a hundred or two hundred banquets, made probably several hundred propaganda speeches, went to hundreds and hundreds of meetings, and they all merge into one vast nightmare.

Q. So that you have no memory at all of these events?

Q. Then if I showed you another article re-

A. Not of that specific banquet, no, sir.

ferring to the same banquet, again within a day or so of its actual occurrence, that wouldn't refresh your memory further? A. I'm afraid not.

Q. You wouldn't dispute that date, would you?

A. I will take that date as being a date after Mr. Schneidermann arrived; sometime after.

Q. Tell me this: You say that you have no real recollection that the hall in which Schneidermann gave this speech was on Haight, but that you do have some vague memory concerning the word "Sokol Hall"?

A. Yes, I remember the meeting at Sokol Hall.

Q. Do you remember that name?

A. I remember the name Sokol Hall. I remember it was the place at which Mr. Bridges was present, because it rather surprised me to see him at an open hall of that type.

Q. You are positive that that was the [3367] place?

A. Yes, I am quite positive of that.

Q. Although you don't know where it was?

A. No, I'm afraid not; I can't locate it for you physically.

Q. Tell me this: Wasn't the meeting at which Schneidermann made his open speech at that time a public meeting held at the Scottish Rite Auditorium and advertised to members of the public?

A. Do you mind repeating that question? I didn't get the first part of it.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the question, please?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

(Question read.)

A. There may have been such a meeting held at which he made an open speech. I don't recall it.

Q. Well, the fact that he may have gone to this Seventh International Congress would not have been a secret thing, would it?

A. No, I don't think it was.

Q. Would any matter affecting the relationship, if any, between the Communist Party and the Soviet Government have been a secret thing at that time?

A. Yes, I should think so.

Q. Well, let me show you another issue of the same paper and see if this refreshes your memory as to whether those things were secret. I will ask you to look at the issue of October 31, 1935, the front page, and ask, if you will, look at the item I have marked in red (handing newspaper file to witness). [3368] Now, there was a banquet—not a banquet, but a meeting, at the Scottish Rite Auditorium held on the 7th day of November of 1935, was there not?

A. According to that article, yes, sir.

Q. Was that a meeting at which Bill Schneidermann, district organizer of District 13, was the main speaker?

A. According to that article, yes, sir, was to have been the main speaker.

Q. Was that date, November 7, the anniversary of the Russian Revolution?

A. I assume so from that article.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. I thought you were a paid functionary of the Communist Party and that all Communists were tied up with the Russian Revolution. You mean that date doesn't ring any bells?

A. Ringing bells is not the phrase. Let me explain something. Every year on or about November 7 the Communist Party held celebration meetings or propaganda meetings to observe the anniversary of the Russian Revolution. Those were held annually. Each one made no distinct impression upon me.

Q. Those were open meetings, weren't they?

A. They were open propaganda meetings to which the public was invited.

Q. And the meeting of November 7 at which Schneidermann was to speak was openly to celebrate the 18th anniversary of the Socialist construction in the Soviet Union? [3369]

A. Such is the phrase, but that wasn't the meeting at which he made a report on the Seventh World Congress.

Q. You don't remember whether or not you attended a banquet for Schneidermann?

A. No, I don't recall the occasion.

Q. If there was such a banquet when he came to San Francisco, about how many people would have been in attendance, according to your knowledge of the general trend of those events?

A. My best guess would be several hundred.

Q. Would there have been about 400 present at the banquet?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Possibly. That sounds a little large, but that is possible.

Q. I will ask you to look at the paper of which you were editor, under date of October 31, 1935, page 2, and look at the article I have marked (handing newspaper file to witness).

A. I read enough to see what the purpose of the question is.

Q. Well, tell me, is it consistent with your memory that 400 persons would have been present for the banquet for Schneidermann?

A. I would say, Mr. MacInnis, that any number of people reported to be present at a Communist meeting in a Communist newspaper would be at least slightly exaggerated.

Q. Oh, that was one of the matters of distortion of fact in which you engaged as the editor of this paper?

A. That is one of the usual traits of newspapermen in reporting any campaign in which the newspaper is interested. I think [3370] most newspapermen slant the news in a campaign in which the newspaper is vitally interested.

Q. You do? A. Oh, yes.

Q. This was your newspaper?

A. No, sir, the Communist Party newspaper.

Q. You were the editor of this paper, weren't you? A. I was.

Q. And if there was any distortion, it was a distortion had either under your instructions or with your consent?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I would say there was an exaggeration of numbers.

Q. Well, was it a distortion to say that you were among the two principal speakers at the banquet?

A. If that is what that report says, I do not dispute the fact.

Q. That isn't a distortion?

A. No, sir, I don't think so. The distortion merely lies in the number reported present in order to gain more prestige.

Q. Why do you draw the line, if you have absolutely no memory at all as to these events, you are nevertheless able to state that one part of the story in your paper is a distortion and the other part is not?

A. That is always so. You will find that in most every story.

Q. Every story that you write?

A. I wouldn't say that, no, sir.

Q. Almost every? [3371]

A. I don't know. I am not prepared to weigh the mathematical precision of distortion against fact.

Q. What would it be? Say 99 stories out of 100 would have some distorted facts in them, or would it be a larger percentage?

A. I think my answer would have to be what it was this morning: that every story was slanted to raise the prestige of the Communist Party wherever possible.

Q. Well, did you say that the attendance of Schneidermann at the Seventh World Congress was a secret or confidential matter among the members of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir, not after he returned.

Q. Was that a matter freely disclosed to the public in San Francisco?

A. The public could have had access to it by reading the Western Worker, I think.

Q. In other words, you wouldn't dispute the fact that Schneidermann himself wrote an article about his attendance at the Seventh World Congress?

A. He may have.

Q. Well, is there any doubt in your mind that he did?

A. I am not particularly interested.

Q. Well, Mr. Ross, I think you are to answer questions; it is not an issue of whether you are interested or not.

Mr. Donohue: I think it is, if your Honor please. He states he has no interest whether he did or did not. And I [3372] frankly say to your Honor I don't know what bearing upon the issue here there is as to whether Mr. Schneidermann made a public report or not as to the conference in Moscow.

The Court: Overruled.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): If I showed you the paper with the article by Schneidermann with that title, would that refresh your memory as to the fact that he did write such an article?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I am not disputing that he did. He may very well have, probably did.

Q. You were the editor of the paper?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell me this: Do you remember anything that the paper contained?

A. Not specifically. Very vaguely. As I said before, I made a decided attempt to blot all that period out of my memory after leaving the Party.

Q. And you can't remember, as you say, anything that your paper, the Western Worker, specifically contained?

A. The Western Worker was an organ of the Communist Party, Mr. MacInnis. When I blotted out the Communist Party and its activities from my memory, or tried to, I blotted out the Western Worker.

Q. By the way, do you write editorials for the cotton trade journal?

A. I write one out of three. [3373]

Q. And do you review with other editorial writers on the Cotton Trade Journal the editorial material?

A. No, sir. The other editorial material is more or less technical, relating to processing and growing of cotton, about which I am not yet an expert. I read them and see that they are well written, and let them go through.

Q. Did you write the editorial bearing date about two weeks ago in the Cotton Trade Journal recalling the days when farm workers would work for $1 a day? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't write that? Did you say that the Cotton Trade Journal was not an anti-labor paper? A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, the cotton industry is not highly organized so far as labor unions are concerned, is it?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please. That is another field we do not have time to pass on.

Mr. MacInnis: I will confess that that is a collateral matter, your Honor, but this man stated under oath that the Cotton Trade Journal was not an anti-labor paper. It would be harder to find a journal in the whole United States which represented an industry in a region where workers are not even allowed to organize.

Mr. Donohue: Well, is that a statement of evidence by Mr. MacInnis? [3374]

Mr. MacInnis: I will bring copies of the paper here.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. McMillan: May that statement be stricken out, may it please your Honor? Mr. MacInnis is doing the testifying.

Mr. MacInnis: I will offer to bring the paper if there is any doubt as to the existence of the editorial I mentioned.

The Court: That editorial would have no material bearing upon this controversy and would not aid or assist the Court or jury in determining any fact material to this issue. Accordingly, the jury is instructed to disregard the statement of Mr. MacInnis. [3375]

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Ross, you were asked by the prosecutor for the Government if there were any security measures at this place you say was called Sokol Hall when you went into the meeting, and among other things you said that you went alone to the meeting, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that there was a man standing outside the door? A. At the entrance, yes, sir.

Q. And you paused in front of that man, did you? A. I nodded to him in recognition.

Q. And you then entered?

A. I beg pardon?

Q. You then entered? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There were no bars or locks upon the door to the building? A. No, sir, none that I recall.

Q. Was it a single door or a double door?

A. I am afraid I can't tell you.

Q. Oh, Mr. Ross! Didn't you tell us that you and Mr. Kaiser were out there the other day and that you put your nose against the pane and looked in but found the doors were locked and then went away?

A. Mr. MacInnis, if it had been my purpose to record facts which I didn't myself remember, I would have had a paper and a notebook and taken notes about the size of the door, the appearance, [3376] its structure. That wasn't my purpose.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Without such notes you wouldn't be able to tell us whether the door in front of which you stood the other day was a double door or a single door?

A. I am afraid not. I didn't take very much notice of it.

Q. Was it a solid door or was it a door made of glass? A. I couldn't tell you that.

Q. By the way, Mr. Ross, has anybody instructed you not to be specific upon any place or dates, for the reason that if a person in your position was to become specific, the defense would readily prove otherwise?

Mr. McMillan: That is purely argumentative, may it please Your Honor.

The Witness: I don't mind answering.

The Court: It is argumentative, but I will allow it.

A. No, sir, my regret since coming here has been that I could not be more specific. I wish I could be.

Q. Well, now, going back for just a moment on another facet of the matters which you say did remain in your memory in spite of this iron curtain that you have pulled down over the past, let me ask you this—

Mr. McMillan: May that be stricken out?

Mr. MacInnis: The witness said he pulled a curtain over the past.

The Court: He did not say "iron" curtain. You added the [3377] "iron" curtain.

Mr. MacInnis: I guess that is a colloquialism of mine; I get it from the newspaper.

The Court: Let it be a curtain.

The Witness: "Blind" is the word I used.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Did you draw a blind?

A. Drew a blind.

Q. All right. This blind, whether it was of metal or otherwise, let me ask you this: At this meeting at the room that you say was 16 feet in length, about, and I don't know how wide, on a street that you don't remember in an apartment that you couldn't identify when you went around with Mr. Kaiser, you say that a man named John Schomaker was present? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the matter of this Sokol Hall incident, you say John Schomaker was present, don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the meeting taking place later, I think the last incident that you purported to narrate, at 121 Haight Street, you said that John Schomaker was there, too? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, John Schomaker wasn't a delegate to the national convention of the Communist Party in 1936, was he?

A. Not that I can remember. He may have been. I don't recall that he was one. [3378]

Q. You don't remember one way or the other?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. You say he may well have been?

A. He may have been.

Q. Have you read over the testimony of John Schomaker in this case? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you have been told, haven't you, that

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

John Schomaker testified he never heard of Harry Bridges under this name of Rossi?

A. No, I haven't been told.

Q. You haven't been told that? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, have you any memory one way or the other as to whether or not John Schomaker was a delegate to that convention in 1936?

A. I don't recall his having been one.

Q. Does that mean that you have no memory or that you have a definite recollection that he was not there?

A. It means I have no memory of his being there or not being there.

Q. You have no memory one way or the other?

A. That's correct.

Q. Well, John Schomaker, you say, was at the meeting in 121 Haight Street in the later fall of 1936? [3379]

A. I believe it was in the early fall of 1936.

Q. Well, in the fall?

A. In the fall some time, yes, sir.

Q. You couldn't put the date in months, though, could you? A. No, I am afraid not.

Q. Could you tell us whether it was August, September or what?

A. It would be purely a guess. I would say it was after August, certainly.

Q. And the Communist Party convention in New York that year took place from June 24th to June 28th, didn't it?

A. I don't recall when it ended. I recall the date it started.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. As being June 24th?

A. June 24th, yes, sir.

Q. So that, at any event, the meeting of which you told us that No. 121 Haight Street—when John Schomaker was present, took place a little while after that Communist convention in June?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that Schomaker was there and Bridges was there at this meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, didn't Bridges say in the presence of John Schomaker at that meeting, "Why, back in New York under the name of Rossi I was elected to the Central Committee of the Communist Party"? [3380]

A. I don't recall such a statement by him, no, sir.

Q. You don't think he said that in Schomaker's presence?

A. I don't know whether he did. I certainly don't recall it.

Q. Is the Central Committee a rather important phase of the Communist Party?

A. Top brass.

Q. Top brass. And a man who would be on that Central Committee would be a man in an important position, wouldn't he?

A. Yes, within the party, yes, sir.

Q. How long did you say that you were in New York for that convention?

A. Several days. I think it was possibly the better part of a week, I am not quite sure of that.

Q. And by what means did you return from New York to San Francisco?

A. I assumed I returned by bus, because I went out by bus. But I don't recall the return trip.

Q. Do you remember who was with you?

A. Not on the return trip, no, sir.

Q. You don't remember anything at all?

A. It is just completely blank.

Q. That is something that you, as you say, have pulled down the blind on?

A. That was included, I think.

Mr. MacInnis: Pardon me a moment, Your Honor. [3381]

Q. Now, how many delegates from California went to the national convention of the Communist Party?

Mr. McMillan: That has already been asked and answered.

A. I don't know the exact number.

Mr. MacInnis: Did you have something you wanted to say, Mr. McMillan?

Mr. McMillan: Yes, I have. I wanted to say to Your Honor, but I did think it might be too time-consuming, that that question has already been asked and answered.

Mr. MacInnis: I will be glad if that is pointed out to me, Your Honor. I haven't even come to that.

The Court: I think he said "ten."

Mr. MacInnis: On direct examination.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

The Court: It may be. Proceed.

Q. Would you answer that question?

A. I don't know the exact number. I would say perhaps ten or so. That would be hard to say, would be hazarding a guess.

Q. Did you say that Anita Whitney of California was a delegate? A. I believe so.

Q. Did you say that Schneidermann was a delegate? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say a man named Leach was a delegate? A. Named what, sir?

Q. Leach. A. Yes, sir, John Leach. [3382]

Q. And you said you were a delegate, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were there about six others, six or seven?

A. Six or seven or eight. I can't give you the precise number.

Q. And you say that John Schomaker might or might not have been among those?

A. That is correct.

Q. But you don't know one way or the other?

A. I don't.

Q. You do remember that the convention was held at the Manhattan Opera House in New York?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when the voting was had for the Central or National Committee of the Communist Party, were the names of the candidates written down on any paper and handed to the delegates who were present?

A. I have a memory, although not a very definite one, of a paper being handed around to the various delegations with names of candidates on it. I believe that each delegation proposed its own list of candidates for the National Committee.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Now, would those lists have been hand written or typewritten?

A. I couldn't say, sir.

Q. You couldn't say one way or the other?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would it be both? [3383]

A. I wouldn't see the need for a typing and handwriting. I don't know.

Q. Well, were you instructed as a delegate in advance as to whom you had to vote for, or did you have a free choice?

A. There was no free choice.

Q. You had to vote for the persons whose names were on some list that was given you?

A. Every one voted by acclamation for a list of candidates whose names were read out from the platform.

Q. Did you have any list of those names at all?

A. I think a list was handed out to each delegation, containing the candidates that each delegation submitted for election.

Q. Well, then, when the members of the Central Committee were actually elected, was there any list made of their membership? A. No, sir.

Q. No list of any kind was made?

A. Not that I can recall, no, sir.

Q. Well, you were at that time, of course, an official and a paid functionary of the Communist Party and you had been for four or five years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And don't you know what the custom was?

A. I would say the custom is that no list is made of an elected group such as the Central Committee.

Q. Well, wasn't there a list made and transmitted immediately [3384] to the Russian secret police, the NKVD?

A. Are you serious in that question?

Q. Well, I want a serious answer.

A. I wouldn't be surprised.

Q. Well, then, you thought I was serious?

A. Not at first, but you may have been.

Q. Did you get the nod that Mr. Crouch testified to that effect?

A. I don't know. I haven't read Mr. Crouch's testimony.

Q. You haven't?

A. Mr. Crouch probably knew things I wasn't aware of.

Q. Yes. When you were in New York, did you attend all or most of the sessions of this national convention of the Communist Party?

A. Yes, sir, I assume I did.

Q. And did you make reports to the paper of which you were the editor?

A. I don't recall having made any, no, sir. I may have.

Q. Well, was anyone from the Western Worker in New York covering the convention other than yourself? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And did you write about the convention when you returned?

A. I don't recall that I did. I may have. I wasn't there, as a reporter, but as a delegate.

Q. Now, let me see if I can refresh your memory as to those [3385] matters, if you will bear with me a moment. Well, let me ask you this before I find the place I am looking for. Was the 1936 convention of the Communist Party the first of such conventions to which the public was invited?

A. I don't recall the public having been invited to the convention. It was a delegated affair.

Q. Was any part of the convention broadcast over the radio?

A. Possibly. If any propaganda speech was made for public consumption, it may have been.

Q. Do you have any such recollection?

A. I believe the concluding session was a public session at the Madison Square Garden. It was a political rally, rather than a convention business session.

Q. I will ask you to look at the Western Worker for Thursday, June 25th, and ask you whether or not its contents on the column I have marked in any way refreshes your memory (exhibiting to witness).

Now, does the material just now shown you refresh your memory in any way?

A. Yes, that was an open political meeting held at Madison Square Garden, not a business session of the convention.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And was there a radio broadcast?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And that broadcast was carried to the Pacific Coast?

A. According to that, yes, sir, a broadcast of Mr. Browder's [3386] speech as presidential candidate.

Q. Of the Communist Party? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any memory as to how many delegates in all were present at that convention?

A. It would have to be a rough estimate. I would say several hundred.

Q. Would 750 be a fair answer?

A. There might have been that many. If I were to guess now, I would say closer to 500, possibly. I don't know.

Q. Well, were you at the time of that convention engaged in any political campaign yourself?

A. I may have been; I don't recall.

Q. Do you have any memory on that subject?

A. At the exact time of the convention? No, I am afraid I don't.

Q. Do you want to look at your paper? I assume you were still editor in June, June 29, 1936.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And going behind this blind, why, I will ask you to read the column I have marked and see if it refreshes your memory. (Exhibiting to witness) Is your memory now refreshed as to the material in question, asked of you?

A. I accept that statement as being the fact, that

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)
I was then a [3387] candidate for Congress, but my personal memory is not refreshed.

Q. You have no memory yourself?

A. No, sir. I know I ran for Congress during that year. It must have been at that period.

Q. Now, I see that the Western Worker, in the issue I just showed you, carries the dateline "New York." Would that indicate that the article was written by you?

A. Not necessarily, no, sir.

Q. There was no other writer, you say, for the Western Worker in New York except yourself?

A. No, sir, but it might have been written here with a New York dateline.

Q. You mean that would be another distortion or deceit?

A. No, that isn't uncommon practice, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. Pardon me?

A. That is not an uncommon practice in rewrites or any other form of story, to give it another dateline.

Q. You mean that ordinary newspapers do that?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Write local stories and put a dateline from some other city?

A. Not if they are local stories, no, sir.

Q. But they engage in the practice that you ascribe?

A. Sometimes, to conceal the source of origin of a story, in order to protect an informant, it has been known practice to give it another dateline.

Q. Well, now, would that have been the reason here?

A. Not necessarily, no, sir; I should think not.

Q. Well, was this convention reported in the ordinary press?

A. I don't know. It may have been. Probably was.

Q. Actually, it was covered, and all the press was invited, isn't that true?

A. I don't believe I quite understand your question.

Q. Members of the press were present at the Communist convention in 1936?

A. I don't recall they were. They may have been at one session, possibly. There was a propaganda speech made.

Q. Well, if I told you that there had been produced here in court with a previous witness an issue of the New York Times, stating that this was the first convention of the Communist Party to which the public and members of the press had been invited, would that refresh your memory?

A. For all sessions, Mr. MacInnis?

Q. So the paper said. A. All sessions?

Q. I can't say if the phrase "all sessions" was there.

A. They may have been invited for one session, if any propaganda speech was made.

Q. But not otherwise? A. Pardon?

Q. Not otherwise? [3389]

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I wouldn't think so.

Q. Well, now, do you accept the statement that the convention of 1936 began upon the 24th of June and ended upon the 28th of June?

A. I am sure it began on the 24th of June. I can't be certain of the ending date. It was several days later. The 28th sounds reasonable.

Q. If that date appeared in your paper, the Western Worker, would you accept that as being a fact? A. I wouldn't dispute it.

Q. Pardon me? A. I wouldn't dispute it.

Q. Suppose, to refresh your memory, if possible, I show you the issue of Monday, June 29th, on page 2. I think I showed you the first page before. And I will ask if you will look in the region that I have marked in red (exhibiting to witness).

Now, is it true that the final session of this ninth convention of the Communist Party was to be held on the 28th of June, a Sunday?

A. I believe so, yes, sir.

Q. Is it true that on that day a new National Committee of the Communist Party was to be democratically elected, as suggested in this paper?

A. The Central Committee of the party was elected at a closed session of the convention at another hall. [3390]

Q. Pardon me?

A. The Central Committee of the party was elected at a closed session of the convention, not at Madison Square Garden.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. No, but was it elected upon Sunday, the last day of the convention?

A. I don't think so, no, sir.

Q. Do you think it was the day before?

A. All I can be certain of is, it was not the first day of the convention. It may have been at any business session after that first day.

Q. Well, now, on that point, would your memory be refreshed by any article upon the order of business in that convention?

A. I would read what you showed me, Mr. MacInnis, and——

Q. Well, would there have been any reason in the Western Worker, upon the issue I have just now shown you, to place a false date upon that part of the convention?

A. I wouldn't think so, no, sir.

Q. So that if the Western Worker reported that on Sunday, the 28th, a new National Committee was to be elected, that was probably the date, wasn't it?

A. Of course the story was written, the story you showed me was written before the actual election, evidently, because the phrase "was to be" was used.

Q. Yes. Well, would your memory be refreshed if we came to an article taking place after the convention? [3391]

A. I don't know. I would be glad to look at it.

Q. All right. While I am looking for that particular date, I will come to another subject for just a moment. Can you tell us generally, or do you have any memory, as to what the program of the Communist Party was in that convention? What was the agenda?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. You mean the order of business.

Q. Well, no. Suppose I put it this way: Most political parties at a convention make a statement of aims, which become the platform of the particular convention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any specific memory as to what the platform of this convention was, and by "this" of course, I mean the convention of 1936 of the Communist Party?

A. Not specifically; only very generally. I believe the essence of it was building the United Front.

Q. Pardon me? Building a united front?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that mean?

A. That is a phrase which was used by the Communist Party in an effort to get other organizations of workers, especially unions, to work along with it on specific campaigns. It was called the United Front on a specific issue.

Q. Well, now, was that a stated platform of the Communist Party at that convention, or is that just something that you [3392] believe to have been always the end of the Communist Party?

A. I think, if my memory serves me correctly, that that was a specific point, and perhaps the basic content of the platform, the building of the United Front.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. Well, now, if there appeared in the paper of which you were editor a statement of the platform of the Communist Party of that year, 1936, would that statement of the platform be accepted by you as correct?

A. As the platform of the party for that year, yes, sir.

Q. Well, weren't these the aims as stated of the Communist Party of the year 1936?

Mr. Donohue: If Your Honor pleases, except to waste time, I can see no purpose of inquiring into the Communist Party platform in 1936. It is not in issue.

Mr. MacInnis: I think—it is not a long matter, Your Honor.

The Court: All right, go ahead.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Now, weren't these the stated platforms of the Communist Party? First—this is 1936, recall—first, "Put America back to work, provide jobs and living wages;" second, "Provide unemployment insurance, old age pension and social security."

Do you remember that last phrase?

A. That strikes a familiar note, yes, sir.

Q. 1936, of course, was a year which preceded any of the legislation of President Roosevelt for unemployment insurance, old [3393] age pensions and social security?

Mr. Donohue: I object to the question. I don't think we can take judicial notice of that fact, if Your Honor pleases. [3393-A]

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Mr. MacInnis: I think that that certainly is a matter of which the Court can take judicial notice. I can't think of anything more historic, your Honor, in the history of our country except some of the more historic pronouncements of Mr. Roosevelt.

Q. Was the third platform of the Communist Party to save the young generation? Does that cross your memory?

A. That is sort of a general propaganda trait of the Party.

Q. To provide jobs for young people through the National Youth Administration?

A. Very possibly.

Q. Was the fourth to free the farmers from debts and tax burdens and foreclosures of mortgages? A. That sounds quite likely, sir.

Q. It was advocated that the Government of the United States pass a law granting a moratorium upon mortgage debts of this character?

Mr. Donohue: Object to that testimony of Mr. MacInnis.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Was a further program to request that the income taxes be imposed according to the wealth or income of people in our country? A. Quite possibly.

Q. And a sixth one to request to defend and extend democratice and civil liberties? [3394]

A. That is quite possible.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And a seventh one, full rights for the Negro people? A. That also is possible.

Q. And an eight, a request to keep America out of war? A. I do not dispute it.

Q. Do you remember any other phases of the platform of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir; but you can see why so many people are taken in by the Communist propaganda.

Q. This was your paper, and anything that you labeled propaganda appeared under the masthead of yourself as editor, isn't that right?

A. That has the official stamp of approval of the Communist Party; it was a national platfrom, not written by me, Mr. MacInnis.

Q. I am not inquiring as to who asked you to commit these sins of deception; I am asking you merely if you were the one who committed them. Isn't that right?

A. I published or had published the platform of the Communist Party political organization.

Mr. MacInnis: May we have about a five minutes' recess, your Honor? I am looking for one article. I will go to some other subject.

The Court: It is about five minutes to four. I think we have had a long day. If you desire, we can take an [3395] adjournment until tomorrow morning.

Mr. MacInnis: Thank you.

The Court: Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, we will adjourn court until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. And in the interim, may I again admonish you not to discuss the case under any conditions, nor suffer any person to converse with you on any subject of the trial, nor to form or express an opinion hereon until the case is submitted to you.

(Thereupon an adjournment was taken until Friday, January 6, 1950, at 10:00 a.m.) [3396]

Friday, January 6, 1950—10:00 A.M.

The Clerk: The United States of America v. Harry Renton Bridges, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, on trial. The witness on the stand is Lawrence Ross, heretofore sworn.

LAWRENCE S. ROSS

resumed.

Cross-Examination

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): Mr. Ross, one of the things you told us about coming out of your memory of the past that I thought might be of interest was this: The moment you joined the Communist Party you became a paid functionary in 1932. Is that correct?

A. Possibly not the moment; in fact, the moment would be inaccurate, but very soon after.

Q. In other words, you were recruited like any other person in the Communist Party, but at least almost immediately that Party put you on salary as a paid worker?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Not very long after I was recruited.

Q. Did you have some special experience that enabled you to be fitted for that kind of job?

A. As I recall it, the first thing I was asked to do was to help write propaganda leaflets because of my newspaper experience for the Communist Party, for the International Labor Defense. [3397]

Q. Well, as I understand it, from the testimony you gave here under oath, the experience of your life in business or in work had been a newspaper experience? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you told the Court and jury on the first session of your testimony under oath that after you finished school you went to New York; is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you were asked by the prosecutor, "And were you employed in New York?" and your answer under oath was, "I was employed in New York and other towns near by on newspapers," and then you proceeded to name some of the newspapers—— A. Yes, sir.

Q. ——on which you had worked, carrying yourself up to late 1931; is that true?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Well, now, was your experience as a working man from 1923 up to 1931 exclusively that of a newspaper worker or reporter?

A. No, sir; mainly.

Q. Did you tell the gentlemen who represent the Government in this case all of your employment?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. All of the main employment that I had, yes, sir. I can't recall every specific job.

Q. So that before you had been sworn and answered questions under oath, you had already divulged to the men representing [3398] the Government what your various employments had been?

A. Yes, the general nature of my employment; not every specific job, I don't believe.

Q. You had told them what you were going to say under oath on the stand, had you?

A. I had told them the facts.

Q. In 1924, let us say, which would have been the year when you were 21 years of age—is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. You worked as a seaman, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the Luckenbach Lines?

A. Correct, sir.

Q. You didn't inform the jury of that when asked under oath by the prosecutor to tell about your employments, did you?

A. No, sir, that was a very brief period.

Q. Had you pulled down the blind on that period of your life? It wasn't a very important period.

Q. You worked on the Andrew F. Luckenbach, did you not?

A. One of the Luckenbach ships, yes, sir.

Q. Did you work for Spencer Kellogg & Sons, an oil refinery?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. Yes, I believe I did for a short while.

Q. Did you tell the jury that when you were questioned? A. I hadn't recalled it.

Q. What were the circumstances of your leaving that employment? [3399]

A. I'm afraid I can't recall. I just left it; I left the job.

Q. In 1926, when you left that job, Mr. Ross, were you involved in the Sacco-Vanzetti defense in the East?

A. I don't think so. At that time I wrote certain publicity releases for the International Labor Defense, for the Pennsylvania-Ohio miners' relief, I think it was.

Q. You went to Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, didn't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As a correspondent.

Q. Didn't you go there as an organizer among the anthracite coal workers? A. No, sir.

Q. Weren't you sent there by William Z. Foster? A. No, sir.

Q. You weren't? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody that you did?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you say that the period of time in which you worked as a seaman was unimportant and hence you didn't mention it?

A. That's right.

Q. But it is correct——

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. I didn't think about it. [3400]

Q. Pardon me? A. I didn't think about it.

Q. Did it just slip your memory? A. Yes.

Q. That was your employment not only during 1924 but during 1925 as well, isn't that true?

A. No, sir, I don't think so; just a short period of time.

Q. Well, you were on a coastwise ship, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1924 didn't you belong to the IWW in San Francisco?

A. If that was the year. I first heard about the IWW on that ship from a fellow seaman and——

Q. I am not interested as to who told you about the IWW. Did you join the IWW here in San Francisco?

A. I went off the ship and took out a card, never did anything about it, never attended a meeting; I just destroyed the card later on.

Q. What was the IWW?

Mr. Donohue: I object, if your Honor please.

The Court: Overruled.

A. It was an organization of union men. I believe it stood for Industrial Workers of the World.

Q. (By Mr. MacInnis): And you were here in San Francisco in that year 1924?

A. If that was the year, I should say I was here about three days. [3401]

Q. Now, did your ship stop in Philadelphia, Boston, Portland and Seattle?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. That sounds right.

Q. Now, what was your employment during 1926 and 1927?

A. During either one or both of those years I believe I was in Newark, on the Newark Ledger, on the copy desk?

Q. Wasn't that in 1929?

A. I can't place it that accurately. I don't know. Somewhere around that period?

Q. What did you do in 1928, do you remember?

A. That may have been the year in which I wrote propaganda stories for the election campaign of the Communist Party in the Daily Worker. It may have been. I am not sure. Somewhere around that period.

Q. 1928? A. It may have been, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you didn't tell the Court and jury about that two days ago when the prosecutor asked you to tell what your prior employment was.

Mr. Donohue: I object. He wasn't asked that question.

Mr. MacInnis: Yes, Your Honor, he was asked the employment question. I will read it, so that the prosecutor may understand what he has done.

Mr. Donohue: Yes, read the question.

Mr. MacInnis: He begins with asking the man about his [3402] schooling, and he says, "And did you remain in Kentucky when you finished your schooling, or where did you go?" And the answer, "no, I went up north and east, northeast."

"Q. Where did you go?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

"A. I went to New York."

We have him out here in San Francisco in 1924. And "Were you employed in New York?" "A. I was employed in New York and other towns nearby on newspapers." And then he goes on for two pages to tell us about the newspapers and then he goes into the Communist Party in Los Angeles, a complete blind, shall we say, drawn upon the matters that come forth this morning.

Q. Now, you say that in 1928 you were engaged by the Communist Party in New York on the Daily Worker to do publicity or propaganda in connection with the election?

A. I think that was the year, yes, sir.

Q. What kind of an election was that, either local or national? A. I can't recall.

Q. You have no recollection? A. No, sir.

Q. But you were employed by the Communist Party?

A. I was employed by the Daily Worker.

Q. Daily Worker is the official organ of the Communist Party, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is owned by the Communist Party? [3403]

A. I think so.

Q. Yes. Well, now, a little earlier this morning I asked you if you had some special experience that fitted you for being hired as a paid functionary by the Communist Party the moment you joined in Los Angeles. You didn't give us that explanation, did you?

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

A. The explanation really was my newspaper experience, my writing experience.

Q. I see.

A. Rather than anything particular I had——

Q. I see. But you didn't, until these matters were brought to your attention, choose to tell the Court and jury that in 1928 you had been employed by the Communist Party in New York?

Mr. McMillan: That is a very unfair question, that he refused to tell the Court and jury, may it please your Honor.

Mr. MacInnis: Would you read the question, please? I don't think I used that word.

(Record read.)

Mr. MacInnis: You see, the word is "choose," Mr. McMillan.

Mr. McMillan: Well, that is just as bad.

The Court: You might answer that, Mr. Ross, and make any explanation, in the light of that question, you desire.

A. Yes, sir, I have no objection to it. I answered the question as directly and as honestly as I knew how.

Q. Yes? [3404]

A. I am convinced that the reason for my having been put on as a paid functionary, Mr. MacInnis, was due mainly to the fact that I could write and had newspaper experience and in publicity work.

Q. Are you answering all these questions as directly and as honestly as you know how?

A. To the best of my ability, yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. In 1928 in the City of New York, did you have anything to do with the National Biscuit Company? A. No, sir.

Q. Does that phrase reopen anything in your memory?

A. No, sir, I can think of crackers and that is about all.

Q. Why, you were an agitation and propaganda director of the Communist Party in the National Biscuit Company in 1928, were you not?

A. I certainly don't recall that, sir.

Q. You don't recall it? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you do any organizational work for the Communist Party in 1928?

A. Not that I can recall, no, sir.

Q. What did you do for the Communist Party in 1928?

A. I wrote articles for the Western Worker—excuse me, Daily Worker on an election campaign that was then in progress. I was asked to go down and cover a situation in Wilkes-Barre, [3405] Pennsylvania, and that is about all.

Q. By the way, before you took the stand in this case as a witness for the Government, had you told those facts to the men representing the Government?

A. I may have. I don't recall. I don't recall all the statements I made to them. I may have.

Q. Well, you told them in the same direct and honest way that you are giving us your testimony today, everything you remembered, didn't you?

A. I gave them all the facts, to the best of my ability, in answer to their questions.

(Testimony of Lawrence S. Ross.)

Q. And did you tell them about this work for the Communist Party in 1928?

A. I really don't recall, but I certainly would like to know whether I did. I probably did, if I thought about it, yes, sir.

Q. So that if you did tell them, it was the choice of the government counsel not to bring out these facts as well as yourself?

A. I am not qualified to answer that question.

Q. Didn't you join the Communist Party in New York in August of 1927?

A. I think I did make out an application card and then dropped my membership.
